Maternity is a wonderful experience and many women approach it wholly unprepared. Childbirth under right conditions need not terrify women.

The advice of Mrs. Pinkham is freely offered to all expectant mothers, and her advice is beyond question the most valuable to be obtained. If Mrs. Paxton had written to Mrs. Pinkham before confinement she would have been saved much suffering. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Swedish Female Shylock.

Stockholm has a female usurer and she is the worst usurer in the capital. Her victims are chiefly cadets at the army and navy academies whose pocket money gives out a long time before the next remittance can be expected. She lives in an elegant residence and to a glass of champagne she generally succeeds in persuading her young clients to sign papa's or uncle' name to the note—merely as a matter of form. As a rule, papa or uncle has passed through the naval or army academy when a young man and knows the mademoiselle from the days he sowed his wild oats—consequently the drafts or notes do not go to protest.

How Gems Lose Their Luster.

Among the maladies common to all gems of color is one which arises from exposure to the light for a period. They lose color. The colors of the emerald, sapphire and ruby are as nearly permanent as possible, but experiments made a few years ago in Berlin and Paris showed these stones suffered by exposure to the light and a ruby shown two years in a shop window was many shades lighter than its mates, which had been kept in darkness.

HOMES IN NEBRASKA

If you think of changing your location remember this; Nebraska's soil is rich and easily tilled. No rocks and stumps. All grains and fruits that succeed in other states in same latitude flourish there. The climate is well-nigh perfect, the air being dry and free from malaria. An abundance of pure water is found. It is a great state for stock raising and feeding. There is no state in the Union where a hard-working farmer can do so well. Thousands of poor men have become rich in Nebraska. Farms can now be bought on easy terms. Prices are low. A handsome illustrated pamphlet describing Nebraska will be sent free on application to P. S. EUSTIS, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

Feeding the Hungry.

We learn from the officers of the Carnival that so far no one has applied for a stand right to sell lunch or food of any kind. Last year nearly every one who had a lunch stand lost money by it, and this year are afraid to try again. But surely a smaller number of stands could be made to pay. And besides, it would never do to have a big crowd here and no stands at all where they could get refreshments. For the regular hotels and restaurants could not accommodate all. We believe three or four stands would pay, and the matter should receive attention at once.

HE TELLS US WHY

His Life Was Nearly Wrecked, Also How the Wreck Was Averted by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

How often we hear the invalid say, "The first of my trouble was sleeplessness. I could not get the needed rest." The same cause will shatter health while the world lasts. As long as people will neglect nature and fail to satisfy the urgent call for sleep during health they must expect a rebellious nature to refuse to respond when the nervous system is weakened from any cause. When you feel debilitated, fretful, despondent, worried, or cannot secure the full eight hours sleep prescribed by nature, use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer at once. Build up your nervous system before it's too late. Geo. Halstead, clerk at Jefferson House, Toledo, tells in the following words what it did for him: "I consider Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer a remarkable medicine for nervous troubles; I will tell you why. While living in Lima I worked nights; my sleep during the day was not regular or restful. I became very nervous, irritable, and all run down. The doctors failed to help me, so also did other medicine which I used. A friendly druggist told me of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. I tried it and it worked like a charm. I was able to secure restful sleep after the first dose. My appetite returned and I regained my lost flesh, and was very soon perfectly well. I have recommended it to a great many and results were equally beneficial."

Republican State Ticket.

The republican state convention finished its work yesterday by placing its ticket in the field. All the preliminary work had been done the day before. The ticket is this:

Secretary of State—Union B. Hunt of Randolph county.

Auditor of State—William A. Hart, Clinton.

Treasurer of State—Leopold Levy, Huntington.

Attorney-General—William L. Taylor, Marion.

Clerk of the Supreme Court—Robert A. Brown, Johnson.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—F. L. Jones, Tipton.

State Statistician—John B. Conner, Marion.

State Geologist—Willis S. Blatchley, Vigo.

Judges Supreme Court—Second district, Alexander Dowling, Floyd; 3d district, John V. Hadley, Hendricks; 5th district, Francis E. Baker, Elkhart.

NOTES

Union Banner Hunt is the full name of the candidates for secretary of state.

Ex-State Supt. Lafollette was on hand as usual, but he has become so unpopular, owing to several schemes in which he has figured, that he was soon turned down.

Taylor, the nominee for attorney-general, is a son of ex-representative Taylor of Wolcottville.

Baker, the candidate for supreme court in the Fifth district, is a son of Judge John H. Baker, and lives at Goshen. He is often at court in Auburn and is well known to Auburn attorneys. He was a classmate of Don A. Garwood in the law school at Ann Arbor.

Leopold Levy for treasurer of state is a German clothing dealer at Huntington, and we believe, a Jew. He was at one time a director of the prison at Michigan City.

James B. Conner is editor of the Indiana Farmer, and known personally to many DeKalb people.

But as this is believed to be a democratic year, the presumption is, that the above named gentlemen will all be defeated.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The Thirty-Fourth Annual Session Will be Held In Auburn Aug. 22 to 26.

Supt. Coe has made all arrangements for the coming county institute and which is to be held in the M. E. church this year instead of the Opera House. We give the leading items in the work and program.

DAY INSTRUCTORS.

Dr. Louis Sherman Davis, Associate Professor of Chemistry, Indiana University.

Prof. J. M. Culver, Principal of Department of History, South Bend High School.

Mrs. Mattie O. Cammack, State Instructress of Scientific Temperance for the W. C. T. U. of Indiana.

Dr. Davis will do work in the lines of General Education, Pedagogy and Hygiene.

Prof. Culver will discuss the subjects of History, Language and Literature.

Mrs. Cammack will give a lesson each day on Scientific Temperance.

ANNUAL LECTURE COURSE.

Monday evening Rev. T. M. Guild, pastor of the First M. E. church, Auburn, Ind., will deliver an appropriate address. We feel free to announce that Rev. Guild's address to the teachers will be a fine and able opening of the Institute.

Tuesday evening Mrs. Mattie O. Cammack will deliver a lecture on Scientific Temperance. This lecture will be very instructive and interesting not only to teachers, but also to the general public.

Wednesday evening Rev. C. C. Albertson, of Buffalo, N. Y., will give his great lecture, "Orators and Oratory."

Thursday evening Dr. J. Wesley Hill, of Fostoria, Ohio, has been secured to give his famous lecture, "Brawn vs Brain."

ADMISSION.

Monday and Tuesday evenings, free. Tuesday evening, however, a small contribution will be asked to defray the expense. Wednesday and Thursday evenings, general admission 25 cents. Reserved seats, 35 cents.

Tickets on sale at Davenport's drug store, Tuesday, August 23, 8 a. m.

NOTES.

We have engaged a strong corps of instructors and lecturers for the Institute of 1898. This is done at considerable financial risk. Therefore we expect each teacher to be present at the full session of the Institute. We kindly ask all teachers of the county, and all others interested in our schools, to help us in the expenses by attending the pay lectures and urging their friends to attend.

It is desired that our school officers will be present during the entire session. The township trustees are expected to be present Wednesday.

The Board of Education will meet Wednesday at 2 o'clock p. m.

Yours respectfully,
H. E. COE, Co, Supt.

Feed Your Teams

Billy Little has fixed up his feed yard on South Cedar street in nice shape. He has repapered and painted his rooms so anyone can have a nice resting place while at the Carnival or at other times. The entire yard has been so fitted up that it can be occupied, the room being all arranged for stalls. He can now accommodate a great many more than has been possible heretofore. Farmers and all others should remember him and give him a call.

"This is the parlor, eh?" tentatively remarked the realestate agent, who was looking over the house.

"Yes," replied old man Kidder; "but I usually call it the court room—I've got seven daughters, you know."

WEST AFRICAN CURRENCY.

Only Cowrie Shells and Slaves Used in Business Transactions.

The only recognized currency in Kano and throughout the greater part of the west African hinterland consists of cowrie shells and slaves, says the Contemporary Review. Near the coast 300 cowrie shells represent the value of an English penny. In the far interior the value of a shell is doubled. Even here 10 shillings' worth of money weighs 100 pounds. Cowrie shells are, indeed, a perfect caricature of what a currency should be, lacking as they do the three characteristics which, according to political economists, a medium of exchange should possess—namely, intrinsic value, scarcity and portability. Where any larger amount is concerned than can easily be paid in shells, slaves are used as the medium of exchange. The only coin which is at present recognized in the interior is the Maria Theresa dollar. This coin which is made in Vienna and bears date 1780, is manufactured exclusively for export to central Africa. It contains about two shillings' worth of silver and its purchasing value in the Soudan varies from 3 shillings to 4 shillings 6 pence. It will pass in any of the larger towns, but not, as a rule, in the country districts. The wholesale introduction of this or of any similar coin which can, however, only be effected pari passu with the general extension of European influence, would greatly decrease the difficulties connected with the abolition of the slave trade. As the case is now, when a well-to-do native sets out on a journey of any length, he calculates beforehand the probable expense and takes a corresponding number of slaves. These he turns into cowrie shells at the various markets which he passes on his route. The value of a slave varies from 100,000 to 300,000 shells, or from £3 to £9. These are the average market prices; slaves sold by private arrangement, and whose character is known, often fetch much higher prices. The English traveler who objects on principle to accepting slaves in payment of a debt is often subjected to serious inconvenience in consequence. One native king to whom I had sold some rolls of silk became indebted to me to the extent of 750,000 cowries. As I refused to receive payment in slaves I had to wait altogether two months in order to extract what was due to me, and finally left the neighborhood in despair, when many thousands of shells were still owing. The only advantage, as far as I could see, which the native derives from the use of the cowrie shells as money is the unlimited opportunities which it affords him for cheating the white man. The latter, who has seldom either time or patience to count his money, is compelled to accept from 10 to 25 per cent less than what the native professes to pay.

Clock for Theatrical Use.

To indicate the different numbers of a program a newly designed clock has a rotable dial plate, which can be perforated at the proper places to engage hooked rods which fall into the holes in the dial, and are pulled a short distance to make electrical connections with bells or indicators located in convenient places.

Depth of Lake Superior.

Lake Superior is 1,008 feet deep, 601 feet of this body being above sea level and 407 feet below it. The bottom of this great lake is about 375 feet deeper down than the channels giving admittance to New York harbor.

Thursday's Daily.

—It will pay to see the Kiblinger Buggies before buying elsewhere. McDowell & Carter.

—Trustee J. J. Ekright of Wilmington was in town today on some business matters.

—Mrs. D. D. Snyder and daughter Edith find many friends to welcome them here. They expect to return home next week.

—Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson returned home yesterday from her visit with relatives in Shelby county, Ohio. She makes them a visit nearly every year.

—The 157th are pleased with their new camp at Fernandina. They are on high ground overlooking the ocean and have the advantage of pure water and a sea breeze.

—A babe was born recently at Eaton, Ind., with a full set of teeth, all except the molars being fully developed. The lad will thus be saved an immense amount of suffering.

—Herman Brown came home yesterday from Danville, Ind., where he has spent the summer in the Central Normal college located at that place. He will teach in Allen county next year.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—Miss Nettie Ernest comes on the 4:18 train this afternoon, from Washington D. C. and will be the guest of Miss Blanche Shilling. She is in the employ of P. J. Lockwood, in his pension office in that city.

—M. Hathaway was nominated for congress by the democrats of the 13th district Tuesday. The convention was held at South Bend. There were three candidates and three ballots. Hathaway lives at Winamac in Pulaski county.

—There is talk that the new Wabash line may build a spur or short line to connect with Goshen, from a point about six miles distant. There are several other towns along that line where the same thing would pay.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage last evening Aug. 3, by J. D. Brosy, Howard Hilkey and Emma Bartels. Mr. Hilkey and wife will settle on a farm in Jackson township. We wish them a successful and happy future

—The Kendallville Sun says:—Dogs got into a flock of lambs belonging to Mr. John Mitchell, this morning, killing two and injuring others. One of the dogs was run down and killed after being corraled in a corn crib in the city.

—Mrs. McDowell has a letter from Roy. He likes the new camp at Fernandina, and thinks it much better than the one at Tampa. As they are only a mile from the sea, they still have a chance for sea bathing, which all enjoy in spite of the danger from sharks and drowning.

—Fort Wayne Journal:—About two years ago Private William Leighty, of St. Joe, Ind., a member of Company K, made a visit to Cuba, of about three months duration. He explored the country quite thoroughly, and should the occasion arise he would make a good guide for the regiment.

—Now that roses are all gone, the beautiful Rose of Sharon has taken their place in some gardens and lawns These showy flowers are the "tree hibiscus" and one may see two fine ones on the lawn at Al. Zerwes' residence. As they are hardy and easy to raise, we wonder there are not more of them.

—The Indianpolis Sentinel is patriotic. It says: Suppose the war with Spain does cost a million dollars a day, are we not getting that much satisfaction out of it? It costs us only 15 cents a piece, and the American that would give up the glorious experience of the last three months at that rate is no good on earth.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. H. B. McCord.

—Our people most of whom are acquainted with Miss Jennie Showalter, will be interested to hear that she and her sister, Bertha have been spending a week or two at Cold Springs, Lake Hamilton. Miss Showalter is a typo in the Press office at Waterloo and by her faithfulness has deserved her vacation and is entitled to "honorable mention."

—This war bids fair to open the eyes of the world, and of America in particular to the ruinous fallacies of "protection." We are already asking France to assist us in making commerce easier between the two countries And everywhere else, there is a similar tendency. "Protection for protection's sake" is dying. Revenue tariffs are coming to the front.

—Guy U. Lee, a student in one of Wisconsin's universities, has started in a canoe from Madison, Wis., to Brazil. He crossed Lake Monona and followed the Yahara river south to the Rock river through which he will pass to the Mississippi; thence to New Orleans and across the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean sea. The rest of the trip lies along the South Atlantic coast to Rio Janerio.

—Reports for the big day at Hudson yesterday say there was a good attendance, and the program was carried out fully. Rev. J. N. Wilson, who came away about 5 o'clock says Judge Powers made a fine speech, and that Hon. J. M. Robinson, who was present, responded to a call to talk, by giving them a neat, off-hand speech which was received with great applause. Altogether Hudson has made her jubilee a success.

—Following is a list of patents granted to Indiana inventors this week as reported by C. A. Snow & Co., patent attorneys, Washington, D. C.: A. L. Bingham, Muncie, glass-blowing machine. F. —Republicans of this county will hold their caucus on Saturday, Aug. 20, to elect delegates to the county convention to be held at Butler Sept. 1.

—Charles H. Willetts has been appointed postmaster at Corunna. The COURIER understands that Mr Crecmean, the former postmaster had resigned.

—St. Joe News:—O. H. Widney and Dr. Bowman are at Indianapolis this week in attendance at the state Republican convention, the former as a delegate and the latter as alternate.

—The brick taken from the oven in the Leasure building has been purchased by Isaac Jones, and is being hauled over to his residence in Gas Addition to make a foundation for it.

WORN-OUT WOMEN

Most women are drudges. Some are willing, some are unwilling. Some women drudge for themselves, some for their family. Their routine is endless; no matter how ill they feel they work.

Women never half take care of themselves. Early decay and wrecked lives abound, mainly through neglect. Every woman should have the book called "Health and Beauty," which the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail on request. It tells women some easy things to do to protect health, and all about the virtues of Pe-ru-na for women's peculiar ills. Miss Lizzie Peters, Mascoutah, Ill., writes:

"I am perfectly cured of female weakness by taking Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have gained thirty-seven pounds since I began taking Pe-ru-na. My friends are wondering what makes me look so bright and healthy. I would like to let the world know what a wonderful medicine Pe-ru-na is."

Woman's diseases are mainly catarrh of the pelvic organs. Pe-ru-na drives out every phase of catarrh.

Mrs. Eliza Wike, No. 130 Iron Street, Akron, O., writes:

"I would be in my grave now if it had not been for your God-sent remedy, Pe-ru-na. I was a broken-down woman, now I am well."

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. H. B. McCord.

—St. Joe News:—Mrs. J. K. Stafford and Mrs Sol Barney, have been spending the past week at Winona, the popular summer resort near Warsaw. Mrs. Stafford visited her son Charlie who is located at that place.

—Rosamond McIntyre has gone to Mansfield Ohio, to visit relatives a week or two. Mrs. McIntyre took her to the Junction today noon, as Mr. McIntyre goes east today, and Rosamond could in that way be cared for by him, if anything should happen.

Geo. W. Geddes is now reported as a candidate for auditor on the republican county ticket. He is a resident of Butler but we are not acquainted with him. Our county exchanges are also saying that M. C. Jones, the present recorder will be a candidate for reelection.

We notice that a number of republican papers have been sending out articles with small slurs on W. J. Bryan who has gone to the war against the Spaniards. This is the only politics we have noticed in this war. And it is but a short time since these very men were saying there was to be no politics in it.

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. H. B. McCord.

—One paper we picked up this week says "Wawasee is booming." The next day we read another, that "Wawasee is pretty dull this season, with not as many visitors as usual, and hotel men have to cut rates to keep their guests." Of course both the stories cannot be correct. Let us split the difference.

—Geo. Schaab came home from his outing among the Steuben lakes, a day or two ago. It rained too much for comfort or pleasure while he was there. Mrs. Schaab is expected home to-morrow and we suppose the others come with her, including her two boys, Charles and Jamie, Geo. Beugnot and Mrs. J. E. Rose —Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson who has just returned home from Anna, Ohio, reports much dry weather out there and a considerable sickness. Her sister who has been sick so long, is rather worse, and her son John Sibert is also in poor health, having rheumatism. They had had a little or no rain up there to the time she came away.

—Isaac Speer of Waterloo, was over here to-day, accompanied by his daughter, Flora, now Mrs. Lollar. Mr. Lollar himself is at Kokomo to visit an old friend who is home from India on a short visit. Mr. Speer is now in his new store building at Waterloo, and has now one of the nicest buildings for a grocery store in the county.

—Dewey had a little fleet, which once was white as snow, and every where that Dewey went the fleet was sure to go. It went with him to the Philippines against the Spanish rule, it made the poor dons gnash their teeth to see him keep so cool. And so they tried to turn him out, but but still he lingered near and wiped Spain's fleet clear off the sea—this make the Yankees cheer.

—There is a prospect that Auburn will have two big events to care for on the same week. The great Forepaugh & Sells shows combined are to be here the day after the carnival. It will give Auburn a "hot week." There had been a rumor that the show was to be here the last day of the Carnival, but the advance agent was here today and informed Mr. Hartman, the secretary of the Carnival, that their date here would be Sept. 10.

—Angola Republican:—In North Manchester last week an old mare died that in younger days had the "sweeny," and to cure the disease her shoulders had been slit and a piece of silver money placed in each The places healed and the cure proved effectual. When the mare and the lady who owned her had Mr. Tom Wilmott cut the money out of the mare's shoulders, and it was given to a man to bury the animal. Thus the animal laid up money for burial expenses, more than some people do.

Saturday's Daily.

—Owen Hensinger was in town today.

—J. F. Hollopeter is among the latest new names on the WEEKLY COURIER list. He will get the full news and up to date.

—Joe Leiter lost a pile of money in his big wheat deal, but good judges estimate that wheat growers made seventy millions by the rise in price that came as a result of his deal.

—Mrs. Mary Boyer and her children, Carey and Nellie went over to Wilmington township today, to visit with the family of Mrs. G. W. Hanes, at her home two miles this side of Butler. They are relatives.

—The commissioners have finished settling with the trustees. This is the time when all have to come in and make their annual settlement. The commissioners were at work this forenoon on bridge business.

—Fred Funk went to Fort Wayne to day, on business connected with his contract for laying the stone foundation of the waterworks He had a big lot of stone to buy and put in place, but he is an experienced and capable hand to do it.

Corn Is King.

A few years ago it was said that "cotton is King," but this seems so no longer. It now looks as if the scepter had passed into the hands of the plain, every day product of the cornfield. The Angola Republican, in speaking of this says:

The splendid outlook for a big crop of corn this year causes one to remark: "Look at the endless use of corn. It fattens hogs, cattle and humans: it furnishes whisky, beer, starch and meals of all grades. The pith of the stalk furnishes a cellulose to pack in the sides of the great warships so that if shot below the waterline it swells and covers the hole. From it corn, sugar and syrup can be made. It is as good as coal for fuel. And now, from the oil of corn an India rubber is made which has more resiliency than the rubber tree itself. Verity, indeed, great is corn."

FARMERS' PICNIC.

The Third Annual Picnic of Farmers at Robison Park, Fort Wayne.

On Thursday, August 25, the Third Annual Picnic tendered to Farmers and their families, of Allen and adjoining counties by the management of Robison Park, will be given. Last year, "Farmers' Day" as it was best known, was one of the events of the season. This year a greater effort than ever to make things pleasant, will be made by the Park management.

Every attraction at the park, will be made absolutely free on that day. Besides, there will be a balloon ascension with parachute drop, and a mammoth barbecue free to all. Visitors are not expected to bring their lunch, as there will be plenty for every body. At the magnificent new theater, two special performances will be given. Those desiring to visit the city can do so, as there will be a street car service every three minutes. Ample accomodations for taking care of teams will be made. Everybody is invited to partake of the hospitality of the park on that day, renew old acquaintances and have a general good time.

THE WOODWORTH MEETING

Special to the Courier.

HELMER, IND., Aug. 12, '98.

EDITOR COURIER:—I am enjoying a wonderful Tabernacle meeting. People are coming for miles and being cured of all kinds of disease.

Dr. King and wife came from St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. King was cured after begin an invilid for eight years, and last nigh it was wonderful how God sent his mighty power. E. P. Epley, of Leipsic, Ohio, came to be healed of nervous fits and spinal trouble after being afflicted for 21 years, and was cured at once, it was simply wonderful. The moment Mrs. Woodworth put hands on him he felt his disease leaving at once and he has traveled over four thousand miles at one time to get cured but did not help him hardly at all. I just saw him and her stepped last night as if he was in a new country or a new many. He is a happy man you may know. Children are being cured and above all a great many are being saved. God is surely sending his mighty power here. The meetings will continue for a week or so longer.

If you and Mrs. Barns could come up you would surely see some wonders.

Your very truly,
J. D. LAHNUM,

P. S.—Sister Woodworth is surely a wonderful woman for God. They expect 2000 people her over Sunday.

AN ENTERPRISING DRUGGIST.

There are few men more wide awake and enterprising than H. B. McCord who spare no pains to secure the best of everything in their line for their many customers. They now have the valuable agency for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. This is the wonderful remedy that is producing such a furor all over the country by its many startling cures. It absolutely cures Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs. Call at above drug store and get a trial bottle free or a regular size for 50 cents and $1.00. Guaranteed to cure or price refunded.

City Papers.

(Lake County Advertiser)

Do the city papers say anything in regard to your locality? Do they contain notices of your lodges and schools and the hundreds of local matters of interest which your home paper publishes? Not an item. Do they say a word calculated to draw trade to your town and your enterprises? Not a line. And yet there are men who take contracted views in this matter, who think unless they are getting as many square inches of reading matter in their city paper, thep are not getting the worth of their money. It reminds us of the man who took the largest pair of boots in the box because the price was the same as the pair that fitted him. Take the city paper if you want one, but don't let it crowd the local paper out of your home.

Leonard Roby.

Saturday's Daily.

His body was recoved last evening by means of a hook, and was brought down here on the afternoon train. The funeral will be to-morrow forenoon; hour not set as we go to press.

The body of Miss Rempis had not been recovered. Jacob Richards of this place went up on the noon train to help get her, as he is a good diver.

It now appears the six persons were in a double boat which was poorly made, and one side gave way and all went into the water. Miss Rempis and Mr. Roby did not rise. Dora Willis came up under the boat, pushed it away, and managed to float till rescued. Joseph Line came up nearer shore but shut her mouth and floated. She was unconscious when taken out.

Spanish Humor

The humor of the Spaniard as indicated by the war cartoons in their comic papers, is something surprising One of their comic pictures shows what they call "The Manila affair." in which a whole fleet of eleven war But an "affair like this one, ships was destroyed would hardly be looked on as a subject for a funny cartoon, yet so they have it. The picture represents the United States as a fat pig, twisting and biting the tail of the British lion, and below are the words "At a flash of the lion's eye Uncle Sam is terrified After all, the Manila affair was only a bite on his tail." How they could construe this Manila affair," to hurt Great Britain is as incomprehensible as the rest of it.

Another Manila picture shows the Spanish commander looking out over his front walls holding a long pole in his hands on the further end of which is a big mousetrap of wire, containing several American warships, each going down head first into a bowl of soup. On one of these ships is Admiral Dewey's well known face. Under the trap is written "The Yankee Squadron in the Soup" and the Spanish commander has his thumb up to his nose and is wiggling his fingers at Dewey. Again one wonders what fun a Spaniard can get out of the Manila affair.

Another cartoon shows Admiral Cervera getting the joke on Admiral Sampson. Sampson is shown as a hairy long eared hog squealing while Cervera playfully twists his tail. A more natural one, because a lie might possibly be told about it, is the one that represents a Spanish gunboat valiantly firing at and sinking the Merrimac in the channel at Santiago. From this it would appear that they have been making their people believe they sank that vessel instead of Hobson sinking it to keep Cervera in the bay. Altogether the Spanish humorous picture paper is a wonderful affair.

Gifford Here.

It will be remembered that some time ago Gifford, the man with no feet, was in town selling some kind of varnish. He hired a rig of Kutzner to drive around to some other towns, and never brought it back. Mr. Kutzner put the matter into the hands of Prosecutor Pomeroy, who sent letters in all directions, and finally heard from him at Bremen. So he went down there, then to Knox, then to North Judson, but overtook his man at Winamac. He did not arrest him, but he came with Mr. Pomeroy to Logansport and then here, where he now is, and will stay till Mr. Kutzner can go to Pierceton, where Gifford says the rig now is. Pomeroy's letters had given him such a wide notice that he was arrested three times while coming home with Mr. Pomeroy. As they would step off a train an officer would be liable to step up and claim his man till Mr. Pomeroy explained. Hence he is not likely to try to get away.

"Three from two you can't," says the schoolboy. Right! Three from two you can't, either in dollars or dividends or sarsaparilla. It takes the best sarsaparilla root to make the best sarsaparilla extract. The best sarsaparilla comes from Honduras, C. A., and the Dr. Ayer Co. practically controls the entire product. Yet others claim to be making "best" sarsaparilla. They must be making it out of the remainder left after subtracting three from two. But, "three from two you can't." You can't make the best sarsaparilla without best root. You only get the best when you which is made wholly from the best root imported from Honduras.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

Peace is coming nearer, each day showing a clearer certainty that Spain understands what she must do. Spain agrees to take her troops out of Cuba and Porto Rico, but as they number about 100,000 it will take her several months to get them all away. But we shall give them ample time.

The United States asks no money damages.

We are to keep the harbor of Manila till all details are settled, when it is expected it will be known who gets the islands.

It is now believed that the peace commission will be composed of five on each side instead of three as at first proposed. When these men are appointed and ready to meet, war will cease. They are to meet at Paris.

There has been another battle in Porto Rico. Several days ago our forces took an important light house at Cape San Juan, at the northeast corner of the island. We put 40 marines from the ships into the light house to hold it, Monday evening a force of 800 Spaniards moved east along the coast, took possession of Fajardo a small place where we had put up our flag, got the flag, the first they have taken so far, and went on and attacked the 40 men in the light house. They had a machine gun and would have wiped out the little band of marines, but just then three small warships of ours saw them and opened a hot fire on them and kept them back. Later 250 men from ships drove them off. They had lost 100 or more. We had one mortally and several slightly wounded. The people of Fajardo have been all taken away, as Spaniards were likely to Kill them.

Spaniards report American forces repulsed in an attack on a small place on the road across Porto Rico to San Juan but admit the Spanish forces are falling back.

Spaniards at home are disgusted by the way the Porto Ricans welcome Americans.

There is beginning in Spain, an uprising of those who wish to establish a republic.

Friday's Daily.

Additional news is that the protocol or basis of agreement between us and Spain is substantially settled. There are no changes from what the COURIER has already announced. This agreement may be signed to-day, and then it looks as if fighting would be stopped at once all along the line.

It is also thought that we ought to hold Morro castle at Havana at once, as a pledge of Spain's sincerity.

Gen. Schwan, who is going with a strong force around the northwest from Ponce, in Porto Rico, had a sharp fight Wednesday, losing two or three men, but driving the Spaniards back.

Another sharp fight was had by Wilson's army in the center of the island and we captured the Spaniards, and what is more got behind the strong position at which they expected to stop us. We are steadily pushing forward all along.

Saturday's Daily.

The war is over. The President was has issued a proclamation ordering all commanders to stop fighting. He says:

Now, therefore, I William McKinley president of the United States, do in accordance with the stipulations of the protocol, declare and proclaim on the part of the United States, a suspension of hostilities, and do hereby command that orders be immediately given through the proper channels to the commanders of the military and naval forces of the United States to abstain from all acts inconsistent with this proclamation.

And the following is the order sent out to the armies and the navy in both seas:

Adjutant General's office, Washington, Aug. 12:—The president directs that all military operations against the enemy be suspended. Peace negotiations are nearing completion, the protocal having just been signed by the representatives of the two countries. You will inform commanders of the Spanish forces in the Philippines of these instructions. Further orders will follow. Acknowledge receipt. By order of the secretary of war.

Spain is trying to satisfy her people by telling them that her army in Porto Rico and Cuba havk not been conquered, but will go out with their arms in their hands. She hopes also to hold the Philippines, and hopes that when Cuba gets able enough she will pay the Cuban debt and not force Spain to pay it.

Spanish papers admit that Spanish rule in the New World is fully ended.

Gen. Merrit is ordered to confer with the Spanish Commandant at Manilla and take possession of that city. Miles is to take possession of San Juan in Porto Rico, but the orders to Shafter in will be somewhat different.

The war is safely over, but no one can say how long the volunteers will be obliged to stay to take care of things.

HOW THE NEWS COMES.

A Long and Roundabout Route for a Message From Manila to This Country.

The New York Times says: News from Manila which is persued so eagerly now-a-days by all Americans—and probably by Spaniards also—has to make a circuitous and laborious journey before it reaches either Madrid, London or New York. It travels about 14,000 miles under sea and overland, and is passed from station to station by more than a dozen operators, almost each one of them in a different country. Just now, in the consequence of the cutting of the single telegraphic cable which connects the Philippine Islands with China, the news which New Yorkers receive from Manila must be carried to Hong Kong by boat. The distance between Hong Kong and Balinao, the cable station of the Philippines, is about 1,000 miles. Balinao is thirty miles from Manila.

From Hong Kong, telegraphic news destined for New York is flashed over a second cable under the China sea, to Saigon; thence it goes to Singapore, at the end of the Malay peninsula, where it is taken up by another operator and sent on to Penang; its next objective point is Madras, India, from whence it is sent overland across India to Bombay. From Bombay a cable takes the message under the Indian ocean to Aden; from Aden it passes along another cable under the Red sea to Suez, thence to Port Said and Alexandria successively. Upon leaving Elexandria it goes through the Mediterrenean sea to Malta, and from Malta to Gibraltar. The operators at Gibraltar may then transmit the message in either one of two ways; they can send it direct tu Lands End, the western extremity of Cornwall, England, or they can send it to Lisbon, Portugal. The usual practice is to send cablemessages from Gibraltar via Lisbon to Lands End; from the latter point the message goes overland to London. The London operator sends it to Waterville, in the west coast of Ireland, and from there it crosses the Atlantic ocean to Canso, Novia Scotia, and the Canso operator passes it on to New York. All the cables used from Manila to Great Britain are owned and controlled by the Eastern Cable company. Coming across the Atlantic the cables of the Commercial Cable company, or those controlled by the Western Union and other lines, may be used.

Any individual sending a message of ten words or more from Manila to New York would have to pay $2.35 for each word. If the message is sent direct from Hong Kong it costs $1.60 per word. The rates between the Philippines and Hong Kong are higher in proportion than between any of the other points along the route. This fact is explained by old telegraph men on the theory that there is so little cable business done between Manila and Hong Kong that the rates must be pretty high in order to make the cable pay.

Ordinarily the transmission of a message of any length from Manila to New York will actually consume five hours of time. One word could be sent through in a little less than two minutes, but in order to accomplish that feat an operator would have to be on the watch at each station and rush the word along. In the regular order of business, however, delays of a greater or less degree are inevitable at each station.

The difference in time between Manila and New York is about thirteen hours. While the resident of this city is eating his 9 o'clock breakfast, the person of regular habits of Manila is wooing slumber, for it is there 10 o'clock p. m. If a telegraphic message sent from Manila at 10 o'clock in the evening could come through to New York instantaneously, it would reach here at 9 o'cock in the morning of the same day. But, allowing for the five hours consumed in transmission, a cablegram sent from Manila at 10 p. m., would reach here at 2. p. m. of the same day. In the ordinary course of busines, a telegraphic message will come through to New York from Hong Kong in about four hours and a half.

Expert handlers of telegraph cables say that with a properly equipped cable ship a cut cable in the deep sea can be put together in a very few days. The electricians are able to locate the break within a mile of the actual point of separation and the grappling apparatus of the cable ship is able to pick up the loose ends of a cable very quickly.

Bad Wabash Wreck.

Last night at about ten o'clock, the east bound fast freight on the Wabash, broke in two a little beyond Churubusco, and the rear part ran full speed into the front part, smashing eight cars loaded with hogs, poultry, meat, etc. The man in charge of the poultry car was killed and a tramp known to be on the train has not been found. A great deal of live stock and general freight was destroyed. It was loaded at Omaha and Kansas city. The track was blockaded eight hours, while the wreck was being cleared by a wrecking train from Montpelier. All trains had to run over the Nickel Plate via Fort Wayne.

How Much Salt Is There in the Sea?

Some curious statistics have been lately worked out by a well-known scientific man as to the amount of salt held in solution by the oceans of the world. He reckons that 90,000,000,000,000,000 tons of salt exist in the water. These figures, of course, convey no impression, but it would be enough to cover the land of the earth with a solid layer of salt, 1,000 feet thick.

The World's Greatest Pyramids.

The great pyramid of Cheops is the largest structure ever erected by the hand of man. Its original dimensions at the base were 704 feet square, and its perpendicular height in the highest point is 448 feet. It covers four acres, one rood and twenty-two rods of ground, and has been estimated by an eminent British architect to have cost not less than £35,000,000.

NATIONS REJOICE.

Send Congratulations On the War's Conclusion.

Baron Fava, the Italian Ambassador, was the First to Call.

Spanish Forces in Porto Rico and Cuba Ordered to Stop Fighting.

A Batch of Miscellaneous Telegraph News from All Parts of the World.

Congratulates the United States.

The United States Government has received the first congratulations from a foreign power upon the successful termination of the war with Spain. The congratulations came from Italy through the Italian Ambassador, Baron Fava. Ambassador Fava, in presenting the views of his Government, expressed the hope that they would be communicated as soon as possible to the President.

Order Fighting Stopped.

Madrid special: The Governors General of Cuba and Porto Rico have acknowled the receipt of the news of the suspension of hostilities between the United States and Spain, and announced the carrying out of the orders.

Came Back to Life.

At Quincy, Ill., Mrs. Catherine Collins, who was reported dead, came back to life with the arrival of the undertaker. Mrs. Collins is an old and well-known resident of that city. She had been ill for some weeks, and early Saturday morning she took a turn for the worse. Her physician was called, and, to appearances, she had breathed her last. The doctor pronounced her dead, and her family sent for an undertaker, who, on his arrival, several hours after, found her alive, with a fair prospect of fully recovering. During the time she was in a cataleptic state her body turned cold, and there was no perceptible beating of her pulse.

Monon Train Killed Three.

A Monon passenger train ran down a carriage containing Mrs. John D. Barton and her two children, a boy of 5 years and a girl 18 months old, at Frankfort, Ind. All were killed. Mrs. Barton and the little boy were carried on the engine pilot a distance of 125 feet, while the baby girl's body remained on the pilot until the train was stopped, a distance of three squares from where the engine struck them. The buggy was torn loose from the horse, which escaped without a scratch.

Pope Anxious.

The Rome Tribune says that the Vatican is in constant communication with Archbishop Ireland, Mons. Martinelli, Apostle Delegate in the United States, and Duke Almodovar de Rio, the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, endeavoring to secure clauses in the treaty of peace that will safeguard the religious interests of Catholic residents in countries to be ceded by Spain to the United States.

Double Drowning.

A double drowning accident occurred at Eagle Bluff, a summer resort several miles up the river from Lacrosse, Wis. Mrs. T. B. Gates, wife of Officer Gates, was camping with several other families and went bathing. She went in beyond her depth and was drowned before aid could be given. Howard Sutherland, aged 14 years, son of James Southerland, attempted to rescue her and he, too, was drowned.

Aged Couple Suffocated.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baer, an aged German couple living at 1812 West Polk street, Chicago, were suffocated to death by a fire which burned their home. The neighbors think the place was set on fire by thieves.

"Third Rate Power."

The Madrid El Pais prints the text of the protocol signed by the United States and Spain with mourning borders and says: "Spain, without colonies, is reduced to the role of a third rate power."

Hobson's Father Made Postmaster

The President has appointed Judge J. M. Hobson, father of Lieutenant Hobson, Postmaster at Greensboro, Ala. He is a Democrat.

Three Trains in a Heap.

A triple collision on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway at Bay View, Wis., cost the company $50,000. No one was seriously injured. Two long freight trains had collided. A few moments later a wild passenger train rounded a curve and crashed into the freight wreck.

Fatal Collision.

Rome special: A collision between a freight and passenger train occurred in the tunnel at Giovi. Two passengers and seven railway employes were killed and forty others were badly injured.

Col. James O. Broadhead Dead.

Col. James O. Broadhead, minister to Switzerland under Cleveland, is dead at St. Louis, Mo., as the result of a disease of which he had been wasting away for some time.

Messina Is Severely Shaken.

There was a severe earthquake shock at Messina, Island of Sicily. The inhabitants were panic-stricken, but there was no damage done.

George M. Ebers Dead.

A dispatch from the Villa Ebers, at Tatzing, Bavaria, announces the death of Georg Moritz Ebers, the Egyptologist and novelist.

WHEAT PRICE IS HIGHER.

Low Visible Supply and Large Export Demand the Cause.

Dun's weekly trade review says: "Prospects of peace stimulated many kinds of business. In spite of records, the impression prevails that delay and hesitation have legitimately resulted from war, and larger contracts are, in fact, coming forward for iron products, with a better general demand in most industries. A few labor troubles only call attention to the fact that this season has been remarkably free from such hindrances. In spite of a promise of 700,000,000 bushels of wheat this year the price is 2½c higher for the week. The disposition of farmers to hold back their wheat for prices more like those obtainable recently accounts for receipts 36 per cent smaller than last year. The visible supply is extremely low, but exports at the present rate throughout the year would have little lifting power if the crop is about 300,000,000 bushels more than home needs for seed and feed. Failures for the week have been 196 in the United States, against 237 last year, and 21 in Canada, against 29 last year."

BOGUS HERO CONFESSES.

Piled Ties on a Railroad Track and Then Flagged a Train.

A young man giving the name of Alexander Mummel of Shelby County, Illinois, flagged train No. 2 of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, near Monroe, Ohio, the other evening, and when the train stopped a lot of ties were found piled on the track. General Superintendent Rawn and Division Superintendent Brimson were on the train, but they took no stock in Mummel's story of finding the obstruction accidentally, so he was taken to Chillicothe and turned over to Marshal Stanley, who succeeded in getting a confession from Mummel that he had placed the ties where found for the purpose of getting money from the company and passengers.

MISSOURI TOWN IS FLOODED.

Cloudburst Does Much Damage at Troy—Bridges Swept Away.

A cloudburst inundated Troy, Mo., the other night, flooding the stores along the main street. Sidewalks were swept away and several highway and railroad bridges are destroyed. The telegraph poles in many places were washed away, and it was not until the next morning that outside wire communication was restored. Culver creek, which flows through the town, overflowed its banks and swept everything before it. The St. Louis and Hannibal bridge east of there was destroyed, and scarcely a bridge remains across the creek for several miles. The damage in the city will reach $10,000.

Gain Cheap Light and Power.

The Snoqualmie Falls Power Company has closed all contracts in Chicago for the completion of its great plant for supplying Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., with electric light and power. This enterprise, undertaken by Chicago capital, is perhaps the most unique and wonderful development of hydraulic power yet undertaken in this country. The Snoqualmie falls, twenty-two miles from Seattle, has an unbroken vertical fall of 270 feet, or about 100 feet greater than Niagara, and is the only waterfall of commercial utility west of Spokane. The entire flow of Snoqualmie river, equal to 30,000-horse power at low water, is controlled by the company, and the plan of installation is such that by a small additional expense for dams and reservoirs the entire drainage from the snow fields of the Snoqualmie watershed of 1,000 square miles, will be available, making over 100,000-horse power whenever the business of the adjacent cities may demand it. All machinery will be capable of meeting all present needs, and of easy and economical expansion to meet future growing requirements. The power house will last forever, as it is hewn out of the solid rock 250 feet beneath the crest of the fall, where the immense water wheels connect direct to generators from which the electricity is transmitted by wire to Seattle and Tacoma. The plant will be completed and in operation Dec. 1, and is expected to give a great impetus to business of all kinds and especially to manufacturers, who will have the benefit of cheap and inexhaustible light and power. Contracts for power already made assure the financial success of the enterprise.

Turkey Makes a Disclaimer.

At Constantinople, the porte replied to the American demand for compensation for losses sustained by American subjects during the Armenian massacres. The reply is the same as that given to other powers, repudiating all responsibility for the losses. In the course of the farewell audience of Dr. James B. Angell, the retiring American minister to Turkey, the Sultan referred to the war between the United States and Spain. He said he was much impressed with the naval operations, and the terrible execution of American guns and had ordered the purchase of similar guns for Turkey.

Railway Wreck in Massachusetts.

Three men were killed and a number of mail clerks were severely injured on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Canton Junction, Mass., by an express mail special from New York to Boston jumping the tracks. The accident was caused by a misplaced switch. The special was running at high speed on a down grade. At the bottom of the slope the switch at a siding failed to work and in an instant the cars were off the track. The engine and forward car were turned over on their sides, and the other three cars were thrown from their trucks.

Sights Nansen's Arctic Ship.

The Norwegian brigantine Tiber, Captain Fyogstad, twenty-four days from Keykjavik, reports passing Nansen's arctic steamer Fram on July 14 in latitude 62:16 north, longitude 50:26 west. The Fram was proceeding northward. She signaled that all were well. The Fram this season is conveying a private scientific expedition under Dr. Nansen's old officer, Lieut. Johansen.

Two Killed, Many Injured.

An accident which caused the death of two persons and seriously mangled and maimed seven others occurred twelve miles west of Cass Lake, Minn. A construction train with 100 bridgemen and laborers engaged in the extension line of the Great Northern Railway to Fosston struck an obstruction on the tracks. Four flat cars with their loads of human freight were derailed.

Looking for a Boom.

The London Statist predicts a great wave of American prosperity after the war and active European business in American securities. "Cuba," it says, "will give employment to a vast amount of capital, and the stimulus to industry there will react upon the United States. The investments in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines will particularly benefit railways."

Fire in a Packing Plant.

The plant of the St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision Company at St. Louis, Mo., was damaged by fire. The cattle sheds, hidehouse, sausage room, pork cooler and fertilizer building were destroyed, the total damage being $50,000.

Destruction by Bush Fires.

The steamer Farallon arrived at Vancouver from Alaska ports with the largest amount of gold landed there this year. The amount of the treasure is placed at $1,000,000. The Farallon also brings news that Skaguay was in flames and seemed doomed to destruction when the steamer sailed. When the Farallon left, Captain Roberts says fifteen or twenty houses were in flames as the steamer cast off, and the last report that he received was that the inadequate fire brigade were attempting to keep the flames from the dynamite sheds where the railway company had its dynamite stored. This seemed to him impossible, as the fire was rapidly spreading. The people were panic-stricken, and the forests around the town were all ablaze. It was an awe-inspiring sight, and it looked from the water as if nothing could save the town from destruction. The houses caught fire from the bush fires surrounding Skaguay, and as a high wind prevailed it drove the flames to the center of the town. Passengers on board expressed the opinion that Skaguay by this time has been swept out of existence.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY.

P. E. Gallagher's Death Charged to Two Watertown, S. D., Men.

The body of a strange man was found several days ago in a box car at Watertown, S. D., with a bullet wound at the base of the brain. He was later found to have been murdered. J. V. Gallagher of Newark, Ohio, arrived there and identified the body as that of his brother, P. E. Gallagher of Gibson, Ohio. Mr. Gallagher was on a pleasure trip through the West and, it is now claimed, was murdered for his money by Henry Walker and Henry Elliott. After the death of Gallagher Elliott took the name of P. E. Gallagher in order to secure cash on a bank draft found in Gallagher's pocketbook. The draft was found at one of the Watertown banks and Walker and Elliott were arrested. They were given a hearing in a justice court and the chain of circumstantial evidence was so complete that they were held to the grand jury.

DITCHED BY A LANDSLIDE.

Twenty Passengers Shaken Up and Some Severely Injured.

While a north-bound train was running from Norton, Va., it struck a landslide near Pennington Gap, Kentucky, and three coaches attached rolled down an embankment sixty feet. About twenty passengers were aboard, all of whom were more or less injured. Superintendent J. W. Logsdon of Cumberland Valley division of Louisville and Nashville Railroad had a rib broken and was otherwise badly bruised. Charles P. Perin, manager of Watts' steel and iron syndicate, was badly bruised about the head and W. F. Tinsley of Knox County and little son were considerably bruised. Mr. Tinsley's wounds may prove fatal. Several women were also hurt.

Railway Wreck in Kansas.

The fast mail train on the Santa Fe road was partially wrecked about three and one-half miles west of Emporia, Kan., when the driving rod on the right side of the engine broke, and the sudden jerk snapped off the driving rod on the other side. In a moment the flying rods had made kindling wood of the cab. Fireman Charles Foley of Topeka was crushed to a pulp, hardly an unbroken bone remaining in his body. Engineer James Rolo remained at his post and succeeded in turning off the steam, and thus saving the train.

Russia Wins in China.

The Pekin correspondent of the London Times says: "The tsung-li-yamen (Chinese foreign office) has given formal assent to all the conditions imposed by the Russian charge d'affaires, M. Pavloff, regarding the contract for the Neu-Chwang railway extension loan. These conditions are in direct conflict with the terms of the signed contract and are designed to block the completion of the final contract.

Score Drowned at Lisbon.

During the departure from Lisbon of Dr. Campos Salles, president of Brazil, by the transatlantic liner Thames for America (probably Buenos Ayres) two steamers that were carrying friends to bid him farewell came into collision, swamping two small boats. No fewer than twenty persons were drowned.

Soldier's Wife Elopes.

Captain John Green of Lincoln County, O. T., who went to Tampa, Fla., several months ago to accept an appointment as drillmaster in the regular army, returned home on a furlough to find that his wife had eloped.

Francis Key Honored.

Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," was honored in Frederick, Md., his native city, by the dedication of a handsome monument erected to his memory.

Bismarck, N. D., Destroyed.

The best portion of the city of Bismarck, N. D., was consumed by fire, utterly destroying hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of dollars' worth of property.

Poisoned by Cream Puffs.

The entire family of Joseph Potter, at Hicksville, Ohio, was poisoned by eating cream puffs. Three will die and others are seriously ill.

Professor Park Morrill Is Dead.

Prof. Park Morrill, chief of the forecast division of the weather bureau, died at Washington of typhoid fever.

Judge Allen Killed.

Probate Judge David Allen was killed at Newark, Colo., in a runaway accident.

SPAIN HAS ACCEPTED OUR TERMS FOR PEACE

PROTOCOL IS SIGNED

THE WAR IS ENDED

Queen Christina and the Spanish Ministers Bow to Uncle Sam.

Every Demand Made by President McKinley Is Agreed To by the Spanish Government.

WAR IS AT AN END.

Spain Humbly Accepts the Terms of This Country's Protocol.

The war is over. The Spanish cabinet, after due consideration of the terms of the protocol presented by President McKinley, decided to accept it, and M. Cambon, the French ambassador at Washington, was instructed to sign it. With this signature the war comes to a close, after nearly four months' duration. The war has been shorter than even the most sanguine anticipated. Since April 21, the date fixed by Congress as the beginning of the struggle, Porto Rico, Cuba, the Ladrones and the Philippines have passed into our possession, two Spanish fleets have been destroyed, one Spanish army has been captured, and in every engagement the enemy has been defeated in the face sometimes of overwhelming obstacles. The valor, endurance, skill and discipline of American soldiers have been fairly tested, and they have compelled the admiration of the foreign military observers. The navy has covered itself with glory and challenged the plaudits of the whole world. In these few weeks the United States has taken position as one of the strong naval nations and a military power which must hereafter be taken into account in world movements. The country has entered upon its imperial career.

The United States Government is now in a position to proceed to the negotiation of terms of peace, and the peace commissioners, in compliment to the French Government, will meet in Paris. Under the protocol which Spain accepted Porto Rico will be ceded to the United States, Cuba will be freed, and Spain at the earliest practicable day will evacuate all its West Indian possessions. This country will also have a coaling station in the Ladrone Islands. Manila Bay, with the city and surrounding territory, will be retained by the United States, and the future government of the Philippine Islands will be determined by the commission.

Spain is whipped. If she had not recognized that fact she would necessarily have been subjected to an unmerciful trouncing. The proud Castilians yielded to the inevitable and humbly accepted the terms of peace offered by the United States. In the history of warfare it is doubtful if the conqueror ever treated the conquered more generously. The war that has been conducted on our part with humanity amounting to chivalry would have been continued, if need were, but Spain in such event could not have looked for any more of the forbearance that has characterized its conduct thus far. No money indemnity is wrung from an exhausted and impoverished people, and no humiliation pressed upon them other than that which is entailed upon defeat in battle. So far as the exaction of territory is concerned, it is nothing but what the world foresaw at the beginning of hostilities. When the Spanish Government dismissed our minister at Madrid it placed its American possessions in the scale which the ruthless sword was sure to outweigh. As a corollary to Cuban independence followed Porto Rican possession. There could be no other outcome. To leave Spain in possession of Porto Rico would be to leave the seeds of a disease that would again break out and again demand our intervention. As to the Pacific islands, we are willing to leave them to the determination of a peace commission, with the sole reserve that coaling and naval stations at least must be retained by us.

Peace comes with all her blessings, and for this a united and humane people may well be thankful. The war has not been an unmixed evil. We have gained a prestige in the world that never will be lightly challenged by any power. The purposes for which the war was entered upon on our part have been accomplished. Cuba is Free. We Have Remembered the Maine!

SIGNING OF THE PROTOCOL.

Elaborate Ceremony Attending the Proceeding at the White House.

M. Cambon, the French ambassador, was elaborately received at the White House when he came representing the Spanish Government to sign the protocol. He was conducted to the diplomatic reception room, where he found four copies of the protocol spread out upon the big mahogany table. Two of these were in French and two in English. The United States retained one copy of each and M. Cambon the same. One clause in the protocol relates to an immediate cessation of hostilities, and this was ordered as soon as the document was signed. The telegram which had already been sent to the commanders of the army and navy acquainted them with the status of the peace negotiations and operated by bringing about a temporary truce. The dispatches sent immediately after the signing instruct Gens. Miles and Merritt to cease further operations and notify the Spanish commanders of the fact that all fighting has ceased. The impressive ceremony accompanying the signing of the protocol was witnessed by a number of invited guests.

THE TERMS SPAIN HAS ACCEPTED.

[Conditions as officially announced by the President.]

FIRST. No claim for pecuniary indemnity.

SECOND. The relinquishment of Spanish sovereignty over Cuba and the immediate evacuation of the island.

THIRD. The cession to the United States and immediate evacuation by Spain of Porto Rico and other islands in the West Indies, and the like cession of an island in the Ladrones.

FOURTH. The United States to occupy and hold the city, bay and harbor of Manila pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace covering the future of the Philippines.

FIFTH. Commissioners to be named by the United States and Spain to conclude the treaty of peace.

HONOR FOR BOTH.

Schley and Sampson Are to Be Rear Admirals.

The President will recommend to Congress that Acting Rear Admiral Sampson be advanced eight numbers and Commodore Schley six numbers. This will result in making each a rear admiral, but with Commodore Schley ranking immediately below Sampson. Captain Clark of the Oregon will be recommended for an advance of six numbers in the captain's grade, and Lieutenant Commander Wainwright will go up eight numbers. Other promotions throughout the fleet will be recommended.

The promotion of Schley and Sampson adds two more to the roll of rear admirals who have won their advancement by gallant services in the present conflict. The list now includes Dewey, Schley and Sampson, all of whom have done heroic work for their country and have demonstrated the prowess of the United States as a naval power.

The promotion of Lieutenant Commander Wainwright marks him for especial distinction, as he is the only naval officer who has been twice recommended for higher honors during the war, and none more richly deserve such recognition than this gallant officer, who first waged successful battle with two of the enemy's most dreaded war machines at the mouth of Santiago harbor and a few days later gallantly sailed his vessel into the port of Ponce and raised the Stars and Stripes for the first time as a conquering invader upon the soil of Porto Rico. This daring young commander, who comes of splendid fighting stock, has added new luster to his country's arms and may be counted upon to fill a place in martial history beside the grandest heroes who have done service in army and navy.

Captain Clark of the Oregon has nobly won the honors his country bestows upon its heroes. His unrivaled achievement in making the longest voyage ever made with a battleship and then participating in one of the most memorable naval engagements in the world's history, doing incalculable damage to the enemy's fleet, proves his ability as a commander.

GARCIA REPENTS OF ANGER.

Writes to General Shafter Offering to Furnish Scouts.

Gen. Garcia seems to be repenting of his wrath because Santiago was not turned over to the Cubans, and is indicating a desire to resume co-operation with the American army. Gen. Shafter received a letter from Garcia, dated at Gibara. Garcia says that Gen. Miles on July 19 asked him to furnish fifty Cubans as scouts for the Porto Rican expedition. As he understands Gen. Miles has already sailed, it is perhaps too late to comply with the request, but he is willing to furnish the men, if they are still wanted, and incloses an order for them. It is believed that Garcia, now that he has had time to cool off, perceives that he acted with more haste than good judgment in withdrawing his forces, and is seeking a reconciliation.

BIG SANTIAGO MAIL.

Forty Thousand Letters Released from Quarantine.

The long delay of the mails from Santiago, which came over on the transport Comal, has annoyed the Postoffice Department, and as a result C. S. Beaver, chief clerk of the railway mail service, was sent to Edgmont key, where the steamers have been held in quarantine, and he discovered that more than 40,000 letters were on the Comal awaiting fumigation for ten days and were ordered by Beaver sent to the island at once for fumigation, and then to their respective destinations.

TO RULE NEW ISLANDS.

Plans for Temporary Government Are Considered.

Plans for the temporary government of Cuba and the territory which will be acquired from Spain as a result of the war are now under serious consideration by the President and the members of the cabinet. Porto Rico, as an actual addition to the territories of the United States, will be placed in charge of a military governor, who will exercise a supervisory control of all the functions of government, under the direction of the President, until Congress shall determine upon a permanent form of government for the island.

The President, under the constitution and laws, has no authority to go beyond this preliminary or temporary stage in the establishment of any system of governmental controls, and although it is altogether probable that in his message to Congress on the subject he will exercise his constitutional privilege of making recommendations, upon Congress alone will devolve the responsibility and duty of determining the character of the political relations which Porto Rico shall permanently bear to the United States. There are reasons for the belief that the President himself favors a colonial form of government, and that this view is shared by members of the cabinet. Canada is cited as having a model colonial government which is satisfactory alike to a majority of its people and to the mother country.

Upon the evacuation of Cuba it is believed to be the intention of the President to establish for the whole island a temporary military government similar to that now in operation at Santiago. When order has been fully restored and the people have settled down to their peaceful occupations it is believed to be the view of the President that a convention of representatives of the people should be called, to vote upon the question of a form of government for the island.

SPANIARDS BLOW UP A BRIDGE.

Enemy Driven from Vicinity of Coamo by Our Troops.

After the capture of Coamo troop C of Brooklyn was ordered out along the road leading to Aibonito. The American troopers had not gone far when they discovered a party of Spanish engineers who were attempting to destroy all the bridges spanning the streams. The Americans at once started toward the Spaniards, who fled, and pursued them for five miles. The pursuit was so close that the Spaniards did not succeed in doing any damage to the bridges until they reached a point three miles from Aibonito. Here they were able to halt long enough to blow up a culvert bridge.

WHAT IT COSTS TO FIGHT SPAIN.

Actual Expense Thus Far Has Been $800,000 a Day.

Up to the present time, it is estimated at the Treasury Department, the actual amount paid out in war expenses since the conflict with Spain began is $95,000,000. The average daily expense has been about $800,000. During July it was about $1,000,000 a day. It is believed, however, that when a final accounting is made the cost will foot up $1,500,000 a day for the army and navy.

A THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS.

That Is About What the War Will Cost the United States.

The evidence on every hand that the war is about at an end has aroused the mathematicians. They are now engaged in demonstrating what the cost of the whole war will have been to the Government, when the last volunteer soldier is at home, the last penny of war bond interest paid, the last pension awarded. This calculation is of course far-reaching. Fairly accurate estimates of the extraordinary expenses of the army and navy during March, April, May, June, July and August gave them as $150,000,000, of which about $105,000,000 was expended between April 25 and Aug. 6, and $123,000,000 between April 1 and Aug. 6. The latest calculation, based upon treasury reports and comparisons with similar expenses during the civil war, calculates the war expenses from April 1, 1898, to April 1, 1899, at which time it is assumed all extraordinary expenses will have ended, and adds thereto interest and pension charges growing out of the war and an arbitrary estimate of the value of the labor lost by volunteers entering the army. According to this calculation the war will eventually have cost the United States $1,000,000,000. Here is a table of estimates of war expenses:

Current war expenses, April 1, 1898, to April 1, 1899	$400,000,000
War expenditures of the separate States	15,000,000
Citizen contribution to soldiers' aid	15,000,000
War damage claims against the Government	20,000,000
Loss of labor of 250,000 volunteer soldiers one year	100,000,000
Interest on war debt	90,000,000
Probable new pensions to be paid	300,000,000
Value of the Maine	3,000,000
Total	$943,000,000

This estimate is so close to $1,000,000,000 that the round total may in the end represent the expense of Spain's mistakes for us.

SPAIN'S PENALTY FOR WAR.

Her False Pride, Bigotry and Politics Have Cost Her Dearly.

Spain for the sake of false pride, bigotry, politics and a child king, has buried in the depths of the sea thirty-five vessels of her navy, valued at $36,500,000. By their rusting hulks lie the bodies of more than a thousand gallant tars. Spain has surrendered in territory to the United States directly Cuba, with a population of 1,500,000 and an area of 45,000 square miles, and Porto Rico, with an area of 3,670 square miles and a population of 810,000; also the Ladrone Islands, area 417 square miles and population 15,000. Her total direct loss of territory in square miles is 49,087, and loss in population 2,325,000. She has also jeopardized, probably beyond all future control by her, the Philippine Islands, with an area of 114,326 square miles and a population of 8,000,000. So that in the end it appears the Spanish kingdom for the sake of the wrong has given up 165,000 square miles of territory and over 10,000,000 of taxpaying population. This loss is the gain of the United States, which, to bring it about, placed in service a first-class navy, with 10,000 men and fifty effective vessels, and a volunteer and regular army of 278,500 men, of which New York gave the largest number, Pennsylvania next and Illinois the third.

The Spanish El Nacional concedes that in the destruction of Cervera's fleet Spain lost alone $20,000,000 of invested money. The Cristobal Colon was valued at $4,400,000 and the Viscaya at $3,000,000. The estimated trading capacity of the territory of Spain which the United States has taken is placed at $200,000,000 per annum at the present time and that must be tributary hereafter to American coffers and not to the blood-stained ones of Castile and Aragon.

WHAT SPAIN HAS LOST.

The total shaded portion represents the amount of colonial territory we have taken from Spain, as compared with the area of the mother country. The doubly-shaded portion represents the population of the captured possessions as compared with the population of the mother country.

WRECK OF THE REINA MERCEDES NEAR SANTIAGO.

IN THE LANE.

By Victor Grey.

Through the lane the setting sunlight
Falls in misty, golden showers,
Tinting with its shimmering lances
All the little, nodding flowers,
Shining 'mid the emerald foliage,
Where the birdies, blithely singing,
Fill the woodlands all about us
With a sweet and joyous ringing.

Don't you love this lane, my darling?
When I think of those sweet hours
We have spent within its cloisters,
'Neath its trees and 'mid its flowers,
Every blade of grass grows dearer—
Every tiny fragrant flower
Seems to bring, in swift succession,
Memories of some happy hour.

Here it was we met, my darling,
On that blissful, sunlit morning,
When the woodland's robe of emerald,
Fringed with summer's fair adorning,
Gleamed with shimmering diamond dewdrops,
And the birds were blithely trilling
Happy lays—sweet morning carols—
All the woods with rapture thrilling.

Here, within its dusky shadows,
Sauntering down the lane together,
Love around us cast his fetters—
Fetters that would bind forever.
Here it was I told my story,
And, my happy answer guessing,
Held you in my arms a moment,
Sweet, red lips the while caressing.

There we had our lovers' quarrel,
'Mid those clumps of fragrant clover;
Here it was we grew repentant—
Begged forgiveness o'er and o'er;
Then I kissed your cheeks' soft roses,
And your eyes with teardrops shining,
Not content until your ringlets
On my heart were safe reclining.

Yes, I love this lane, my darling,
With its fringe of wildwood flowers—
Love it for the joy that crowned me
In those happy, happy hours;
For, though years since then have vanished—
Youth's fair bloom is ours no longer—
Still our hearts as one are beating,
And our love each day grows stronger.

A Terrible Moment.

Yes, terrible—that is just what it was. I shall never forget it, even should I live to one of those wondrous ages at times recorded in the papers. Moreover, it was not a thing for a man to forget. Many events may slip from our mind, but never that moment when we stand on the brink of the grave, brought thither by the probability of an awful death.

It happened in this way. I had been in Australia for about five years, during which time I had amassed a tolerable fortune, when I began to long to see the old country again—a desire considerably strengthened by the fact that the girl I loved, and who had consented to be my wife, was going to England, and I could not bear the thought of such an extent of ocean between us; so I determined to go too, and let our marriage take place there.

May Brodstone was the only daughter of a well-to-do squatter, and the prettiest, nicest girl for miles round the station, though, until I had become acquainted with her, rather fond of a bit of girlish flirtation. This was the worse for me, as it turned out.

Among her many admirers was one Jacob Kiel. Dark-haired, dark-eyed, dark-complexioned, he was of that class of men who feel strongly, and who never forget an injury—like wild cats, they are nasty customers to offend. Well, May, I fear, had flirted somewhat with Jacob Kiel, who, I really believe, loved the very ground she walked on, though she declared—and I knew it was true—that she had never given him the slightest hope.

It was about this time that I appeared upon the scene; and she discovered that she had found the right man, as I had found the right girl. May Brodstone instantly gave up all her admirers, was as steady and quiet as a gum-tree when no wind blows, and finally said the "Yes" upon which my happiness depended.

Old Mr. Brodstone knew that the match would be a good one, and readily gave his consent, so that our engagement was soon made public. I was present when the news reached Jacob Kiel. I shall never forget his face. His lips were compressed, his dark eyes contracted; he looked from May to me, and I felt if he could he would do much mischief. Without a syllable he quitted the place. A strange sensation ran through me as he departed; and May told me that a cold shudder had run through her veins.

We did not see much of Kiel after this, though we knew he was often about the station on business; but the man somehow threw a kind of shadow over May's and my happiness, and we were not at all sorry when we got on board the steamer and steamed off towards Old England. We had not, however, got cleverly out of sight of land when May, giving a little cry, put her hand on my arm, and, slightly nodding her head towards the lower deck, said,—

"Oh, Edward, look—he is here too!"

And so he was. Leaning quietly over the side, watching the land apparently, was Jacob Kiel—a passenger for England, like ourselves. I will own that I was considerably annoyed, though when May, drawing nearer, exclaimed, in a low, startled voice, "Edward dear, I don't know how it is, but I dread that man—I cannot divest my mind of the thought that he means us harm." I laughed, and tried to banish so absurd an idea. And certainly it appeared I had every right to do so. Save by a casual interchange of a few words, Kiel never troubled us; and we were making a capital journey, when, just as we were within twenty degrees of the line, we were struck by a hurricane which the captain declared was almost a cyclone in violence.

The vessel could not weather it. The masts crashed overboard, taking several of the crew with them, and, before the wreck could be cut adrift, a portion of the broken spars, dashing against the ship, had caused a leak below the water-line, and the cry was,—

"We are sinking! Lower the boats—the pumps are useless!"

The captain was marvellously firm and cool, and by his example made us all the same.

The boats were rapidly lowered and filled, while, thank Heaven, the storm seemed to abate. The women went first, of course, and all who proceeding well, when, just as the last boat was being filled, I remembered that in my hurry I had left my mother's miniature in my chest. There was plenty of time to fetch it, and in a second I was down in the cabin. Flinging the lid open, my hand was already upon the likeness, when I heard a foot upon the stairs. I turned, and by the dim light yet swinging from the roof perceived Jacob Kiel.

Good Heavens! The diabolical expression on his face, the fiendish malice in his dark, snake-like eyes, revealed his intention in a moment. He had come to do me some deadly harm. Leaping up, I seized my revolver, to be on my guard; but an attack was not his purpose. Before I could prevent him, he had quickly closed the cabin door, and locked it on the outside.

Like a flash of lightning all the horrors of my situation instantly flashed before me. I was a prisoner in the sinking ship! Uttering a loud shout of fury, I sprang forward; the cry was echoed by a laugh from Jacob Kiel. I heard him say, "Who will marry May Brodstone now?" and then his feet went rapidly up the stairs.

I called aloud for help; the uproar of the storm drowned my voice. I paused. Just then the wind lulled, and I heard an order to push off; the speaker was Jacob Kiel. I again shouted in my agony; but my voice and the wind rose together—I was not heard. I continued to shout like a madman, though I knew that all hope was gone—that I was alone, like a trapped rat, in the sinking ship.

Furiously I beat the door, all the while painfully conscious that rescue was impossible and death certain, for it was night, and, as no doubt the storm would separate the boats, my absence would not be discovered until the vessel had foundered.

Could I expect aught else, when in the occasional lull of the hurricane I heard the rush of the deadly waters in the hold, and felt the ship lurch more heavily each moment as she plunged in the trough of the sea? Suddenly she gave a terrific heel over, and a wave came rattling down the companion ladder like thunder, rushed under the door and inundated the cabin.

I shrieked in agony, believing that all was over—that I was to die thus, not even with the chance of battling for life.

I felt that I could meet death calmly if I were on deck, with the heavens above me; but my very hair stirred at the thought of being buried in the sea as it were in a box. Was there really no way of escape? I looked round and gave a great cry of joy, leaped forward, careless now that the water mounted higher and higher.

"Fool! Idiot!" I exclaimed. "You are your own murderer!"

My eyes had rested upon my revolver. In a second I had fired two of its barrels into the lock of the door, shivering it to atoms, and the next minute I was upon the deck—only just in time, for the vessel was settling fast. It would have settled long before, but that the storm had abated.

With a wild hope I looked for the boats. Near or far all was alike—darkness hid the waters. But, having succeeded so far, I resolved not to despair. One by one I discharged the remaining barrels of my revolver, and then plunged into the sea, to swim as far as I could from the ship before it sank, hoping that I should find some pieces of wreck. I did so before I had proceeded far—a mast, with cordage attached. This helped me; for, after lashing myself to the mast as well as I could, the waves bore me away. Suddenly, however, a fearful rush of water seized me. I was drawn rapidly back, and then down as in a whirlpool—flung, it seemed, here, there and everywhere—after which I remembered no more. When I came to, I was in one of the boats, with May Brodstone leaning over me.

It appeared that directly morning dawned the boats were called together, and the captain went over the names, when mine was found missing; upon which he had resolved to row back, and see if he could not find me, urged thereto by many of his companions, who wondered—as did not Jacob Kiel—what could have prevented my getting into one of the boats.

The sea was nearly calm, the sun shining, and their search was not difficult. They soon perceived a dark object. Approaching it, they found it to be myself, clinging like grim death to the wreck, but laughing and yelling like a maniac. In fact, I was mad, and for some time after they managed to get me into the boat I remained so; then I became calmer, though I was delirious for a whole day and night.

Directly sensibility returned I told my story, filling every one with horror, especially May Brodstone.

"I see it all!" exclaimed the captain. "The villain! Last night our boats separated in the darkness; this morning the one bearing Jacob Kiel and the worst of the crew was missing. He has either steered the boat into a different track, or paid the fellows to desert us, fearful of the punishment that might have awaited him when we touched land."

Whether this was so I do not know, for we never heard of Jacob Kiel again.

That day we were picked up by one of Green's ships, homeward bound, and in due time were landed in England, where May and I were married, and where we now reside; for my wife will not hear of crossing the ocean again, as she cannot forget—that most terrible moment of my life.

Power of Powder.

"Velocity and pressure," explained the powder mill superintendent, "are the two main requisites in proving powder. The government is very specific in its contracts. It demands that when fired under service conditions, in the gun for which it is intended, powder must give to the projectile a muzzle velocity of at least a certain number of feet per second without producing a pressure of more than a certain number of tons to the square inch. For modern guns the velocity required varies from 2,000 to 2,300 feet in a second, and the pressure is not allowed to exceed fifteen tons to the square inch. In some of our guns of the present day the amount of energy stored up in the powder charge is so tremendous as to be almost incredible. The limit of energy upon the projectile cannot be estimated, so vast are the possibilities.

"For example, I may cite the Oregon's thirteen-inch rifles. Five hundred and fifty pounds of powder in these guns impart to an 1,100-pound shot a velocity of 2,100 feet per second, and the energy of the projectile is nearly 34,000 foot tons. This power is sufficient to lift such a vessel as the Oregon, eight feet out of the water.—San Francisco Call.

SAN JUAN'S FORTIFICATIONS.

Morro Castle Dates From the Time of Ponce De Leon.

In the Century there is a richly illustrated article on "The Island of Porto Rico," written by Mr. Frederick A. Ober. Writing of the fortifications of San Juan, Mr. Ober says:

Morro Castle dates from Ponce de Leon's time, but the Morro as it stands to-day was completed in 1584. The faro stands here, with a first-class light, and within the Morro's walls are buildings of a small military town—quarters for troops, a chapel, bakehouse, and guard-room, with dungeons down by the sea and underneath. This is the citadel, the initial point of the line of circumvallation, composed of connected bestions, castles, and fortalezas, running from west to east, to the Castle San Cristobal, thence north to the ocean.

The oldest portion of the line is at the southwest angle, and is called the "Fortaleza," the platform of which supports the captain-general's palace, and was built in 1540. The sea-wall to the north is pierced by the gateway of San Juan, which affords entrance to the glacis of San Felipe del Morro, between the palace and semi-bastion of San Augustine. Turning southwardly from the Fortaleza, we note the bastion of La Palma, and the semi-bastion of San Justo, in the curtain between which two is the arched entrance from the Marina, or outside ward, to the intramural city, and known as the Puerta de Espana. Beyond it, to the east, are the bastions of San Pedro and Santiago, the latter in the eastern wall, the middle part of which is pierced by the landward gate called the Puerta de Santiago, protected by a ravelin of the same name. The fortress San Cristobal, though sometimes called a castle, is in reality an amplification of the fortifications facing east, or landward, and extends from the bay on the south northward to the ocean.

These fortifications in their present shape were projected in 1630, and virtually finished between 1635 and 1641; but San Cristobal and the outworks were not completed until the comparatively modern date of 1771. The eastern advanced works consist of two lines of batteries, protected by a deep moat; of the small fort at San Antonio at the bridge of that name; and at the extreme eastern end of the islet a still smaller fort, San Geronimo, which defends the bridge of Boqueron.

A Joke on a Chicago Doctor.

Dr. Charles Gatchell, of Chicago, is not telling this story. The reason is that he is too deeply concerned. But the story is a true one.

Dr. Gatchell is a batchelor, and for that reason his embarrassment is greater than it otherwise would be. When he and other members of the medical profession started from Chicago to attend the national homoepathic convention in Omaha, they occupied a sleeper. Dr. Gatchell was assigned to lower six, and being tired, retired at an early hour. When the train arrived at Galesburg the car was set out to wait for a train following, some of the physicians desiring to go later from Galesburg.

That evening there was a wedding in high life at Galesburg, and of course the usual amount of ribbon decorating and rice throwing. Some of the bridal party ascertained that the contracting parties had engaged section six in a sleeper, and they determined to decorate it up. By mistake they got into the wrong car. Dr. Gatchell was peacefully sleeping and alone in the car. The decorators set to work, and in a short space of time had the section nicely decorated with ribbons and flowers. Then they hid to await the coming of the groom and bride, first sending out a spy to report their arrival.

Presently the spy sneaked out and reported that Mr. and Mrs. Blanke were in their car, which was down the track a short distance. But the decorators knew nothing of this. They rushed into the car they had first visited, pulled the curtains of section six aside, and before the astonished doctor could protest he found himself buried beneath an avalanche of rice, old shoes and flowers.

When Dr. Gatchell recovered from the awful shock to his bachelor nerves he began to talk. He talked earnestly and well, but the merry crowd fled before he could finish his rather torrid speech.—The Omaha World-Herald.

A member of the House of Commons, who has two nephews who are engineers in the American Navy, is receiving from the fleets a correspondence which would awake the envy of many newspapers. Their descriptions illustrate the readiness and efficiency of the American Navy. One of his correspondents relates that in one of the bombardments of Morro Castle one of the guns of one of the American ships was put out of action by a shell from the forts. Immediately all the chief engineers were summoned from the whole fleet by signal, and were brought aboard this ship to give advice as to the gun. They all looked at the gun and examined her damaged machinery, and the result of their combined wits was that in half an hour the gun was back in action, as sound as ever!—London Chronicle.

PRINCE BISMARCK IN THE CIRCLE OF HIS FAMILY AT FRIEDRICHSRUHE.

MAN WHO MADE GERMANY.

Prince Otto Edward Leopold Von Bismarck Was the Greatest Statesman of the Present Century.

THE death of Prince Bismarck has removed the greatest personality that Europe has seen since the days of Napoleon I. Indeed, it may be doubted if even Napoleon was his equal, measuring the two men by their deeds; for the work achieved by Napoleon has crumbled away, while that of the unifier of the German empire remains.

Prince Bismarck was one of the monumental figures of the nineteenth century. Before his time Germany was merely a geographical nation, her unity consisting alone in her language and her literature.

BISMARCK IN 1869.

True, she had aspirations to political unity and others there were before Bismarck who saw in the Prussian state the possible nucleus around which German unity might crystallize. But it was Bismarck who passed from theory to action; who cut the Gordian tangle of Prussian-Austrian relations in the affairs of the German States; who so guided events that he destroyed the hegemony of Austria on the one hand and the grasping power and ambition of Napoleon on the other; who cemented the political unity of the various and hitherto discordant German states; fashioning the empire as it is to-day and crowning in the palace of Versailles the King of Prussia as the Emperor of a new Germany. Bismarck's name, naturally, is synonymous with German national unity—the dream and hope of hundreds of years—and, through him, now the possession and privilege of the people.

Bismarck's Career.

Otto Edward Leopold von Bismarck was born at Schonhausen April 1, 1815. His family was an important one in the affairs of Prussia and its descent can be traced to medieval times. When a year old Bismarck's parents moved to Pomerania, where they had inherited knightly estates, the leading one being Kniephof. Here Bismarck passed five years of his childhood, but on account of a somewhat mischievous disposition he was sent at the age of 6 years to a boarding school in Berlin, the principal of which had the reputation of being a strict disciplinarian. He proved an intelligent and earnest student, and at the age of 17 was ready to enter a university. The wild student life of the University of Heidelberg attracted him and he begged to be allowed to enter that institution, but his mother refused, sending him instead to Gottingen, where she foolishly thought he might not contract the beer habit. At Gottingen Bismarck led a wild and reckless life.

Already, before entering it, he had fought his first duel, and during his university life he fought twenty-eight more, being wounded only once. According to his own account he only attended lectures twice before he passed his examination. After leaving the university he held subordinate government offices, but growing weary of the dull routine of business he retired to the estate of Kniephof, where for a time he devoted himself to its careful management. Then he plunged into the excesses that had marked his student career. With gay companions he gave himself to jolly carousals and in the old mansion none could vie with him in drinking. Owing to his recklessness he became known as "mad Bismarck," and terrible tales were told of his mad adventures. But he had periods of profound disgust with himself owing to these excesses, and often he retired into the forest, with his dog, where he plunged into meditation. Suddenly he gave up his wild courses and took up the study of history, theology and philosophy.

Enters the Prussian Diet.

After the death of his father, in 1845, the family estates were divided and Kniephof and Schonhausen fell to the possession of Bismarck. Two years later Bismarck married Johanna von Putkammer, and in the same year he appeared as a delegate in the United Diet, summoned by King Frederick William IV.

The Prussian King was then at loggerheads with his subjects, the latter demanding greater rights and a constitution. Bismarck opposed the granting of any concessions by the King and made a bitter attack on liberalism and democracy. He was especially roused by a bill for the removal of the civil disabilities of the Jews and he characterized a constitution as a paper government. His services to royalty during the revolution of 1848 earned for him the position of a trusted adviser of King Frederick William. In 1851 Bismarck was appointed representative from the Prussian court to the diet in Frankfort-on-the-Main, which met as the mouthpiece of the forty-odd states of the German confederation, and here he became intimate with the crown prince—later King William of Prussia and the first Emperor of United Germany. Prussia and Austria were then rivals in the affairs of Germany, Austria striving to retain her preponderance and Prussia endeavoring to destroy it and oust her from any position in the confederation. To this purpose Bismarck closely devoted himself.

From Frankfort Bismarck was sent as ambassador to St. Petersburg in 1859, and here he remained three years. During this time occurred the Franco-Austrian war in Italy. The Prussian army was mobilized as a matter of defense, but took no part in the contest, yet its mobilization was enough to check Napoleon. The mobilization, also, revealed defects in the army, and these were consequently remedied. In 1862 William, who had succeeded Frederick William IV. in January, 1861, recalled Bismarck and sent him as minister to Paris. Bismarck had before this time become convinced that Prussia would have to fight with Austria for supremacy in Germany and with France for the ownership of the Rhine, something to which Napoleon's wild ambition aspired, and in Paris Bismarck had opportunity to spy into French affairs. Within a few months, however, he was recalled to take the position of premier and minister of foreign affairs. Bismarck at once got into hot conflicts with the House of Deputies, which had refused to vote an increased military budget, and he carried everything with a high hand. His haughtiness and contempt for the members was unbounded. "Constitutions," he once said, when taxed with governing without a constitution, "may be decided in other countries by a change of ministers, but this is not the custom in Prussia. With us, if two political bodies, which cannot go to law, are unable to agree, circumstances decide which of the two is the stronger." And circumstances did so decide, and the Prussian chamber found that Bismarck was the stronger.

In 1863, owing to reasons not necessary to discuss here, Austria and Prussia decided on going to war with Denmark. The Prussian Parliament refused to vote a war credit, whereupon Bismarck boldly replied: "If we find it necessary to go to war we shall do so, with your approval or without." And to war Prussia went. Denmark speedily succumbed and part of her territory was transferred to Prussia and Austria. The war, pigmy as it was, was sufficient to enable Prussia to complete her almost perfect army organization and avail was almost immediately made of the opportunity. But it did not remove the hatred which Bismarck's parliamentary course had engendered and an attempt was made to assassinate him. Bismarck was honored by having bestowed upon him the order of the Black Eagle, and he was furthermore made a Prussian count.

He Humbles Austria.

Meantime through Austrian stupidity and Bismarckian diplomacy Austria and Prussia were rapidly drifting into war. It was the opportunity that Bismarck had worked for and waited for, and when Austria ruptured the treaty of Gastein, entered into at the end of the Danish war, the order for the mobilization of the Prussian troops was given. Gen. Moltke, Gen. Roon, Bismarck and King William worked in entire accord, and so well had Bismarck done in his diplomatic work that Italy declared war against Austria at the same moment as Prussia.

While crushing the power of Austria Bismarck diplomatically played with Napoleon, who at first sought to extend the French frontier as it was in 1814, offering for such consideration to let Prussia have her own way with Austria, and who then, when Austrian power was crushed on the field of Sadowa, sought to gain Prussian support for the seizure of Belgium and Luxemburg. Napoleon gained neither of his objects, while he fatally allowed Austria to be crushed and Germany to rise as a powerful and rapidly uniting nation.

In February, 1867, the North German Parliament opened in Berlin, with representatives of twenty-two States north of the Main, and in April a constitution was agreed on and Bismarck was made chancellor of the confederation. The three years preceding 1870 were spent by Bismarck in consolidating the union of North and South Germany and by Napoleon in endeavoring to thwart him. And then came Napoleon's mad declaration of war. There is no need to recapitulate the story of the terrible avalanche of blood and destruction that swept over France during the autumn of 1870. Napoleon surrendered his sword on the battlefield of Sedan and his dynasty was forever ended. On March 1, 1871, the German army entered Paris and the war was over, German unity was an accomplished fact and King William I. was the crowned Emperor of the new German empire. Bismarck received the title of prince and became chancellor.

But Bismarck's work was not ended. He had to conserve what he had established and bulwark Germany against a French war of revenge. The effect of this policy is found in the triple alliance of Germany, Austria and Italy as it exists to-day.

Bismarck's astonishing success in the Franco-Prussian war did not relieve him of political difficulties at home, and in 1877, wearied by parliamentary difficulties and ill health, he tendered his resignation. Germany protested against this act and the Emperor refused to accept his resignation and Bismarck remained chancellor. In 1878 two attempts were made by the socialists to assassinate the Emperor and this led to the enactment of harsh laws against that society. The laws were remorselessly administered and the result was extremely trying to Bismarck.

He Resigns His Office.

In 1888 Emperor William died and Frederick William, between whom and Bismarck there was not much admiration, came to the throne. But he lived as ruler only a brief time and then William II. became Emperor. It was then almost an article of German faith that the Iron Chancellor, as Bismarck was called, would continue to steer the ship of state. It seemed impossible to conceive of a fresh hand at the rudder. But although between Bismarck and the youthful Kaiser there was a bond of admiration and although the latter, at the beginning, learned to lean upon the unifier of the German nation, differences sprang up between them. William issued an order that ministers were to report to him directly instead as heretofore to the chancellor. This was taking power out of the hands of Bismarck and naturally the latter rebelled against the edict and tendered his resignation as chancellor. He had done this so often, when in serious political crises, only to have his resignation rejected by his sovereign, that doubtless Bismarck thought that William would not suffer him to sever his connection with the Government of the nation which he more than any other had builded. But William accepted the resignation and in May, 1890, Bismarck laid down the cares of state and retired to his estate of Fredrichsruhe.

He was followed to his retreat by the sympathy of the German people and the admiration of Europe. But it took years to heal the breach between him and William, and it was not until 1894 that the Kaiser and his great subject became reconciled. Bismarck from his Fredrichsruhe retreat had inspired bitter attacks on the Government policy and to the thousands of people from all parts of the empire who visited him had delivered speeches that enkindled political rancor. It was therefore good politics for the Kaiser to seek a reconciliation and, in 1894, he took the first step, when he offered one of his castles to the aged statesman that he might regain his strength, which had been materially impaired. Bismarck gracefully declined the offer. In January, 1894, William invited Bismarck to visit him in Berlin. The visit was paid in January and Bismarck's reception by the people along his way was such as seldom has been accorded to ruler or subject. The Kaiser's greeting was cordial in the extreme and the following month the Emperor paid a return visit to his great and distinguished subject. The entire empire celebrated the reconciliation as an important historical event.

His Domestic Sorrow.

Soon afterward a crushing blow fell on Bismarck—a blow that made all his subsequent years full of loneliness. In November, 1894, his beloved wife died. She was nine years younger than her husband and had ever been to him since their marriage day in 1847 a faithful and devoted helpmate. In his private life Bismarck was happy and was devoted to his home. Over him the princess, in purely domestic affairs, had a great influence, but this did not extend to his political life. Bismarck was fond of nature and music and as a musician his wife was accomplished. During his entire life Bismarck was a lover of horses and seldom since his school days in Berlin was he unaccompanied by one or more large dogs, such as mastiffs or great danes. He was a lover of good eating and drinking and was a heavy smoker until a few years ago, when he began to suffer from its effects.

A sketch of the great life closed would be incomplete without some reference to the honors heaped upon him by his countrymen. When Bismarck began his political career he was by no means a rich man. He possessed some patrimonial estates, but the domain of Schonhausen, where he was born, had passed out of his control. In 1866, after the successful war with Austria, he purchased the Varzin estate, near Berlin, with the donation that had been accorded him by Prussia in recompense for his diplomatic skill. In 1871 Emperor William presented him with $300,000 of the indemnity paid by France and with this he purchased the estate of Friedrichsruhe, near Hamburg. It consists of 20,000 acres. Then in 1885, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, the nation bought back by public subscription the old family domain of Schonhausen and presented it to the prince and princess and their children forever. On his eightieth birthday celebration, in 1895, in which the entire nation took part, he was the recipient of great and resplendent honors.

Nor would a sketch of Bismarck be complete without reference to his colonial policy. Under him Germany branched out as a colonial rival to Great Britain, and where formerly she did not have an acre of soil outside the fatherland, she now ranks as one of the great colonial powers of the world. Her flag floats from the great lakes at the head waters of the Nile to the shores of the Indian ocean. Vast areas in southwestern Africa and back of the Gulf of Guinea acknowledge her sovereignty. She is firmly established on the great island of Papua and has possession of many of the important groups that stretch across the South Pacific ocean.

Summary of His Character.

But whatever the success of Bismarck's political life there is much in it that Anglo-Saxon civilization will not approve. As a statesman Bismarck was arbitrary, self-willed, imperious and unscrupulous. His political ideas were those of a born feudalist. He governed with the strong hand of absolute power and crushed out every attempt to assert the political freedom of the individual or the masses. He was an absolute believer in the "divine right" of kings and the throne and the army were regarded by him as the only foundation of the state. Sound in his foreign political relations, he made blunders in domestic affairs, cheating the people with a semblance of liberty and self-government. Viewed in the light of history, when time shall have furnished a truer perspective, Bismarck will stand forth as a man who was eminently fitted to realize the ideal hopes and aspirations of the German people, but as a man with many human failings. It remains to be seen how long Germany shall endure along the lines which he established.

A Twentieth Century Train

Electric lighter throughout (including lights at the head of each berth), the North-Western Limited, which leaves Chicago daily at 6:30 p. m., and reaches St. Paul and Minneapolis early next morning, is regarded by the traveling public as the highest development in railway science. This train is equipped with buffet, smoking and library cars, regular and compartment cars, and luxurious dining cars.

The principal summer resorts in Wisconsin are most easily reached via the Chicago & North-Western Railway, "the pioneer line west and northwest of Chicago."

All ticket agents sell tickets via this popular route.

JUDICIAL CONVENTION.

The delegates for Steuben and DeKalb counties, met at Waterloo at 1 p. m. and were called to order by chairman Walter of DeKalb and Young of Steuben. The nominees, chosen, are, Frank M. Powers for Judge and Cyrus B. Jackman for Prosecutor, both of Angola.

The meeting was held in the Opera House, and after Mr. Walter had called them to order, Ab. Kelley was made president of the meeting, and J. A. Barns, secretary. Nominations were declared in order, when W. G. Croxton, of Angola, in a most eloquent speech nomninated, Frank M. Powers of Anogla, John W. Baxter of DeKalb seconded this in a neat speech, there being no other names offered, the choice was made unanimous, Mr. Powers was called to the stage and made a most able and eloquent speech in which he thanked them, and pledged himself if elected, to give the district a careful and economical administration of the office. He was heartily cheered.

In nominating a prosecutor, W. H. Leas, in a neat speech, put in nomination, Cyrus B. Jackman now a resident of Angola, but whose home from infancy to a few years ago had been in this county. He was seconded by Mr. Yotter, of Angola both speakers alluding to the high character of Mr. Jackman. Mr. Sharpless, of Garrett, in a very fitting speech nominated Mr. Kenyon of that city, and later on Mr. Fitzerald of the same place, nominated L. J. Gengler. The chair appointed J. W Baxter, and C. A Yotter as tellers The first vote settled it. The total vote was 54 of which DeKalb had 37 and Steuben 17. Steuben gave Jackman her solid vote, and DeKalb, gave him 15, Kenyon 18, and Gengler, 4. So Jackman was the nominee. He came to the stage and made an excellent speech, surprising all who did not know him well, for he is only 22. The meeting then adjourned.

The candidates are both popular attorneys. Mr. Powers was reared on a farm but for some years has been a partner of W. G. Croxton in the law. He is highly regarded as a citizen by all without regard to party.

Cyrus B. Jackman is a son Fletcher Jackman and grandson of Cyrus Jackman of Franklin township. He is a graduate of the Angola college, and then studied law. He is an able speaker. If elected will do the work of the office and not ask expensive help. We might add, that he is a solid man in more ways than one, his weight being a considerable over 300.

The Crooked Lake Tragedy.

The body of Miss Rempis was recovered Sunday afternoon, by two young men from Pleasant Lake. She was found about seven rods further east and nearer the shore, than where Leonard Roby was found, where the water was but about fifteen feet deep. It is not known of course, how she got that far from the scene of the accident. Her mouth was closed and the body was in good condition. The funeral was at the home of F. W. Willis in Waterloo at 2 p. m. today, the interment being at the cemetery near by

There were so many confusing accounts Saturday, that naturally, we had several errors in the account we made of it. We will state it as later accounts have it.

It appears that on Friday morning, the six young people took the boat and went to a point some half mile distant to bathe. They staid in the water rather longer than usual, and then all got in to come back, being at that time somewhat chilled. The boat was a double boat and new, but had been intended for only three persons, but in this case had six. But though heavy loaded, there was no trouble till they were nearly to their landing when they found the wind blowing and the water rough. The waves began to come in and filled one side of the double boat, when the young people on that side got over into the other side, and that tipped the boat over all going into the water. They were not far away from shore, but the water was deep. Miss Chandler and Dora Willis clung to the boat. Frank Willis helped to get his sister Josephine nearer land, where, Miss Lillie Shuman, sister of Mrs. Roby waded out and helped to save her. Mrs. Hornady, on shore, got hold of an old boat and went out and got her sister Dora and Miss Chandler, and brought them to shore. But it appears that Miss Rempis had gone down soon and never came up. Leonard Roby could swim some, and it is understood he was starting towards Miss Rempis, apparently intending to try to help her when he threw up his hand and called out something, and scon disappeared. It is evident he had a cramp as when brought up, his tongue was between his clenched teeth, thus showing the nature of his struggle.

It appears that as the party struck the point where the winds and waves were bad, they realized their danger, and began at once to try and reach shore. This disproves all stories at to rocking the boat or pushing the girls to frighten them. All realized their danger, and in a few minutes could have saved themselves.

Wilkins of Antwerp

This somewhat noted individual was here again Saturday. It will be remembered that he was a year or two ago, when he "dressed up" as an advertisement for one of our business houses and drew a good deal of attention as he paraded the streets. Since then, he somewhere, came acress the man who has the "wax figgers," that he uses to hire out to merchants to put in their show window to draw a crowd to watch it roll its eyes turn its head, etc, etc. Well, Wilkins watched this ingenious figure for a time, and came to the conclusion, that if a dummy could do that well, a real man could do better, and that he himself, "Wilkins, of Antwerp," was the man. So he struck out in a new line, tried it, at Laporte, we believe, and it proved a success. So he developed it into a new trade for himself.

Saturday evening a crowd began to gather in front of the big show window at the Bishop & Lackey store to gaze on the queer antics of a very natural "wax figger," or "statoot" as Artemas Ward called them. The figure sat there, draped in the American flag around his knees and his head appeared bandaged up as if he might have had it banged by by a Spanish bullet in the charge of the "Rough Riders." Then his eyes would roll, then close, then open, and then his head would bow down onto his knees. It was all very wonderful to most of the crowd, how dummy could be made that could do such natural and life-like things. When the three hours of show ended the "wax figger" calmly got up, off his chair and went away disguised by a big white beard. He had earned his $3.

Our Six-Year-Old Daughter.

Our little six-year-old daughter had a very sore throat, badly ulceratad, and coughed almost incessantly. Gave the White Wine of Tar Syrup according to directions and she began to improve immediately and soon got well. Mrs Groves and I recommended it to others and we consider it the very best medicine in use. REV. D. H. GROVES,

OBITUARY

LEONARD EUGENE ROBY.

Leonard Eugene Roby was born January 21, 1878, and died August 12, 1898, aged 20 years, 6 months and 21 days.

The manner of his sudden death is fresh in all our minds. An overloaded boat, filled with joyous and thoughtless youth, shipped water and was capsized a few rods from shore. One girl drifted; another cried "Leonard save 'Dick,' her mother lost one." He was not a good swimmer; he had safe support, but he responded, as he always did, and went to a watery grave, with the one he tried to save. Thus died Leonard Roby, hero and king. He was king because he was master of himself in the high and noble sense. He was hero because he risked his life for another. He was never known to do a rude thing. He sometimes suffered from the thoughtlessness of others but he never offended any man. He was always a gentleman; the instinct and habit of true courtesy were his; he was polite and courteous. Possessed of plenty of temper he controlled it and was always good natured and pleasant. How generous he was every friend can tell. There was never a tinge of selfishness in his soul. What he had he gave, even to his sweet young life. In the home he was dutiful, affectionate and kind. There will never be a harsh word recalled that he spoke to any one of the home circle, for he spoke none. He was a loving, faithful son, innocent and confiding, and a loyal brother.

At the age of three years he suffered from an attack of spinal meningitis, and for a long time life hung in a wavering balance. When the issue was decided it left him helpless to use his limbs and unable to articulate. Little by little and year by year he outgrew the effect of this dread disease, but an awkwardness in speech and a slowness in the use of his hands was still noticeable. He was a discriminating and extensive reader. There are few young men of his age who have not a collegiate of education, who have a larger fund of useful knowledge than he possessed. He had pondered upon the grave questions of life, death and immortality and he had given his heart to the loving Christ. About two years ago he firmly concluded that the christian life was the only life worth living and took an active interest in the work of, and became identified with the Congregational church at Angola. Since leaving he has retained his interest and been increasingly firm in his conviction. His influence was always cast upon the right side of moral issues and it was done without hesitation and without embarassment.

He has lived an honest, wholesome life on earth, this honest manly boy: the quality of his manhood was manifest throughout his life and to the very end. His was a successful life, judged by the highest standards. The tears and regret that followed him to the grave, all testify to that. It is a triumphant life. The limitations and problems that belong to this early life are perished and solved. Who will dare to say that he has not already entered upon the better beyond? That he is not today in Paradise with the Savior whom he trusted and loved? Who will doubt the meeting and recognition of those who have loved and not lost?

JESSIE BELLE MORGAN.

Jessie Belle Morgan was born in Kenton, Ohio, Nov. 20, 1891, and died in Auburn August 13, 1898, aged 6 years, 8 months and 24 days. She moved with her parents to Hicksville, Ohio, in the spring of '94. August 5, '94, her little brother Eugene, was called to his heavenly home. On the 24th day of the same month her mamma was also called to her eternal rest. Little Jessie has been an invalid the last three years; for more than two years she has been living with her uncle and aunt, Fred Wilks and wife. Jessie has been a patient little sufferer, but is now at rest with Jesus. A short service was held at the home of Mr, Wilk at 7 o'clock, after which the remains were taken to Hicksville, Ohio, for interment. Rev. J. D, Brosy officiating.

HARRISON HIGH SHEARER.

On Wednesday, Aug. 10 at about seven o'clock a deep sorrow fell on the home of Solomon and Letitia Shearer when God's finger touched little Harry and he slept.

Harrison High Shearer, son of Solomon and Letitia J. Shearer was born Dec. 21 1888, died August 10, 1898, aged 9 years 7 month and 19 days.

Harry as he was familiary called, helped to make light and life in the home circle. A few weeks ago he was stricken with that disease that causes much suffering and pain but during the conflict with pain he evinced the same sweet spirit that charactized his life. As the sun was sinking in the western horizon his soul took its flight upward to dweel in joy in that land where the inhabitants never say they are sick.

He will be greatly missed in the home circle whore his sweet and loving ways have left an influence that will be long felt. He leaves a father, mother, two brother, and three sisters, who deeply feel their loss.

GUY FRANKLIN CREAGER.

Guy Franklin Creager was born June 26th 1883, died Aug. 11, 1898, aged 15 years, 1 month and 15 days.

Guy was born at the home of his parents, Elmer D. and Ella A. Goodale Creager in Stafford township DeKalb Co. All his life they have lived at the same farm home. He was a promising child, until reaching this critical period of by life, He lacked the life force to achieve the change to young manhood and succumbed amid the tenderest care and under the most skilful medical treatment. The sympathy of the whole community for the bereft family was touchingly expressed in many ways. Notably by the large attendance at the funeral which was here in the Butler U. B. church conducted by Rev. W. O. Butler. The remains were laid to rest in the Butler cemetery.

It Is All Right

As each political campaign progresses, there are men in both parties, who will insist on grumbling. The republicans have not yet reached that stage, for their ticket is not nominated. But the democrats are just passing through it. We allude to the efforts made by certain interested ones, especially some who are interested in electing republicans. They say there is dissatisfaction in the democratic ranks, that some of the candidates are unpopular, that fusion is unpopular, that the chairman is unpopular, and so on. When you hear a man talk that way, set him down as one who wishes these things, not as one who knows them. For it is not true. The democrats never had better men for candidates. They are all honest, capable and deserving. Every thinking man in the county knows this no matter what party he belongs to. The fusion arrangement is not unpopular, except with those who are working to ruin some one or some party, and fortunately there is not a corporal's guard of them. The chairman is not unpopular, except with the class of men already named. He is capable and experienced and loyal to his party and to every man on the ticket and has the confidence of every earnest democrat in the county. And any democrat who listens to and believes the continuous ding dong of stuff from these three or four men should stop and consider the utter foolishness of such talk. Set it down for a certain truth, that any man who is objecting to such a ticket as we have, does so because he wants to defeat it.

Miss Rempis' Body Recoverd

Special to the Courier

ANGOLA, IND., Aug. 15, 1898. The body of Miss Lena Rempis, of Waterloo who was drowned in Crooked lake, three miles northwest of Angola last Friday morning at 9 o'clock with Leonard Roby, of Auburn, was recovered Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in about twenty-five feet of water, and about twenty rods to the east of where she went down. The body was hooked up Marvin Cross, a young man of Pleasant Lake. Mr. Cross had dived several times during the day, and says he noticed a white object in the water, but could not reach it. He said, nothing about it to the other divers, and went and secured a large iron concern with a dozen hooks and cast it in the water where he saw the white object, and in twenty minutes he had the body floating on the surface of the water. The hook caught the girl around the right wrist and as the arm was stiff, had a good hold. When the body was raised one of the boys in the boat waved his cap in the air and shouted, which was the signal. The crowd on the shore, all of 2,000 people, then made a mad rush for the boat house, about 80 rods westward. It was both an emotional and thrilling sight. The body was not taken into the boat, but dragged through the water, and when near the landing, two men waded out, wrapped the body in a blanket and carried it into the boat house amidst an awful silence. Tears ran down the cheeks of many who witnessed the scene. After the body had been prepared, all who wished, were permitted to see it. The face and hands were white, and the girl looked as though sleeping. When found, her left hand was thrown up over her head and her right hand lay on her breast. Sunday will be a day long remembered by the people of this vicinity.

How They Do It.

Many of our readers cannot get down town to observe the process by which the pipes are laid for the water works. We have noticed they are digging the trench five feet deep, each man taking twelve feet at a time. Then the pipes are lowered into it, a rope of packing is twisted around the rear end and it is then slid back into the last pipe. Then a man goes along and puts in another rope of packing and tamps it close. A second man follows and tamps in more packing until it comes out to the end of the rim. Then comes a man with a rope of packing thickly covered with wet clay. This he wraps around the pipe close to the rim and brings the ends over the top, fixing them in such a shape as to leave a sort of cup. He is then handed a bowl of melted lead, and this he pours into the cup shaped fold of the clay rope, and the metal runs down around the pipe filling the space between the clay rope and the end of the pipe and into the rim against the packing. The clay rope is taken to the next joint and another man comes along and tamps the lead tighter. The joint is then complete, and will, we should think last forever.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions were adopted by a committee of the Auburn Light Artillery and furnished us for publication:

Whereas, The messenger of death has for the first time entered the ranks of our organization, removing from among us one of our most faithful and honored member, Leonard Roby, be it

RESOLVED, That while we mourn the loss of our comrade, we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well. He had need of him and has called him from earth's turmoils to a land of rest and peace.

RESOLVED, That we tender to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and mourn with them the death of their son and brother.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of this company, and that a copy of the same be given to the parents of the deceased, and also published in each of the Auburn papers.

Struggle With an Owl.

(Hicksville News)

One evening last week David Deardorff heard a disturbance among his fowls and going out to see what caused the commotion, he discovered that the trouble was in a small box where roosted a brood of small chickens but recently weaned. He plunged his arm in the box and laid hands on a monstrous owl. At about the same moment the owl laid hands on him and sank its talons into the fleshy part of his hand between the thumb and forefinger. He choked the bird to death before he could make it release its hold and then finally had to tear loose. The wound was dressed at home and nothing more thought of it, when at the expiration of three days the whole hand rapidly assumed a black color, and agonizing pains set in. He hastily drove to town and called at the office of Drs. Coombs & Jackson, to be told that blood poison of serious nature had set in. Some indications of heart failure, in consequence, were discovered. The wound was opened and treated and Mr. Deardorff is now rapidly improving. But for the promptness and skill of the physicians it would have been all over with him, as the case was serious.

Wreck on the B. & O.

Saturday morning a freight train on the B. & O. approached Hicksville, it broke in two, and when the engineer learned what was the trouble, he started to back up to get the rear part expecting to find it farther back. But just as he was pushing through the grade about a half a mile west of town where so many accidents have occurred they met the rear part coming on full speed. They did not see it in time to avoid a collision. Eight freight cars and their contents were smashed, but no lives lost. This piece of road has long been dangerous and should be in some way made safer.

Writing at Home.

Wanted:—A limited number of persons to do writing at their homes. Twenty-five cents paid for every hundred words. Promptness and good work necessary. Applications must be accompanied by ten cents for particulars. Address: The Sioux City Business College, Sioux City, Iowa.

SURPRISED

Mrs. McNabb was happily surprised at her home near Corunna on Saturday Aug. 13, by her children, their families and neighbors. Five children, 13 grand children, 1 great-grand child with the neighbors made 36 present. An excellent dinner of all one could wish for was served. Mrs. McNabb was 74 years of age Saturday. She received a number of useful presents. A birthday party long to be remembered by all present.

A Pleasant Party.

Quite a number of little folks gathered at the home of Miss Ethel Long, this afternoon to remind her that she was just seven years old. The afternoon was spent enjoying games, etc, after which a fine lunch was served by Mrs. Long. Those present were: Josie Marvin, Blanche Marvin, Grace Mochmer Gladys Mochmer, Dora Hodge, Sidney Farmer, Neva Beaty, Goldie Miser, Celia Howard and Bula Bherns

Warranted Heart Cure.

Dr. Huggins' Specific Heart Cure. A most reliable remedy for palpitation heart weakness, irregular action, heart pains and all heart disorders. Warranted to please or money refunded. Dr. Huggins, Columbus, Ohio, or at Fischler & Son's. 25 cents.

From The War

The Spanish forces as well as our own, have all been notified of the cessation of hostilities, in Cuba, in Porto Rico and the Philippines. In Cuba the news stopped the advance of the insurgents and our own troops at Manzanillo, where we had driven the Spaniards into their forts. In Porto Rico it stopped a battle on the road to San Juan when our artillery had got the shells into their cannon and were waiting the command to fire. At Manila the Spaniards let our troop have the town so rumor has it, but the Spanish commander had fled on a German war ship.

The Climax Fence Builder.

Is all made of refined malleable iron and will last a lifetime. No territory for sale. Good live agents wanted to sell our machines. Terms such as to guaraantee large salaries to energetic canvassers. All kinds of fence built with our machine, put up according to instructions, is the cheapest and best fence a farmer can build. Will turn all kinds of stock perfectly. The Climax Fence Machine is and anyone who can turn a grindstone can run this machine. With it you can build an all wire hog fence for from 10 to 15 cents per rod, and an arch top lawn fence for from 50 to 60 cents per rod.

Do You Want Something to Sell?

Something that every farmer wants and cannot afford to be without, and that is a sure money maker, and sells at sight, and don't require any experience to make it go. If so call on the general agent who has the machine on exhibition and will explain everything to you and will furnish you with everything necessary to go into business. Ask for terms to agents, and large circulars showing several kinds of fences made with our machine. Remember we sell no rights. Our machines are Sold on a Fair and Satisfactory Trial. PRICE COMPLETE $12. Try them and if they fill the bill buy them. We supply all breakage free for five years.

Card of Thanks

It is not possible to personally thank each of the friends who have been so considerate and kind to us in our affliction. In this unsatisfactory way I want to say to each of them, that the memory of their loving kindness will abide in our grateful hearts forever.

FRANK S. ROBY.

To The Public

I have relocated in Auburn to practice law, where I shall be glad to see my old friends and others having business in my line. In addition to the general practice. I will give special attention to Bankruptcy Law, Patent Law, and other practice in U. S. Courts. Office over Hebel's grocery.

Very truly yours,
P. V. HOFFMAN.

CONCORD.

Bill Morr can't say he never got left. He was at the festival at Grove Bethel, Saturday evening, and his horse got loose and went off, leaving him to borrow a ride with a friend.

Fred Morr and wife, Mrs. Josie Morr and son Will, Wm. Nelson and sister Olive, spent Sunday at Garrett, the guests of Joe Williams, the latter being sick.

Celia Morr and Lizzie Johnson made a flying trip to St. Joe Friday.

Good Improvement

Sidewalks are being made along the south side of the Avenue, going west from VanBuren street crossing. The last new one is at J. E. Enzley's residence, where he is preparing to put it cement. The rest are wood, but there should be some kind of sidewalk on one side or the other, clear down to the Junction. This might be objected to by some of the lot owners on the ground of the cost, but they should remember lots would sell for a great deal more, than they would without walks. So they would get their money back and more too.

From An Ohio Minister

I have used Dr. Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup for sore throat, weak lungs, coughs and colds; it surpasses all other remedies I have tried. With many thanks to to the doctor for his valuable remedy, I remain, Found The Rig.

Mr. Kutzner has returned from his trip to Pierceton in search of his horse and buggy. He found the horse so poor it would not pay to bring home. He believes Gifford drove it too hard and fed it too little, He gave it to C. F. Guy, the livery man at Pierceton, in settleman of its feed bill. He sold the buggy to Guy, also. Gifford is still here, and Mr. Kutzner is trying to get some sort of satisfaction for his losses, but we do not know how he is succeeding.

—When you buy a wagon why not buy the best. The Turnbull wagon runs easier and will wear longer than any other wagon made. Call and examine them before you buy. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—The Carnival this year will be grander and more expensive than last year. It will, if posible, be more beautiful. There are many new features, like the flower parade, and expensive fire works, the pageants, parades, etc.

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. H. B. McCord.

—The attendance at the funeral of Leonard Roby, Sunday was very large for the sad circumstances had enlisted the sympathies off all this section. The young man was highly regarded by all, and the prominence of his family added to the sad features of this great misfortune.

—The services at the Presbyterian church Sunday were well attended and the sermons by Rev. Mr. Darling were excellent. The singing by Miss Trover and music generally was of a high character. All present felt the impulses of a lively hope, and when the church is again provided with a pastor, it will take a new lease of vigorous life.

—The new store in the Ford building will be known as the "Racket Store," and is to be a permanent institution. We believe a store properly managed will prove this to be a good location. We hope to see it prosper. They will open in a fw days.

—More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. H. B. McCord.

—Mr. Chase, who is manager of the Construction Co., putting in the piping for the water mains, has often heard Rev. C. C. Albertson who is to deliver a lecture at the terchers' institute and considers him one of the very finest platform speakers he ever heard.

—Herman Sheets, brother of Ernest and Charles Sheets, has moved his family from Fort Wayne to Auburn and will make this his home. He will be in the tailoring business with the others, as that is his trade also. We welcome him and his family to Auburn.

—C. M. Merica returned to Chicago on the 5:30 B. & O. train this morning. Mrs. Merica will be here for a short time yet before returning home. Their daughter Stella, is with an orchestra in Wisconsin and is making good wages with her violin. We are pleased to hear that our young friend is able to turn her talents to such good advantages.

—Marion Ensley youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Ensley came up yesterday. He had come up Saturday as far as Fort Wayne, to attend the attend the funeral yesterday of Lieut. Kerr, of the 157th, who died of sickness and was brought home for burial. Marion was an especial friend of Lieut. Kerr's brother as well as of the family.

—A. H. Ruple called today in company with Will Roby. Mr. Ruple was present at the the drowning of the two young people at the lake, and feels the sad occurence deeply. It is especially to be regretted, that some unkind and totally uncalled for criticisms were made as to the construction of the boat. It was a new one perfectly sound and reliable. It did not break or give way anywhere, was reported. How such stories get started is one of the mysteries that has never been explained and probably never will be.

—The funeral of Miss Lena Rempis held at Waterloo yesterday afternoon, at the home of F. W. Willis, was very largely attended. The prominence of the family, the love and esteem everybody had for the young lady, and the circumstances of her tragic death, served to call forth the sympathy of the entire community, which could not be expressed save by their presence The services were touching and sympathetic. The prayers, the spoken tribute, the tears, the music, were all so tender, so loving, that they must serve in some measure to soften the terrible grief of the stricken family, and immediate friends. A number of friends attended from Auburn.

Mysterious Fish Poisoning.

Great excitement prevails in Bluestone River, West Virginia, on account of the mysterious poisoning of the fish in that stream. As a result, three men are dead, one is lying at his home dangerously ill from eating some of the fish caught from the river, while a number of persons and cattle have died from the effects of drinking the water. The fish have been dying in large numbers, and are being washed ashore. It is not thought there is one left in the stream. The stench from those washed ashore is almost unbearable. The people are greatly excited, and will not use the water from the wells that are near the river. Where the poison came from or what it consists of is a mystery. All that is known is that it has a deadly effect. One theory is that the poison is due to some mineral substance in the water, and it is said that a peculiar sediment has been found on the rocks.

Flowers Six Thousand Years Old.

Well-preserved flowers discovered at Dahsourh, in Egypt, in tombs of the times of the Pharaohs, have just been placed in the Cairo Museum. The commonest of these were the white or blue lotus, the red poppy, the leaves and flowers of the crocus. It seems that the flowers and plants of today are the same as flourished then and that chrysanthemums were known 6,000 years ago. Some of these flowers found in the tombs when soaked in water seemed to revive.

STAMP TAX RULINGS.

They Solve Many Important and Perplexing Questions.

The following rulings, relative to the stamp taxes levied under the various paragraphs of the war revenue bill, have been received by Internal Revenue Collector Charles H. Treat from N. B. Scott, commissioner of internal revenue, at the treasury department. The rulings solve many simple but perplexing questions, as well as many which Commissioner Scott has deemed so important that much careful consideration has been given them. The list comprises all of the rulings and decisions made by the treasury department to date and decides many mooted questions.

THE RULINGS.

1. Checks drawn by United States disbursing officers against public funds standing to their official credit in performance of duties required by law do not require a two-cent internal revenue stamp placed thereon. And all checks drawn by officers of States, counties and municipalities for the discharge of the obligations of States, counties and municipalities are exempt under Section 17 of the act.

2. No stamp is required on ordinary receipts.

3. The exemption from tax on warehouse receipts for agricultural products is restricted to receipts for products of this kind, which are deposited by the actual grower thereof in the regular course of trade for sale. This does not exempt warehouse receipts for such products in case the property deposited has already passed from the ownership of the actual grower.

4. An inland bill of exchange, within the meaning of this act, is a bill of exchange drawn and made payable anywhere in the United States.

5. Any order for payment of money drawn in, but payable out of the United States, if drawn singly, is subject to tax of 4 cents for $100 or less, and for each additional $100 or fraction, 4 cents.

6. Where certificates of shares were so'd and delivered before July 1, 1898, entry of transfer on corporate books after June 30 does not require stamp.

7. New certificates of stock issued to holder in lieu of original certificate, and remaining in his ownership, do not require stamps.

8. When certificate of stock is sold and stamp tax is paid on memorandum thereof, upon transfer of this certificate to purchaser's name, no additional tax for such transfer is required. Where one certificate represents several shares of stock (however large the number of shares), on transfer of this certificate the stamp tax is to be reckoned on its face value, and not on the face value of each separate share of stock which it represents.

9. A two-cent stamp is required on an order for cash drawn on a merchant by one of his customers.

10. Certificates of deposit drawing interest, if left a certain time, are taxable the same as promissory notes.

11. The withdrawal of funds by a depositor on the presentation of his bank book to the savings bank does not require a stamp, if there is nothing accompanying it in the form of an order for the payment of money.

12. If papers in the nature of receipts are given in lieu of checks, and are used as commercial negotiable instruments, they are checks and not receipts, and are subject to tax.

13. Where certificates of stock are delivered as collateral, the stock to be forfeited only upon condition of failure to pay the debt for which it is pledged, a stamp is required as a pledge and not as a sale.

14. Real estate mortgage notes require to be stamped, in addition to the stamps placed on the mortgage.

15. Where there is a pledge of property accompanying any promissory note, which pledge is subject to stamp tax under schedule A, this stamp tax must be paid, notwithstanding the fact that a stamp is also required on the note connected with it.

16. Only purely co-operative or mutual fire insurance companies carried on by the members thereof solely for the protection of their own property, and not for profit, are exempted from taxation.

17. Assessment beneficiary life insurance associations insuring their own members, and not for profit, come within the exempting provisions.

18. The exemption given to fraternal beneficiary life insurance associations applies also to fraternal beneficiary accident insurance associations.

19. In cases of loans on real estate, where promissory notes are given, which are not paid at maturity, but on which an extension of time of payment is granted, without the taking of a new note, it is held that every such extension is a renewal of the note within the meaning of the statute, and that the requisite stamp must be affixed for every such renewal or extension. This also applies to notes discounted before July 1, falling due on or after that date.

20. The person who signs and issues a bank check, without affixing the proper stamp, becomes involved in liability to penalties under Section 10 of the act, unless it is shown that he had no design to evade the payment of the stamp tax, and that the requisite stamp was affixed and canceled by the bank or person upon whom it was drawn, before payment.

21. Where a check is presented at a bank, without having the requisite stamp affixed, the bank, if it pays such unstamped check, becomes liable to the penalty provided by Section 10 of the act. Bank may cure defect by affixing proper stamp.

BUCKET SHOPS AND OTHERS.

22. Bucket shop proprietors giving memorandum of transactions are required to pay special tax as brokers.

23. Where a tax of 10 cents is paid on the bill of lading for goods exported, it is held that no stamp tax is required to be paid on copies of such bills of lading.

24. On inland bills of lading, "each duplicate" requires "a stamp of the value of one cent."

25. Bills of lading for exportations by railroad to British North America require a 10-cent stamp.

26. A wharf receipt given to a shipper, in exchange for which a bill of lading is issued, does not require a stamp.

27. Baggage forwarded by railroad company or express, subject to extra charges, comes within the law requiring stamp on bill of lading, or other evidence of receipt and forwarding.

28. It is the duty of carriers to issue a bill of lading or receipt for goods accepted by them for shipment, and to affix the stamp, and a penalty is prescribed for failure to do so.

29. Mere local operators for the delivery of packages, baggage, and such like, within the limits of the same town or city are not required to give bills of lading. Although such operators may give a receipt for articles to be delivered, such receipt is not required to be stamped. A mere carrier, as, for instance, a person with a horse and wagon, who does a local delivery business in a city or town, is not included within the above requirement. The carriers, which were intended to be included within the terms of Schedule A, under the head of "Express and Freight," are such as are engaged in the transportation of express matter and freight from one place to another in the ordinary course of commerce and trade.

30. Tickets issued in the United States for passage on a vessel not sailing from any port of the United States, but from a Canadian port (or other foreign port), are not subject to stamp tax.

Tickets issued in Canada for passage on a vessel sailing from a United States port are not subject to stamp tax.

The only passage ticket for which stamp tax is required to be paid by this statute is a ticket issued for transportation of the passenger "by any vessel from a port in the United States to a foreign port." When, therefore, to such passenger ticket there is attached another ticket entitling the passenger, after his arrival at the foreign port, to transportation to various points in Europe, or elsewhere, such additional ticket is not subject to stamp tax.

The stamp tax for a passenger ticket may be affixed thereto and canceled at the time and place where it is issued, or it may be affixed and canceled at the pier before the passenger boards the vessel.

Where one passenger ticket is issued, even though it contains several names, but one stamp tax is required to be paid thereon.

31. There is no exemption from the stamp tax on charity tickets issued at low rates.

32. Barges are not included in the term "vessel" in the paragraph relating to charter party.

33. The manifest for custom house entry or clearance of the cargo of any ship, or vessel or steamer for a foreign port does not include ship's supplies for its voyage. It only includes those things which the ship has taken aboard for transportation.

34. Stamp duties imposed on manifests, bills of lading and passage tickets do not apply to steamboats or other vessels plying between the ports of the United States and ports in British North America.

35. A telegraphic dispatch or message is repuired to be stamped by the person who makes, signs or issues it.

36. There is no tax upon the bill of sale of a vessel. A mortgage of a vessel requires a stamp as a mortgage of personal property.

37. Dray receipt given at export steamer's wharf does not require a stamp in addition to bills of lading which are stamped. Shipping receipt given by common carriers of freight for goods to be transported to port of export require stamp.

38. Where a bond is given with a guaranty company as surety, the bond should have, in addition to a 50-cent stamp, as required under the head of "Bond," in Schedule A, a stamp denoting one-half of 1 cent on each dollar or fractional part thereof paid by the principal obligor on the bond as a premium, under that paragraph of Schedule A relating to guaranty companies. (United States officers required to give bond will take notice.)

EXEMPT FROM TAX.

39. Bonds "required in legal proceedings" are exempt from stamp tax. They are such as are required in litigation in either civil or criminal cases, such as prosecution bonds, injunction bonds, bonds to stay proceedings, bonds upon appeal, writs of error, bonds for costs, and the like; and in criminal cases, recognizances, bonds for appearance, bail bonds, and also bonds in criminal cases upon appeal and writs of error, supersedeas bonds, etc. Bonds given by persons appointed by the Court, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of their office or position, such as receivers, assignees, executors, administrators, and guardians are not exempt, and the stamp tax must be paid thereon.

40. Tickets, which are on the face merely memoranda of money due (e. g.: John Doe, June 25, 1898, $15.00), and do not contain any language making them checks or orders for the payment of money or promissory notes, are not subject to tax, unless received and paid at bank the same as checks.

41. The exemption granted to co-operative building and loan associations, etc., is confined to the stock and bonds issued by the associations therein mentioned, and, therefore, does not relieve them from other stamp taxes.

42. "Certificates of any description required by law not otherwise specified in this act, ten cents." The first requirement necessary to subject any given certificate thus generally described to tax is that it shall be one which is required to be given by law, national, state or municipal. All such are taxable, except those coming within the exemption of section 17, that is to say: those which are given strictly in the exercise of the functions—governmental, taxing, or municipal—of the state or corporation.

Certificates given by an officer, not for a public or governmental purpose, but for private interests and use, are liable to the tax if they are given in obedience to any law which requires them to be given when called for.

A certificate of search showing that the dockets or records of a court have been searched, and show either that liens exist or do not exist as to property, or that judgments are recorded or are not recorded, and also certificates of search to ascertain whether or not titles are good, whether taxes have been paid; and other certificates of this character are not such as are required in the general discharge of governmental functions on the part of the officers giving them, but are such as are needed for private use and private interests, and are, therefore, subject to the tax, as being required by law to be given when called for.

If the act performed, or the certificate issued by the officer is in the discharge of an official function necessary in operating the general machinery of the government, it is exempt.

43. Certificates of acknowledgment of deeds and mortgages are not required to be stamped. The memorandum on the back of a deed or mortgage, made by the register or recorder, that the instrument has been placed on record, is not a subject of taxation. It is not a certificate such as is contemplated by law. It is a brief note on the back of the deed or mortgage citing date of filing and date and place of record.

44. Certificates of birth, marriage and death, given in pursuance of the laws of the state requiring the collection and registration of vital statistics as a basis for the administration of public health laws, come within the exemption of section 17. Such certificates, however, when issued to private persons for private use, are subject to the ten-cent stamp tax.

45. The ordinary notary's jurat is not required to be stamped.

46. A policy does not require a stamp until it is issued, or is offered as an insurance policy, and an insurance company can stamp a policy through its local agents as well as through its general agent.

Any agent of the company who is charged with the duty of delivering the policy to the policyholder and receiving the premium, would be authorized to affix and cancel the stamp in behalf of the company.

47. A stamp must be attached to premium notes as well as to policies.

48. Deeds signed, acknowledged and fully executed in June do not require stamps, though delivered in July, unless, by state law, registration is necessary to pass title.

49. As to mortgages, it is the general principle that a mortgage is not valid as such until it is admitted to registration. A mortgage, no matter what the date, should not be admitted to registration when presented on or after July 1, 1898, unless there is attached and canceled the proper revenue stamp.

50. In cases where the consideration in a deed is nominal, the actual value of the property conveyed should govern the amount of the stamp required.

51. Original lease requires a stamp. No stamp is required on copy executed by the parties at the time of the original lease.

52. If livestock is sold at an exchange or board of trade, or other similar place, either for present or future delivery, the sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell must be evidenced by a bill, memorandum, or agreement to be delivered by the seller to the buyer, and this evidence should have the stamp affixed as required in the act, viz.: One cent on a $100, and on each $100 or fraction thereof, additional, 1 cent.

53. Where telephone companies have lines extending into more than one collection district, the return may be made to the collector of that district in which the principal business office of the company is located.

54. Contracts and agreements between subscribers and telephone companies for the placing of a telephone, and payment therefor, are not subject to stamp tax.

55. Powers of attorney executed on the back of stock certificates used in connection with transfer of shares require to be stamped in addition to the tax on transfer of stock.

56. Powers of attorney to sell or transfer government bonds are taxable.

57. A ten-cent stamp is sufficient upon a proxy for use in voting at an election of officers of an incorporated company, without regard to the number of signatures.

58. Revenue stamps are not required on the reports of earnings and dividends, and reports of conditions made to the comptroller of the currency by national banks.

59. The list of shareholders required by section 5210, Revised Statutes, to be forwarded to the comptroller of the currency requires no stamp tax. The paper is not a certificate, but a list.

60. A stamp is not required on returns of National banks of notes in circulation made semi-annually to the United States treasurer.

61. In regard to the cancellation of internal revenue adhesive stamps, which the law requires to be by writing or stamping the initials of the persons using the same, and the date upon which the stamp shall be attached or used, is held that the initials and the date alone will be sufficient. This cancellation may be by writing or imprinting with a hand stamp.

62. Old stamps issued under repealed acts cannot be used in lieu of stamps required by the present law.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

CAN'T PAY WITHOUT MONEY.

When friends of free silver were urging Congress to expand the currency and furnish more money for business, as well as for war, we were ridiculed by the gold press, which declared that all the country needed to carry on the war was less money and more taxation. We told them that the issuance of bonds would furnish safe investments and withdraw money from business, and that with the bonds issued to absorb the circulating medium the new taxes imposed by the Dingley bill would not only be onerous, vexatious and burdensome, but that they would not produce the expected revenue. We pointed out that while the United States was putting out $500,000,000 of surplus revenue which was applied to the payment of public debt, that after the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act with a view of reaching the gold standard the revenue fell off and the debt increased in four years $262,000,000. We contended that it was necessary in order to enable people to pay taxes, there should be money in the country for that purpose. It was contended, on the other hand, that the less money there was in circulation with which to pay taxes the easier it would be to make payment and the larger would be the revenues. The war revenue bill has gone into operation. The loose money of the country, says the Silver Knight Watchman, has been absorbed by the new bond issue, and the new taxes are so vexatious and difficult to pay that it is almost imposible to do business at all. The only activity in any line of business of the war is in war supplies. In ordinary times the business of the war would create a boom, but under the existing circumstances the only boomers are the lucky ones in trade with Government officials. However rich these lucky fellows may get, the country at large will not realize much benefit from their peculiar gains. The people will have a chance in the fall elections to say whether they want more taxes and less money to continue to be the settled policy of the country.

Steve Douglas' Son.

The announcement of Stephen A. Douglas Jr. that he considers himself a member of the Democratic party is a political event of unusual significance. Mr. Douglas has always been a Republican, a hard party worker, conspicuous in Republican conventions and popular meetings and a favorite campaign orator. The democracy of Mr. Douglas, though but recently acknowledged, comes to him by distinguished descent. He is the elder son of Stephen A. Douglas, the illustrious Democratic statesman and leader, whose name and public service are among the highest honors of the State of Illinois. On his dying bed he bequeathed to his sons their most valuable patrimony—his parting parental counsel: "Tell them to obey the laws and uphold the Constitution." These words are sculptured on the base of his monument at Chicago. They constitute the foundation principle of the Democratic party. With this admonition left as his political inheritance the younger Douglas has remained too long out of the Democratic party. He is welcome to its ranks and will become one of its most powerful and persuasive advocates before the people. In 1896 he secretly voted for Bryan. A few days ago he made his public declaration of faith. He will take the stump for free silver, the main cause of his conversion.

Humbug and Wheat.

Why have the Republican editors fallen silent on the great question of wheat? What has become of the Dingley bill? Its vast influence in booming wheat up to and beyond the dollar mark? Wherefore are the Republican orators mute on the enormous wealth gathered by the horny handed sons of toil who worked the farms while the Dingley confidence men worked the farmers? Whence have flown the turgid pages of rhetoric about the mortgage lifting power of the advance agent of prosperity? All these queries are pertinent since the famine in India has ceased; since the crops of wheat for 1898 have been estimated; since the corner in our great cereal has been broken, and since the price of wheat has tumbled down hill faster than it ever climbed up hill. If anybody was ever fooled by the unblushing effrontery of the claim that the Republican party has anything to do with raising the price of wheat, now is the time to repent, confess and receive absolution. Wheat has tumbled, though the Dingley bill has not been repealed, and in spite of the fact that the Republican administration at Washington still lives.

Work Inefficient.

Since the days of the fighting in front of Santiago, there has been cumulative evidence of the inefficiency of the work of the War Department in the matter of transportation, supplies and medical attendance. In the haste of a campaign carried on under circumstances so unusual, a certain amount of unpreparedness and of unavoidable drawbacks was to be expected; but the shocking condition under which the sick soldiers on the Seneca and the Concha made the voyage to New York, together with the terrible privations suffered in the camps, which Inspector General Breckinridge has reported, seem certainly to pass far beyond the line of excusable shortcomings.—Baltimore News.

Hoarded Gold.

As a proof of the wonderfully beneficial effects of the gold standard, the accumulation of gold in the vaults of banks and sub-treasuries is quoted. It is alleged that upward of 500 tons of gold, which is about one-twenty-fifth of all the gold in the world, lie in the treasure vaults of New York City. For all the good that gold is doing the people of the United States it might as well be in the frozen marshes of the Klondike. Hoarded money is dead money, and gold is the money which bankers, brokers and misers hoard. Especially is this the case in times of war, and it is made the case by the demonetization of silver, which constitutes gold the only money of ultimate redemption.

If those tons of gold could be put in circulation, if the value they represent could be injected into the arteries of trade, then some benefit would be conferred. Indeed, great benefit would result. But as this gold is simply piled up in the treasury vaults of New York it confers no more benefit than so much brick dust. Wheat in an elevator will not keep people from starving. Wheat must be ground into flour, made into bread, placed within the reach of the individual before it can relieve hunger. Gold in the vaults is as useless as wheat in the elevator. There is no benefit to the people in either so long as they are hoarded.

Robbed by Trusts.

Direct taxation is not borne with equanimity by the people of the United States. But when such taxes are imposed as a means of raising revenue to carry on war, objections are silenced. There is a form of taxation, however, which is more heavy than any imposed by the Government, and that is the tax levied on all consumers by the trusts. Almost every day the announcement is made of the formation of a new trust or of the increase in the price of articles manufactured by some trust. To-day it is the whisky trust. Yesterday it was the plate-glass trust. To-morrow it will be some other trust.

Every one of these trusts is protected by the Republican administration. Every one of these trusts helped to elect McKinley. If the people are tired of paying tribute to the trusts they should cease to vote for the candidates of the Republican party. So long as Mark Hanna, Steve Elkins and McKinley are kept in power, just so long will the trusts multiply and flourish. Just so long will the people be taxed to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. In the light of every-day experience the people ought to see the result of Republican success and should take measures to destroy the party which creates the trusts.

Popular War Loan.

Selling the bonds at par to the people of the United States and giving the takers of small sums the preference was a new departure in national financiering. When the money dealers urged a bond issue they expected to buy the bonds at par and to sell them to individuals at a premium. Now, alas, for the syndicates, the individual purchasers, having bought the bonds at par, have the opportunity to sell them to the bond dealers at a premium, consequently there is much grief in the hearts of money dealers and much joy in the hearts of the common people. If bonds are to be issued at all, they should be sold to the men and women who pay the taxes and do the work. They should never be offered to syndicates. Grover Cleveland made J. Pierpont Morgan and his combines of American and European bankers a present of $1,000,000 on what should be the last public loan sold by private contract. In making that gift to Morgan the President robbed the people. Similar robbery was contemplated when the war bonds were under discussion, but, thanks to Democratic efforts, the steal was defeated.

At Home.

AMERICAN WHEELMEN.

Annual Meet at Indianapolis—Visitors Own the City.

Something like 2,300 members signed the registration rolls during the first day of the '98 meet of the League of American Wheelmen at Indianapolis, Ind. Visiting members found the city tricked out in gala attire to receive them, and a hearty welcome was extended to each new arrival. It took Mayor Taggart all day to tell the leaguers he had no secrets from them. When night came Gov. Mount gathered them in the capitol building, saying how glad he was and that he counted this annual meet the best that ever happened. The state house was in a blaze of glint, glory and electric illumination. A large and accomplished brass band of twenty-five pieces furnished the music. Hundreds of incandescent lights were put up and the capacious dome illuminated for the first time. The decorations in the capitol were mostly confined to the main corridor, running from north to south. From the railings on the second story balconies flags were skillfully gathered into half rosettes at each end of the courts. Along the sides draped over the bunches of lights were long streamers of royal purple hanging in graceful waves half way to the lower floor. Reaching down from the railings of the third floor were streamers of red, white and blue suspended at regular intervals. The dome, always impressive in its massiveness, took on the appearance of a garden. In the corridors leading to it from the north and south were shrubs from the tropics, large enough to be called trees. The niches in the arches of the dome were banked with potted plants. In most of the streets and shops of the city were special decorations. The merchants draped their hardware, bread, boots, shoes and drugs in the royal purple and yellow of the L. A. W. Cozy corners were arranged against fruit stands, while league booths halted in front of millinery displays. It was about all the visitors could stand.

INDIANAPOLIS L. A. W. CLUB HOUSE.

Every member was given a "key to the city" and a beautiful souvenir pamphlet. The key was of oxidized metal, with a pin attachment. It was worded: "Nineteenth Annual Meet. Key to the City, Indianapolis, 1898." It was a neat arrangement and entitled the wearer to all privileges of the meet except the afternoon races. The meet souvenir proper was a work of art. The pamphlet contained sixteen pages of half-tone engravings of cycling points of interest in and about Indianapolis. The cover was tastefully stamped in the L. A. W. colors.

The racing program excited great interest, which was in nowise lessened by the presence and participation of such professionals as Bald, Gardiner, Taylor and Cooper.

STEAMER STRIKES ICEBERG.

Fisherman Confirms Story of Sinking of an Unknown Vessel.

The mail steamer Virginia Lake arrived at Tilt cove, on West bay, 230 miles from St. John's, N. F., bringing corroboration of the reported loss of an ocean liner in the Straits of Belle Isle. A fisherman at Noddy bay reported that he saw a steamer collide with an iceberg and sink soon after. The fisherman said that the steamer looked like a passenger ship and he could see the people trying to launch boats, but she sank before they could do anything.

HEAVY LOSS AT BISMARCK.

Damage by Monday Night's Fire Estimated at $750,000.

The total loss in Bismarck, N. D., from Monday night's fire will be from $600,000 to $750,000, with insurance not to exceed $250,000.

The heaviest individual losses are:

Joseph Hare	$40,000
First National Bank	75,000
Merchants' Block	25,000
Postoffice Block	20,000
C. H. Phelps	31,000
Northern Pacific Railroad	25,000

WILL GO TO PARIS.

United States Commissioner Peck Will Ask for Additional Space.

The United States commissioner to the Paris exposition has received at his office in New York more than 300 applications for space from Americans who want to exhibit, and the total number of applications at the New York and Chicago offices exceeds 600. The large number of applications caused some dismay to the commissioner, because of the comparatively small space that this country has secured at the exposition. Only 150,000 square feet has been allotted to the United States thus far, and enough have applied for space to make a world's fair of themselves.

Commissioner Peck, in view of the number of applications, will go to Paris shortly, and he hopes to secure 500,000 square feet, instead of 150,000. The rise in prominence of everything American, owing to our victories in the war, leads the commissioner to believe that he will be able to secure much more space than was originally awarded to this country.

PROCLAIMS PEACE.

McKinley Decrees that Hostilities Shall Cease.

CHAINS DOGS OF WAR

Guns of Fleet and Army Silenced by the President's Proclamation.

Officials in Military and Naval Circles in Washington Send Rush Messages to the Front as Soon as the Protocol Is Signed—Generals and Admirals in Command of the American Forces Notified that Hostilities Shall Be Suspended.

Whereas, By a protocol concluded and signed Aug. 12, 1898, by William R. Day, Secretary of State of the United States, and his excellency, Jules Cambon, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Republic of France, at Washington, respectively representing for this purpose the Government of the United States and the Government of Spain, the United States and Spain have formally agreed upon the terms on which negotiations for the establishment of peace between the two countries shall be undertaken; and

Whereas, It is in said protocol agreed that upon its conclusion and signature hostilities between the two countries shall be suspended, and that notice to that effect shall be given as soon as possible by each Government to the commanders of its military and naval forces; now, therefore,

I, William McKinley, President of the United States, do, in accordance with the stipulations of the protocol, declare and proclaim on the part of the United States a suspension of hostilities, and do hereby command that orders be immediately given through the proper channels to the commanders of the military and naval forces of the United States to abstain from all acts inconsistent with this proclamation.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 12th day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-third. WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

President McKinley lost no time in notifying the American military and naval commanders of the cessation of hostilities. Almost immediately after the signing of the protocol a dispatch was sent to Maj. Gen. Miles at Ponce, Porto Rico, directing that fighting stop. Duplicates of this dispatch were sent also to Gens. Merritt and Shafter, appropriate substitutes being made to apply to the different localities in which they had command. At the some time copies of the protocol and the proclamation of the President were sent to the naval commanders.

NEWS STORY CAPTURED.

Vain Attempt to Get Contraband Matter Past the Tampa Censor.

Endless have been the schemes resorted to by newspaper correspondents to get matter past Capt. J. E. Brady, the press censor down at Tampa. Here 's one of them:

A Cincinnati newspaper man, Allan Sottsford, stumbled on a good item one day. A colored cavalry regiment and the infantry regiment from Fort Thomas, near Cincinnati, had been quartered on the same transport, and the color contrast started a riot of considerable proportions. It was good news, impossible to get off by wire. Although it would not prejudice the Government's cause, the censor included it in the embargo. The Cincinnati writer dropped into the express office.

"It is this way," said he to an official against whom he brushed. "There is some little camp stuff I want to send out. I want it taken to Macon, Ga., and wired from there."

"Oh, yes, we can do that for you," replied the willing official. "I'll give your package to one of our men going up on the train to-night, and he will file the message for you at Macon. Don't mention it; glad to be of service to you and your paper."

In his glee the correspondent skipped away, even deigning to beam on the press censor whom he encountered a half hour later. It was just sixty minutes afterward when the young man appeared at the telegraph office to file some other matter, insignificant camp gossip.

"We can't accept matter from you," was the greeting he received. "Capt. Brady has chopped off your head."

The correspondent, down-hearted in a minute, trudged up to the hotel to see the censor. There Capt. Brady showed him the good story which the correspondent had deposited with the express company an hour before. The young man was given a raking over, and for two nights no story went out over his name. Finally the censor became gracious and reinstated the young man, after putting him on his honor and requiring him to sign a document promising by all that is holy to attempt no more evasion of the censorship. The express company officer had promptly sent the package to the censor as soon as the correspondent had left the office.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

NO WOMAN IS EXEMPT.

Regularity is a matter of importance in every woman's life. Much pain is, however, endured in the belief that it is necessary and not alarming, when in truth it is all wrong and indicates derangement that may cause serious trouble.

Excessive monthly pain itself will unsettle the nerves and make women old before their time.

The foundation of woman's health is a perfectly normal and regular performance of nature's function. The statement we print from Miss GERTRUDE SIKES, of Eldred, Pa., is echoed in every city, town and hamlet in this country. Read what she says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel like a new person since following your advice, and think it is my duty to let the public know the good your remedies have done me. My troubles were painful menstruation and leucorrhœa. I was nervous and had spells of being confused. Before using your remedies I never had any faith in patent medicines. I now wish to say that I never had anything do me so much good for painful menstruation as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; also would say that your Sanative Wash has cured me of leucorrhœa. I hope these few words may help suffering women."

The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

All suffering women are invited to write freely to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice about their health.

The greatest homage we can pay to truth is to use it.—Emerson.

The Young Recruit.

Judge Fallignant can tell a war story better than any other living man. Here is a pathetic one in his own words:

"While at home recruiting his command in men and horses, an old farmer friend came to gallant Col. 'Bill' Deloney and said: 'Bill, my boy here as got the war fever. His mother and I have tried to get it out of him, but it's no use. He swears he'll run away if I don't let him go, so I've mounted him on the best racing colt I had, and here he is. Take him with you, but I've this much to say: If he ever shows the dominicker, kill him right then and there; don't let him come home.' The old farmer raised game chickens and fought them, too. He had a contempt for dominicker roosters, because he didn't think they would fight, and that was his blunt way of describing a coward. Deloney turned and saw a fair-haired country lad of 17, standing perfectly erect, his lips compressed, but a vivid fire flashing from his steel-blue eyes. The boy never said a word, but parted tenderly from the old man and went to Virginia to join the cavalry.

"Deloney watched with pride the rapid improvement of the young recruit, but had forgotten the incident until the great cavalry fight at Brandy Station. When the squadrons were charging and counter-charging with the intrepid clash and dash of the light brigade, Pierce Young suddenly ordered him to attack a Federal brigade that was forming on the flank.

"'Get right among them, Bill, and break them up with cold steel,' was the order; 'don't give them time to form.'

"The words were hardly spoken when his command, Deloney far in advance, was sweeping down upon the foe, but before he was within a hundred feet of the enemy something went by him like a cyclone's breath; the Georgia boy was standing on tiptoe in his stirrups, bareheaded, his golden hair streaming, with saber high in air, and as he passed, with the light of battle in his face, and eyes flashing defiance, he turned in his saddle and shouted, 'Colonel, here's your dominicker!'

"A moment more and he struck the enemy's line like a cannon shot, his saber flashing on every hand, until he was literally hacked down by the startled foemen. When the fight was over, Deloney looked for him, and there he lay in the calm of death, his boyish face glorified with the dying thought: 'They'll tell pa I never showed the dominicker.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

On the Back of a Confederate.

The following very remarkable story of the civil war is told by a veteran:

At the battle of Gettysburg a Union officer fell between the lines. Bullets had broken one leg and one arm, and he could not move out of the range of the bullets coming from both directions.

He thought he might venture to turn over, but as he did so a bullet struck in the other arm, and now he was helpless indeed.

As he lay with his face turned toward the Confederate lines he saw an officer in gray stand up and coolly survey the field. He shouted to this officer that he was helpless and dying of thirst, and asked him to come to him. The man in gray pointed to the Union lines, firing at everything in sight, and shook his head. The wounded man insisted and made the strong appeal of the suffering. The Confederate officer left his own line, crept like a snake to where the Union officer lay, gave him water from his canteen, and was turning to creep back when the wounded officer made the demand that he be taken off the field.

The Confederate, looking on this as the unreasonableness of delirium, tried to soothe the Unionist. The latter put aside the petting with the peremptory statement that if his friend the enemy would lie flat, face down, and permit him to roll or climb on his back the thing was done. The Confederate agreed, with a twinkle in his eye, to try the experiment. With infinite trouble he got the wounded man on his back and started to creep, snail fashion, back to his lines.

The Union officer was struck again, and lost consciousness. He was revived with a dash of cold water in his face, and opened his eyes in the belief that at last he was no longer between the lines. His Confederate friend was lying close to the ground with canteen in hand and bullets were whistling from both directions. The man in gray explained that the man in blue had fainted; that the blue man had rolled off the gray man's back; that the gray man had gone for more water and had just returned, and if the blue man thought best was ready to resume business in the old way.

The Confederate succeeded in crawling into the lines of his own regiment with the wounded and almost unconscious Union officer on his back. The latter was too far gone to express his thanks or to realize what was going on about him. He was found, when the Confederates retreated, more dead than alive. After some weeks in the hospital he began to gain strength, and the memory of that terrible experience between the lines and the incidents of his rescue came back to him. Nurses and comrades smiled when they heard the story, charging it to delirium. But to the officer himself the face of his rescuer, the sound of his voice, the shape of his head, as he crept painfully over the bullet-swept ground, all were burned into memory.

When fully recovered he tried to open up communication with his rescuer, but it was not until twenty years later that he was able to find and thank him.

A Rebel Prison Fragment.

Col. Hawkins raised a regiment in and around Lewisburg, Tenn., near where I was raised, and went into the rebel army. He and a goodly number of his regiment were taken prisoners and carried North. One of the boys tried to keep up a correspondence with his lady-love in the South, and while in prison was taken sick and informed that he could not live. He longed to live for the letter due him from this lady, but the letter came one day too late—the day after he had died. Col. Hawkins had instructions to answer all letters. When he read the lady's letter, breaking her engagement with this soldier boy, he wrote this in answer:

Your letter, lady, came too late,
For heaven had claimed its own;
Ah, sudden change—from prison bars
Unto the great white throne!
And yet I think he would have stayed
To live for his disdain,
Could he have read the careless words
Which you have sent in vain.

So full of patience did he wait,
Through many a weary hour,
That o'er his simple soldier-faith
Not even death had pow'r;
And you—did others whisper low
Their homage in your ear,
As though amongst their shallow throng
His spirit had a peer?

I would that you were by me now,
To draw the sheet aside
And see how pure the look he wore
The moment when he died.
The sorrow that you gave to him
Had left its weary trace,
As 'twere the shadow of the Cross
Upon his pallid face.

"Her love," he said, "could change for me
The winter's cold to spring;"
Ah, trust no fickle maiden's love,
Thou art a bitter thing!
For when these valleys, bright in May,
Once more with blossoms wave,
The northern violets shall blow
Above his humble grave.

Your dole of scanty words had been
But one more pang to bear,
For him who kissed unto the last
Your tress of golden hair;
I did not put it where he said,
For, when the angels come,
I would not have them find the sign
Of falsehood in the tomb.

I've read your letter, and I know
The wiles that you had wrought
To win that noble heart of his,
And gained it—cruel thought!
What lavish wealth men sometimes give
For what is worthless all;
What manly bosoms beat for truth
In folly's falsest thrall!

You shall not pity him, for now
His sorrow has an end;
Yet would that you could stand with me
Beside my fallen friend;
And I forgive you for his sake,
And he—if it be given—
May e'en be pleading grace for you
Before the court of heaven.

To-night the cold winds whistle by
As I my vigil keep
Within the prison dead-house, where
Few mourners come to weep.
A rude plank coffin holds his form;
Yet death exalts his face,
And I would rather see him thus
Than clasped in your embrace.

To-night your home may shine with lights
And ring with merry song,
And you be smiling, as your soul
Had done no deadly wrong;
Your hand so fair that none would think
It penned these words of pain;
Your skin so white—would God, your heart
Were half as free from stain!

I'd rather be my comrade dead
Than you in life supreme;
For yours the sinner's waking dread,
And his the martyr's dream,
Whom serve we in this life, we serve
In that which is to come;
He chose his way; you, yours; let God
Pronounce the fitting doom.
—Yankee Blade.

Liked Dog Meat.

During the winter of 1863-'64 there were something like 10,000 Federal prisoners confined on Bell Island. These soldiers were confined in a space which only measured a few acres and was surrounded by a ditch about twelve feet wide and about ten feet in depth. Among the prisoners were a number of Philadelphians, and one of them relates the following incident, which took place during the month of January: "A number of the prisoners were standing close to the edge of the ditch talking seriously about the lack of food and the chances of escape, when a large poodle dog came along, trotting slowly up to the guard, who was on duty on the far side of the ditch. There the dog halted and seemed to take an observation of the poorly fed Yankees. At the same time the Yankees took a few glances at the dog, for meat was scarce, and they thought dog meat would be better than nothing. First one and then another spoke of the chances of getting a good hunk of dog meat, and finally one of the Yankess in a joking sort of way, told the guard to throw the dog across the ditch, adding, in a playful manner, that he wanted to eat the creature.

"The guard looked first at the dog, then at us, for I was there, and then, as though he wanted to see what would happen, he picked up the dog and tossed him over the ditch. You may talk about players scrambling for a fumbled foot-ball, but such a scene wouldn't be in it with the scramble that was made for that pup. I was in the scrimmage, and when a man yelled down I had one of the dog's legs in my hand, and would not let go had the man cut it into the bone. We finally compromised the thing, and in less than ten minutes that dog was a dead dog.

"In ten minutes more the dog was inside a number of stomachs, and the guard on the other side of the ditch, who had witnessed the whole thing, came near fainting. He told us afterward that he thought we were fooling, or he would not have sent the dog over to us, for it had been left in his charge. I have tasted many varieties of meat in my time, but rarely does anything taste so good as that little piece of dog meat which was portioned out to me."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

IRISH ACTOR WAS SCARED.

McKee Rankin Tells a Good Joke on a Member of His Company.

Stage fright is ordinarily an emotion the exact cause of which is difficult of explanation. But in a case which McKee Rankin recently recalled the reason is quite apparent. Said the actor: "It was in a mining town in Colorado. We were playing a piece in which the servant is discovered dusting the furniture, etc. Well, I discovered afterward that it was a custom for all persons who had no reserved seats to take any vacant chair the minute the curtain went up. On this night in question the body of the house was nearly filled, while back of the rail there were standing, eight or ten deep, miners, cowboys and all that rough element found in that territory, waiting to get a good seat for an admission. The curtain rose and a little Irishman I had playing the part of the servant had just commenced his opening speech—'Six o'clock, and master not at home,'—or something of that sort—when the entire mob at the back started down the aisles with a rush for the vacant seats. He looked up, saw them coming pell mell toward the stage, gave one yell and fairly flew off the stage, thinking they were to do him some bodily harm, and was out of sight in a minute. The play went on, but it was some time before we found the Irishman way down behind a pile of scenery. He finished the performance, but he was badly scared all the same."—Troy Times.

Reminders.

Scarcely anybody does anything well for nothing, and certainly a lawyer does not. Lord Mansfield was so sensible of this that when, once, he had to attend to some professional business of his own, he took some guineas out of his purse and put them into his waistcoat pocket to give him the requisite stimulus. Sir Anthony Malone, an Irish attorney general, was so imprudent as to omit this precaution, and was greatly punished for it, for he was so inattentive regarding some property he bought for himself that he lost $15,000 a year by it. In future he caused his clerk to make an abstract of the title deeds of any property he bought, and lay it before him, with a fee of five guineas, properly indorsed, which the clerk was scrupulously to account for. After this Sir Anthony made no more mistakes—at least as regards his own affairs.

Acropolis Built Before Christ.

On a stone of the temple of "Winged Victory" on the Acropolis at Athens an inscription has been found stating that the monument was built by Kalicrates, who was one of the architects of the Parthenon at the beginning of Pericles' government. This fixes its date at about 450 years before Christ. The Athens Archaeological society is about to undertake the restoration and strengthening of the Parthenon. Marble from Pentelicos will be furnished free for this by the company working the quarries.

Boy's Queer Attempt at Suicide.

Charles Miner, a 12-year-old West Brattleboro (Vt.) boy, threw a stone at some hogs the other day, but it went wild and hit a pet dog. When he saw the dog bleeding from a wound in its head he thought it would die, and remorse and grief so overwhelmed him that he mixed up a dose of paris green and took a large quantity. He was hurried to a doctor, who gave emetics freely, and the boy was soon declared out of danger.

TRAGEDY AT CROOKED LAKE

Miss Lena Rempis aud Leonard Roby Go To The Bottom. And Not Recovered.

The saddest accident that we have been called on to chronicle for many a year is the drowning of Leonard Roby, of this place and Miss Lena A. Rempis whose home is near Waterloo. It appears that with four other young people, Frank Willis jr, of Waterloo and his two sisters Dora and Josephine, and Miss Carrie Chandler, they were bathing in Crooked Lake about five miles northwest of Angola. when about nine o'clock this forenoon, they found the waves getting so rough that they would get into the boat. But in doing this, the boat upset. Miss Rempis and Mr. Roby, it appears were farthest from the boat and went down in deep water. In trying to get into the boat it was upset, and the others had a narrow escape. One of the Willis girls floated several minutes till she came near shore. The others managed to keep afloat till help reached them. The two who sank were in water so deep and black the strongest divers have not been able to reach them. Diver Shirley of Toledo, has been sent for to recover the bodies.

Young Roby is well known here as the son of Judge and Mrs. F. S. Roby. The young lady is a daughter of Henry Rempis, and both were highly esteemed. Their death casts a shadow over the community.

HOW TO LOOK GOOD

ANOTHER CHAIN

Started.—This Time the Messages Are Words of Praise Gratefully Given by Users of

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The public remembers that a short time ago a chain of letters was started for some worthy purpose, which reached such a magnitude that the whole world talked of it. A chain of oral messages has been started with also a worthy object, but different, for the reason that each one who participates reaps a benefit. The messages sing the praise of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer in the treatment of all nervous troubles and diseases resulting from debilitated nerves. Mrs. Geo. Halstead, Toledo, Ohio, has added over fifty links to the chain by telling that many of her afflicted friends what Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has done for her. These are her words: "Last spring I was all run down, nervous and very sick; due probably to the change of weather. The doctor was called and he treated me for a long time without much benefit. I then concluded to try Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer because I had heard such favorable reports from its use. I commenced to improve at once. I told the doctor what I was using and the beneficial effect, to which he replied, "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a good medicine, keep on using it;" which I did and was soon up and about as well as ever. I have recommended it to over fifty people and results have been entirely satisfactory."

The Old Settlers

Special to the Courier

ANGOLA, IND., Aug. 12, 1898. The 25th anniversary of the Old Settlers' meetings of Steuben county occurred yesterday, and will go into history as one of the greatest events the town of Angola ever witnessed. The crowd of old and young that came and remained all day and late into the evening was estimated at from 15,000 to 17,000. At any rate, Angola had about all the visitors she could well handle. The day was lovely, neither a hot sun nor rain marred the pleasures sought. At noontime it was amusing to notice the different ways and styles of eating dinner. The roast ox, sheep and pig, in McConnell's grove was the chief attraction, and by the time the noon hour was over, there was nothing of the great roast left but the "wishbones." Two brass bands and a martial band kept the air full of notes all day. There was speaking at three different points at one time, each place being crowded, yet one could not notice that the crowd was diminished in the least on the streets. The excursion trains were well loaded, especially the train from the south. Auburn people were numerous, and all appeared to enjoy the day. The day closed with as fine a display of fireworks as was ever seen here. A slight accident occured at the beginning of the display, when the fireworks took fire, and half dozen big rockets went sizzing in all directions into the mass of people. Fortunately no one was injured seriously, but it was a narrow escape for many. The next thing on the program is Auburn Carnival.

The Best Cough Remedy on Earth.

Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup, Consumption Cure, cures a cold in 24 hours if taken in time and does not stop a cough in one minute by paralyzing the throat, but it cures the disease and leaves the throat and lungs healthy and strong. 25 and 50 cts.

Notice of Hearing of Ditch Petition.

In the matter of the petition of John Cool No. 680, notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Auditor of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, and viewers have been appointed, who have viewed and reported said view, which is on file in my office,

The hearing of said petition upon its merits will be heard by the Board of County Commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, on Thursday, the 8th day of September, 1898, the same being the 4th day of their September term, 1898.

The prayer of said petition is that a ditch be constructed on the following route, to-wit:

Commencing at a point forty, [40] rods north and eight (8) rods west of southeast corner of west half of southwest quarter of section eight (8) of Jackson township, DeKalb county, Indiana, and from thence in a southwesterly direction, ending in Cedar creek five hundred and twenty-eight (528) feet west and six hundred and seventy-two (672) feet south of the north quarter corner of section eighteen (18), Jackson township, DeKalb county, Indiana.

The proposed ditch will affect the lands of the following persons, to-wit:

HORSESHOES OF PAPER.

Attached to the Horses' Hoofs Without Nails and Better Than Iron.

A trial of paper shoes for horses is shortly to be made in London. Enthusiasts think it will have a great effect upon the business of farriers and horse dealers. Snugly reposing in a glass showcase at J. A. W. Dollar's veterinary establishment in New Bond street is a horseshoe which looks strangely out of place in the glittering collection of shoes of all sorts, strongly nailed on to models of hoofs. The new horseshoe is made of compressed paper; it requires no nails to secure it to the hoof, and, while lighter than the most fragile of racing plates, it is claimed to be nearly as durable as the solid iron shoes which have hitherto secured to horses immunity from the effects of constant traveling over rough surfaces.

Mr. Dollar, who proposes to shoe a large number of horses, experimentally, shortly with the new shoe, which is a German invention, says that in Berlin, where cab and carriage horses have been shod with paper shoes for some time, good success has resulted. One of the first advantages of paper shoes for horses is the decreased cost. It is believed that a saving of 20 per cent in the actual cost of keeping horses shod can be effected by the use of the new shoe. But the cost of keeping horses shod is the most inconsiderable burden of the old method, with iron shoes, with which all the world is familiar. The real tax of iron shoes is the danger of their use, from the necessity of their being nailed in place. The new paper shoes are secured with a very strong glue. It is no exaggeration to say that almost all hoof troubles are caused by improper or careless shoeing. By far the largest part of the evils of improper shoeing come from injury to the foot through bent or misdriven nails. Thousands of valuable horses have thus been injured for life.

The facts that the new paper horseshoes can be applied by any one; that they are slightly elastic, thus accommodating themselves to the natural contractions and expansions of the hoof, and are not capable of producing hoof galls, or cuts, should one horse be kicked by another, are considered as among the other advantages which make horse owners—if not farriers—hope for the success of the coming experiments.—London Mail.

Her Ninth Birthday

Little Vera Zerwes was nine yesterday, and there was a nice party of little misses gathered at the home of her father, Al. Zerwis on West Fifth-st to help her celebrate it. Thirty little girls responded to their invitations and about five o'clock gathered on the lawn, where they had croquet and various other games outdoors, while in the parlor there was music, on the piano for several of the little Misses could play quite well. At the proper time, they gathered about three large tables on the lawn, between the residence of Mr. Zerwes and that of Ed. Baker, and there in the shade they had a lovely supper, very abundant and in excellent taste. There were lemonade, pickles, ice cream, veal, bananas, etc. etc, which they all enjoyed heartily. It was a lovely sight to see them all enjoy it, so much, for it was our pleasure to be present. And we feel like complimenting, they were so ladylike and well behaved. Much credit should be given to Mrs. Wohlgemuth, who keeps house for Mr. Zerwes, for the pains and good taste shown, and also her helpers, Mrs. Charlie Sheet, Mrs. Charlie Bartles, and we presume Mrs. Ed. Baker. Little Vera received many gifts including a ring, pin, cup and saucer, handkerchiefs souvenir spoon sherbet cup, work basket, pocket book, sugar bowl and cream pitcher, books, etc. Her elder sister Mabel also received many nice gifts including a bracelet, plate, cup and saucer, vase, souvenir spoons, books, etc. The two were happy with joy. There was but one little boy invited, Paul Hoff. The girls were, Katie Kiblinger, Sadie Huston, Edna Thorley, Rosamond McIntyre, Miriam Harris, Ruthie Borst, Drusie Baker, Bertha Lanning, Edie Trout, Zella and Eva Rush, Clara Hoff, Allie Rakestraw, Bertha Sheets, Gladys and Lela McDowell, Roxy Fuller, Helen Vann, Marie McDougall, Enid and Marion Hoyt, Dessie and Allie Mitchell, Lucile and Jaunita Hallauer, Esther Beuret, Cosetta Bishop, Mildred Jones, Josie Lesh and Mabel and Vera Zerwes.

Justice Court

Saturday's Daily.

Quite an important trial came up before 'Squire Walborn today, Fannie Casebeer brings a state case against Gene Trout, charging embezzlement. It appears that she had at different times let him have money or as she claims he used some of the money she had received from the sale of her house on South Jackson. There is said to be $1700 involved in the suit in various ways. An effort is being made to settle it in a satisfactory way without a trial. Later, it was settled.

Interstate Commerce Laws.

Judge Baker of the United Stater court at Indianapolis has decided that express companies are not affected by the interstate commerce law, and that the only way they can be affected by a law making rates uniform, is for the individual states to make laws on the subject. If this view is right, there will be some hard work ahead of the incoming legislature of this state.

CAPTAIN CLARK

He is the famous captain of the famous battle ship Oregon that came home around South America from the Pacific and got here in time to help destroy the Spanish fleet at Santiago. It is a misfortune to the country, that he has now lost his health. The terrible strain of that long trip, including the constant watch and prepartion to meet the Spanish fleet that was expected to meet him at an any point, and the succeeding strain of the terrible fight with Cervera's fleet at Santiago, it seems broke him down. He has been ordered home where it is hoped a season of rest may result in his favor. It appears that the care of these big war vessels, and the shock and strain caused by firing their heavy guns, is a terribl ething on the health and powers of endurance. It was this that caused the death of Capt. Gridley soon after he had passed through the Manila battle.

Notice of Hearing of Ditch Petition.

In the matter of the petition of Fremont Smith No. 678 notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Auditor of DeKalb County, State of Indiana, and viewers have been appointed who have viewed and reported said view, which is on file in my office.

The hearing of said petition upon its merits will be heard by the Board of County Commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, on Thursday, the 8th day of September, 1898, the same being the 4th day of their September term, 1898.

The prayer of said petition is that a ditch be constructed on the following route, to-wit:

Commencing at a point on the west line of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. right of way where said right of way crosses the George W. Lackey ditch No. 478, said beginning point being two hundred [200] feet west of the center of S. E. Qr. of section one, Keyser township, DeKalb county, Indiana, and from thence following the old water channel ending in Cedar creek, one hundred and eighty (180) feet south and one hundred and seventy (170) feet west of the southeast corner of 17.60 acres out of the northwest corner of the northeast quarter of section seven, (7) Jackson township, DeKalb county, Indiana.

The proposed ditch will affect the following persons, to-wit:

Thursday's Daily.

—We can save you money on Surreys and Buggies. See us. McDowell & Carter. 33

—Surveyor Krontz came home this forenoon from Butler. He had been surveying some ditches down that way.

—James McDowell on West Seventh is putting in a cement walk in front of his residence and thereby furnishing a good example to others.

—Sol. Barney of St. Joe, did not reach here last evening to be present at the meeting of the Rebekahs. He is some sort of a state officer.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. H. B. McCord.

—The big flag on top the court house is 9 by 16 feet, which seems altogether out of proportion. Still we do not exactly know what the rule is as to the proportion of the width to the length. Perhaps some of our readers can explain this.

—Dr. Swarts returned last evening from his trip to St. Louis, as he was ill soon after reaching that city. While his illness is probably not serious, he thought it wise to be at home. He will probably be out in a few days.

—The little boy of Sol. Shearer, who has been sick so long with diphtheria died last evening. His disease had taken a turn that some times happens in diphtheria cases, resulting in paralysis of the heart. The funeral is tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. H. B. McCord.

—Columbia City Post:—Trustees this year have a double dose of dog tax on their hands. Last year's tax was collected by the county treasurer and recently turned over to them. This year's tax was collected by the township assessors and has been turned over to the trustees. This enables trustees to pay a number of old claims for "sheep killed by dogs" a year sooner than they otherwise could have done.

—The Democratic nominee for governor in Minnesota is Lieutenant John Lind, of the Twelfth Minnesota Regiment, now at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga, and under orders to move to the front at Porto Rico. He has served his state in congress, and has been connected with the public affairs of the state for many years. He will remain in the field until the war ends barring accicents from death, wounds or disease, depending on the people to fight his political battle while he fights the enemies of hss country.

—The Republican displays commendable candor in saying: Some members of the legislature are offering their services free for a special session to enact a law anthorizing Indiana soldiers to vote in the field If the proposition is not insincere it is foolish. It is perfectly plain that such a law would be unconstitutional, and the constitution cannot be amended except in the manner itself prescribes. It may be unfortunate that the constitution prevents such an enactment, but as it does, nothing can be done until it is amended. The special session talk should cease.

Friday's Daily.

—It will pay to see the Kiblinger Buggies before buying elsewhere, McDowell & Carter.

Marshal Potter escorted a drunken man to the lock up this afternoon, and was looking up another.

—From all over the world come the later reports that the wheat surplus will not be as large as first reports showed.

—The daily papers say that the 157th will now be moved again, this time from Fernandina, Florida, to Huntsville, Alabama.

SUMMER CATARRH

Catarrh of the bowels, because it is most prevalent in the summer months, is called summer catarrh.

Its surprises many that bowel trouble is catarrhal. Dr. Hartman's books make this plain. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for them. They tell all about catarrh and how Pe-ru-na cures it wherever located.

"I had chronic diarrhœa for fifteen years," writes Mr. T. E. Miller, Grand Prairie, Tex. "I tried many medicines and doctors in vain. At last Pe-ru-na was recommended, and it relieved and cured me at once."

Mr. John Harting, 633 Main St., Cincinnati, O., writes: "My wife and myself took your Pe-ru-na for chronic diarrhœa and it cured us. No doctor or medicine we tried before helped us."

Mr. Edward Wormack, Ledbetter, Tex., writes: "Pe-ru-na for bowel troubles is unequalled by anything in my experience. I owe my life to Pe-ru-na, and shall always recommend it to those suffering as I was."

Mr. John Edgarton, 1030 Third Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "I suffered from dysentery for three years I took Pe-ru-na and am now well."

—Father Jarusohok of Summit called this forenoon, in company with Father Boccard of this place. We are always glad to meet them.

—Fort Wayne is taking steps to have a union depot for all its railroads. That looks sensible, but as the various stations are far apart, it looks like a big job.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. H. B. McCord.

—Angola republican:—A. O. Miller and wife, well known to the theater going people of this section, have left the stage and are now proprietors of the west end hotel at Blissfield, Mich.

—Waterloo Press:—The man that persists in walking about the streets of Waterloo with a cartridge belt on and a revolver exposed to public view, will sooner or later receive his reward. This is no cowboy town.

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. H. B. McCord.

—Waterloo Press:—The noxious weed law, requiring all brush and weeds to be cut from the public highway, ought to be enforced to the letter now. Make the country roads look beautiful and prevent the scattering of the seed over the fields. It is the law and it is time to obey its mandates.

—There will be especially fine music at the Presbyterian church Sunday. It will include a sacred solo by Mrs. E. L. Robbins, tuba solo C. H. Knapp Mrs. H. C. Hanna will act as accompanyist, and there will be other pieces played and sung. A piano is being put into the church for use till the new organ is ready.

—Angola Republican.—A Coldwater preacher was recently speaking of the hot weather during one of his sermons, when he said he knew of a place which was much hotter, but which was full of good men. The congregation was surprised for a moment, until he explained that he meant Cuba, where so many of our boys were sweltering in the heat.

—We should have said 57 as the number of tickets sold on the morning train for old settlers' day at Angola yesterday. In addition to this 11 tickets were sold for the noon train making 68 in all. The trains from the north were crowded and there was hardly standing room. All who went report a big attendance and very pleasant time.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—"It's dreadfully queer," said the housewife, "that the potatoes you bring should be so much bigger on the top of the basket than they are at the bottom." "Miss" said the honest farmer, "it comes about this way. P'taters is growin' so fast right now that the time I git a basket dug the last ones is ever so much bigger than the fust ones."

—St. Joe News:—Invitations are out announcing the twenty-fifth annual reunion of the Hadsell family to be held at the residence of C. J. Hadsell near Newville, on Saturday, August 20, 1898. This will occur on the eighty-fifty birthday anniversary of Mother Hadsell and this event will no doubt be remembered as one of unusual interest by this family.

—The Dispatch is way off, when it says "Democrats hesitated to support the President in inaugurating his war policy." The facts are the democrats were solidly working to stiffen up the President's backbone so as to get him to enter on the war against Spain. The only men in public life who did not want war, were a few republican members of congress. Every reader of the Dispatch knows these things.

—We have received a lovely invitation printed on silver paper, to attend the 25th anniversary of the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso. This great institution of learning has in the years named grown up from the smallest of beginning till now it is one of the largest, if not the very largest, of its kind in the United States. It is a monument of American energy aided by education and business sense. Every inch of its life journey has been measured and cared for by H. B. Brown, its head and brains from birth strong manhood.

—What is probably the largest corn field in Indiana fills in the old Wabash river bed north of Peru, a great lake of green six miles in length and a mile in width, says the Peru Republican. No soil is richer than this black alluvial, so recently reclaimed by the construction of the big ditch and there is no finer corn anywhere than that now growing on the old prairie where the banks of the Wabash, not very far away, used to be located. It would be interesting to know the value of the corn crop that will be hauled out of that big garden spot this year.

—French naval authorities cite the only parallel instance to the transportation of Spanish troops to Spain. The parallel occurred in the case of the French army of 22,000 men under Junot, which, after having surrendered to the British army in Portugal under Sir Hugh Dalrymaple, was embarked in English ships by the treaty of Cintra on August 30, 1808, and transported to Brest. Of course, in the present case the transportation of great bodies of troops across the Atlantic is a much bigger undertaking, but in principle the parallel is sustained.

FROM CO. K.

By permission of Mrs. Charlie Picker we publish the following letter just received from her husband in the army. It is all so natural and hearty that we copy it entire:

FERNANDINA, FLA., Aug. 14, 1898.

DEAR WIFE—This is the third day that has passed and no letter yet. I write to you every day. Co. K. gets lots of mail but none for me. Some of them get three or four letters per day, and you cannot imagine how blue it makes me feel when I don't get a letter. But I expect I will get a letter to-morrow. Mrs. Lahnum and Mrs. Kuhlman started home to-day. I hope they will arrive home all right. I am tired to-night; I have been shaving and cutting the boys hair. The papers all state that the war is over, and I for one am glad, so we can come home. We will move from this camp next week; I don't know where we will go, but I hope we will go home. I heard to-day that Gov. Mount was seen in Fernandina to-day. I just now received two letters from you; also received a letter from E. M. Bishop. I think you and Mrs. Lane will do well with your restaurant during Carnival. To-day has been the warmest day we have had since we have been in this camp. I just heard that Leonard Roby was drowned. It cast a gloom over the company, as they all had great respect for Leonard. Tell grandma I am well and hope to see her soon. Tell little Cecil Furnish I am coming home some of these days. Kiss him for me and tell him I still have his picture in my watch. I will close unto-morrow, hoping to hear from you every day. Give my regards to everyone.

From Your Husband.
C. A. PICKER.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

On Wednesday Aug. 17, 1898, at high noon, at the residence of the brides sister, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Larimore, West Butler-st, Fort Wayne, Indiana, occurred the marriage of Grace Mae Miller, daughter of the late W. H. Miller of Fort Wayne, Indiana, to Harry Draggoo, of Auburn, Indiana, P. J. Rice, pastor of the West Jefferson-st Church of Christ, officiating.

The friends present were, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Larimore, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Larimore of Fort Wayne, and Mrs. Hannah Draggoo, Mr. and Mrs. M. E Griswold and C. A. Benedict of Auburn.

Pleasant conversations was at its height and was continued with jokes and stories suitable to the occasion during the sumptuous dinner which was served in six courses by Caterer Seidel.

The bride and groom were the appreciative recipients of many heartiful and useful presents, cut glass, silver ware, china, bric-a-brac, etc.

The happy couple left over the G. R. & I. for Petoskey, where they will sojourn for a fortnight, and will be at home to their many friends after September 1st, at the residence of the groom's mother, Mrs. Hannah Draggoo, on South Main-st, County Schools.

The schools of the county will soon be in session. The city school to begin first is Auburn, which will commence Aug. 29. Waterloo and Garrett begin Sept 5. The editor of this paper is personally acquainted with the superintendents of the schools at Waterloo and Garrett. Of course we are with Mr. Harrison, of Auburn, of whose excellent work we have often had occasion to speak in the highest terms. We have known Mr. Keep, of Waterloo, for many years and have no hesitation in endorsing his school work there and elsewhere. He has been a success in the country schools in which he began many years ago, and also in the Pleasant Lake school where he was in charge several years. He has now been a number of years in full control at Waterloo and his good work shows for itself. Mr. G. M. Hough is in charge of the Garrett schools and is now entering on the third year of his work there. From the start he has succeeded and is now assured of future success. His school is in good shape in all its departments and we look to see the coming year the best the city has enjoyed.

The Matrimonial Reunion.

The day was drizzly and many had gone to the Battalion meeting at Waterloo. The grove proved too wet, and at noon they meet in the Opera House.

The published order of exercises was followed. The first speech was by Judge Powers, then by Dr. Stemen and was followed by a song by the Hopewell Sunday School. Then J. M. Robinson then made one of his short and witty speeches, then recitations by Sherman Baber and Lena Barton. Both did nicely. Then followed the chief speech by Mr. Frech, which was an able one. All the speeches were excellent. After having pictures taken by Mr. Hoffman, they adjourned to meet next year. A song by Morris Widney, and they closed with the benediction.

Echoes of the War.

There will be a grand naval review in New York Harbor Saturday, in which all the war ships that have got home will take part.

It is reported that the 157th will come home in about a month. But you never know what the government is going to do with its soldiers.

The last big fight was at Manila, as was also the first. Before Dewey had heard of peace he co-operated with the troops on land, and shelled the town, while the troops stormed the works. The American army numbered at least 10,000, and the struggle lasted over two hours. Then we had the town. But the captain-general, Augusti, had escaped on a German warship. The city will be held by Americans alone, the insurgents not being made partners. The people seem glad to have us there.

Food and merchandise are going into Havana at a rapid rate, and merchants are settling down to business.

The 157th gave a grand vaudeville entertainment in honor of the return of peace. The men furnished all the parts and did well.

Accident At Butler.

August 19, 1898.

Special to the Courier

Thursday afternoon, while moving a safe from the old real estate office of Jeff N. Boyle to his new office at corner of Broadway and Oaks streets, an accident occurred, which but for the miracle of luck attending it might have been fatal to life. The new office is located in the upper story of the building and it was while the workmen were moving the safe up the stairway by the means of a rope and tackle, that the rope suddenly broke, precipitating the safe with violence to the bottom, The sudden coming down of so much weight made havoc generally with stairsteps and plastering. By a stroke of good fortune none of the men were badly hurt. Mr. B., has been in the real estate business for about nine years, and recently purchased the property where his new office is located.

The Battalion Meeting.

The procession that started from here this morning to attend the Battalion meeting at Waterloo today, was one of the largest and best arranged that has gone from here on a similiar occasion. It was headed by a young lady on horseback, Laura McClellan, daughter of Allen McClellan of Jackson township, followed by three young men on horseback, with bugles, and these were followed by a long line of carriages and several large rigs. The inspiriting tones of the bugles, and the waving of flags, called out crowds to watch the old boys as they drove liesurely up north Main-st. There was a big attendance from all parts of the country.

Dandruff is Dangerous

When dandruff appears it is usually regarded as an annoyance. It should be regarded as a disease. Its presence indicates an unhealthy condition of the scalp, which, if neglected, leads to baldness. Dandruff should be cured at once. The most effective means for the cure is found in AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It promotes the growth of the hair, restores it when gray or faded to its original color, and keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"For more than eight years I was greatly troubled with dandruff, and though a young man, my hair was fast turning gray and falling out. Baldness seemed inevitable until I began to use

Ayer's Hair Vigor

The dandruff has been entirely removed and my hair is now soft, smooth and glossy and fast regaining its original color." —L. P. VALLE, Allenton, Mo.

FROM THE FRONT

FERNANDINA, FLORIDA, Aug. 10, '98.

REV. W. L. MEESE,
Auburn, Ind.,

DEAR BROTHER:—I will try and write you this beautiful morning to let you know that I have not forgotten you or your reunion but am sorry I cannot be with you this year, as I am in service for the flag that we are all proud of. I am in good health and have been all the while, I enjoy the south. We are now on the highest point in Florida and the most pleasant place we have been in camp. It is only a mile to the ocean beach from camp and about the same to the city of Fernandina. It is only one mile to what is known as "Old Town" and not far from the old Spanish fort. There is some sickness in camp, there are several boys of Co. K that are under the doctor's care now, but not serious. We have not lost any of our boys by death yet. I suppose you have seen my wife and baby and heard that I could not be with you and your matrimonial family this year, as the time is getting close at hand. But perhaps I can be with you at your next reunion and it would give me great pleasure to to be with you this time, but that is an impossibility as we need men for the cause that I have enlisted for. I will bring these few lines to a close hoping they will find you in good health, great success in you meeting and my best wishes to you and my friends at home and vicinity of Auburn. Excuse poor writing and mistakes as we have poor place to write. I will put my trust in the Lord and will try and so live as to meet you all again, if not here on earth, in heaven, for I have a treasure there of my own and God be with us all is my prayer.

Yours with respect,
A. BAHLKE.

THE REUNION.

All in all the Meese reunion was a success in spite of bad weather and other gatherings. His flock always remain true to him. Many good things were said in all the speeches, and many good things should have been said of the speakers and singers as well as of Mr. Meese, but time and space did not permit. For by the time the meeting was fully at work in the afternoon, it was time to get ready to close up the paper. So a brief account was all we could give. Little Miss Barton and Master Baber were complimented on their recitations. They show considerable talent and training. Now, for the next year's meeting, there should be a consultation and get the dates of all these general meetings so they can have better attendance. Besides, there are always a great many people who would like to attend both.

Birthday Surprise.

The friends and relatives of Mrs. G. W. Burtzner of Butler Center, gave her a surprise party yesterday on the event of her 42d birthday.

There were about forty in attendance. A beautiful dinner set was presented to her. At the proper time a bountiful repast was served, in which all partook.

Among those who went from here were: Mrs. Priscilla Baxter, A. J. Ralston, Mrs. Wm. Darby of Bryan, Mrs. Mary A. McDowell and Mr and Mrs. Miles Baxter.

FROM BUTLER,

Special to the Courier

Miss Nellie Hart of Columbia City, one of Whitley county's successful teachers, accompanied by her uncle, John Hart of Hicksville, Ohio, visited with the family of his niece, Mrs. S. A. McNabb of Butler on Wednesday, leaving for Columbia City in the evening, where Mr. H. will visit his aged sister, Mrs. Susan Farner, and Miss Hart will attend the coming sessions of the county teachers' institute.

A good delegation of Butler people are attending the festivities at Waterloo today, Thursday.

The U. R. Knights of Pythias are making considerable preparation for the conclave at Indianapolis. It is expected that about thirty-five will go in the company from Butler. They have a cornet band all their own, which, however, will not go on exhibition at the state capitol.

Butler has a citizen noted particularly for his relationship to people of more or less prominence in the United States. He is a native of New York, having been born at Warsaw, seventy-six years ago last February. His name is Hiram N. Flower. He is a first cousin to Reswell P Flower, governor of the state of his nativity, and second cousin to Dr. Hiram Pigkiller and Albert Flower of Chicago. The gentleman has resided in Butler for 28 years, having buried his wife two years ago, and is hearty and hale as the average man of his age.

Charged with Cowardice.

This war has produced heroes at every turn, and it is painful to hear of one even, who has failed of his duty. Capt. Biddle of Co. C 4th, Ohio, is under arrest for cowardice in battle, near Port Arroyo, in Porto Rico. The account says:

Company C, with other companies of Colonel Colt's command, had been detailed to beat the foothills a few miles beyond Arroyo in quest of a possible enemy lurking under the cover of thick woods. It was thought the Spaniards had retired miles beyond the the point where the attack took place, but the reconnoisance had been decided upon, as an extra measure of precaution before General Brooks movement forward to form the junction with General Wilson really commenced.

The unexpectedness of the attack probably had much to do with Captain Biddle's loss of head and the panic into which he threw his company. As his men deployed as skirmishers were advancing the men called back and forth and chaffed each another on what they called their "rabbit hunt." They were saying that the Spaniards for whom they were looking were probably shivering in San Juan, when there was a whiz, a snapping of leaves, a splintering of bark, and little eruptions of dirt at the boys' feet.

"Hello, the rabbit is no longer on the run," exclaimed one of the soldiers. Biddle's men were slipping behind the trees and bushes and preparing to make a stand when some one gave the command to retreat.

"Run, boys; they're a thousand to one," came the command as the men were preparing to make a brave resistance against their as yet invisible foe. It is alleged that Captain Biddle gave the command. Had this panicky alarm not been given and had not the men seen their commanding officer running with his back to the fire, they would have stood their ground and fought just as bravely as they did when they received their baptism of fire at Guayama.

Captain Biddle, it is alleged, was found hiding in a culvert under the roadway.

Carnival And Peace Jubilee

On account of welcome peace having been declared the association has added Peace Jubilee to the name of our grand entertainment Sept 7 to 9. The The yellow and blue Carnival colors will be displayed with the red, white and blue making a beautiful combination. Citizens will be solicited for the sale of flags, candles and lanterns at actual cost. d1t

OVER A SCORE DEAD

As a Result of a Collision in Massachusetts.

An Express Crashes Into a Local Passenger Train On a Siding.

The Terms of the Surrender of Manila Restricted to the City.

A Batch of Miscellaneous Telegraph News from All Parts of the World.

Collided and Telescoped.

A local train from Providence, R. I., on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Sharon, Mass., while standing at the depot was telescoped by an express train from New Bedford. Between thirty and forty people were killed, besides a large num ber in jured.

The two trains which were in collision were usually combined into one long train, but at the time of the accident it was divided, the first section running as a local accommodation, while the second, which started from Mansfield fifteen minutes later than the first, ran as an express. The local train was due at Sharon at 7:02, but was thirteen minutes late. No warning was given by the conductor of the Mansfield local to show the approaching train that the track was not clear within 400 feet of the station, and the engineer of the express noticed nothing wrong. The express crashed into the rear car, completely demolishing it, and the speed was not slackened until the engine had penetrated five feet in the second car. Engineer Getchell and Fireman Holmes of the express jumped and escaped.

Murdered for Money.

The body of Valmore C. Nichols, a farmer who lived near Pittsfield, Mich., was found floating in the river at Belle Isle Park, near Detroit. Yards of copper wire held the legs together and two heavy stones weighted the corpse down. Nichols left home a week ago and the body had the appearance of having been in the water at least a week. He had several hundred dollars in his possession when he left Pittsfield, and as no money was found on his body, the police believe the motives of the murder was robbery.

Jewels in Rag Bag.

George S. Johns, an editorial writer on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, placed his valuables in the family rag bag when his wife went away for the summer. Among them were two diamond pins, gifts from Clara Morris, a jeweled cigar holder from Paderwiski, and other souvenirs and papers worth $2,000. Mrs. Johns returned and sold the rags for 90 cents. Mr. Johns, by the aid of the police, recovered the souvenirs from pawn shops, but the valuable papers are still missing.

Modest Missouri Army Hero.

Lee Bridgewater, with the Missouri regiment at Chickamauga, is a hero. His mother died recently, leaving three small children in destitute circumstances.

Bridgewater was in the army and could not be discharged, so he took up a collection and bought a tub and soap and irons and started a laundry.

His comrades heard of the reason for this and patronized him so generously that he has been enabled to send home money to feed and clothe the children.

Death in Jack Rabbits' Flesh.

A peculiar disease has broken out among a number of families in Grant and Haskell Counties, Kansas, recently, which completely baffles the skill of local physicians. A specialist who went there reports that the victims are afflicted with eruptions and running sores, caused by eating the flesh of jack rabbits after the frost period of spring. Several deaths are reported as the result of partaking of this kind of food during the hot weather.

Hold Manila Only.

Among the war officials the terms of capitulation of Manila, as cabled by Merritt, was a topic of discussion. The prevalent opinion now is that they mean precisely what they say and that the surrender includes only the city of Manila and its immediate surroundings as it is expressed in the articles.

Two Laborers Burned.

Word was received from Willvale, a little village on the Kankakee marsh, south of Valparaiso, Ind., that a shanty occupied by laborers working on a large ditch across the marsh burned to the ground, and two men lost their lives. The fire was caused by a gasoline stove exploding.

The Gould Estate.

Russell Sage says that Jay Gould's estate will be partitioned in a few weeks, when Frank Gould becomes of age. His trusteeship then ceases, according to Gould's will.

Corn'ce Kills Four Men.

Four men were killed and five others badly injured by the collapse of a cornice on a new building in the course of erection at Philadelphia. The cornice weighed nearly ten tons, and in falling carried the scaffold and men who were working on it to the street.

Attempted Assassination Near Chicago.

An attempt to assassinate John Hill, Jr., leader of the anti-gambling crusade in Chicago, was made at his home in Morgan Park, Ill. A dynamite cartridge exploded at the window of a bedroom where Mr. and Mrs. Hill were asleep. No one was hurt.

TRAGEDY IN CORBETT FAMILY.

Father of the Pugilist Kills His Wife and Then Himself.

In San Francisco, P. J. Corbett, father of James J. Corbett, the heavyweight pugilist, shot and killed his wife and then turned the weapon upon himself with fatal effect. It is believed the murderer was demented. He had been in extremely poor health for some time, and had just returned from Bartlett Springs, where he had been stopping. Death was instantaneous in both cases. The shooting occurred at the residence of the Corbett family. Mr. King, a son-in-law of Corbett, who was living in the house, heard two shots in his father-in-law's room. Hurrying there, he found Mrs. Corbett dead in bed and his father-in-law dying on the floor. Mrs. Corbett was in her night attire, while her husband was fully dressed.

FIGHT WITH AN ALLIGATOR.

Reptile on a Train Nearly Makes a Meal of the Conductor.

The train crew of an Iron Mountain train which arrived at St. Louis from Memphis, Tenn., had an exciting battle with a four-foot alligator during the journey. The alligator had been inclosed in a box addressed to Salt Lake City. It managed to break out, and Conductor William Egan discovered it crawling about the car. It took five men to capture the reptile, and not until the battle had extended into the mail car adjoining and Conductor Egan's clothes were badly torn by the alligator's teeth was this accomplished. By the time the train had reached St. Louis the alligator had been reboxed and later was started for Utah.

POSSE KILLS FIVE NEGROES.

Party of the Latter Resisted Arrest and Began Firing.

Sheriff Fisher and a posse of thirteen men made a raid on a crowd of negro gamblers at Bayboro, thirteen miles east of Moultrie, Ga., the other night. There were seventy-five or 100 negroes in the house, and as Sheriff Fisher walked in some of the negroes began shooting, one ball hitting the sheriff in the hand, inflicting a painful wound. Two others of the posse were hit. The posse returned a vigorous fire, and as a result five negroes were killed outright, three others mortally wounded and three more painfully but not fatally hurt. The negroes made a determined resistance, and 200 or 300 shots were fired.

His Mission a Success.

Col. Emile E. M. Blum, who has been in Paris some time looking out for American interests at the Paris International Exposition of 1900, returned to New York on La Normandie. Col. Blum said regarding his trip: "The exhibit of the United States will be the largest of any country in regard to floor space, with the exception of France. At the last exposition we had 119,000 square feet, and this time 265,000 square feet already are assured. Through the appropriation of $650,000 by Congress a beautiful building will be erected. My special mission in Paris at this time was to ascertain the feeling between the French and the Americans, and I am sure that what little hard feeling there was has entirely disappeared. I went to hotels, cafes, business houses and in all I was treated not only courteously, but as a friend. Through the courtesy of Gen. Horace Porter I entered official society, and the same good feeling was apparent." Mr. Blum has succeeded in obtaining the establishment of an important annex for railways, tramways, automobiles and velocipedes at the Bois de Vincennes and the additions of 827 square meters of space for the United States exhibit. He also has concluded arrangements with several leading architects, engineers, builders and decorators for the complete and artistic installation of American exhibits.

Killed in an Explosion.

A terrific explosion occurred at the roundhouse of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad at Prescott, A. T., resulting in fatal injury to two men and the wounding of two or three others. Machinists were at work on engine No. 2 in the roundhouse when the boiler exploded with tremendous force. Joseph Brown was on top of the engine adjusting the pop valve when the explosion occurred and was badly crushed about the head, dying in a few minutes. E. M. Scamans had his left arm blown fifty feet away, his left leg blown off and he was badly bruised and cut about the head. He cannot live. Charles Chambers was also quite seriously injured. The roundhouse is a complete wreck. Another engine on an adjoining track was also badly wrecked. The firebox and boiler of the engine, weighing from four to five tons, were blown 1,200 feet, striking the end of the Bashford-Burmeister Company's warehouse, crushing the end of it. An air pump weighing over 200 pounds was blown three blocks, alighting near the postoffice. The vicinity of the roundhouse for three blocks was strewn with wreckage of pipes and pieces of warped and twisted steel.

Wants Second Arbitration.

The legal representative of the Colombian Government called on the Secretary of State at Washington for the purpose of making arrangements in connection with the final settlement of the claim of Italy against Colombia. It is represented by the Colombian Government that when the award was made by President Cleveland as arbiter there was no provision as to the method of settlement, and the proposition of the Colombian Government is that this question be referred to the United States as arbiter. It is the desire of Colombia that this matter be settled in a manner to preserve the dignity of the republic.

Has Sued for $150,000.

Amanda P. Austin has sued the estate of Millionaire Jefferson Wilcoxson, her uncle, for $150,000, at Sacramento, Cal. She claims that Wilcoxson induced her to come from Missouri and care for him in his old age, which she did for seventeen years, remaining single at his request. He promised her $150,000. After his death $170,000 was found in his safe, which she claims had been set aside for her.

Many Are Hurled Downhill.

Twenty-five picnickers riding on a dray and returning from the country at 10 o'clock at night were thrown out as a result of the rig running the horses down the steep hill of Fourth avenue east in Duluth, Minn. The brake refused to work. August Tida and William Clement were killed. Other members of the party sustained broken bones and more or less serious injuries.

Adolph Sutro's Estate.

Creditors of the estate of the late Adolph Sutro of San Francisco have been busy for several days making an investigation touching the condition of the property. It has been ascertained that the total indebtedness is a trifle over $700,000 and that the appraised value is more than three times that amount.

Rockefeller Buys Iron Mines.

J. D. Rockefeller has purchased iron mines on Taxada Island, B. C., which have been lying idle for want of capital. The produce of the mines will be shipped to the Everett smelter, in which Mr. Rockefeller is largely interested.

Canadian Police Commended.

Four hundred thousand dollars in bright yellow dust and 111 ragged and hungry miners from the Klondike gold fields arrived at Port Townsend, Wash., on the steam schooner Rival from St. Michael. The men are part of the passengers who came down the Yukon river from Dawson City on the steamer Monarch. The $400,000 is about equally distributed among the miners, but all express the opinion that the country is greatly overdone and cannot support one-third of the men already there, to say nothing of large numbers daily arriving, and already many are beginning to feel the pangs of hunger. Wages, which heretofore have been from $1.50 to $2 an hour, have dropped to 70 cents, and there is not employment for more than one out of ten. The general opinion is that the approach of cold weather will be a signal for a general exodus from Dawson City and a rush to civilization. Of all the strikes reported since June, 1897, not one has proved of value, and many claims have been listed at the mining exchange at Dawson City and can be bought for one ounce of dust and upward. Old timers speak in the highest terms of the Canadian police, and say that they maintain the best order in Dawson City, but strongly denounce the action of local officers in showing favoritism in locating and recording claims to such an extent that newcomers stand no show of even securing claims, though they may be the discoverers. Much sickness is reported and many deaths have occurred from an epidemic of dysentery.

VESSELS IN COLLISION.

Duncan and Coralia Strike Each Other in Lake St. Clair.

The steamer Maggie Duncan was in collision with the Mutual liner Coralia in Lake St. Clair. Both the vessels were bound down, and just after leaving the canal the captain of the Coralia claims he blew two whistles to pass to the port of the Duncan, which was towing two barges. An answer of two whistles giving permission to pass on that side was received from the Duncan, and the Coralia proceeded. When abreast of the Duncan the tow lines between the two schooners parted. It is claimed that there was no one forward on the Duncan, but that when the captain came forward he put his wheel to starboard, instead of turning the other way. As a result the Duncan struck the Coralia just forward of the after starboard gangway near the engine space.

KILLED IN A WRECK.

Trolley Car Jumps the Track and Causes a Serious Accident.

The other evening when the Heptasoph picnickers were returning from Cascade Park to Newcastle, Pa., one man, Cooney Hitchue of McKeesport, Pa., was killed and several injured in a trolley car wreck. There were about 10,000 people in attendance at the picnic and on the return trip the New Castle traction trolley cars were crowded with passengers. As a train was rounding a curve the trailer jumped from the track in front of a train going in the opposite direction. Hitchue was horribly crushed and lived but twenty-five minutes. Among those injured James H. Wyant and 2-year-old son of McKeesport are badly cut and bruised, but will recover.

ST. LOUIS BROKER A SUICIDE.

Financial Difficulties Cause R. W. Golson to Take His Life.

R. W. Golson, a broker on the Merchants' Exchange at St. Louis, was found dead, lying across the graves of four of his children at Bellefontaine Cemetery. He had committed suicide with a dose of strychnine. Financial difficulties are thought to have been the cause of his act. When discovered Golson had been dead several hours. He leaves a widow and two children. Not long ago Golson was rated as worth over $100,000. Just prior to his death he traded more in bucket shops than on the floor of the exchange.

Lorain Hotel, Ohio, Burns.

At Lorain, O., fire completely destroyed the Central Hotel, the flames originating in the oilroom. The guests escaped in their night clothes without serious injury. Loss, $6,000.

LOSSES IN THE WAR.

SMALL NUMBER OF AMERICANS WERE KILLED.

Spain's Loss of Men Was Many Times What Ours Was, and She Has Parted with Much Valuable Property—Estimate of Losses in Both Armies.

Casualties Were Few.

Washington correspondence:

THE Army and Navy Departments are in possession of nearly complete lists of casualties on the American side, and of more of less accurate estimates of losses inflicted upon the Spaniards during the war, which lasted only 114 days. The double total is probably less than that of single battles in our civil war. The Spanish casualties are, of course, far greater than ours, but are difficult to estimate because of conflicting reports.

The first defenders of Spanish honor to fall in the war were undoubtedly killed at the bombardment of Matanzas, on April 27, the war having been declared by Congress to have commenced April 21. Shortly after this the cruiser New York fought some Spanish cavalry at Cabanas, thirty-eight miles west of Havana, without sustaining loss, and on May 1 Dewey won his world-famous victory off Manila, after stopping for breakfast when half way through. The loss on the Spanish side footed up 400 killed and over 600 wounded. The American casualties consisted of the wounding of six seamen.

The Vicksburg and the cutter Morrill engaged the Santa Clara batteries off Havana on May 7 without sustaining injury. Four days later came the fight in Cardenas harbor, in which the only American naval officer to be killed in the war met his death. The cruiser Wilmington, torpedo boat Winslow and gunboat Hudson had entered the harbor to attack some Spanish gunboats. In the fight a shell burst aboard the Winslow, killing Ensign Worth Bagley and four others. The Spanish losses in Cardenas included one medical officer, three sailors, two women, three children killed; wounded unknown.

The day of this skirmish was also the day on which the cruiser Marblehead, the gunboat Nashville and the auxiliary cruiser Windom attacked some Spanish troops behind improvised breastworks at Cienfuegos. One seaman was killed and another was so badly hurt that he died later. Captain Maynard and Lieut. Cameron Winslow, both of the Nashville, were slightly, and Robert Volts of the Nashville, Herman W. Kuchneisted, John Davis and John T. Doran of the Marblehead, and William Levery were seriously wounded. Many other Americans received trifling wounds. The Spaniards lost 300 killed and many hundred wounded.

Sampson's bombardment of San Juan de Porto Rico, an engagement satisfactory in its results, took place the next day, the Iowa, Indiana, New York, Terror, Amphitrite, Detroit, Montgomery, Wampatuck and Porter joining in the attack. The enemy responded with a heavy fire, killing Frank Widemark, a seaman on the New York, and the gunner's mate on the Amphitrite, and wounding seven. The ships were uninjured. The Spanish governor general reported the casualties in the town as eight killed and 34 wounded.

A second minor attack on Cardenas took place, in which seven Spaniards were reported wounded, and on May 31 Commodore Schley bombarded the Santiago fortifications, firing on Morro Castle, La Zocapa and Punta Gorda. Our forces were unscathed and the Spanish loss was reported heavy. On June 6 Sampson took a turn at the forts, silencing them without sustaining loss. On the Spanish side Col. Ordonez, Capt. Sanchez, Lieut. Yrizar and Officers Perez and Garcia were wounded. An ensign and five sailors were killed and twenty wounded.

Five American ships bombarded Caimanera, in the bay of Guantanamo, on June 7, and forty marines went ashore there from the Oregon three days later. Then they were joined by 600 more marines from the troopship Panther, under Lieut. Col. Huntington, and the Marblehead, Vixen and Dolphin ran up the bay to fire on the Spanish earthworks. The first battle of the marines took place June 11, when Assistant Surgeon John Blair Gibbs of Richmond, Va., Sergt. Charles H. Smith and two privates were killed. The Spanish loss is unknown. In the next two or three days' fighting, in which the marines did gallant work, Sergt. Maj. Henry Goode and Private Tauman were killed and five privates wounded. There were also some Cuban casualties.

Sampson's next bombardment of Santiago resulted in the killing of an officer and three men and the wounding of an officer and twenty men. On June 13 the Yankee fought a Spanish gunboat off Cienfuegos, and Solon P. Kennedy of New York was wounded. Three days later the Spanish general, Joval, was killed in a naval attack on Santiago. A gunner was killed at target practice on the Yankee by an exploding shell. Then Shafter effected a landing in Cuba and moved upon Siboney, and the army took up its share of suffering and danger. The daring and famous charge of the rough riders and the Tenth cavalry and First cavalry on Sevilla Heights, near Siboney, when 1,000 Americans fought twice their number, took place on June 24. The killed included: Capt. Allyn K. Capron, Sergt. Hamilton Fish, Sergt. Marcus D. Russell, all of the rough riders; Capt. Maximiliano, Corp. White of the Tenth cavalry, Corp. Doherty and ten privates. Maj. Crow, Lieut. Col. Alexander O. Brodie, Capt. McClintock and Lieut. Thomas of the rough riders, and Maj. Bell, Capt. Knox and Lieut. Byram of the First cavalry were wounded, as were forty-six other soldiers. The Spaniards lost 285 killed and wounded.

The Texas shelled the Santiago batteries on June 22, when a six-inch shell killed Apprentice Frank E. Blakely and wounded seven seamen. Shortly afterward Thomas Levalley of White Plains, N. Y., died in the Key West hospital of appendicitis caused by overexertion while serving on the Yankee before Guantanamo and Santiago.

Casualties at Santiago.

In the advance on Santiago of July 1, 2 and 3, there were killed 21 officers, 205 enlisted men and 77 officers, and 1,197 enlisted men were wounded. At that time 84 enlisted men, of whom many have since been found, were reported missing.

In the destruction of Cervera's fleet on July 3, Chief Yeoman George H. Ellis of the Brooklyn was the only American killed. Three were slightly wounded on the Texas. The Spanish loss has been estimated at 350 killed and 160 wounded, including Admiral Cervera himself and Capt. Eulate. Besides this, in the sinking of the Spanish cruiser Reina Mercedes, Capt. Acosta, five seamen and 21 marines were killed, and a lieutenant and 11 men wounded. In the subsequent mutiny of Spanish prisoners on the Harvard six of them were killed and 15 wounded. The loss with the Spanish cruiser Alphonso XII. is unknown.

Winthrop Chanler of New York, a brother of Col. Wm. Astor Chanler, was wounded in the right arm on July 3, while landing with a force of 25 rough riders and some Cubans from the auxiliary gunboat Peoria, at Palo Alto.

Gen. Miles, after effecting his landing in Porto Rico, at Guanica, has had such a gratifying time of it that there were practically no American casualties. Capt. Gihon Barrett and four men, all Sixth Massachusetts, were wounded in a fight before Yauco, where four Spaniards were found dead and several wounded. On Aug. 6 eight privates were wounded at Guayama. One Spaniard was killed and two wounded. Five men were wounded at Asomanta, Lieut. J. P. Haines, Fourth artillery, and two privates were wounded and a corporal killed. One man was killed and an officer and 15 men wounded near Hormigueros.

In the fight at Manila July 31, the Spanish loss was estimated at 300 killed and 1,000 wounded, and we lost nine killed, nine seriously wounded, including Capt. Reinholdt Richter, and 38 slightly wounded.

The last casualty in the navy was the death of Emanuel Konlouris, a coal passer on the gunboat Bancroft, who was killed during a recent engagement with Spanish riflemen at a point of land jutting out into Cortes bay.

Corporal Swanson was killed by a shell in Gen. Wilson's advance in Porto Rico. Capt. Lee and Lieut. Maines and three privates were wounded. The Spanish loss has not been reported.

Total Losses in Both Armies.

Gen. Vara del Rey of the Spanish forces was one of those killed at El Caney. Gen. Toral declined to estimate the total Spanish losses there. It is safe to say that their loss in killed in battle on land and sea is several times our loss in dead. According to the estimate at hand the navy has lost: Killed, 1 officer and 18 men (including Cadet Boardman, accidentally shot at Cape San Juan Aug. 10); wounded, 3 officers and 40 men. The army has lost: Killed, 23 officers and 213 men; wounded, 87 officers and 1,316 men. Total American loss, 24 officers and 249 men killed, 90 officers and 1,356 men wounded.

The estimating of the number of American soldiers who lost their lives through sickness in the war is a more difficult matter, because of the lack of complete reports from all hospitals. At present the Navy Department has no sufficient data on the matter. As to the army, 250 deaths is a conservative estimate.

The land that Spain must add to men and ships in her column of losses includes Cuba's 43,319 square miles. Porto Rico contains 3,550 square miles, and is the healthiest of all the West Indies. Guam, or Guahan, is the southernmost and largest of the Ladrone group. If we select it as our perquisite in that locality we will get a fertile piece of ground 100 miles in circuit, thickly wooded, and provided with a couple of Spanish forts and a roadstead. The Philippines have an aggregate area of 114,400 square miles. We have taken thirty or forty transports in the course of the war.

WANT TO BE ANNEXED.

A Strong Feeling Among Spaniards in Cuba for Union with Us.

A correspondent of the New York Herald who visited Havana since the signing of peace articles between the United States and Spain says that the sentiment of Spaniards in the capital is in favor of the annexation of Cuba to the United States. They realize that if a steady and strong government is not founded it will be very difficult for them to remain in the country, representing as they do the wealthy element. They prefer the idea of annexation to any other kind of rule, for they believe it would be the only thing which would guarantee order and the protection of all kinds of interests. They state that a government established under any other conditions would not last very long.

The Cuban element, representing financial interests and having social standing, who have taken no active part in warfare, have similar ideas and believe also that any other government which might be established in Cuba in which certain radical elements would participate would precipitate great disturbances and render impossible all efforts for pacification by the Government. Among many of the plain people the feeling of annexation is strong. "We want to belong to the United States and not to the Cubans," many of them said to the correspondent.

HAVANA BARS AMERICANS.

Officials Refuse Landing to Boat's Passengers.

Officials in the city of Havana are apprehensive of trouble and refuse to allow Americans to enter the city or the residents to hold mass meetings. The schooner Ellen M. Adams, from Key West, with a cargo of potatoes and onions, unloaded and was ordered away before the goods had been sold. They were consigned to a Havana firm. Its passengers were prevented from landing. Feeling against Americans in the ranks of that part of the soldiery favorable to Weyler is at such a high pitch that it is as yet unsafe to land. There is great suffering for food among the poor, but officials say there is food enough left to last two months.

PEACE AGENTS NAMED.

Spain Selects Blanco and Macias to Head Commission.

The following peace commissioners have been decided on by the Spanish Government:

For Cuba—Gens. Blanco and Castellanos and Admiral Monterola.

For Porto Rico—Gens. Macias and Ortega and Admiral Vallarino.

Senor Leon y Castillo will be chairman of the Paris commission. Senor Moret, who has been prominently mentioned for the commission, will not be appointed because of the hostility of the press.

Farmer Boys Not the Most Rugged.

In one of the soldier boy letters from San Francisco it is recounted that a company of farmer boys recently arrived at Camp Merritt and were examined for enlistment. Very much to the surprise of the officers, who regarded the men as the strongest and most rugged looking of any in camp, 20 out of 98 were rejected on account of heart disease and rupture. The examining surgeon advanced the theory that farmer boys were put at heavy work too young.

Dewey Bombards the City and Spaniards Surrender.

AUGUSTI HAS FLED.

American Troops Under Merritt Now Hold Philippine Capital.

Consul General Wildman at Hong Kong Cables the News of Manila's Fall—Spaniards Capitulate Unconditionally—Spaish Captain General Escapes to Hong Kong on a German Cruiser—Officers of the Kaiser's Vessel Refuse to Explain Their Remarkable Action

Hong Kong special:

Manila has fallen. The city surrendered unconditionally to Admiral Dewey and Gen. Merritt Saturday. The American fleet and land batteries opened fire on Manila Saturday morning. The Spanish resistance was feeble and the Americans were soon in possession of the city. The surrender of Manila was demanded Friday. Notice was given that the bombardment would begin the next day. Captain General Augusti immediately fled, escaping on the German cruiser Kaiserin Augusta, which sailed before the bombardment was concluded. Admiral Dewey demanded the surrender of Manila in an hour. The Spaniards declined to surrender and Dewey began the bombardment and the Spaniards hoisted a white flag.

The Spanish consul at Hong Kong had not notified the Spanish authorities at Manila of the signing of the peace protocol. It is believed that the reason why the Spanish consul did not send the news of peace to Manila was to give the Spanish authorities there a chance to play for time by denying the authenticity of the news sent from here by the American consul by the steamer Australian.

The surrender of Manila, coming as it does, furnishes a fitting conclusion of the drama of war, which began with the destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila harbor on the 1st of May last. Like the battle of New Orleans, fought by Andrew Jackson on the 8th of January, 1815, it came after the suspension of hostilities between the contending powers, but this does not invalidate the surrender. Dewey and Merritt simply anticipated the protocol, which provided for the occupation of the city by the Americans during peace negotiations. No formal turning over of Manila to their forces is necessary now.

Details of the taking of the city by American forces, so far as received, show that Admiral Dewey gave Gen. Augusti an hour in which to surrender at the time of the last demand, made on Saturday. Gen. Augusti refused to comply. The bombardment, which began at 9:30 a. m., was continued for two hours, and then the Americans stormed the trenches, sweeping all before them.

Those within the walls attempted no resistance. The First Colorado volunteers stormed the outer trenches and drove the Spaniards into the second line of defenses. Then the American troops swept on, driving all the Spaniards into the inner fortifications, where the Spanish commander, seeing that further resistance was useless, hoisted the white flag and surrendered. The Spaniards in the trenches probably numbered 3,000 men. The American attacking force numbered 10,000, and the Americans were better armed, better trained and in better condition. The foreign fleets watched the bombardment with acute interest.

The American warships engaged were the Olympia, Petrel, Raleigh, McCulloch, Boston, Monterey, Charleston and Baltimore. The Spanish trench extended around Manila at a distance of from two to four miles from the walled city, forming a circle ten miles in circumference, and it was impossible, the Spaniards say, to hold so long a line against the American attack. Admiral Dewey and Gen. Merritt, it is reported, had issued orders to spare all except the armed defenses of the city and consequently the town is understood to have been but little damaged.

The Stars and Stripes were raised over the city at 5:40 o'clock in the afternoon. In the bay Admiral Dewey's fleet thundered a national salute and the formal surrender of the Spaniards was completed. The surrender includes 6,500 men, 12,000 stands of arms and an immense amount of ammunition. The Spaniards were allowed the honors of war. We captured 7,000 prisoners, 12,000 rifles and unlimited ammunition. Gen. Merritt has assumed command, restoring the civil laws. Eight Americans were killed and fifty wounded. The Spanish loss was much greater. The ships were not struck.

AGUINALDO REBUKED.

General Anderson Deals Severely with Would-Be Dictator.

Gen. Anderson has been forced to remind the dictator, Emilio Aguinaldo, of his true commission and the nature of the rights the United States has won. Aguinaldo, once a humble ally, who begged Admiral Dewey for passage to Luzon Island, is now proud, haughty and autocratic, and burns with the ambition to some day rule at Manila, either as military president or dictator. The hope makes him jealous of the Americans.

SPANIARDS FALL IN BATTLE.

Twenty-four of Enemy Killed in Porto Rico.

Twenty-four Spaniards were killed and fifty wounded in the engagement with the Americans under Col. Burke in the valley of the Rio Grande. Col. Burke's men were descending the hills into the valley, when the band of 1,500 Spaniards, who were in retreat, attacked them. The battle raged half an hour before the enemy fled in disorder, leaving their dead and wounded on the field. Col. Burke learned of the signing of the protocol after the engagement had been fought.

TAPS.

Over the hills, where the sun went down
In a dying glory of red and gold,
Was a swath of crimson, where death had mown
His grist in the chapparal—stiff and cold—
Grand physiques for the grave's dank mould—
Ah, that the grave should such enfold!
The reaper hath reaped what the sword hath sown,
And will hold till the scroll of time be rolled!

Over the hills that they stormed that day,
Man and man like a solid wall,
Knowing no thought but the one, "obey,"
Following orders, that is all—
While the gaps close up as the heroes fall,
And the black smoke curls like a funeral pall
Over the dead that shall live for aye,
Though they sleep till the reveille's waking call.

Dotting the hills where the fight was won,
Poor rude mounds where the dead men sleep;
Hot is the glare of the tropic sun,
But cold they lie in their slumber deep,
Knowing not of the ones who weep,
Heedless of fame that their names shall reap,
Resting awhile after work is done,
Till the sunbeams glint where the shadows creep.

How Bingham Missed His Chance

"You are working too hard, old man," said Jack Bingham's friends, one after another, as they saw his ruddy cheeks turn pale, his springy, elastic tread become dull and dragging, and heard less and less often his cheery if not exactly tuneful whistle.

But to all their good advice and earnest protests Jack turned a deaf ear, smiled a little, and kept at his tasks the steadier.

None of his friends properly appreciated Jack's unusual devotion to labor, for none of them knew its incentive—that he was in love. She was a dainty little thing, always admired by men and rather looked down upon and at the same time envied by her own sex; at home the pet of her parents and in society an imperious and exacting young belle. Just the kind of girl, in short, with whom it was the height of folly for Jack to be in love, and consequently the object of the most ardent adoration on his part.

Preserving a measure of clear-headedness even in his worship, Jack plainly realized that as the head of a household where economy was necessary his idol would prove a melancholy failure. Resolving, therefore, to earn enough money to prevent her from worrying as to ways and means, he worked early and late, steadily and hopefully. The copy he turned out was good in spite of its volume; his regular salary from his paper was increased, together with his duties; and his income from outside work reached an astonishing figure.

Still, the money did not come fast enough to suit the impatient lover, who thereupon began to worry and fret. Now the man who works with his brain sixteen hours a day, and worries and frets in addition, has not a long career of usefulness before him, be his motives what they may.

Jack's eyes gave way first. Specks and blurs floated in them, and through them jumped pains that drew his head down on his folded arms in spite of himself. His feet and hands grew heavy, as if his blood had turned to lead. Six months before he had gone up or down the office stairs in three jumps. Now they seemed to grow longer every day, and often he stopped half way with a queer little catch in his side. Presently the pain that gnawed at the back of his eyeballs refused to yield even to sleep. Then Jack grew afraid, but did not let his fear keep him from his work.

He was not sure of himself in those days, and adopted the precaution of reading over aloud whatever of importance he had written. One day it came about that as he read, his tongue seemed suddenly swollen and useless, and he could not utter the words his mind framed. He turned to his typewriter and placed, as he thought, the heading he desired on the article he had written but could not read.

When the foreman in the composing room saw "The Love of Ethel" introducing a column of interviews on the tariff, he laughed at first, and then, remembering Jack's looks of late, grew grave. Soon he made a pretext for consulting Jack—but not about the tariff article—and saw in a moment that the mischief was not caused by whiskey.

Soon the managing editor came and Jack was led away to a cab, babbling thickly about Ethel, his work and the money he had saved; money that proved a godsend in the long months that followed. For Jack was an orphan, his friends were careless, happy go-lucky bohemians, and brain fever is an illness that demands the most skillful of physicians and the most careful of nurses. So when Jack came to himself again, very pale and thin and quiet, he knew that his precious store must be drained low.

That troubled him little, however, compared with his torturing doubt of Ethel. Why did he not hear from her? Why did not she come to him now that he was so much better? The kindly doctor had noticed Jack's trouble; by a quiet inquiry had discovered what probably lay at the bottom of it; and so had an answe ready for Jack when the latter screwed up his courage to ask for Ethel. She had been as ill as he, they told him, and like him was now slowly but surely recovering. And Jack must not worry about her in the least, for the doctor would bring him news from her every day.

So Jack kept obediently quiet among his pillows, listening intently for the doctor's footsteps, and flushing like a girl when the news was good, as, somehow, it always was. One day the brown-eyed nurse brought him a great bunch of roses, bought at the price of her week's salary, and told him that Ethel had sent them. When she saw how Jack buried his face in the roses and kissed their petals lingeringly, as if they were Ethel's lips, a wave of angry hate surged in the nurse's heart for the girl who could play with such a love, forget it and forsake it. The wave, receding, left its traces in the trembling of the cool white hands that smoothed so deftly his hot pillows and brushed so gently his thick, wavy hair.

But not a word escaped her lips, and Jack's evil day might have been put off indefinitely had it not been for Evans, the blunderer. When Jack grew well enough to see his friends for a few minutes at a time Evans was one of the first to call, and with his usual ill luck plunged directly into condolences. Jack did not quite understand at first, but Evans, blundering ahead, soon made it clear to the invalid that Ethel had not been ill; but that, on the contrary, while the issue of his illness had been still doubtful, she had thrown him over and had announced her engagement to another.

After that Jack went back into the valley of the shadow and knocked at the very gates of death. But the doctor and the nurse, working desperately together, pulled him away and led him back into a gray sort of lightless life. Whereat he was not so grateful as he ought to have been. And when he found that he must get well, whether he would or no, he announced that he was going back to work at once. The doctor remonstrated, commanded, begged, in vain, and the shy pleadings of the nurse had no effect.

Back he crept to his old haunts, a thin, pale ghost of his former self. The young fellows who were doing his work looked at him with a pity that was akin to fear and asked themselves: "Shall we, too, come to that?" For they thought that work had caused his illness, and that illness had made him what he was.

His old desk had long since been in the possession of another, but the proprietor, when Jack asked for a place, gave orders at once that he should be employed at whatever he was able to do. The managing editor, eyeing him dubiously, but recalling the brilliance that had once been his, turned him over to the city editor. And the city editor, whom Jack had had instructed in the rudiments, did not forget the debt he owed, but placed "Bingham" opposite the easiest assignments in his book until the staff would have risen in open revolt had the object of this favoritism been any one else.

As it was, Jack himself was the first to complain. Banquets and balls, receptions and races, lectures, sermons and interviews, quickly cloyed the appetite of the newspaper man who had been used to the strong meat of journalism for his daily diet.

"Give me something with blood in it," Jack said to the city editor one day. "I'm tired of this woman's work. When I was on earth before they were not afraid to send me out after big stories once in a while."

"It's for you we're afraid and not for the story, Jack, and you know it," expostulated the man on the city desk. "Even the Kid believes that no man on the paper can work up a sensation with you. But you're not strong enough yet for a rough job, Jack. Look in the glass and see for yourself. Just take it easy for a while longer, old man, and trust us to work you hard enough by-and-by to make up."

The "story with blood in it" came sooner than any one expected. The very next night Jack chanced to be alone in the reporters' room when the city editor came to the door and cast a worried glance around.

"No one else here, Jack?" he asked. "Then you will have to go. I hate to send you, for it's a hard trip, but we'll help you out all we can. They have just telephoned me from the union station that there's a big smash at Mad River. A wreck train will go out in ten minutes. Catch it on your life. Rush in a first story for an extra and then plan to do the introduction for the later editions. I'll get more men out to you just as soon as possible. They will report to you and you can lay out the work for them. You know what to do better than I can tell you. There's a cab at the door. And take as much care of yourself as you can."

Before the last words were out of the city editor's mouth Jack was half way down the stairs, pulling on his overcoat as he went. His nerves were tingling with that subtle elation of conflict which newspaper men know as well as do soldiers on the verge of battle and sportsmen in sight of big game. He whistled under his breath as the nighthawk cab jolted and jounced him over the stones to the station, and when no other reporter appeared to claim a place on the wreck train he even hummed a tune, something he had not done for months.

As the train rushed along through the night Jack learned all that the railroad men could tell him of the disaster. An extra freight and a through express had collided on a curved embankment which skirted the banks of a river. In the strong light of a summer day the landscape was a picture of beauty; the long sweep of the black tracks through the green valley and by their side the clear water of the stream rippling over bright, yellow sands.

The scene Jack looked upon that winter's night was as fascinating in its wierd horror as was that of summer in its vivid coloring. Out of a clouded sky the moon struggled in vain to pierce the heavy, snow-laden darkness. Upon the track and tumbled on either side engines and cars were piled in huge, formless heaps. Stifled shrieks and screams sounded from the depths of the black masses. Here and there the gleaming lanterns of the trainmen darted like will-'o-the-wisps, frequently converging upon one point, where lay a torch-guarded row of the dead.

Suddenly, while Jack strained his eyes to pierce the gloom, a little tongue of flame leaped into the darkness.

"The wreck's afire!" cried the railroad man at his side, and there came as if in answer from the chaos a shrill cry of forture.

The fire, leaping from point to point, licked greedily at the dry wood of the splintered cars, and again the piercing shriek made Jack shiver in spite of himself.

Clambering over the mass of wreckage in the direction from which the screams seemed to come, he found almost at the bottom of the great pile, a woman, saved from instant death by a freak of fate but pinned down and cramped until movement was impossible. She had swooned at the crash of the collision, apparently, and had been brought back to consciousness by the heat of the advancing flames.

One glance and Jack knew the face. "Ethel!"

He reeled as he cried the name and the woman shrank back even towards death at the sound of his voice. In a moment the weakness passed and he attacked the imprisoning pile. Help came from all directions and slowly a way of escape was opened.

But the flames swept swiftly on, scorching the girl's delicate flesh, charring her golden hair and dragging from her shrieks of pain that tore the hearts of those who heard them. Jack's feverish strength increased with each recurring cry, and he pulled and lifted with a power that amazed his helpers and himself.

At last he reached her, held her in his arms for a single moment, then passed her back to willing hands. On the instant a piece of iron, its supports burned away, dropped from the overhanging pile and felled him in his tracks. They thought he was dead when, senseless, he was rescued. But presently, in an improvised farmhouse hospital, he came back to consciousness to find a flood of pale-gold hair covering his face, to feel the warm kiss of full lips on his bloodless ones and to hear a sweet voice say,—

"Jack! My Jack! It is Ethel. Don' you know me?"

If Jack had been physically stronger perhaps the barriers which long months of bitter contempt had raised would not have been so easily swept away. But as it was he whispered "My darling," and raised one arm weakly to fold about her neck. Afterwards he was very glad that he did for the truth came out little by little he learned that the fault was not Ethel's but her matchmaking mamma's, and that in the girl's own heart he had never been supplanted.

It was some months later, when Jack returned, hale and hearty, and with new hope in his soul, to his work, that the city editor said,—

"Too bad you had to miss your chance at the Mad River wreck, old man."

"Chance? What chance?" asked Jack, bewildered.

"Why, don't you remember that you were the only newspaper man on the spot? If you hadn't got knocked out we should have had the scoop of the year."

"By Jove! That's so," said Jack, regretfully. "And I had quite forgotten it."

At about the same time the doctor was saying to the brown-eyed nurse,—

"What a chance Bingham missed!"

"Chance for what?" she asked.

"For getting even with that girl, of course. Instead of forgiving and forgetting, he ought to have turned his back on her and married you. He owed a great deal to you and he knew it."

The nurse moved quickly away, but not until the doctor had seen that the brown eyes filled with tears at his words. He had learned what he wished to know, but there was a pain in his own heart because of it.—Waverley Magazine.

A Typical American Patriot.

Of this class, so preeminently children of their time, and of the great social forces then stirring into life, Daniel Morgan was a most typical example. Born in New Jersey, the son of a poor Welsh emigrant, he began life as a day laborer. Drifting out to the frontier he became a wagoner, then a soldier in the Braddock expedition, was brutally flogged under the savage military code of the time for striking a companion, kept on in spite of this hideous wrong, and so distinguished hmself in battle that he was promoted from the ranks and given a commission. Desperately wounded, he escaped from the Indians in a hot skirmish, clinging blindly to the neck of his frightened runaway horse. So he lived on the frontier, reckless, fighting, drinking, gaming, saved only from destruction by his gigantic frame and hard head. A fortunate marrage turned him from his wild life and brought his really fine and gentle nature uppermost. He settled down in Virginia, and although he fought in Pontiac's and Lord Dunmore's wars, he became a steady, hard working planter. When the Revolution came only one side was possible to such a man—he was the friend of Washington, the way was open to ability, and his time had come. With his riflemen raised in Virginia he had distinguished himself in almost every action from Boston to Monmouth, and had been taken prisoner in the desperate night assault at Quebec. He had been especially conspicuous in the Burgoyne campaign, playing a very large part in the fighting which culminated in the surrender of Saratoga, where the British commander told him that he commanded "the finest regiment in the world." Congress did not, however, seem impressed in the same way. In the promotions so lavishly given to foreigners and favorites, Morgan was passed over, and at last withdrew in disgust to his home in Virginia. But when he heard of the defeat at Camden he at once said that this was no time for personal feelings or resentments, and went directly to Hillsborough to join the defeated Gates.—J Scribner's Magazine.

Personal Description of the Queen of Spain.

A newspaper correspondent offers this personal description of Maria Christina, Regent of Spain: A pale, austere face, cold and changeless as marble; features of the Austrian type, with full lips and projecting mouth; blonde hair, with no tinge of warmth, what the French call ashen-blonde; pale, steel-blue eyes, with sparse lashes, and unlighted with soft or tender gleams; small patrician hands, wrists, and feet; a figure graceful and charming in its proud carriage, especially fitted for an equestrienne, and she rides frequently.

MEMBERS OF THE CUBAN AND PORTO RICAN COMMISSIONS.

STATE SENATOR WALL KILLED.

Murdered at Staunton, Ill., by a Man Named Otto Mattias.

State Senator H. W. Wall was shot and instantly killed near Staunton, Ill., Tuesday evening by Otto Mattias, who escaped after the murder. Senator Wall discovered a horse belonging to August Schadlich in his field and went out to capture it and take it home. The animal was chased into an orchard near the Schadlich house. While Mr. Wall was running after the animal Mrs. Schadlich came out into the field and a quarrel started between the two.

The woman got infuriated and declared she would get a gun and kill Wall. Suiting her action to her word, she entered the house and returned a moment later carrying an old muzzle-loading shotgun. When within a few feet of Mr. Wall she pointed the weapon at him and endeavored to fire, but failed. At that Wall caught hold of the gun with one hand, still holding the horse with the other. Just then Mattias, who boards with the Schadlichs, came out of the house and ordered Wall and his men off his premises. Mrs. Schadlich told them that they could not take the animals off the property. Wall insisted, telling Mattias, who took an aggressive part in the controversy, that he wanted to make a case against the Schadlichs and if he was in the wrong they could have redress through the regular channels of the law. Mrs. Schadlich jerked the gun out of Wall's hands at this juncture and stepped back as if to shoot him, but Mattias grabbed it away from her, and, raising it to his shoulder, took deliberate aim and fired. The charge of buckshot struck Wall in the right side of the head, blowing away one side of the skull and killing him instantly. Mrs. Schadlich was arrested.

Senator Wall had served several terms in the State Senate, and was one of the leading Democrats of the State. He is well known among politicians all over Illinois. He was senior member of the banking firm of Wall & Panhorst of Staunton.

KILLS WIFE AND SELF.

Former Supervisor of Bureau County, Ill., Commits Murder and Suicide.

John Searls, a wealthy farmer, murdered his young wife and then killed himself at their home west of Peru, Ill., the other night. Searls' son, Grant, who lives close by, went to his father's home at 7 o'clock the next morning, and finding the doors locked, he forced an entrance. In the bedroom he found his stepmother in a pool of blood on the floor, with her throat cut, and near by his father with a similar wound in his neck. The rooms showed signs of a terrible struggle. A large pocketknife was found clasped in the husband's hand. The murdered woman was Searls' second wife. They were married about a year ago and had never lived happily. Searls was very wealthy and had been a supervisor of Bureau County for a great many years. He was 67 years old and his wife just half that age. She had endeavored ever since their marriage to have her husband make a will leaving her all his property. He refused and frequent quarrels resulted.

FARMER BUYS SILVER MINE.

Gives Up His Money and Signs Notes that He Will Be Forced to Pay.

A sensational silver-brick swindle has been developed, in which the principal victim is Smith H. Knott of Normal, Ill. Knott, who is aged 63, is a retired farmer. It seems certain that he has been plucked to the tune of $25,000 or $30,000, if not more. Knott was visiting in El Paso, Texas, recently, and was associated there with M. Sieberling and his four sons of Peoria County, Illinois. By means of a fraudulent assay he was induced to invest in a valueless silver mine. Knott gave $10,000 cash and notes. The notes are now coming to Normal and Bloomington for collection. Knott is seeking to stop payment, but they have got into innocent third parties' hands. Knott is worth $60,000 to $75,000, owning a 300-acre farm in Champaign County and valuable property at Normal.

DRIVEN FROM THEIR HOMES.

Houses of Nonunion Miners at Pana, Ill., Are Wrecked.

The residence of George Snyder, who has been working at the Springfield mine at Pana, Ill., was attacked and partially demolished by unknown parties one night recently, and Snyder and family driven away. Snyder created great excitement by wildly running half naked through the streets armed with revolvers seeking the perpetrators. Other non-union miners' homes were also served likewise. Extra police were on patrol, but did not succeed in detecting the guilty parties.

HAY IS SECRETARY OF STATE.

Ambassador Accepts the Appointment to Succeed Day.

Ambassador Hay at London has accepted the office of Secretary of State. Col. Hay was born in Salem, Ind., in 1838. His father was a physician and his grandfather was one of the heroes of the revolution. After graduating at Brown College he went, at the age of 21, to Spring field, Ill., where he entered the office of Abraham Lincoln and began to study law. When Lincoln was made President he selected Col. Hay as one of his private secretaries. Hay was with Lincoln as secretary from 1861 to 1865, except for a brief service in the army, where he attained the rank of major and brevet colonel. When Lincoln's death ended his duties as secretary Col. Hay was sent to Madrid, and later to Paris as secretary of legation, and still later was charge d'affaires at Vienna. Returning to America he wrote editorials for the New York Tribune and acted as editor-in-chief during Whitelaw Reid's absence in Europe. It was while he was on the Tribune that Col. Hay wrote his "Pike County Ballads," robust, hearty pictures of Western life that gained an immediate popularity. More pretentious is "Castilian Days," a work of great literary merit. In 1875 Col. Hay removed to Cleveland, where he entered quite actively into political life, and upon the election of Rutherford B. Hayes to the presidency he became assistant Secretary of State. Since then he has made his home in Washington, his residence at the capital being one of the most elegant in that city.

SIX MEN HONORED.

Veterans of Land and Sea to Be Military Commissioners.

Under the terms of the peace protocol Spain is to evacuate Cuba and Porto Rico "immediately," but this is not to be interpreted literally. To arrange the details of the evacuation and the displacement of Spanish troops by American is no simple undertaking. How soon the soldiers under Blanco are to be deported and what, not being prisoners of war, they are entitled to carry away with them are matters reserved for the decision of the joint military commissions. The American commissioners have been named by the President. For Cuba Maj. Gen. Wade, Rear Admiral Sampson and Maj. Gen. Butler are selected, while Maj. Gen. Brooke, Rear Admiral Schley and Brig. Gen. Gordon are to serve in Porto Rico.

All these commissioners are to meet at Washington and receive explicit instructions from the President. While the problem of civil government in the Spanish West Indian possessions to be surrendered is wholly independent and receiving the attention of the President and his advisers, the military commissions will be charged with the provision for the maintenance of law and order during the period occupied by the evacuation. This will obviously complicate their task.

COLLAPSE OF A GRAND STAND.

Twenty-eight Persons Suffer More or Less Serious Injuries.

At the old settlers' reunion at Cissna Park, Ill., the other afternoon the grand stand collapsed, seriously injuring twenty-eight people. The building was a temporary affair, made of inferior material. It was eighty-nine feet long, with ten tiers of seats, and it is said over 2,000 people were crowded into it for the purpose of witnessing the baseball game between the Chicago Unions and the Danville baseball team. The collapse occurred during the third inning. Six women and three men sustained broken limbs and three women had their arms fractured.

Notes of Current Events.

An American cable will be laid to Porto Rico at once.

The corn crop of Nebraska, improved by rains, will yield about $25,000,000.

Mrs. Margaret Fallon, buried recently at King's Ferry, N. Y., was said to be 117 years old.

Joseph Leiter, the Chicago wheat plunger, in the final round-up of his affairs, lost $10,000,000.

At Walla Walla, State of Washington, the thermometer registered 113 degrees in the shade one day recently.

Denmark has placed the seaport of Copenhagen in a state of military efficiency, in fear of a conflict between England and Russia.

While under the influence of whisky, Toll Hodge, a farmer, living near Richmond, Ky., fell from his horse and broke his neck.

Adolph Sutro, multi-millionaire, philanthropist, ex-Mayor of San Francisco and creator of the Sutro Tunnel, began life as a peddler.

The list of postoffices in the United States now includes Hobson, Va.; Sigsbee, Ark.; Dewey, N. C.; Sampson, Fla., and Manila, Ky.

REDUCE THE ARMY.

War Managers Decide to Muster Out Many Soldiers.

The President has decided to muster 40,000 volunteers out of service. He believes he will have all the soldiers he needs without them, and their discharge now, instead of a few months hence, will save several million dollars. The men who are to be sent home are to be selected from those who enlisted under the second call and those who have seen service. None of the men now in the Philippines and Porto Rico will be released, for if they were others would have to be sent to take their places.

Later on a good many men will have to be sent to Cuba. Gen. Lee thinks about 40,000 will be needed. Fifteen or twenty thousand more men should be sent to Manila to provide against contingencies. But there are many thousands of volunteers at Jacksonville and other camps, and in a comparatively short time the regulars now at Montauk Point will have regained their health and will be ready to take the field in the Philippines, if necessary, or do garrison duty in Cuba. The military advisers of the President have assured him that he will have troops enough to meet all contingencies even if he lets 40,000 go.

SICK LEFT TO DIE.

Scenes of Horror on Fever-Freighted Transports.

The transport Saguranca arrived at quarantine off New York with 300 officers and enlisted men of the army from Santiago who are emaciated and broken with fevers. The tale of the suffering of these men since they left Santiago seems almost incredible. They were shipped in transports from Cuba on sick leave without any provision having been made for medical attention. In that neglected condition they made the trip to Tampa bay and there they were detained eleven days, during which neither doctors nor medicine were sent to their relief. Several died aboard ship while being detained at quarantine off Egmont Key. When it seemed as if death would rid the whole of the transports of their bothersome passengers news of the deplorable state of affairs reached Gen. Coppinger at Tampa. He immediately ordered that all the sick be put aboard the Seguranca and sent to New York. The placing of the sick aboard the Seguranca, which had been hastily but fully supplied with proper food, clear water, medicines and doctors, was in the nature of a rescue.

PERISH BY THE HUNDREDS.

Spaniards Die at Santiago Too Fast for the Cremation Force.

At Santiago the bodies of the dead Spaniards continue to be cremated. Over 700 have been burned so far. Monday afternoon seventy were burned. Over two rails a dozen bodies were stretched and across them another dozen, and about thirty corpses were stacked in an immense funeral pile ten high. The pile was then saturated with kerosene and the torch applied. Around the pile lay twenty-two coffins containing corpses in a state of decomposition. Altogether about seventy unburied and unconsumed bodies were there. The stench was terrible. These seventy corpses represent two days' dead from the Spanish camp. The danger to the population from the stench, the presence of the buzzards, vultures and flies is incalculable.

TO DISBAND THE CUBANS.

Americans Decide Fate of Garcia's Army at Santiago.

A secret meeting was held at the palace in Santiago between the commanding officers of the American army and the Cuban leaders. Gen. Garcia, it is said, was present. The information obtained is to the effect that it was resolved to disband the Cuban army and that the United States should pay the men off. This involves the expenditure of $15,000,000, but it is most important to the prosperity of the island, whose wealth is entirely agricultural; nobody, planter or farmer, daring to cultivate his land while insurgent bands are in the field raiding and burning.

MASSACRE IN PORTO RICO.

Spaniards Fall Upon Women and Children and Slay Them with Machetes.

Six Porto Ricans, accompanied by a priest, arrived at Coamo from Sinles, thirty miles northwest of that place. They had walked all the way across the mountains. They reported that Spanish soldiers, crazed by liquor, came from Maniti to Cisles Saturday. An improvised American flag had been raised on the plaza. The sight of it so enraged the Spaniards that they attacked with machetes all the men, women and children they could find. They killed or wounded about ninety persons.

REBELS ATTACK MERRITT.

Reported that Aguinaldo Turned Against the Americans.

It was reported in Hong Kong that the United States troops at Manila had an encounter with the rebel forces under Aguinaldo. The insurgents, upon whom restrictions had been placed by Maj. Gen. Merritt, are said to have mutinied at not being permitted to have any share in the surrender of the city. They are said to have attacked the Americans in the the trenches.

FROM THE FRONT.

Lieut. Hobson is constantly haunted by female admirers.

All submarine mines have been removed from New York harbor.

Francis Murphy, the well-known temperance advocate, has been appointed chaplain of the Fifth Pennsylvania regiment.

Under the personal direction of Admiral Dewey the navy yard, arsenal, forts and barracks at Cavite have been re-established.

The people of the Isle of Pines are starving, and the report that they have been furnishing Cuba with food is thus proven false.

The correspondence between Admiral Sampson and Gen. Shafter before Santiago has been made public.

Spanish officers surrendered at Santiago will be allowed to take their wives and children back to Spain at the expense of the United States.

A telegram from Newport News says it is rumored that the cruiser Minneapolis, which is at the Norfolk navy yard, will go to the Philippines.

The cruiser Montgomery, the monitors Amphitrite and Puritan, from Key West, and the tug Leyden, from Guantanamo, have gone to Porto Rico.

Gen. Merriam, commanding the Department of the Pacific, has been authorized to enlist a battalion of infantry in Hawaii to aid in garrison duty.

The marine hospital service will assist the War Department in supervising the transportation of troops from Santiago and in preventing infection of vessels and men.

Secretary Day has been notified by Baron Fava, the Italian ambassador at Washington, that the next meeting of the International Congress of Orientalists will be held in Rome in 1899. The Italian Government desires that the United States shall be well represented at the coming convention.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Death of a Marion Man Prevents His Arrest—Thirty Years' Quarrel at an End—Prehistoric Mounds Near Anderson Are Sold.

Found Dead by the Track.

J. C. Tibbitts, a business man of Marion, was found dead near the Clover Leaf Railroad track three miles north of that city by the engineer of a passing train. Tibbitts went to Van Buren the day before on business and boarded a passenger train there for Marion. After the train left Van Buren Samuel Levy and John R. Brown of Marion saw Tibbitts leave the car and go out on the platform, and they stated at the inquest that they thought he appeared sick. The coroner failed to find any injuries that should have resulted fatally. It developed at the inquest that Tibbitts was an embezzler and was to have been arrested for appropriating funds of the building and loan company of which he was treasurer. He was receiver for the Marion Malleable Iron works and had gotten into trouble over financial affairs, which had cost him every dollar he possessed. He purchased an accident policy for $3,000 before he left Marion, which was good for two days.

Apology from a Deathbed.

A quarrel of thirty years' standing between Edward Green and Berry James was ended in a peculiar manner. The two men in 1868 lived as neighbors on a large tract of land in Dick Johnson township. A calf belonging to James got over the fence in Green's corn field. Green seized the calf and threw it over a fence, breaking its neck. This caused trouble between the two men, and James knocked Green down and the latter had his assailant arrested and fined. Shortly afterward Green moved to Seattle, Wash., where he resided until his death a few days ago. The day before his death he summoned his legal adviser and had him write an apology to James for killing his calf and inclosed a check for $30, which covered the fine James paid and interest to date.

Sale of Prehistoric Mounds.

A deal has been closed whereby the Indian mounds pass into the hands of W. R. Covert of St. Louis for a consideration of $20,000. These prehistoric works are considered by experts from the Smithsonian institution to be the finest in the country, from a scientific standpoint. At one time a move was on foot to convert the grounds into a national park, at another time into a State park, but both fell through. The mounds skirt White river just east of Anderson, and the scenery along the river at that point is considered by many to be the finest in Indiana. W. R. Covert has St. Louis capitalists associated with him. They will convert it into a big summer resort.

Old Man Died in His Coffin.

Joel English, an old resident of Kokomo, celebrated his seventy-third natal anniversary the other day by getting into a coffin and ending his life by drinking two ounces of laudanum. He drank the poison in the presence of his wife, and forbade her on penalty of death to give the alarm, he having a gun at the side of the coffin to kill the doctor if one were called. Mrs. English believed he was shamming, as he had threatened on several other occasions to commit suicide, and she did not realize his condition until too late. He bought the coffin fifteen years ago and had kept it in his bedroom ever since.

Within Our Borders.

The annual reunion of the old settlers of Jay County was held at the Twin Hills.

The supply of natural gas at Hope will soon be available for domestic and industrial consumption.

Martin Hunt, Andrew Hickle and John Smith of Marion ate toadstools for mushrooms and may die.

At New Albany, Blanche Wilson, 15 years old, was burned to death while preparing a meal on a gasoline stove.

Thomas W. Phillips, an old resident and real estate dealer of Kokomo, fell dead in the street. He was 69 years old.

Bertha Warner of Fort Wayne, a domestic, was burned to death while cleaning a bed with gasoline, which exploded.

Representatives of the different insurance companies in which J. C. Tibbitts of Marion was insured have requested the coroner not to file his verdict until a further investigation is made, as they claim to have evidence which will have a bearing on the case. It has developed that Tibbitts was a larger defaulter than was at first thought, and the theory that he poisoned himself and then stepped off the train is being generally accepted.

Benjamin Castle, a wealthy farmer living near Chandler, was shot and mortally wounded by his 19-year-old son William. Castle went home drunk and began to abuse his wife because she had not done the milking. He struck her over the head and while in the act of choking her the son rushed in and shot him. The son was arrested. Castle owned 1,000 acres of land and was prominent in politics.

The Marion Malleable Iron Works, which has been in the hands of a receiver and stood idle the most of the time for two years, is to be started Sept. 1 with half-force and a full force put on Oct. 1. When running full 350 men will be employed. The Union National Bank of Troy, N. Y., was a large creditor of the factory when it failed, and they bought it at public sale and will operate it.

Several business men of Evansville have filed with the Secretary of State articles incorporating the Improved Aerial Navigation Company. Recently a citizen of that place completed an airship which the capitalists believe will be a success, and they have formed the company for the purpose of manufacturing the ships. The capital stock of the concern is $10,000. The incorporators promise to have airships on the market in a few months.

W. B. Snyder of Madison estimates the number of peach trees in the Madison belt at 1,500,000, and that the present yield will bring more money to growers than ever before. The "belt" takes in both sides of the river, and two-thirds of the trees are in Kentucky.

A wreck on the Wabash Railroad three miles east of Churubusco killed two men and demolished or damaged eight box cars loaded with live stock and meat. A man named Truax, who had charge of a car of poultry, was killed outright. The body of an unknown tramp was also found in the debris.

Amos Gilmore of Elwood, who went to Alaska one year ago representing an Elwood company, has not been heard from for more than three months, and fears are entertained that he has met his death. When last heard from he had just reached the gold fields.

Unknown burglars gained an entrance to the postoffice in Hammond by sawing the iron barriers at the rear windows, and by blowing the safe they secured $300 in cash and $100 worth of stamps. Dynamite was used in forcing the door off the strong box. The mail was ready for the morning delivery. The money orders and a number of registered letters were not disturbed.

BRING THEM HOME

Efforts are being made in various parts of the state, to have Indiana regiments sent to better camps and farther north. This is all very well as far as it goes. But we must not forget that camps even in Indiana, at this season of the year are very unhealthy. We can expect no other condition than one of much sickness and some loss of life. The better plan would be to send them home, either on furlough or else disband them. They are not likely to be needed. Then let them come home and return to civil life before any more are sick or die of disease.

Fair Dealing

It became known last Friday that Leonard Roby had his life insured, but nothing definite was known. The COURIER investigated the matter and Mr. Dreessen, of this place, furnishes the following authentic statement of the matter:

Mr. LeSage TenBrock, the General Agent of the Metropolitan Insurance Co. of New York at Fort Wayne, was in the city Saturday to complete the death claim papers on a policy issued to the late Leonard E. Roby, who so sadly came to his death at Crooked Lake on Aug. 12.

The application for the insurance was written by Mr. T. J. Dreessen Asst. Supt. of Auburn on July 16, the policy was issued Aug. 8, although tee policy was never delivered on account of the Roby family being out of town, the insurance company assumed hability by having the policy issued when Leonard was in good health. FINE ORCHARD

H. C. Shull has an orchard of which he might well feel proud. In the field close to his house, he has a hundred or two of peach trees of the finest varieties including both early and late Crawfords, most of which are hanging heavy with luscious fruit. Some are so heavily loaded they have broken down some of the limbs. He has also many pear trees and plum trees all of which bore fruit this year, though the later plums rotted on the tree. Then he has other fine trees and bushes of rare fruits, such as English walnuts, Japanese hazel nuts, currrnts, etc, etc, the most of which have not yet come into bearing. Mr. and Mrs. Shull take a proper pride in this fine orchard, and it might also be added that Henry has his shotgun "sharpened" and any fruit thieves that molest his grounds night or day will find a man ready to receive them.

INDIANA MINERS

Legislation Passed By Democratic Legislature to Ameliorate Their Conditions.

To Protect the Miner From Weyler Heartlessness of Greedy Operators the Democracy Passed Laws Providing for Mine Inspection, Check Weighman, Safety of Miners in Descending and Ascending in the Cage, the Proper Bracing and Ventilation of the Mine, the Abolishment of Child Labor in Mines, as Well as the Wiping Out of the Infamous Pluck-Me Stores.

One of Indiana's great sources of wealth is her coal mines, and, strange to say, however paradoxical it may appear, this source of wealth has been fruitful of more poverty and hunger and their attendant ills, than has fallen to the lot of men employed in any other department of the state's industries.

Coal mining in Indiana of late years has been fruitful of the most deplorable conditions, the result in a large measure of the inordinate cupidity of mine owners and operators.

With these men it was not sufficient that squalor resulted from a constant depreciation of wages. The extreme hardships, which inadeqate wages imposed, afforded them opportunities to exploit their selfishness, until the only music that was heard in and around the mines was the anathemas of the men, the wailing of women and the cries of children, and the coal regions of Indiana became the center of deplorable destitution, bordering upon famine.

It was not possible for legislation, not even Democratic legislation, though warmed into the greatest activity that humanity could urge, to relieve the victims of organized outrage. But what could be done for the relief of men, the victims of Weyler heartlessness, was cheerfully attempted, as the records of Democratic legislation amply demonstrate.

As early as 1883 the Democratic legislature, to guard against the injury and death of miners, provided that the rope used for "hoisting and lowering in every coal mine shall be a wire rope" and that it should be examined every morning.

The legislature still further provided in case gas was known to exist in the mine, for a competent fire boss to investigate conditions to insure the safety of the miners.

The law also provided that the mine inspector should examine all mine scales used for weighing coal, to guard against fraud, and, to further protect the miners' interests, the law provided for a "checkweighman" to inspect the weighing.

In 1885 the coal miners of the state appealed to a Democratic legislature to still further afford them protection. And the law, in the interest of humanity, provided that not more than 10 persons should work in any mine, shaft, slope or draft in every 24 hours after 5,000 square yards have been excavated, until the second outlet shall have been made. The law also provided for breaks through or airways and all else required for the thorough ventilation of the mines.

The law also provides for an ample supply of timber, so that the workmen could properly secure the works from caving in.

It also provided that miners' bosses should visit these miners in their working places at least once a day.

It is seen that this legislation had in view the protection of the health of the miners and sought to prevent their injury and death from avoidable conditions.

The Democratic legislature of 1891 was appealed to for further legislation to protect coal miners from the rapacity of owners and operators, and the response was prompt and emphatic, the purpose being, in so far as practicable, to relieve the coal miners of the state from exactions, which, with relentless persistency, forced them into deeper poverty and forbade their escape.

The legislature of 1891 re-enacted, or made more binding, the regulations relating to scales and to weighing coal. It had been the practice first to screen the coal before weighing, by which the miners were defrauded of a large per cent of their just dues. This was prohibited and coal had to be weighed before it was screened, and provided that 80 pounds of coal should constitute a bushel, and that 2,000 pounds of coal should constitute a ton.

For the protection of miners, the law provided that "when two veins of coal are being mined in one shaft, two reflecting lamps shall be kept lighted at all times" when the mine is in operation.

The law provided for the safety of miners, that the cage descending and ascending in the shaft should be covered with one-fourth inch boiler iron, and that signal bells should be sounded when the cage was ascending or descending the shaft.

The act imposed upon the mining boss the imperative duty of examining every working place in the mine, at least every alternate day. The law further provides, Sections 13 and 14:

"That for any injury to person or property occasioned by any violation of this act, or any willful failure to comply with any of its provisions, a right of action against operator, agent or lessee shall accrue to the party injured for the direct injury sustained thereby, and in case of loss of life by reason of such violation, a right of action shall accrue to widow, children or adopted children, or to the parent or parents, or to any other person or persons who were before such loss of life dependend for support on the person or persons so killed, for like recovery for damages for the injury sustained by reason of such loss of life or lives."

"That whenever loss of life shall occur by reason of any accident whatsoever, in or about any coal mine, it shall be the duty of the person having charge of said coal mine to report the facts thereof without delay to the mine inspector and the said mine inspector together with the coroner of said county shall immediately go to the scene of said accident. They shall investigate and ascertain the cause of such loss of life, and have power to compel the attendance of witnesses and administer oaths of affirmation to them, and the cost of such investigation shall be paid by the county in which the loss of life may have occurred, in the same manner as costs of coroner's inquests are now paid. The inspector shall give testimony in any suit for damages for the violation."

The law seeks to insure prompt notice of the death of coal miners when engaged in mining coal and imposes a penalty of $50 upon the person in charge of such mine for failure to give notice of such death to the mine inspector.

The legislation, with regard to proper ventilation, and fresh air, is of the most emphatic character, the supreme purpose being to secure the miners against the perils of foul air.

The act also provided that males under the age of 14 years should not be employed in coal mines, nor females at any age.

The enforcement of all the provisions of the act in question, was provided for by wholesome penalties.

It has been remarked that legislation, however drastic, could not mitigate all the ills to which Indiana coal miners were subjected, but the various Democratic legislatures, as the records demonstrate, responded to every prudent demand of the miners.

But aside from proper equipment of the mines to protect life and health and guard against injuries, legislation was demanded by the miners to protect them from a species of piracies practiced by owners and operators of the mines, in the matter of payment for the coal they had mined. The purpose of these owners and operators, to all human appearances, being to rob them through the agency of "pluck-me stores," whereby the impoverished miners time and again were forced to the verge of starvation.

To put an end to this piracy, the Democratic legislature of 1887 provided that miners should be paid, if the demand was made, once every two weeks "in lawful money of the United States."

And the law further provided that if persons owning or operating mines should issue or circulate any check, card or other paper, which is not commercial paper payable at a fixed time in any bank in Indiana at its full face value, as lawful money of the United States, with 8 per cent. interest, or by bank check or currency issued by authority of the United States Government, to any employe of such person, co-partnership, corporation or association in payment for any work or labor done by such employe, or in payment of any labor contracted to be done by such employe, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not more than $100.

Nor was this all of the protection that the Democratic legislature afforded the coal miners, but it prohibited mine owners and operators from selling any merchandise to miners at a higher price than they sell the same merchandise to others for cash. And the law imposed a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $100.

This somewhat extended reference to legislation relating to the interests and welfare of the coal miners of Indiana, if an apology were necessary, is found in the fact that no class of our fellow citizens engaged in any industrial pursuit, have been so relentlessly outraged and plundered as coal miners.

In the Democratic party, and only in the Democratic party, did they find friends who espoused their cause, sympathized with them in their misfortunes and distress and came to their rescue by enacting laws calculated to afford such relief as was possible by legislation.

New And Ornamental

Going down Main street, past M. E. Griswold's, one notices the unique arrangement he has fixed up in that big apple tree on the south side of the house. He has steps built up into the tree and when at the top, you have a floor and seats on which to rest and get the fresh air and shade, but the tree top is not thick enough to make good shade at all hours. And here you find boxes of plants with flowers or hanging vines, giving the tree above and below, a pretty and inviting appearance. It is an idea that might be carried out by a number of our people and it would assist in beautifying our city and its homes.

ECHOES OF THE WAR.

All troops, both American and Spanish have suffered severely at Santiago from sickness. They are being taken away as fast as possible. It has always been sickly in the rainy season, and we went in the at the right time to get the worst of it.

It is now believed that Dewey did not get the surrender of any territory except that just around the city of Manila. If so, we are not likely to get the great bulk of the Islands. It would be folly to take them. What we want is a moderate sized island, with a good deep harbor, so that we could make a coaling station. The very farthest we should go would be to hold the islands till they can govern themselves.

The review of the great warships in New York harbor Saturday was a grand affair. At least three Spanish officers captured with Cervera, were in the bay, starting for home, and heard the wild cheering.

There has been rioting in Porto Rico. After hearing of the murder of 90 people by Spanish soldiers, the citizens of neighboring villages mobbed a village in which only Spaniards lived. They burned and robbed till our troops learned of it and went and stopped it. They will be punished.

They are having some trouble at Santiago, in the use of Spanish money and our money. It will no doubt soon settle down to our currency.

Much sickness prevails in camps in this country as well as in Cuba.

Cuban insurgents say they are tired of fighting and want to go back to their farms. Their leaders agree in this and some favor annexation.

Capt. Sigsbee late of the Maine is given command of the Battleship Texas. Capt. Phillips of the Texas has been promoted.

THE INSTITUTE.

The DeKalb county Teachers' Institute met Monday and was called to order by Supt. H. E. Coe, quite a good number being present. Prayer was offered by Rev. Hoyt, and the regular program was then begun.

The first was by Prof. J. M. Culver on History. He laid out his work for the week and gave his first lesson. Then came, Dr. Davis, with a talk on General Education, very interesting and instructive. He also assists through the week. This brought the time up to noon.

AFTERNOON

The first work was given by Mrs. Cammack and as her work over the state would indicate, it was on the lines teaching temperance in the schools. She was followed by Dr. Swayne of the State University at Bloomington, in an excellent address on Higher Education. Prof. Culver followed next and Dr. Davis followed him, each with a continuation of his regular work.

TUESDAY

The work goes on with the regular program, and the same workers as yesterday. The work done is of the highest order and Superintendent Coe and all are highly pleased with the success so far. Mr. Guild's sermon last night was a strong and eloquent one. Mrs. Cammack speaks tonight.

Indiana History Questions.

We have received from the Indianian, a magazine published at Indianapolis in the interest of Indiana historical matters, the following questions. They are intended to lead teachers and pupils to a wider range of study on the history of our state. Cut this out and keep it for study:

QUESTIONS.

1. What is the difference between a Civil and Congressional Township?
2. How are Township Trustees elected, and for which Township, Civil or Congressional?
3. What County in the State has no Congressional Township within it, and why?
4. What Powers have the Township Trustees over the Teachers?
5. From what sources are the School Funds derived?
6. What is the amount of the perman nt School Fund of the State?
7. For what School purposes do Township or School Trustees levy taxes?
8. How is the permanent School Fund of the state divided between the various Counties, and who makes the division?
9. Who constitute the State Board of Education?
10. What was known in Indiana as the "Red Dog" and "Blue Pup" Currency?

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

Nearly An Accident.

While digging in the deep part of the trench on South VanBuren-st yesterday, at the point where it goes under the big sewer, the earth caved in and caught Conrad Schomberg and pinned him fast. The earth was half way up his body, and it took lively work to dig him out. As it was, he was not much hurt. Had he been stooped over when the dirt cared in, he might have been killed, but he had just straightened up to throw a shovelful out.

SEDAN

Once more the Sedan correspondent has come to life and hereafter Sedanians will be promptly reported.

Mr. and Mrs O. L. Wheaton were at Waterloo yesterday. They sent a box of delicacies to their son Willis, by Mr. Ed Willis.

W. H. Crane took in the excursion to Niagara Falls last week.

Miss Edna Reynolds went to Kendallville yesterday.

Christ Rohm and wife visited in Sedan Sunday.

Geo. Crane and family of Wawaka, visited his brother, W. H. Crane, Sunday also the Rev. John Crane of Nokomis, Ill.

Mrs. Alma Reynolds is spending the week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Sol Deetz of Fairfield.

The republicans of this township held their caucus at Corunna last Saturday. We have not got the names of the delegates, but suppose they are good men and capable of nominating a good ticket. But unless we are badly mistaken there are one or two men asking to be nominated who pleged their sacred word of honor that they would not ask for or accept the nomination at this time.

Any party desiring to take the COURIER, just leave your name with the postmaster at Sedan or COURIER correspondent and we will see that you are accommodated. Certainly no democrat should try to keep house without it, and if some of the republicans would take it, possibly there would be more peace in the family.

Mr. Charles Shepherd of Steadville, was in this vicinity last week. Mr. Shepnerd wishes to buy a small place of about 40 acres, and was very favorably impressed with O. L. Wheaton's place. We should be truly sorry to have Mr. Wheaton leave our neighborhood.

Mr. Wm. Casselman made a fly run to Waterloo yesterday on his wheel.

A SOLDIER'S CAMERA.

Fighting and Taking Pictures at the Same Time.

Lieut. Wise did something on the field that day that was characteristic, says a Santiago correspondent of the New York Press. His work was unlike the action of any other officer, veteran or youngster. He fought bravely; he did not run; he was not killed or wounded. In this he was not different from scores of others. But the wonderful thing that he did—the thing characteristic of the kite-flying, photographing, bicycling, nervous enthusiast that he is, was this. He charged up the hill at the head of his company in the face of Mauser bullets, thick as hail, and with schrapnel shells bursting all around him, and carried in his right hand his sword and in his left hand a rapid-firing camera of his own devise. He took twelve views on the film plates while he was running, and when he and the standing remnant of his company were in possession of the top of the hill, and the Spaniards were flying down the other, Lieut. Wise turned to a sergeant and said: "I think I've got some pretty lively pictures this time. If there was only some ice in this sunburned country I'd develop them right now." Then he gave his camera to a private to guard and resumed fighting. If that isn't bravery, coolness, nerve and audacity combined I never heard of them. And everybody who knows him will say that it was "just like Hughey Wise."

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. ROZENA LEWIS, of Ozonville, Texas, says: "I was troubled at monthly intervals with terrible pains in my head and back, but have been entirely relieved by Wine of Cardui."

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. H. B. McCord.

—All young men desiring to participate in the battle of Santiago, to be represented at the Auburn Carnival, are requested to meet at the Armory Thursday evening. The guns will be here by that time, and it will be expected to complete the final arrangements for the sham battle.

—J. H. Hornberger, now at Lawsho Clearfield Co., Pa., pays his subscription to April '99, and has good luck all along the line in consequence. His son Randolph has passed the required examination and is now a bookkeeper in Uncle Sam's big navy yard at Brooklyn, N. Y. His daughter is a teacher, Mr. H. himself commands good wrges as a hand saw filer. Glad to hear of all his good fortune.

—The workmen digging the trench on South VanBuren found a different sort of ground from the gravel and sand on Main street. At the extreme south end, they were in low ground and struck water, and as they came north, they ran into the big double sewer that crossed the street diagonally at Joseph Truits's corner. This compelled them to dig deeper than usual to avoid interfering with it. A block or two north of this they ran under the old sewer that led south and west from the Church Furniture Company's factory now burned. But this was not particularly in the way.

CORUNNA.

Rev. J. N. Wilson, of Auburn was in town Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Loomis, of Kandallville, were driving on our streets Friday afternoon.

The L. A. S. will be entertained at Mrs. Buchanan's Thursday afternoon.

Over fifty (50) people attended Mrs. Woodworth's meeting at Helmer Sunday.

About twenty-five of Mrs. Dena Stearns' friends pleasantly surprised her one day last week, reminding her of her 35th birthday. She was the recipient of a fine center stand.

Mrs. Geo Becker and daughters, Glee and Jessie, of Montpelier, Ohio, are visiting relatives at this place.

Mrs, Rachel Orr returned from Pioneer, Ohio, Sunday, where she has been staying for several weeks.

A False Statement.

The would-be Fool Catcher, who in this instance represents the unscrupulous smaller shows, has so long and often reiterated the assertion that the greater shows divide when visiting other than the bigger cities, that he has cozened many gullible and unthinking folks into believing his baseless lie. It is simply an utter physical impossibility to divide any tent show and exhibit its parts in different places on the same day. The Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers, consolidation, which is to exhibit here on Sept. 10, having frequently and maliciously been made the target for this slanderous report, request us to state that it will pay a liberal reward for the arrest and conviction of any person circulating the same. Moreover, that it always and everywhere presents precisely the same show, just as advertised, never curtailing a performance or intentionally omitting an act or feature, believing that under any and all circumstances one man is entitled to as much for his money as any other.

Catarrh is a local and constitutional disease. Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure (a tonic and blood purifier, price, 75 cents.) and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm (price 50 cts.) contains no mercury or cocaine, used in connection are constitutional and local remedies. The above amount is offered if they fail to cure.

Columbus, Ohio, March 24, 1898.
LINCOLN MEDICINE CO., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger, I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

COMING HOME.

Yesterday the DAILY COURIER said the sensible thing would be to send the Indiana soldiers home. About three o'clock a telegram went over the country, to the effect that the 157th was to be sent home and mustered out. But there are so many of these wild rumors, that we thought best to wait. But today it is confirmed. As we said, the Governor had been asking the sentiment of the regiments and it would appear they are generally tired of staying in sickly camps with nothing to do. The Governor then sent word to Gen. Corbin, Adjutant-general of the United States at Washington, and received the following telegram in reply:

"Agreeably to your request the 157th has been ordered home for muster out."

So it seems we may soon look for our boys back again. They have made themselves an honorable record, as honorable to them as a record on the field of battle, which some unknown cause prevented. But they have been model soldiers in camp as they were good citizens at home. We will welcome them back. All honor to the gallant Indiana 157th.

Echoes Of The War

Gov. Mount has sent word to the commanders of the different Indiana regiments, to find out what the majority of their men want, whether they would prefer being mustered out and come home, or would rather stay in the service. If the most of them wish to come, he will ask the president to muster them out.

Admiral Schley and Capt. Evans of the Iowa, are both sick with some kind of fever.

The total number of men surrender at Santiago, was 23,726, or twice as many as we had there

It looks now as if we would insist on retaining not only the country near Manila, but that entire island, Luzon, which is the largest island in the group This will make a large territory in itself. The city of Manla alone has 200,000 people. We may insist that Spain shall have no right to give away any of the other islands to any other nation.

U. S. Regular At Home.

Special to the Courier.

BUTLER, IND. Aug. 23, 1898.—Otis D. Metcalf, son of Chas. Metcalf north of town, who is a member of company D, second regiment U. S. I., North Dakota, came home from Santiago de Cuba on a thirty days' furlough to visit his people and recuperate. To inquiries of a COURIER representative, yesterday afternoon, he gave confirmation to the following facts: The U. S regulars landed at Santiago, June 22, and engaged in first battle which occurred on the 24th. In this engagement the Roughriders were assisted by first, ninth and tenth cavalry regiments. The second battle took place at Santiago, July 1st, and continued until the 3rd, flag of truce waving till 4:20 p. m., on the 10th fire was reopenad and kept up till 7.30. Heavy artillery did active service on the 11th. Mr. Metcalf, landed at Long Island the 16th, and arrived in Butler, Sunday evening, the 21st.

Excess Fares Discontinued.

The North Western Line has discontinued excess fares on the "Colorado Special," which leaves Chicago daily 10:00 a. m., reaching Omaha 11:55 p. m. and Denver 2:55 next afternoon. It has further improved its service by perfecting through sleeping car arrangements on the "Colorado Special" to Colorado Springs. Train leaving Chicago 10:30 p. m. daily also has through sleeping and chair cars. Tourists' tickets via the Chicago & North-Western on sale at all important points in the United States and Canada.

The Sedan Flower Garden.

Simon Haines, at Sedan has fitted up a lovely flower garden in which meetings are being held. There will be a meeting there next Sunday afternoon about three or four o'clock, at which will be good speakers and good singing. In addition, Mr. Hoffman of this place is expected to be present and take photographs of such as desire, especially of family groups. If the weather is not favorable, then the next Sunday the pictures will be taken.

THE CAVALRY REGIMENT.

Walt Whitman's Description in "The Wound Dresser."

The sabres clanked, the men looked young and healthy and strong; the electric tramping of so many horses on the hard road, and the gallant bearing, fine seat and bright-faced appearance of a thousand and more handsome young American men, were so good to see. An hour later another troop went by, smaller in numbers, perhaps 300 men. They, too, looked like serviceable men, campaigners used to field and fight. July 3.—This forenoon, for more than an hour, again long strings of cavalry, several regiments, very fine men and horses, four or five abreast. I saw them in Fourteenth street, coming in town from North. Several hundred extra horses, some of the mares with colts, trotting along. (Appeared to be a number of prisoners, too.) How inspiring always the cavalry regiments. Our men are generally well mounted, feel good, are young, gay on the saddle, their blankets in a roll behind them, their sabres clanking at their sides. This noise and movement and the tramp of many horses' hoofs has a curious effect upon one.—"The Wound Dresser," by Walt Whitman.

SOME WORDS OF WOMEN.

Brief Notes Concerning Their Work and Varied Ways.

Mme. Peskova of Prague was recently decorated by the emperor of Austria in acknowledgment of her great work among women. It is said that she is the second Austrian woman to be thus honored. She is a poet, editor and writer on educational matters, but her chief work has been the building in Prague of a magnificent woman's building, which cost $200,000, and which is the center of woman's activities in the Austrian empire. Here 2,000 young Bohemian women are prepared each year for the university of Prague. Mrs. Annie M. Brown of Brattleboro has been appointed by Attorney General Griggs as clerk of the United States Attorney's department for the district of Vermont. Most of the deposition and other legal testimony taken stenographically in Brattleboro and vicinity for some time past have been taken by Mrs. Brown, and she is regarded as fully competent. Sarah Bernhardt's energy seems to be endless. She is now about to go to Asia. Having captivated the west, her face is now turned to the east, and at the invitation of the maharajah the golden-voiced tragedienne will go to India. The maharajah has promised her tiger hunts and Nautch dances, and she in turn will undertake to appear in all of her famous impersonations. It is said that there are but four women jewelers in the United States, and one of them is Mrs. C. P. Barnes of Louisville, Ky., recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. It is also said of Mrs. Barnes that she has been the sole proprietor, manager and buyer of one of the oldest jewelry stores of Louisville since the death of her husband.

How Deserts are Formed.

Dr. Lydekker, in Knowledge, points out the error of the widespread belief that deserts, like the Sahara, are the bottoms of ancient seas which have been lifted above their original elevation by geological forces. It is absolutely certain, he says, that the sands of all the great deserts of the world have been formed on the spots by the disintegration of the solid rocks on which they rest. "Desert sands correspond in all respects, so far as their mode of origin is concerned, to the dust and sand which accumulate on our highways in summer." All deserts are situated where the winds from the ocean, before reaching them, are exhausted of their moisture by passing over mountains or across extensive tracts of land.

Congressman's Literary Work.

Congressman Samuel W. McCall returned from Washington last week, but instead of starting away at once upon an extended trip through Canada, as had been his intention, he is devoting nearly all his time to writing a life of Thaddeus Stevens for Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s American statesman series, the same to which Henry Cabot Lodge, Theodore Roosevelt, Carl Schurz, Moorfield Storey, and other distinguished men have contributed. Unlike most of the other personages treated in this series, Stevens has received little attention in extended biographies, and Mr. McCall finds the path of research and discovery a long one. —Boston Transcript.

FAMOUS NAVAL BATTLES OF THE WORLD.

GREAT NAVAL BATTLES OF HISTORY

IMAGINE a fleet of 5,000 war vessels armed with more than 2,000 new style guns, some weighing 100 tons, and actually manned by 500,000 men, with as many reserves, and you have the naval force of the world marshaled in one grand body. Salamis and Manila are the naval antipodes of history. Salamis was the first great recorded battle. It drove the Persians from Greek soil. From crude galley ships, propelled by oars, naval progress has advanced to a stage which almost reaches the limit of terrible destruction. One battleship like the Oregon could have destroyed the Spanish armada and its English foe. There are guns on the Oregon which consume 1,000 pounds of gunpowder in a single discharge, while the most formidable guns in the armada service consumed four and a half pounds to the charge.

Although ironclads were used to some extent in the civil war, in the Chinese-Japanese war, in minor engagements between the Peruvian and Chilian fleets and the Russo-Turkish war in 1877, the Spanish-American fight in the Philippines and at Santiago, marks the first conflict between ironclads in which the great sea monsters of modern warfare received a fair test.

In naval warfare it is the same as in land warfare. The whole history of the art has been divided into tactical periods ushered in more or less directly by some great tactical discovery. Such discoveries have consisted not only of new arrangements and maneuvers, but of improved weapons as well—improved defensive armor or improved motive power. When the Tyrrhenian Pessaesus added a sharp beak to the prow of the ancient galley he introduced a feature of greater tactical import than the oft-quoted invention of iron ramrods of the Dessaure or of the needle-gun by Mr. Dreyse. As the Pyrric phalanx succumbed to the more open array the lighter weapons of the Roman legion and the Swiss heresson to the short swords of closed fighting of Gonsaloo's infantry, so the old line of battle was pierced and broken by the new tactics, which Paul Hoste, the Jesuit, the clerk of Eldin and Rodney and Nelson put into practice.

In the battle of Artemesium, about 500 B. C., an engagement which was of more political than military importance, which the Theban poet celebrated as the "place where the sons of Athens laid the shining groundwork of freedom," the Greeks adopted a very remarkable order of battle. Their fleet was inferior to that of the Persians, which was large enough to literally surround them. The Greeks, appreciating the fatality of adopting the old formation, formed their fleet in a circle, with their prows facing the surrounding enemy, and then darted forth to break the shipmade wall. As a result the Persians lost thirty vessels. The Greeks were nominally defeated, although the net result was in their favor. This was perhaps the first great naval battle of which we have any knowledge, although the battle of Salamis is usually credited as the first great recorded sea fight.

Ramming as a method of aggressive naval warfare is almost as old as naval history, and has not yet been abandoned, although the improvements in shipbuilding have rendered it less effective. The invention of gunpowder found a slow response in the methods of naval warfare, galleys forming a considerable part of the navy until the eighteenth century. In the reign of Edward III., when the English fought the French at Sluys, the former stood off on the starboard tack and maneuvered so as to turn on the pursuing French and, aided by the sun at their backs, lashed their vessels to the French fleet and crippled their antagonists with lances, swords and every sort of weapon they could lay their hands on.

Same Mode of Attack.

In the fight between Pembroke and the Spaniard Ruy Diaz De Roxas, near Rochelle, although cannon were used almost for the first time on sea, the same mode of attack prevailed. Pembroke was made prisoner after four of the enemy's vessels had been lashed to his vessels. In fact, all the records of ancient naval warfare seem to indicate that sea fighting was little more than land fighting. The contending fleets would be lashed together and the men would fight hand to hand until one of the principals surrendered. The Spanish armada, with its 130 vessels, was little more than a series of Homeric duels. The ships were clumsy and unwieldy, communication was effected by means of small boats and most of the destruction was wrought by fireships. Guns cut little figure, and most of the Spanish vessels, it appears, were destroyed by violent storms, in open sea. Even as late as 1692, when Admiral Russell of England engaged the French in a series of sea fights known as the battle of La Hague, he positively forbade his men to fire on the French until his opponent, Tourville, had taken his distance in battle array. One English admiral in a battle with the French forbade his men firing until the enemy had fired the first shot, an incident which furnishes a precedent for President McKinley's reported order to Captain Sampson.

It was not until forty years ago that the ironclad cut any figure in naval warfare. At the great battle of Trafalgar in 1805, in which Nelson was killed, only a handful of powder was used in a discharge, and the guns were all twelve and six pounders. It is a remarkable fact that England herself, the leader of the world as a sea fighter, weighed down by a cankerous stretch of peace, has not fired a shot, metaphorically speaking, in four decades. The bombardment of Alexandria in 1882 was not an exception, as England was then simply firing at a target, having no opposition whatever. Neither were the efforts of the Chilians and Peruvians in their late belligerency of any avail in affording a clew to the great problem of the ironclads. The attempts made by the vessels of China and Japan four years ago were anxiously awaited by the rest of the world, and, although they were on a more extended scale than any previously made, they still failed to furnish an exhibition of the real merits or demerits of the iron monsters. Japan's smaller ships got the better of China's heavier craft with the same ease with which American soldiers prevailed over Pekin's raw land levies.

Originated in America.

It was America, however, that introduced the ironclad to the world, and the duels between the Monitor and the Merrimac were pathfinders in the new and uncertain warfare which defies wooden beaks and ships of fire. As a result of the Spanish war, the whole world has been thrown on the defensive. Almost immediately after the United States voted a naval appropriation of $50,000,000 Russia set aside the same amount for the construction of men-of-war and England ordered built eighteen battleships to her annual budget of thirty-two cruisers, forty-one torpedo boat destroyers and eleven other war vessels. Next to the English come the French, with a total of 600 vessels of war, and the United States has quickly come to the front as a naval power. Her vessels are not as heavy as those of her cousins, but they excel in speed and American seamen have always ranked with the best in the world.

To recount the most famous naval battles in history is like recounting the most famous poets, military leaders and statesmen. It is all a matter of judgment, and no two lists would be alike. The following, however, are among the leaders:

Artemisium—Greeks virtually defeat Persians with superior fleet, 500 B. C.

Salamis—Greeks, with 380 small war galleys, defeat Persians with 800 ships, the former losing forty galleys and the latter twenty galleys. Loss of life on both sides estimated from 5,000 to 50,000; 480 B. C.

Winchelsea—English defeat forty Spanish vessels and capture twenty-six, August, 1350.

Harfleur—English capture or destroy 500 French vessels, Aug. 15, 1416.

Bay of Lepanto—Venetian and Spanish fleets defeat Turkish fleet under Pasha Ali; Christian fleet consisted of 250 ships and more than 50,000 men, and Turks commanded superior force; only thirty Turkish vessels escaped; 10,000 Turks were taken and 25,000 slain; Christians lost 10,000 men; 1571.

Gibraltar bay—Dutch defeat the Spanish, April 25, 1607.

Dover straits—Dutch destroy the English fleet, Nov. 29, 1652.

Portsmouth—English defeat the Dutch and destroy eleven men-of-war and thirty merchantmen, Feb. 18, 1653.

North Foreland—One hundred English and Dutch men-of-war engaged; eleven Dutch taken and six sunk; June 2, 1653.

Coast of Holland—English sunk thirty Dutch men-of-war, July 31, 1653.

Santa Cruz—Spanish fleet burned by the English, April 20, 1657.

Harwich—Dutch lose eighteen ships to the English, June 23, 1665.

Thames—Dutch lose to the English twenty-four men-of-war, four admirals killed and 4,000 seamen, July 25, 1666.

Messina—Spanish fleet, twenty-nine vessels, destroyed by the English, July 31, 1718.

Gibraltar—English defeated combined fleets of Spain and France, Sept. 13, 1782.

St. Vincent—English, with fifteen vessels, defeated Spanish with twenty-seven vessels, Feb. 13, 1797.

Battle of the Nile—English under Nelson defeat the French and capture and destroy eleven vessels and kill nearly 1,000 men under Admiral Brueys, Aug. 1, 1798.

Trafalgar—Nelson sunk nineteen French and Spanish vessels, fighting twenty-seven ships against thirty-three of the combined fleet; Nelson killed; Oct. 21, 1805.

Navarino—The fleets of England, France and Russia destroy thirty Turkish men-of-war, Oct. 20, 1827.

Yalu River—Japanese defeat Chinese; heavy losses on both sides, Chinese losing four vessels and 600 men; Sept. 17, 1894.

Noted American Fights.

Among the noted American battles are the following:

Coast of Scotland—Paul Jones captures the Serapis and Scarborough, seventy guns, Sept. 23, 1779.

Off St. Kitt's—The Constellation, twenty-six guns, captures the French L'Insurgeant, forty guns, Feb. 9, 1779.

Coast of United States—Constitution, forty-four guns, sinks the Guerriere, thirty-eight guns, in thirty minutes, Aug. 19, 1812.

Madeira—United States, forty-four guns, captures the Macedonian, forty guns, Oct. 25, 1812.

Brazil—Constitution captures the Java, Dec. 29, 1812.

Lake Erie—Perry, with fifty-four guns, defeats English fleet with sixty-three guns, Sept. 10, 1813.

Lake Champain—McDonough, with eighty-six guns, defeats English fleet with ninety-six guns, Sept. 11, 1814.

Manila—Commodore Dewey, with six vessels, defeats the Spanish under Admiral Montejo with eighteen vessels, sinking eleven of the Spaniards and withdrawing unscathed, May 1, 1898.

Santiago—Commodore Schley, with six vessels, totally destroyed the entire Spanish fleet under Cervera. But one American was killed, while the Spanish lost 600 killed and 1,100 taken prisoners.

Passing by the battle of Salamis, which was in reality nothing more than a land battle on galleys, the success of the victor depending largely upon favorable winds and formidable crews, the next most important naval battle of the world was that fought in the bay of Lepanto in 1671 between the papal, Venetian and Spanish fleets and that of Selim, Sultan of Constantinople. The Christian fleet consisted of 250 ships and more than 50,000 men under the command of Don John of Austria. The Turkish fleet, which was under command of Pasha Ali, was much larger, but the Christians had the advantage in equipment, making use of helmets, coats of mail and firearms, while many of the Turks had no better defensive garb than leather shields and no more formidable weapons than arrows.

Three times the Spaniards boarded the Turk and fell back. A fourth time, with a re-enforcement of 200 men, they rushed to the assault and carried everything before them. An indiscriminate slaughter followed. The crescent was quickly replaced by the cross and the bloody head of Ali planted on a pole was raised on the masthead of Don John's flagship. The Christians cried "Victoria, victoria," and rushed upon the enemy, but did not win the battle until the Christian galley slaves revolted, broke their chains and turned on their masters. Only thirty of the Turkish galleys escaped to Constantinople, 130 were captured and the rest destroyed. More than 10,000 Turks were taken and 25,000 slain, and the Christians lost 10,000 men.

The most brilliant naval victory of the American revolution was won by John Paul Jones, when he captured with the old hulk, Bon Homme Richard, the British frigate Serapis and a smaller vessel, the Countess of Scarborough, convoying a fleet of merchantmen. The enemy approached within pistol-shot distance and Jones' sharpshooters kept the Englishman's decks clear. At the outset Jones suffered considerably from the bursting of three of his guns, but he quickly rallied and lashed his sinking vessel to the Britisher, which soon surrendered. The loss of the Richard was thirty killed and wounded, and that on the Serapis was nearly as great. The Richard was left to her fate and next day sank with her wounded on board.

The battle of Trafalgar, Nelson's last fight, took place off Cadiz, between the allied French and Spanish fleets of thirty-three sailing vessels and twenty-seven English vessels. The British fleet bore down upon the enemy under full sail, led by Nelson with fourteen vessels in the Victory and Admiral Collingwood on the right with thirteen vessels. Nelson's object was to break the enemy's fleet into sections inferior to his own and then join battle at close quarters. It was in this battle that Nelson raised the pennant, "England expects every man to do his duty." The English were successful, but Nelson was shot, and England lost her greatest admiral. After the dying Nelson was told that fifteen of the enemy's ships had been taken, he said: "That is well, but I bargained for twenty."

The battle of Lake Erie, in which Perry, a mere youth, with fifty-four guns and 600 men, defeated the British squadron with sixty-three guns and nearly 2,800 men, was an epoch-maker in American history, as it gave the Americans control of the great lakes. Captain Barclay, a veteran who fought under Nelson at Trafalgar, commanded the British fleet. During the fight, which lasted three hours, Perry forsook the Lawrence, his flagship, and in a little boat which was made the target of scores of rifles he was rowed over to the Niagara. The Niagara suddenly swerved, broke the enemy's line, raking the enemy's ships at pistol distance. In a few moments all the American vessels were close on their opponents and the English pulled down their flags in less than half an hour.

First Ironclad Engagement.

The first general engagement between ironclads took place in 1866 between the Italians and Austrians off the island of Lissa. In this engagement the Austrian admiral in the flagship Ferdinand Max sunk the Italian flagship, but as the Italian sank half a battalion of marines fired on the Austrian and killed eighty of her men. The fight between the Kearsarge and the Alabama, in which the latter was sunk after a short contest, is familiar to readers of American history, but inasmuch as both were unprotected by armor the event can scarcely be accounted as a world-noted engagement. The sinking of the Albemarle off the coast of North Carolina is also a landmark in American history, but it was to the daring of one man, Lieut. Cushing, who placed a torpedo under the Confederate ram, that the victory was placed on the Union scroll.

The history of Europe and South America, particularly of Chili and Peru, abounds in instances of daring at sea, the destruction of ships and loss of men, but it was not until Commodore Dewey opened fire on the Spanish fleet in Manila bay that the full strong voice of the modern man-of-war was heard.

As for the strength of the various nations of the world, figures indicate little. Suffice it to say that England and France are strong leaders, with Russia, Germany, Italy and the United States all within hailing distance.

Native Languages of America.

There are, according to an eminent archaeologist, no less than from 120 to 130 absolutely distinct languages in North and South America. As the growth of language is very slow, he thinks the fact of the existence of so great a variety of speech on the Western Continents proves that the native red men have inhabited them for many thousands of years.

STOPS A BATTLE.

Miles Calls a Halt Just as Brooke's Guns Are Sighted on Spaniards.

Gen. Brooke moved from Arroyo at daybreak Friday, and at noon he passed Guayama, and marched three miles to the place where the Fourth Ohio regiment had a fight with the Spaniards Tuesday. The Spaniards were intrenched in the same position, and the Americans were about to attack them, when they were stopped by an order from Gen. Miles. Battery B was sighting its first guns, when Lieut. McLaughlin of the signal corps galloped up to Gen. Brooke and delivered a dispatch from Gen. Miles stating that he had been informed from Washington of the suspension of hostilities. The soldiers did not receive the news with very good grace, as they were anxious to force the issue with the enemy.

Will Hold Positions.

The American troops now in Porto Rico will hold the positions they now have until the military commission meets and determines upon the manner and time of evacuation.

The Falling Leaves Give Warning of Winter

So the falling of the hair tells of the approach of age and declining power.

No matter how barren the tree nor how leafless it may seem, you confidently expect leaves again. And why?

Because there is life at the roots.

So you need not worry about the falling of your hair, the threatened departure of youth and beauty. And why?

Because if there is a spark of life remaining in the roots of the hair will arouse it into healthy activity. The hair ceases to come out: it begins to grow: and the glory of your youth is restored to you.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

We have a book on the Hair and its Diseases. It is free.

General Greely's 278 Days of Death.

The true story of those 278 days of suffering by Greely's heroic little band of explorers in the Arctic region has been told by General Greely himself, for the first time, for the October Ladies' Home Journal. For years General Greely has kept an unbroken silence about his fearful experience and that of his companions, as they dropped dead one by one at his side, and it was only after the greatest persuasion that the famous explorer was induced to write the story.

Why She Had to Go.

Mrs. Wakeleigh—How did you come to lose your girl? I thought you liked her so much?

Miss Flatleigh—Oh, she got above her place and I just insisted on having mamma discharge her.

Mrs. Wakeleigh—What did she do? Want to set up a grand piano in the kitchen?

Miss Flatleigh—No; but she boasted around that she had a bigger string of soldier buttons and belts than I could show.

SECURED MORE WAGES.

Harcourt's Gardener Persevered Until He Received $100 Yearly Increase.

Sir William Harcourt is said to be remarkable for a pronounced horror of little worries. This trait in the character of the great parliamentarian often leads, according to Cassell's Saturday Journal, to ridiculous scenes at home. For instance, on his Hampshire estate he employs an old gardener who firmly believes that his master is afraid of him.

This old servitor, thinking his wage insufficient, determined to give notice, but notwithstanding that he waylaid Sir William in all parts of the grounds, and waited for him round corners, and stood on the housestep in the mornings, he never got any further than "If you please, Sir William——" before the latter would fidget nervously, turn his back and hurry away.

But the gardener's opportunity came. One fine morning, when standing upon a high ladder pruning a climbing rose, it occurred to him that he was just outside Sir William's dressing-room, and that he had better take the bull by the horns and give notice through the window. The latter was open, and peering cautiously into the apartment, the gardener espied Sir William leisurely brushing his hair.

Thereupon, he commenced in a loud voice, "If you please, Sir William, I wants to tell you that I don't think as I can stay——." He got thus far when Sir William precipitately fled into the next room. That day the minister left for London, and in the course of the week the gardener received a brief note, on House of Commons paper, saying simply:

"Your wages are increased £20 a year.—Harcourt." This missive is treasured in a little cottage, where small grandchildren have already grown to render additional honor to their grandfather on account of his successful dealings with a great ex-minister of the crown.

Music and Health.

Music, if we are to believe ancient historians, has produced some very extraordinary effects. The fierceness of Achilles was allayed by playing on the harp; Damon, with the same instrument, quieted wild and drunken youths; and Asclepiades in a similar manner brought back seditious multitudes to temper and reason. The Corybantes and effeminate priests of Cybele were incited by music to cut their own flesh. Pindar addressed his harp thus: "Thou quenchest the raging thunder." Music is also reported to have been efficacious in removing dangerous diseases. Mirandola observes, in explanation of its being appropriated to such an end, that music moves the spirits to act upon the soul as medicine does the soul by the body. Theophrastus, in his essay on "Enthusiasm," reports many cures upon this principle. The Thebans used the pipe for the cure of many disorders, and Zenocrates is said to have cured several madmen. The bite of the tarantula is said to have been cured by music, and the Phrygian pipe was recommended by many of the ancient fathers as an antidote to sciatica. We could enumerate many other instances of the estimation, amounting as it would seem to palpable superstition, in which music was held among the ancients, but the above may be considered sufficient.

MRS. PINKHAM'S ADVICE.

What Mrs. Nell Hurst has to Say About It.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you I had not been well for five years; had doctored all the time but got no better. I had womb trouble very bad. My womb pressed backward, causing piles. I was in such misery I could scarcely walk across the floor. Menstruation was irregular and too profuse, was also troubled with leucorrhœa. I had given up all hopes of getting well; everybody thought I had consumption. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I felt very much better and was able to do nearly all my own work. I continued the use of your medicine, and feel that I owe my recovery to you. I cannot thank you enough for your advice and your wonderful medicine. Any one doubting my statement may write to me and I will gladly answer all inquiries.—MRS. NELL HURST, Deepwater, Mo.

Letters like the foregoing, constantly being received, contribute not a little to the satisfaction felt by Mrs. Pinkham that her medicine and counsel are assisting women to bear their heavy burdens.

Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass. All suffering women are invited to write to her for advice, which will be given without charge. It is an experienced woman's advice to women.

Excusing Him.

"I must confess," said Willie Wishington, "that I often waste time worrying about nothing."

"Well," said Miss Cayenne, benignly, "self-preservation is the first law of nature."—Washington Star.

Cutting—"I'm undecided whether to go to war or stay at home." Mrs. Cutting—"Remember, if you do go, you will have to face Spanish bullets and possibly sudden death." Cutting—"Yes; and if I don't go I'll have to face American biscuit and a lingering death. Guess I'll enlist."—Judge.

The New Star: Miss Birch—"Who was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen?" Silence. Miss Birch—"Of course you know. Now, who was it?" More silence. Miss Birch—"Dear, dear. Think, children. Come, now, it was G-George——" Grand chorus—"Dewey, ma'am!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It was very unkind, no doubt, but she certainly drove him to it. They had only been married two years, and she persisted in throwing her money in his face. "What would you be now," she cried, angrily, before the servant one morning at breakfast, "if it had not been for my money?" "A bachelor!" he replied.—Tid-Bits.

He (desperately)—Tell me the truth. Is it not my poverty that stands between us? She (sadly)—Y-e-s. He (with a ray of hope)—I admit that I am poor, and so, unfortunately, is my father; but I have an aged uncle who is very rich, and a bachelor. He is an invalid and cannot long survive. She—How kind and thoughtful you are! Will you introduce me to him?—New York Weekly.

Hicks—Barton is quite struck with Miss Birdikin. He had just lighted a cigar last evening when she hove in sight. He threw it away and went up the street with her." Wicks—"And do you know what she said to him? She told him that she appreciated his self-denial in throwing the cigar away, but she never could think of marrying a man who was so devoid of economy."—Boston Transcript.

How He Gets Even.

"I should er got dat postoffice," said the colored politician, "but dey gin it ter a white man arter all. But, bless God, I got my rewenge."

"Yo' rewenge?"

"Yes; I makes dat white man wait on me, en fly roun' same's ef I had him hired. I goes in dar 'bout ten times a day, throw down a dollar en holler out: "Gimme a 1-cent stamp, heah, durn quick!"—Atlanta Constitution.

You never hear the poor man who has lost a fortune say anything about riches being a curse.

A Prophecy of the War.

Poor Cuba had suffered at the very threshold of this great and free country for more than a century before any active intervention was undertaken by the United States. Outrage after outrage had been piled upon American citizens who resided there or undertook to trade at her ports. The present war ought to have been fought fifty years ago, and it is a long, sad commentary on the too peaceful conservatism of the past that the first man killed in front of Santiago in June, 1898, was the grandson and namesake of the Secretary of State who held back the hand of justice in 1870 when the Virginius affair stirred the American people to indignation. It seems to prove that, whether the war was deferred or not, it must come in spite of the conservatism—in spite of the cost of life and money.

The thought that it would come was present in the minds of many, and in one instance at least seems to have been developed into a basis for action. Many residents of our city have noted in the street cars among the advertising signs which are so prominently displayed a series of cards which refer to naval and military lines, and which have a double interest at the present hour. Although they were placed in the cars over a year ago, before the Spanish war was thought of, their text in not a few points seems to foretell with accuracy some of the relations of the war.

Is there not a certain prophetic touch in the suggestion, "A clean nation has ever been a strong nation," with the further humorous advice to "fortify with Sapolio," backed by a picture of Uncle Sam marching up and down behind a rampart formed of cakes of that well-known article? Truly civilization and soap seem to go together, and the clean, well-tubbed, nicely housed Anglo-Saxon seems to have in that regard a great advantage over his soap-avoiding enemy from the peninsula of Spain.

We realize the dread realities of war when these cards suggest to us that the proper ammunition with which to resist dirt is Sapolio. The campaign in Cuba has resulted in a loss of life on the battle-field of about one hundred and fifty, while every evidence points to the probability that double that number of deaths will result from the yellow fever scourge, which largely originates from the Spanish lack of cleanliness. No less a statesman than James G. Blaine stated publicly that one hundred millions would be a cheap price to pay for Cuba if by proper sanitary measures we could prevent the annual scare of yellow fever along our coast.

The advance of civilization is marked by the sale of SAPOLIO

If, as these active advertisers assert, the advance of civilization is marked by the use of Sapolio, there should be a good market for their useful article in the Spanish possessions which have lately fallen under our control. Whether they were prophesying or not, their announcements are brisk and timely, and the advice they give is—like the American arms—irresistible.

New Products of Wood.

It is not generally known that over 00 per cent of wood may be converted into liquid. The strongest hydraulic pressure would not squeeze one-half of 1 per cent of moisture from dry wood, but by putting the same material into an iron retort and converting it into charcoal by means of heat, the gases and smoke, to the extent of fully 65 per cent of the weight of the wood, may be condensed into a liquid called pyroligneous acid, and from it are obtained wood alcohol, acetate of lime and wood tars. A cord of wood weighing 4,000 pounds produces about 2,650 pounds of pyroligneous acid and 700 pounds of charcoal. The pyroligneous acid from one cord of wood produces nine gallons of 82 per cent crude wood alcohol, 200 pounds of acetate of lime and about 25 gallons of tar, besides 35 bushels of charcoal. After the pyroligneous acid is neutralized with lime the wood alcohol is distilled off, the lime holding the acetic acid in solution. After the separation of the wood spirit, the remaining liquid is boiled down in open pans to a sugar, which is dried, and becomes the acetate of lime of commerce. Acetate of lime is used for making acetic acid. Fully three-fifths of all the wood alcohol and acetate of lime produced in the world are made in the United States. Fully 15,000 acres per year are cleared for this purpose. Wood alcohol for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, and at less than one-third the cost. It is used principally as a solvent in the making of shellac varnish, in making celluloid, photographic paper, etc. It makes many beautiful dye tints. It is antiseptic, and much used for liniments and for skin-rubbing in bath houses.

If conduct is three-fourths of life the other fourth must be good clothes.

The Biggest Bicycle in the World.

A German has just completed a bicycle that has one wheel nine feet in diameter. Two people ride it—one on each side. It runs easily because of its scientific construction. The scientific formula of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the reason of its great virtues in making the weak strong. If your health is poor, try a bottle.

Decline of Mortality in Prussia.

A German observer has shown for northern Germany a remarkable decline in the mortality from typhoid fever and diarrhoea, and in the deaths after surgical operations in hospitals doubtless influenced by antiseptic methods and by new and sanitary buildings, which has been observed in Prussia and in Germany generally, since the sanitary awakening of twenty years ago. In the successive quinquennial, from 1875 to 1894, the death rates per 10,000 living from typhoid fever were 6.17, 4.99, 2.78 and 1.86, and those from diarrhoea, 1.63, 1.59, 0.46 and 0.3.

A Chance for Fame.

Hamand—Have you an idea that could be worked up into a play whereby I might make a decided hit?

Plawryte—Got just the thing for you, my boy; a military play in which as the Spanish spy you will win round after round of cheers and applause.

Hamand—Really! And what do I do?

Plawryte—You get killed in the first act.

The Spanish War Is Over.

The people of Greater America will now be in a position to pay more attention to domestic affairs transpiring in our midst, among which we know of none more interesting to contemplate than the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition, popularly recognized as our Omaha Exposition. The Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893 may have been of greater proportions, but we are assured the Great Omaha Exposition is, in all other essential particulars, possessed of equal merit. Reduced rates are authorized via the Nickel Plate Road every day. Look out for special excursions at low rates on dates to be announced later.

A Beautiful Present

FREE for a few months to all users of the celebrated ELASTIC STARCH, (Flat Iron Brand). To induce you to try this brand of starch, so that you may find out for yourself that all claims for its superiority and economy are true, the makers have had prepared, at great expense, a series of four exact reproductions of the $10,000 originals by Muville, which will be given you ABSOLUTELY FREE by your grocer on conditions named below. These Plaques are 40 inches in circumference, are free of any suggestion of advertising whatever, and will ornament the most elegant apartment. No manufacturing concern ever before gave away such valuable presents to its customers. They are not for sale at any price, and can be obtained only in the manner specified. The subjects are:

American Wild Ducks, American Pheasant, English Quail, English Snipe.

The birds are handsomely embossed and stand out natural as life. Each Plaque is bordered with a band of gold.

ELASTIC STARCH has been the standard for 25 years.

TWENTY-TWO MILLION packages of this brand were sold last year. That's how good it is.

ASK YOUR DEALER to show you the plaques and tell you about Elastic Starch. Accept no substitute.

How To Get Them:

All purchasers of three 10 cent or six 5 cent packages of Elastic Starch (Flat Iron Brand), are entitled to receive from their grocer one of these beautiful Game Plaques free. The plaques will not be sent by mail. They can be obtained only from your grocer.

Every Grocer Keeps Elastic Starch.

Do not delay. This offer is for a short time only.

Two ways to use up clothes—rubbing them on a washboard, and washing them with harmful things. Unless you want to waste money, don't do either. Use Pearline. Use Pearline rightly, and there's no washboard needed. No rubbing to speak of. No wear. No hard work. As for the safety and utter harmlessness of Pearline, let its twenty years of uninterrupted and constantly-growing success talk. Anything that hurts or weakens the clothes couldn't be used, year in and year out, by millions of careful women. 555

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. JAMES PYLE, New York.

Does Baby Thrive?

If your baby is delicate and sickly and its food does not nourish it, put fifteen or twenty drops of Scott's Emulsion in its bottle three or four times a day and you will see a marked change.

We have had abundant proof that they will thrive on this emulsion when other food fails to nourish them.

It is the same with larger children that are delicate. Scott's Emulsion seems to be the element lacking in their food. Do not fail to try it if your children do not thrive. It is as useful for them in summer as in winter.

Ask your doctor if this is not true.

Draggoo-Miller.

Mr. Harry Draggoo and Miss Grace Miller, of Ft. Wayne, were married at high noon to-day at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Draggoo will make their home with Mr. Draggoo's mother, on South Main-st. Mrs. Draggoo, Mr. and Mrs. Griswold and Claude Benedict were in attendance from here.

OBITUARY.

Wm. Shoup was born in Lancaster Co., Penn. June 5, 1819, and died at his home in Richland township, DeKalb Co. Ind., Aug. 17, 1898, aged 79 years, 2 months and 12 days. He moved with his parents to Stark Co. Ohio, in Aug. 1837. In 1848 he was united in marriage to Catharine Holte, and in 1849 moved to Richland township, DeKalb Co., in which township he has been a resident for 49 years. At the age of 13 he united with the Reformed church, in which church he held a membership till death. We would not claim for him what he would not claim for himself, that he was without faults. But we do claim for him what is due him, viz, that he was a good neighbor, an affectionate husband, a kind father, a patient sufferer, and in a word an upright christian man. He leaves an aged wife, four children and twelve grandchildren. One son namely Alfred, has cared for the aged parents at the old home. One son lives in Garrett, Ind., one is the wife of Albert Foltz, the other daughter the wife of John F. Harte. The father has lived to a ripe old age and we believe was as ready to meet his maker as any one can be. He was never known to sing a hymn till a few evenings before his death, at which time he sang the entire hymns, "Rock Of Ages," and "I Am Going Home To Die No More." The funeral services were conducted from the Richland Center church by Rev. E. E. Campbell, the text chosen was 1 Cor. 15-55—"Oh death where is thy sting? Oh grave where is thy victory?"

SUMMER CATARRH

Catarrh of the bowels, because it is most prevalent in the summer months, is called summer catarrh.

It surprises many that bowel trouble is catarrhal. Dr. Hartman's books make this plain. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for them. They tell all about catarrh and how Pe-ru-na cures it wherever located.

"I had chronic diarrhœa for fifteen years," writes Mr. T. E. Miller, Grand Prairie, Tex. "I tried many medicines and doctors in vain. At last Pe-ru-na was recommended, and it relieved and cured me at once."

Mr. John Harting, 633 Main St., Cincinnati, O., writes: "My wife and myself took your Pe-ru-na for chronic diarrhœa and it cured us. No doctor or medicine we tried before helped us."

Mr. Edward Wormack, Ledbetter, Tex., writes: "Pe-ru-na for bowel troubles is unequalled by anything in my experience. I owe my life to Pe-ru-na, and shall always recommend it to those suffering as I was."

Mr. John Edgarton, 1020 Third Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "I suffered from dysentery for three years. I took Pe-ru-na and am now well."

GARRETT SOLDIER BOYS

Chas Foltz Writes Us Another Interesting Letter.

Fernandina, Fla., Aug. 13, '98

EDITOR GARRETT HERALD:

I will again write you a short letter, which will be my last in this camp, as we move some time during next week to another—Huntsville, Ala., is said to be the place. The boys are all very anxious to move, especially so since all that has transpired during the past few days, bringing unto us that most coveted of all things, Peace. But still if circumstances so demanded or if we should yet be called to the front, I think that there swells in the heart of every young man here the spirit of national honor and pride that would rise up and say, "go!" And the command would be opened willingly by all.

The common opinion of the men here is that we will be moved slowly northward and finally be mustered out. If so, although each will think and know in his own mind that he did all he could, there will be a feeling of discontent on account of the partialty shown during the present—or, at least, we hope, past—war; for our home state, which has always proven to be first in the field and last to go home, when duty demanded it, has been slighted, though a braver or more courageous body of men (with the exception of the writer) never shouldered a gun; no more willing hand to its duty to its country ever threw the parting kiss to home and friends.

But here we are. Instead of fighting we are grubbing—not that kind of "grubbing" where the appetite is satisfied, but good, old solid trees and roots. We have cleared about one hundred and fifty acres of land since we left Chickamauga Park. We have lost our title of "The Tigers" and are now known as "Studebaker's Grubbers."

The boys all got their pay on the tenth, inst. and are having a few more "knickknacks" on their bill of fare.

Clem Keiner received a box from home that, when started, was full of all sorts of nice things, mostly preserves, but when it reached here nearly all had spoiled. Although our comrade wore a look of disappointment, he feels equally grateful to his friends.

Chas. VanScoik is receiving great praise for the good cooking and baking that he is doing for the hungry mouths of Co. I (Waterloo,) to which company he belongs.

Dick McNany has the honor of being Mounted Orderly for the colonel on every twelfth day.

John Basse wears as broad a smile as ever and, in fact, he has not been sick since leaving home. Cares of this kind are very scarce.

Geo. Collins and Weber Caldwell each, with an occasional growl, are still on top.

Forest Bradford has been transferred to the Hospital Corps, which raises his pay to twenty-one dollars and sixty cents per month.

But people that are or have been circulating the false reports of Chas. Hathaway's illness and even death ought to see him. I'm sure his friends would not know him. He has as fat a face as you ever heard of. When the news of his reported death at Garrett reached here he was sitting at the table with as big a dumpling in his mouth as mother used to make. In fact, he has never looked healthier than at the present time.

We were all very sorry to hear of the losses by fire in and around Garrett but our salaries won't permit of much of a contribution toward rebuilding the structures.

Well, Mr. Miner, I don't want to occupy too much of your valuable space so I will close and join the boys in hopes of meeting you soon.

Yours etc.,

CHAS. C. FOLTZ

MODERN AMERICAN FRATERNAL ORDER.

Auburn Lodge No. 68, Modern American Fraternal Order was instituted last night in the Maccabees' Hall by Supreme Deputy Lew V. Ulrey. The following officers were elected:

Past President, Mrs. Dorothy Bolton;
President, Jay Love;
Vice President, Tiras T. Apple;
Chaplain, Mrs. Minnie Lanning;
Secretary, Cormie A. Gibford;
Treasurer, J. Perry Long;
Sergt-at-Arms, Harry Gill;
Conductor, Miss Nellie Franks;
Inside Guard, Miss May Green;
Outside Guard, Geo. E. Muhn,
Med. Examiner, Dr. John C. Baxter;
DR. JOHN C. BAXTER, GEO. L. LANNING, CHAS. A. SPAKE. } Trust.

The lodge is now composed of 55 members, however the charter is being held open and it is expected to run the membership up to over 100 in a few days. The organization is an insurance lodge but the social feature is purely patriotic, being founded on American history and patriotism without bias or creed distinction.

After the business was finished Deputy Ulrey rendered a couple of characterizations that were highly appreciated. The lodge then adjourned to meet in the same place next Friday night for further initiation and for installation.

Echoes of the War.

The vessels of the navy are being sent home for repairs and in a short time all will be as neat as new. The very few that were struck with Spanish shot will be repaired. The "Auxiliary cruisers" will be returnee to the steamship lines that own them as soon as the necessary changes can be made. These are the large merchant vessels, all comparatively new, that were made and owned by the American Steamship Co. The government had guaranteed them a heavy bonus for carrying mails, provided they would build their ships very strong and of a certain pattern, so that in case of war, government could have the privilege of taking them, covering certain parts with armor, putting in a certain number of guns, and use them as third rate warships. It is the first experiment of the kind we ever made, or any other nation. But it has been a great success. Some of these ships have fought hot battles, but they have been chiefly useful by their great speed, as blockade vessels and chasing down the merchant ships or smaller warships of the enemy.

Tuesday, there was another battle when Calbarien on the coast of Cuba was shelled by our gunboat Mangrove. She had not heard of peace, but after an hour or two the Spaniards heard of it and told her. The officers of a Spanish gunboat came aboard, and they had a talk.

In Porto Rico Saturday, the people of a small town hoisted the American flag after the Spanish troops had gone, but the latter returned, tore down the flag, and murdered 90 of the inhabitants.

Feminine Fisticuffing

Special to the Courier.

BUTLER Aug. 20, 1898:—Yesterday, upon affidavit of Blanche Greenwood in Justice Steward's court a warrant was issued for the arrest of Susan Greenwood on the charge of assault and battery. Case was called at 7:00 o'clock p. m., defendant confessing to charge and receiving an assessment of $1 fine, which together with costs $9.75 made $10.75. Unable to stay the docket with circulating collateral, mittimus was issued for commital of the woman to jail. This item is not unusual but for one fact, namely, that it illustrates the imprudence of bringing family affairs into court. Mrs. Susan Greenwood, defendant, is mother-in-law to Blanche Greenwood, plaintiff.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill. makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00 6

The Old War and The New

An exchange has a letter from Chickamauga camp in which is this item:

A very striking coincidence was mentioned the other day by Captain Allen of Company C, One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Indiana, Frankfort. On Sept. 19, 1863, early in the morning, Captain Allen with his company took up a position and opened fire on the enemy, on a spot not 20 feet from where the captain's tent is now situated. The rebels were in the woods where our division headquarters are now, and the regiment in which Allen was then a captain had taken up a position on the higher ground, on which we are camped.

When the One Hundred and Fifty eighth went into camp here Captain Allen recognized the place, and upon investigation found that his own tent was almost on identical spot where he saw such exciting times 35 years ago.

THE POWER OF GOLD

Is Limited—The Power of Health is Unlimited—Both Rich and Poor May Have Health by Using

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The rich need health to enjoy their riches. The poor doubly so to prevent greater poverty. Rich is he who has health, however poor in money. To be both poor and sickly is the extreme of poverty.

As all physical power, both mental and muscular, depends on the condition of the nerves, they should be strong and healthy. If strong, obey natures laws and keep them so. If weak and sickly, restore them to healthy action by using Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for sick nerves.

Don't treat your stomach, liver, kidneys or blood, but look well to your nerves and they will correct the troublesome symptoms of all the organs. Read what Wm. McCutchen, Bucyrus, Ohio, says:

"My trouble was sleeplessness, caused, probably, by too close application to my business. I could feel that lack of sleep was surely undermining my general health. I tried several kinds of medicine advertised to cure such troubles, but they did me no good. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. I knew it would cure me after I had taken the first dose. Natural and refreshing sleep restored the activity of both brain and body, and I was soon well."

Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer does not stimulate the nerves to unusual action. It arrests the waste of nerve tissue and builds up the frame work of health.

Just Like a Boy.

Tom Sommers, accompanied by his brother's little boy, was making some purchases to-day and when he had done he gave the packages all over to the lad, saying laughingly, "Can you carry all of them?" "Yes," was the ready answer, "and a watermelon, too." Tom had to tell him there was a melon at the house already, and the Young American marched off with his load, conscious of having done his duty as it was revealed to him. It was laughable and in every way like a boy. And he got the melon all right a little later on.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts. per bottle at H. B McCord's Drug Store. 6

Echoes of the War.

One of the best fighters of Dewey's fleet in the last engagement in the capture of Manila, was the Calloa a gunboat that Dewey had captured from the Spaniards and had put an American crew on board. She got in close to the shore and made it hot for her former masters.

Santiago where there has been so much sickness, has been cleaned up, by order and oversight of Gen. Wood, and sickness is abating. Many bodies of horses and men were lying around and had to be burned.

When we got Manila last Saturday the surrender included all the Philippine islands, just as the surrender of Santiago took in all the east part of Cuba. And as this surrender took place before Dewey heard of the peace, it will hold good in spite of the fact that the "peace protocol" says we insist on occupying the city of Manila only. It takes Dewey to make a good use of his time.

More colored troops are being sent to hold Santiago, as Shafter's original army has nearly all gone away.

We have picked up the broken cable at Manila and will get it into working order in a few days. We hold every part of the town and have nearly 7000 prisoners.

Our goverment is having a serious question to find what regiments to send home and what to keep. All want to stay in the service.

The rebellion in the Philippines is spreading, and as we are now the "government" it looks as if we are to have some trouble. The Cubans and Porto Ricans in some localities are making trouble by insulting and abusing their Spanish neighbors to get even for old troubles.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Nettie Rickel, daughter of Councilman John Rickel, of Waterloo, is in town, a guest of Nellie Boyer.

—Mrs. Quinn. Altenberg returned to her home at Toledo this morning, after spending a few days Mr. and Mrs. John Zimmerman.

—Miss Alice Wolf of Waterloo and Mrs Josie Mergy Ludwig of Goshen, a former Waterloo girl, were callers at this office today.

—The W. C. T. U. county convention is to be held at Garrett Saturday of this week, Aug. 20. An excellent program will be given, and all are invited.

—Mrs. John Buss, of Fairfield, was here yesterday, a guest of Mrs. Richards. Her niece, Nellie Richards, came back with her after a week's visit.

—James B. Baxter moved back to town yesterday and is now located in the property he owns at the west part of town. Life on the farm does not seem to have improved his health much.

—Lodie Potter, son of Councilman, S. S. Potter, is getting to be quite a help to his father in the grocery at the South End. He does a good deal of delivering and the like. Even a little fellow can help if he cares to.

—S. L. Wyman, of Morenci, came here to-day and takes a position in Davenport's drugstore. He is thoroughly equipped for his calling, having graduated in a school of pharmacy and had abundant experience in the business.

—W. H. Leas was in town this morning, and invited ye printer to reach under the buggy seat, which being done, there came forth a nice basket of pears. And both the office force and the house force have enjoyed them greatly.

—Mrs. Fremont Smith and daughter, Nellie, called at this office Monday and brought a sackful of fine peaches. They were Early Crawfords, and perfect in every way. It proves that by caring for our trees we can raise fruit here, and we all know that home grown fruit is the best.

—Chas Roache, a former resident of Goshen but not for several years in Chicago, was arrested in Goshen last week, charged with being one of the guilty parties to the robbing of Old Christopher Schrage of a big lot of bonds in Chicago, two years ago. It is not known what proof they have but it furnishes another clue to a noted and mysterious crime.

—Mrs. Chas. Bolton, Mrs. Rumpus and Mrs. Sam. Brandon surprised the Degree of Honor ladies last evening after work was over at the lodge. They brought in a full supply of roasting ears, piping hot. That was something new, and was highly enjoyed.

—There is a moment already on foot to ask congress to make a new legal holiday, the day on which which peace was declared between the United States and Spain. We doubt the wisdom of this move. The United States was reaping more profit by continuing the war than she will reap by stopping

Thursday's Daily.

—John Provines, of Spencerville, was in town Wednesday.

—Oscar and Amber Ensley of Indianapolis, are the guests of relatives.

—Rev. C. C. Albertson ranks among the great orators of modern times.

—Prof. Harrison and family returned from their summer vacation yesterday.

—Wm. Rush who lives east of town received a fine Chester White pig by express this morning. It came from Montpelier.

—Wm. Groscop came home last evening from Kansas, where he has been for some time, and will remain here a month or so.

—Among the many great men at the Island Park last year Dr. J. Wesley Hill is the only one of them called back this year.

—The cannon for the boys of the Light Artillery company, have come and are stored at present in the barn where Capt. DuWann lives.

—The B. & O. gives rates of one cent a mile to the National encampment at Cincinnati, Sept. 5 to 10. Tickets on sale Sept. 3 to 6. Ask any ticket agent for information.

—John B. Bryant of Artic has a business way of sending his subscription in, each year in a money postal order. We know of no handier way, and in this way one never gets behind.

—A party of five left for Niagara Falls over the Wabash last evening. They were, John Neff and wife, Ed. Weeks and wife, and Rev. Pearce former pastor of the Baptist church here.

—John Hogue and wife, whose home is in Valley Co., Nebraska, are here visiting the old friends and neighbors for the first time in eighteen years. He is a cousin of Frank and Lydia Hogue.

—Mrs. J. R. Moody and Mrs. J. J. Zent now of Mankato, Minn., arrived here Tuesday evening over the Wabash, and are at the Bradford. They will visit here several weeks before returning. Mrs. Zent's two children, a nice boy and girl are with them.

—Herman Brown is going to teach in Lagrange county this year instead of Allen county as at first reported. He has charge of the school at Wolcottville, where our friends of the family of Ed. Morell reside. We hope to see him succeed, and as he has always been successful as a teacher, no doubt he will.

—A. W. Madden is not only a thorough going marble dealer and competent trustee, but he manages some way to be a successful farmer, as well. His wheat this year, was on a part of that worthless old swamp, but it showed up 40 bushels an acre. His rye and oats were about as good, and his corn, now standing on the old creek bottom land promises a big yield. He can give many farmers valuable pointers.

Saturday's Daily.

—Editor Strayer of Ashley, was here today on some business matters.

—S. Z. Dickinson and Hon R. M. Lockhart, of Waterloo were on our streets today.

—FOUND:—A pair of steel mounted spectacles. Owner can have by paying for this notice.

—Mr. and Mrs. Tubbs, of Bryan, returned to their home this morning after visiting several days with Dr. and Mrs. Hoffman.

—Every body speaks highly of the Battalion meeting at Waterloo yesterday. They say it was the best ever held in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mochamer today were made the happy parents by the arrival of a nine pound girl. Dr. Baxter was in attendance.

—W. H. McIntyre's loss at Auburn Junction has him adjusted. Continental of Walter C. Hartman's agency paid the amount of the policy $1000 in full.

—Mrs. Garwood and her two daughters, Aileen and Helen, have returned from Cassopolis, where they have visited Mr. Garwood's father two or three weeks.

—A little child of Berry Penland in the country, died yesterday of cholera infantum. The funeral is tomorrow at 1 p. m., at the Lockwood church, in Jackson township.

—Congressman Robinson was in town awhile this yesterday on his way home from Waterloo. He stopped here an hour or two and was present a short time at the Matrimonial meeting.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. H. B. McCord.

The Pill That Will

Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills will prevent and cure biliousness.

"For years I have thoroughly tested AYER'S PILLS, both as a preventive and cure for biliousness. They are the best medicine for the purpose and do all that is claimed for them." J. E. KOLB, Shark, Ark.

Cure . . . Biliousness

—At the judicial convention the other day we met our old teacher friend Hymn Grube, now a prosperous farmer near Flint in Steuben county. He was a delegate from his township.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. H. B. McCord.

—W. H. Fair, of Butler township, and C. T. Rogers, of Keyser, were in town to day on business connected with the coming annual meeting of the 100th Indiana, of which both are members.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—This morning Walter Hartman sold Samuel M. Nickey's house on North Main street to Emily L. Lower of Wawaka Noble county. This is an elegant home and will make Mrs. Lower a pleasant place to live.

—There is talk in various quarters of changing our laws so as to have a county Judge to do the work now done by the board of commissioners. Such a change would be utter nonsence, and we predict will never be brought into practice.

—Washington Betz and wife who reside near Summit were here today, and brought us a lot of the largest pears we ever saw. They are all from young trees and from choice varieties and give one a good idea of the possibilities of DeKalb county, in the way of fruit growing.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. H. B. McCord.

—On our 6th page, weekly, we advertise the Badger corn cutter. We have just learned something more about it. It is a device to fasten to the leg and foot, and the hill of corn is out off at a down stroke of the foot as one walks along. Another feature of it is, it was invented and patented by a boy of 16.

—Mrs. Nathan Johnson took sick on reaching home yesterday on her return from the Battalion meeting at Waterloo. The trouble was some attack of head and stomach and for a time she was unconscious. They had to work with her till near morning. We are glad to learn she is better this afternoon, but still seriously sick.

—Angola Magnet-Makers and circulators of counterfeit coins have been quite active in this region of late. A dozen or more bogus half-dollars were worked off on Pleasant Lake dealers during the celebration there on the 4th, and attempts, some of them successful, have since been made to victimize business men in Steubenville, Summit, Ashley, Hudson and other places. One man is already in "limbo" for this kind of swindling, and it is generally believed that there are others who deserve official attention.

Saturday's Daily.

—Dick Baxter and family came up from Fort Wayne on the noon train.

—Dr. Stamets reports a girl baby born Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown.

—"The Racket Store" opened up this morning, with new goods in every department.

—John Kruger has his new fruit stand on Seventh-st opened. He has some very choice fruit in display.

—The letter from Chas. Foltz in this issue is taken from the Garrett Herald as we know Bro. Miner will not object.

—Fred Groscop, now at Ashley is going to move his tile mill to Auburn Junction in a short time. He wants to get into a livelier town than he is now.

—Antwerp claims to have a handsome girl whose name is Hellen Cassen. And they do say, she is anxious to get married so as to get a bran new name.

—Read Attorney Hoffman's card. As noted before, he is again a citizen of Auburn, and a lawyer in our courts. Being well posted in law, he is bound to get business.

—A COURIER reporter has during the past ten days been over the north half of the county. He says everywhere he goes people say they are coming to the great Carnival at Auburn.

—John Sommers, a brother of Tom Sommers, has been here a few days, having come from his home in Manitoba, where he has been for some time. He had not visited here for twenty-three years.

Hadsell Reunion.

On Saturday, August 20, the Hadsell family met at the home of C. J. Hadsell, southeast of St. Joe, in their 25th annual reunion, and to celebrate the 85th anniversary of Grandma Hadsell's birthday. There were present representatives of four generations: Mother, three sons and two daughters, nineteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren, together with those who have been united to the family by marriage, and a few invited guests; making in all 55 present. All sat down to bountiful repast. A table loaded with the good things of this life, followed later in the day with ice cream and cake and melons. After dinner a program consisting of speeches, recitations and songs, was carried out, and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. The family has for a number of years been in the habit of having these annual gatherings on or near grandma's birthday, and none enjoys them better than she. And this was one of the pleasantest and will be long remembered by those present.

WILL MUSTER OUT.

Orders have been issued for the mustering out of the following regiments:

First Vermont. First Maine, Fifty-second Iowa, Sixth Pennsylvania, Fifth Maryland, Second New York, Second Nebraska. 157th Indiana, all volunteer infantry; also Batteries A, B. C and D, Ohio light artillery; First Illinois volunteer cavalry; Batteries A and B, Georgia light artillery; Twenty-eighth Indiana light battery, and the New York and Pennsylvania cavalry troops now in Porto Rico.

Other orders to muster out troops will be announced as soon as definite decisions are reached.

The Porto Rico cavalry to be mustered out are troops A and C of New York, the Philadelphia City Troop, Sheridan Troop and the Governor's Troop of Pennsylvania.

Big B. & O. Excursion.

The B. & O. conductors' excursion this morning was a monster. The Sprott agency up town sold 40 tickets, and 92 were sold at the Junction, making 132 from this station. The trains started from Chicago Junction, there being three in all. By the time they reached here they had over 800, so the man in charge of the excursion told our agent. They were about an hour and a half behind on reaching Anburn. But when the local freight came to the Junction they reported that about 800 got on at Garrett. Of course there will be several hundred more reported from the various stations between here and Chicago, making this one of the largest of the many popular excursions ever run over the B. & O.

FROM COMPANY K.

A Young Soldier's Letter To His Mother at Home.

FERNANDINA, FLA., Aug. 22, 1898.

DEAR MOTHER:—I thought I would write a few lines for I am the only one here. The Major has gone over to St. Augustine, for a little vacation trip of a day. I had my vacation yesterday and I never want to have one like that again. The way it was, Charlie Elson, Charley Hathaway and myself, hired a sail boat to go over to Cumberland Island, where the Iron King Palace is. With some Thirty-Second Michigan boys, we got in the boat at Fernandina at 7:30 and started for the island, but the wind was against us and we didn't get over to the island till 12 o'clock, and started around the east side, looking for an entrance that we could land, for you know we were on the ocean and if we would get too close to shore we would smash our boat. We had gone about six miles, and the fellow that was handling the boat found out that it was twenty miles to any entrance, so we thought we would come back towards town. We go about two miles and got caught in a storm and had to anchor and take the fellows that were sea sick, to shore. We got seven men on shore and the waves ran so high we couldn't take any more, and if I ever wished to be out of a place, I did there, for I was left on the boat. I got sick but not very bad. I didn't throw up my socks as they talk about, but some of them did, and did a very good job at it, too. When the wind was down we started back, and got back about nine o'clock last night, after tacking as they called it, about seventy-five times. Well I am all right this morning, only I got a little headache left. Well when I go out in a sail boat again, I won't go. I sailed enough. Well I suppose we will move to Huntsville before long, I must stop for this time.

Your Son,
ROY MCDOWELL.

Echoes of the War.

We now get news from Manila by its own cable. The news from that city are dated Aug. 25 and come in the morning papers of August 26.

The insurgents at Manila claim they they will remain quiet and satisfied if Americans remain there and secure good government for them. But they say if Americans withdraw and let the Spaniards control things again, they will raise another rebellion.

Jamaica, one of the best of the British West India islands now wants to be annexed to the United States. And she has good reasons for it. If we have Cuba, the fruits and other products of that great island will come into this country free, while the products of Jamaica will be hit hard by a tariff, when landed in the United States and her trade thereby greatly injured. But if she could be annexed to us, her products would come into this country free of duty and she woald be on as good footing as Cuba. After all, money has something to do, even with nations.

The government will dispatch several warships from our home fleets to re-enforce Admiral Dewey at Manila. It is plain that if we are to hold those islands we must have not olny a good army but a strong fleet of first-class vessels.

The regiments of negro troops are rapidly taking the place of white troops in Cuba and Porto Rico.

Free Medical Advice

You need a doctor many times when you don't call one. You suffer pain in fifty forms and yet won't call the doctor, because you hope that the pain "will go away after a while." And, too, you know by experience, that that first visit of the doctor is generally followed by many others, with the inevitable consequence of a big bill "for professional services." You don't know what to do for yourself or what to take.

But suppose that you could get free, absolutely free, the advice of one of the most in the United States? You can. The physician is right here. He has an office in the building, he has a staff of correspondents to assist him, and anyone and everyone, who needs medical advice is invited to write to him. If it's baby's health or mother's or the health of any member of the family you may write about it, sure of a careful reading of your letter, sure of a conscientious diagnosis of your case, if cure is possible. Every letter will be held as a strictly confidential communication. Remember these facts.

We offer you medical advice from one of the most eminent practitioners in the United States, whether our medicines suit your particular case or not. We offer you this advice at the cost of the two cent stamp which it will take to bring your letter to our office. Address the Medical Department, Dr. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

AUBURN CARNIVAL

This will be the grandest series of pageants and parades of living statuary search light effects, electric fountains, grand fireworks and tableaus ever seen in the state, eclipsing by far. the one we had last year. Then there will be the great sham battle, with the Garrett German Veterans for Spaniards and our Light Artillery, and perhaps Co. K, to assist, if the latter get home in time. The evening of the great Pain fire works will be especially grand. Those who have seen the immense scenery painted by McBride to go with the fire works and sham fight will have some idea of the greatest display. Then the flower parade will be lovely, given by ladies in carriages and on horseback. And the comic parades of masked people will be droll and laughable. A half cannot be told. It must be seen to be understood. Remember it is all free, and is to be seen only in Auburn, and on the days and evenings of Sept. 7, 8, and 9.

Crushed To Death.

(Avilla News)

Stephen Bohart, a twelve-year old boy, was run over and killed at Huntertown Monday afternoon. He was playing on a hayrack, which was hitched in front of the house, and to which a team of spirited horses were attached. The horses frightened at some object and ran away. The boy was unable to maintain his hold on the swaying wagon, and fell from the rack to the ground. The wheels passed over his body, killing him instantly. His body was not much mangled, and death resulted from severe internal injuries. He was a particularly bright little fellow, and his tragic death has caused universal sadness.

THE BIG SHOW.

Mr. J. A Bally and the Sells Brothers are the kind of men that never do anything by halves; consequently, the complete great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' consolidated shows will be here—every animal, every act, every rare feature, every unique and exclusive attraction. As a matter of sound business policy, as well as of common justice, our people are entitled to just as much for their money as those of any other locality, and they will get it. All silly or false rumors to the contrary, it may be stated right here that no tented show was ever divided, or ever will or can be. It is simply a preposterous and physical impossibility.

Excess Fares Discontinued.

The North Western Line has discontinued excess fares on the "Colorado Special," which leaves Chicago daily 10:00 a. m., reaching Omaha 11:55 p. m. and Denver 2:55 next afternoon. It has furthor improved its service by perfecting through sleeping car arrangements on the "Colorado Special" to Colorado Springs. Train leaving Chicago 10:30 p. m, daily also has through sleeping and chair cars. Tourists' tickets via the Chicago & North-Western on sale at all important points in the United States and Canada.

Cowing Home

The two batteries that went into camp at Indianapolis are now ordered home, as is also the 159th regiment, making with the 157th two regiments and two batteries, the Fort Wayne battery and the Indianapolis battery. The 158th, 160th and 161st, have not yet been ordered home. There is some complaint heard in regard to the officers of the 157th staying up town too much. But whether this is so, or not, we cannot say.

RIGHT IN IT.

That's where Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is. The greatest remedy for the stomach that was ever put together. Absolutely vegtable with the exception of the Pepsin. Are you constipated? Then try Syrup Pepsin. Have you indigestion or sick headache? Then use Syrup Pepsin. Spend 10c for a trial bottle and you will be convinced. Large sizes 50c and $1 00. A true family remedy. At F. E. WON AT POKER

Teachers must be scarce over in Marshall county. Two township trustees recently sought to hire the same man. They could not agree as to which should have him, and he did not care, as each offered the same wages. Finally, the two trustees concluded to decide it by a game of poker, and the winner of the game got the popular teacher.

Prussian State Railways.

The net earnings of the Prussian state railways for the year 1897 were 503,899,060 marks ($119,927,976), or 7.15 per cent on the invested capital, against 469,468,689 marks ($111,733,547), or 6¾ per cent during the previous year. The surplus accruing to the government was 63,761,260 marks ($15,175,180), greater than the budget estimate. The Prussian government pays to the holders of bonds (given to former proprietors of the railways) interest at 3½ per cent. The net earnings in 1897 of 7.15 per cent thus mean an actual profit of 3.65 per cent.

A Year's Work of the German Emperor.

The mass of work which the German emperor has to do may be understood from the following figures, representing twelve months' labor: He received 1,026 immediate reports, including 158 telegrams, gave 751 decisions, and signed 802 cabinet orders, appointments, and other documents. Five thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven reports were laid before him; but the civil cabinet had to deal with about 50,000 documents addressed to his majesty, and about 400 letters and telegrams arrived daily.

MATTHEWS DEAD.

Indiana's Former Governor Succumbed to the Paralytic Stroke.

When Asked if He Believed in Jesus the Dying Man's Answer Was "Yes."

A Batch of Miscellaneous Telegraph News from All Parts of the World.

End Peaceful.

A special from Wingate, Ind., says: At 6:30 Sunday morning at the Meharry homestead, ex-Gov. Claude Matthews passed away surrounded by his wife and all other members of his immediate family. There was prayer service, accompanied by the singing of hymns at the bedside of the dying ex-Governor. Mrs. Matthews stated that she would give anything in the world if her husband would manifest by a single word his faith in Jesus. About 3 o'clock the minister in the course of the services asked the dying man if he believed in Jesus. His answer was "yes." It was the only word he spoke after he was stricken with paralysis at Lafayette, while making a speech to the old settlers. He immediately lapsed into profound coma from which he did not recover before he passed away at 6:30.

Eighteen Firemen Injured.

Eighteen firemen were injured, several of them seriously, at a fire in the building at No. 92 Arch street, Boston, recently. Fire broke out in the fourth story, occupied by A. P. Grant, printer, rapidly extending to the floors below and gaining immense headway before it was discovered. Soon after the firemen arrived there were several hot air explosions in rapid succession. All the members of Engine Company No. 25, who were at work on the front stairway, were blown down the stairs, several sustaining serious injuries and the rest being badly burned around the face and neck.

Japan Satisfied.

Minister Buck of Tokyo, Japan, writes the Department of State that he has observed no dissatisfaction there in consequence of the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States, since annexation has been accomplished.

The Government and people alike appear to be satisfied that our Government will fully protect the rights and interests of Japan and Japanese subjects in those islands. On the part of the public press he has known of no unkind expressions because of the United States annexing these islands.

Prize Fighter Killed.

Alexander Scott is dead as the result of a prize fight with Tommie Butler, before the Greenwood Athletic Club, New York. He collapsed at the end of the tenth round. He died at the hospital. The doctors say he had kidney disease and was unfit to enter the ring. Excitement and punishment caused his death. Butler, his seconds and the ring officials were arrested.

Short Corn Crop in Kansas.

The opinion of grain men throughout the Kansas corn belt has been secured as to the late corn, and all agree that not more than half a crop need be expected. Continued dry and hot weather has destroyed thousands of acres. The corn blades have rolled up under the scorching heat, and the crop in many localities will not make good forage.

Million for New Mail Sacks.

W. W. Mooney & Sons, who operate one of the largest tanneries in the world, located at Columbus, Ind., have been awarded a contract to furnish the Government leather for the manufacture of mail sacks. The contract extends over a period of five years and amounts to $1,000,000.

A Long Furlough.

The War Department has decided to give all the volunteers who took an active part in the Santiago campaign a sixty days' furlough. The same action will be taken in regard to the volunteers now in Porto Rico when they return.

New Debs Party Incorporated.

The Secretary of State of Illinois has licensed a new political party to incorporate. It is styled the Social Democratic Association. Eugene V. Debs, Victor L. Berger and Seymour Stedman are the incorporators.

Collide in the English Channel.

The pearl-fishing steamer Hamburg collided with the English schooner Catherine in the English channel during the prevalence of a dense fog. All of the Catherine's crew except the helmsman and eight men were drowned. One member of the Hamburg's crew was killed in the collision.

Powder Plant Destroyed.

A tremendous explosion at the plant of the Chattanooga Powder Company at Ooltewah Station, Tenn., killed two white men, Lucius B. Eakin and Harton Mortchke, and wounded seriously, if not fatally, six others. After the explosion the plant was destroyed by fire.

EIGHT ARE BURIED ALIVE.

Disaster in the Carnegie Tunnel on the Pan-Handle Road.

Eight men were killed, possibly ten, and five more injured, two fatally, at the Carnegie tunnel, on the Chartiers divison of the Pan-Handle Railway near Pittsburg, Pa. The accident was due to the wall of the tunnel caving in on a number of workmen. Five men were injured. One of these, a negro, name unknown, was taken to the West Penn hospital in a dying condition. One of the others is also expected to die. The men were engaged in tearing out the tunnel on the Chartiers valley branch of the Pan-Handle Railroad, just west of the town of Carnegie. They were preparing to pull down the west wall of the tunnel, had fixed a rope for this purpose and were preparing to drill holes in it for blasting. Suddenly the wall fell over on them. Every man standing at that end of the big excavation was buried alive. The other workmen at once began the work of rescue. Seven of the men were taken out dead.

SHOT WHILE IN PULPIT.

Georgia Minister Receives One Hundred and Seven Wounds.

Rev. J. B. Fletcher, a Congregationalist minister, was shot while attempting to organize a Congregational church at Smiley, Ga., which is about twenty miles from his home at Hagan, Ga. He went to Smiley, as the result of correspondence concerning the organizing of the church, which has been carried on for several months. While in the pulpit he was shot through the window, his body being riddled with 107 buckshot and several small shot. They entered his hips and thigh, one lodging in his left hand and five in his right hand. His wife, with the assistance of others, put him into a buggy and took him twenty miles to his home. His condition is serious, although the expectation is that he will recover. But two shot have been removed from his body. One of his assailants has been arrested. The others have been located. The would-be assassins are said to be colored officials of a Methodist church.

BIG FIRE IN NEW YORK.

Hundreds of Sleeping People Bewildered by the Flames.

The explosion of a large ammonia tank, used in the making of artificial ice, set fire to Jacob Hoffman's Crescent brewery, a five-story brick structure in New York. The flames spread with marvelous rapidity, and the Central Bottling Company's plant soon caught fire. Within a very short time the entire block, surrounded by Third avenue, Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth streets, seemed to be doomed. The surrounding tenements, all filled with sleeping people, next ignited, and the bewildered tenants began to pour out into the streets by the hundreds. Alarm after alarm was turned in by the police and the earlier arrivals of firemen, until four alarms had been sounded and eighteen engines and five hook and ladder trucks were on the scene. Many thrilling rescues of frightened men, women and children were made by the firemen.

LABORERS WANT LEGAL HELP.

Canadian Workmen Discharged to Make Room for Italians.

A gang of about sixty Italian laborers has been imported from Buffalo by the Grand Trunk authorities to work on the double tracking of the system between Hamilton and Burlington, Ont. A gang of Canadian workmen was discharged to make room for the imported Italians. The Canadians called on T. H. McPherson, M. P., and asked to have the alien labor law brought to bear against the railway people and have the Italians sent back. Mr. McPherson gave the men a letter to ex-Mayor W. B. McMurrich of Toronto, who had been appointed by the Dominion Government for the purpose.

Flowery Kingdom Is Disturbed.

News has been received from the Orient that there was a battle between the rebels at Wu-Chow, and the imperial Chinese troops, in which the former were victorious. Over 1,500 of the troops were slain and their bodies were thrown into the river. The Dosing, under Capt. Tholman, was engaged to take about 1,000 Chinese troops to the scene of the rebel lines. From the time the Dosing left Canton until she reached Wu-Chow, some 200 miles up the river, Capt. Tholman had trouble with his crew, the Chinese sympathizing with the rebels. One, a comprador, began inciting them to mutiny, and the captain alleges that in self-defense he was compelled to shoot the man. The comprador died from his wound the next day. Capt. Tholman was placed under arrest, and, as soon as an opportunity was afforded, was sent to Canton. In his journey he was confined in an iron cage, and on arrival was placed in the British jail. On account of claim of American citizenship made by Tholeman there is a bitter feeling against all Americans in that district and further trouble is feared.

Marine Horror Feared.

Mute evidences of a great ocean disaster in which one vessel and perhaps two may have gone to the bottom were seen ten miles off Fire Island by the crew of the incoming British steamship Algoa, from Hamburg and Shields. The Algoa passed through a vast quantity of wreckage in which were steamer chairs, trunks, boxes and bedding. Captain Hansford expressed the opinion that there had been a collision near where he saw the wreckage, and that at least one of the vessels in it had gone down. Captain Hansford thinks the vessel was a steamship carrying passengers and that there must have been loss of life. The trunks and furniture were scattered over more than five miles. No bodies were seen by Captain Hansford or his officers. Captain Hansford is positive that the wreckage had not been in the water more than twenty-four hours. The captain did not pick up any of the wreckage or attempt to identify it. He supposed that the disaster was already known in New York.

Murder in St. Louis.

James A. Baker, superintendent of the Majestic Steel Range Company, was shot and killed in front of his home at 5055 Ridge avenue, St. Louis, by Campbell Allgaier. The men quarreled over certain alleged statements Baker is said to have made about Allgaier's sister Betty, who lives a few doors west of the Baker home. Baker was 37 years old, and leaves a widow. Allgaier, who was placed under arrest, is 25 years old and a widower.

Atkinson Case Out of Court.

The indictment against Mrs. Myra Atkinson, wife of Gov. Atkinson of West Virginia, for forgery has been quashed and the case against her dismissed by Judge Blizzard in chambers, on the ground that the indictment failed to allege guilty intent, and, further, that the dismissal of J. P. Owens, principal, would necessarily acquit Mrs. Atkinson, who was only charged as accessory.

Fire Loss of $300,000.

The plant of the High Falls Sulphite Pulp and Mining Company, located at Pyrites, N. Y., has been destroyed by fire. The cause is unknown. The loss is placed at $300,000, and there was an insurance of $50,000.

Kirk Phillips for Governor.

At Mitchell, S. D., the Republicans of South Dakota nominated a full State ticket, with Kirk Phillips for Governor.

Series of Coincidences.

A curious fatality seems to hang over the office of Assessor of Lawrence County, S. D. Two years ago James Bullock was nominated on the Republican ticket for the office, and while on an election journey he fell down an abandoned mining shaft and was killed. Joe Schaler was appointed to the vacancy on the ticket, and he died a horrible death from an overdose of some drug. Brad Wood, the Populist nominee for the office, was elected, and soon after the election, he, too, met a violent death. The county commissioners then appointed W. W. Giddings to fill the vacancy. Giddings was killed a few days ago in the terrible tragedy at Central City by Ed Shannon because of jealousy, the murderer also killing Jack Weare, a friend who interfered, and pounding his wife's head with his revolver so that she died, and finished by shooting and killing himself. Candidates for Assessor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Giddings are naturally not very numerous.

INDIANS TO GO TO MEXICO.

Creek Tribe Is Dissatisfied with the United States' Treatment of It.

Many members of the Creek Indian nation, dissatisfied with the United States Government for abolishing the Indian Government and interfering in their tribal affairs, are making elaborate preparations for establishing a large colony in Old Mexico. The Creek tribe consists of about 15,000 members, who are the exclusive owners of some 3,000,000 acres of the finest and richest farming lands in Indian territory. Fully 3,000 of the Indians will emigrate with the first expedition. Charles Douglass of Fort Scott, Kan., who has large financial interests and mining leases in the Creek nation, and is founder of Creek City, has been engaged by the Indians to take charge of the colonization and exchange their lands for property in Mexico. Mr. Douglass, the Governor of the Creek nation and three prominent members of the tribe, already selected, will leave soon for Mexico to secure a location and land concessions from the Mexican authorities. It is claimed that as soon as the first party is settled another and much larger number of Indians will be ready to go.

STRIKE QUICKLY BROKEN.

Hazleton Miners Return to Work When Threat Is Made to Shut Down.

The 700 coal miners and laborers employed in the Audenreid and Honeybrook strippings of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company at Hazleton, Pa., who went on strike the other day, returned to work the next morning. The men struck because of what they claimed to be the unjust discharge of two Hungarian laborers. The prompt and decisive action of Superintendent Richards in posting a notice that if the men were not at work in the morning the mines would be shut down for the balance of the year produced a wholesome effect on the strikers, although they claim the two discharged men will be reinstated.

St. Louis Bank Systematically Robbed

A St. Louis bank, one of prominence throughout the West, has been for several months the victim of systematic robbery. By means of a hooked wire, reached through an orifice at the bottom of a steel-walled vault, the culprit or culprits have worked a highly lucrative game, until from the best information obtainable the authorities believe the bank's losses will foot up into five figures. The cashier of the bank has no explanation to make. Detectives have the bank employes under surveillance.

Menocal Is Now Out.

A. G. Menocal, civil engineer in the navy, who was court-martialed some months ago and sentenced to suspension from duty on furlough pay for three years for neglect of duty in connection with the construction of the Brooklyn dry dock, has been pardoned by the President, which restores him to his former status in the navy. Mr. Menocal retires from active service on Sept. 1.

Jewish Colony in Porto Rico.

Barnet Pruzen, a well-known Kansas City commission merchant, is at the head of a movement to form a Jewish colony in Porto Rico. "I already have," he said, "the promise of nearly fifty families to join me. These families can raise from $500 to $5,000 each to put into the venture, and if all agree we will form a communistic colony. We hope to leave by Jan. 1."

Decrease in German Exports.

The report received from Consul Mason at Frankfort, Germany, shows that the German exports to the United States from seventeen large manufacturing towns in that district have fallen off heavily during the past year. The exports for the year up to June 30 were $31,025,501, as against $37,623,883 for the preceding year.

St. Louis Suicide Identified.

The woman who undressed herself on the river bank and threw herself into the water at St. Louis, where she was drowned, has been identified as Maggie Muhl, a German domestic.

Three Hundred Miners Drown.

A dispatch from Vienna to the London Daily News says that 300 miners were drowned by the flooding of the Kasimir coal mine at Nience, near Schnowiz, Silesia.

Henry Gage for Governor.

The California State Republican convention nominated Henry Gage, a Los Angeles attorney, for Governor.

DEWEY WOULD FIGHT

HE SO TOLD THE GERMANS AT MANILA BAY.

Plucky American Admiral Advised Meddlesome Germans that If They Wanted to Try Conclusions They Would Be Accommodated.

Shameful Proceedings.

Few realize the difficulties with which Admiral Dewey had to contend in the Philippines since the sinking of the Spanish fleet. Indeed, that feat was the least difficult of his many labors, says a correspondent of the New York Sun, writing prior to the capture of Manila. His chief trouble was occasioned by the Germans. The latter seemed to take special delight in violating moral proprieties and disregarding Admiral Dewey's regulations.

Admiral Dewey had ordered that there should be no movement of ships or boats about the bay at night without his knowledge and permission. That was necessary to an effective blockade, and in order to be legal, a blockade must be effective. The Germans began at once to disregard the regulation. They sent launches about after sundown as if there had been no such regulations. The launches were stopped by our patrol boats and some of them were turned back. The result was friction between the two admirals. Von Diedrichs protested. Dewey replied that his regulation must be observed.

The Germans kept up their work and Dewey's ships have watched the Germans at night with their searchlights. It is particularly offensive to one warship to be the target for another's searchlight, but that has happened to the Germans several times as the wheeling American lights examined the bay to see what was going on. Von Diedrichs did not like it. Dewey sent word that he regretted the necessity of such work, but he was compelled to keep informed of what went on in the bay at night. He intimated that the Germans were acting as if they thought that they were blockading Manila instead of the Americans.

It is quite within his right as the blockader to do this, but Von Diedrichs protested. The German admiral twisted Dewey's contention and construed it as a claim of the right of search. The American admiral had never set up claim to such a right, but he insisted that he had the right to know the character of every ship that came into the bay and its business, and that the mere fact that a ship flew the German flag did not prove that she was German, because it is recognized in international law as a right of any warship to fly any colors desired.

Dewey Willing to Fight.

Matters kept getting worse. German launches were stopped and sent to their ships. Permission to move in the night time was refused on some occasions, and finally Admiral Dewey took occasion to say to the German flag lieutenant that certain things meant war and the Germans were approaching dangerously near them. Then he added in substance that if the Germans wanted war they could have it now or at any other time, here or at any other place.

In reply to this Von Diedrichs took a pacificatory tone and disavowed any intention of violating proper usages or the American admiral's blockade regulations.

Then came the Subig bay incident. The insurgents were attacking Isla de Grande. They had captured a steamer from the Spanish and they sent her down to Subig with men. She came back one afternoon and reported to Dewey that the cruiser Irene had prevented her from attacking Grande Island and had forced her to haul down her insurgent flag and raise a white one.

Dewey sent the Raleigh and Concord there at once. They went in and cleared for action at 8:15 the next morning, ready for what might come, German or otherwise. As they went in on one side of the island, the Irene came out on the other at full steam. The two American ships took the island with 623 prisoners, nearly all Spanish soldiers, and 600 rifles, with an immense quantity of ammunition.

When the Irene came back the McCulloch spoke, but did not stop her. This brought a protest from both sides. Von Diedrichs objected to the hauling up of his ships. Dewey declared that the Germans were lending aid and comfort to our enemies, thereby making themselves openly Spain's allies. He sent a message to the German admiral, the substance of which was:

"Is there peace or war between our countries? If there is war I want to know it. If there is peace I want you to change your course. The way to make war is to clear up ship and go at it."

Von Diedrichs replied with an apology and then as if repenting he wrote to Admiral Dewey a note in which he misconstrued Dewey's contention about right to speak incoming ships, and said he would lay the matter before commanders-in-chief now in the harbor. Since then Dewey has heard nothing from him, but he has heard what happened when Von Diedrichs called on Capt. Chichester of the Immortalite, the senior officer of the English squadron. The Englishman showed the German his instructions, by which he was ordered to do what Dewey had been contending that the Germans should do. There was not much ground left for Von Diedrichs after that.

AWFUL SUFFERING IN HAVANA.

Condition of Things There Reported as Horrible.

Reports from Havana picture the condition of things there as horrible. Provisions and other necessaries of life are very scarce, and prices continue high. The colonial government imposed the highest customs duties, which continue in force, making prices high and rendering the situation of the poor very painful. The free kitchens which have been established in Havana daily furnish about 30,000 persons with food, but owing to the great number of poor in the city who are without food of any sort, the amount of supplies handled by these kitchens is quite insufficient to relieve the distress to any great extent. Women and children lie about the streets, pale and emaciated, and looking more like corpses than living beings.

UNCLE SAM WILL BE READY.

In Case of Hitch in Peace Negotiations with Spain.

Washington special:

The order of the Navy Department for the drydocking and repairs of the big ships in Admiral Sampson's fleet indicates that this Government will not be caught napping either by Spain or by any other nation which may seek to interfere with the accomplishment of its aims.

It is the intention of the department to put all the fighting vessels of the navy in the very best possible shape during the existence of the armistice. In the event that Great Britain should remain firm in her refusal to allow the ships of Admiral Dewey's fleet to dock at Hong Kong, arrangements will very likely be made to send a floating dock to the Philippines. This will certainly be done if Admiral Dewey recommends it.

The Navy Department will also see to it that all the ships of the navy are provided with smokeless powder during the armistice. While the ships are at the navy yards undergoing needed repairs the sailors who served their guns so gallantly at Santiago are to be given liberal shore leaves to compensate them for the hard service they have rendered. Some of them have not had any shore leave for seven months.

The War Department will take equal care to do everything possible to increase the efficiency of the land forces during the armistice. The troops in the field will be reduced, probably to 100,000. With only this number of soldiers to look after the War Department will be able to take care of all their wants promptly. They will all be armed with the Krag-Jorgensen rifles, and target practice will be taken up in all the camps. If Spain should conclude to continue the war after the peace commission has finished its work, or if any of the powers of Europe should attempt to interfere with the administration's policy in the Philippines, the United States will be found in splendid shape to cope with the emergency. It is not expected, however, that there will be any more fighting and the measures to be taken by the War and Navy Departments are purely precautionary.

The administration is pleased with the condition of affairs in Porto Rico, where the Spanish commander, Gen. Macias, is showing a friendly spirit in co-operating with the Americans in making ready for the evacuation.

BLOODSHED AT CAVITE.

Serious Clash Between the American Troops and Natives.

There was a serious clash at Cavite between United States soldiers and the insurgents, the riot resulting in the killing of one soldier and the serious wounding of another. George Hudson, a member of the Utah battery, got into a dispute with a native shopkeeper. Fearing trouble, he fired his revolver in the air to attract the attention of some of his fellow soldiers. A great crowd of natives ran to the scene of the disturbance, and at once began firing their revolvers, killing Hudson and seriously wounding Corporal William Anderson of the same battery, who had hurried to the assistance of Hudson. A detachment of the Fourth cavalry was called out and dispersed at Filipinos.

On the same night some of the soldiers doing guard duty saw a large party of natives stripping the wreck of a gunboat which was lying in Cavite bay. A boat with an armed force was put off from the shore. The sailors hailed the natives, who failed to answer. Then the soldiers fired a volley, killing one and wounding another.

FAVORS CESSION OF JAMAICA.

Neville Lubbock Thinks Island Should Belong to America.

Neville Lubbock, who was the expert adviser of the British delegates upon the occasion of the Brussels conference upon the question of sugar bounties, was interviewed in reference to the proposed action by the Jamaicans to petition the Queen for the cession of the island of Jamaica to the United States. Mr. Lubbock said that in his opinion the cession of the island to America would be of immense advantage to the people of the island. Almost all the products of the island, with the exception of rum, went to the United States, and there was a feeling that the British West Indies colonies had been shamefully treated by the mother country.

WANTS CREDIT FOR INDIANA.

Captain Taylor Complains that He Was Slighted.

Captain H. C. Taylor of the battleship Indiana has taken exception to Rear Admiral Sampson's report of the sea battle in Santiago bay, declaring that the Indiana was not given the credit it justly deserved. He declares that the Indiana during the first hour contributed more to the destruction of the Oquendo and Marie Teresa than any other vessel of the squadron, except one, and equaled it. Rear Admiral Sampson, upon receiving the complaint of the Indiana's captain, answered the letter of objection, giving the Indiana all the credit it deserved and apologizing for what seemed to have been an oversight.

SAMPSON CORRECTS GARCIA.

Denies that Cervera Surrendered to the Cubans.

Admiral Sampson said concerning the report that Garcia claims that Cervera surrendered to the Cubans and was turned over to the navy, that it could not be true. There were no Cubans about, except a few on shore. These few employed themselves by shooting at the defenseless Spaniards. It is questionable if the Spaniards would have escaped alive, the admiral said, if it had not been for the American sailors. The admiral says Cervera was taken off his flagship by the Gloucester, and was afterward taken aboard the Iowa.

WAR COST SPAIN $600,000,000.

Must Pay $10,000,000 More to Bring Her Troops Home.

A dispatch from Madrid says that the repatriation of all the Spanish troops in the Antilles will cost 50,000,000 pesetas ($10,000,000). The total cost of the war has been 3,000,000,000 pesetas ($600,000,000). The collection of $10,000,000 in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines toward the support of the army will shortly be attempted.

JAPAN AFTER THE LADRONES.

Hopes to Purchase the Islands When Peace Is Restored.

Steamer advices state that Japanese diplomats are watching with great interest the development of peace between the United States and Spain. Late Japanese newspapers agree that that country should buy the Ladrone Islands, either from the United States or Spain. Japan is reaching out in every way to develop her fisheries, and it is with this idea in view that the Ladrones are being considered.

First Volunteer of the War.

Prescott, Ariz., claims that it furnished the first volunteer in the present war, and that from that place the first company started to the front. The volunteer was Capt. O'Neill of the rough riders, and a monument to his memory is to be erected on the court house plaza of Prescott.

Claims He Killed McCart in Self-Defense—Fighting to Break a Will—Ruined Theatrical Manager Takes His Own Life.

Snow Caught in New Albany.

Isaac Snow, who shot and instantly killed William H. McCart near Bedford, was arrested in New Albany by Patrolman Nick Seery. Snow states that he was on his way home to surrender. He did not know that his victim was dead and was very much surprised when he learned that the shot had proved fatal. He claims self-defense and says that McCart waylaid him as he was on his way home. To uphold his claim of self-defense Snow exhibits an ugly hole through his coat and vest which was made by a bullet, which he claims was fired by McCart.

Suing to Break the Will.

Suit has been begun in court at Columbus to contest the will of Mrs. May D. Hill, the mysterious Mrs. Everett, who killed herself in the Colonade Hotel, New York, in April, 1896, being the wife of E. E. Hill, or Senor Zeerega, then and now in London. She was the daughter of Col. John A. Keith of Columbus. By her will, made three years before her death, all her property, real and personal, was devised to her husband. Col. Keith resisted the probate of this will and was defeated in court. It is now sought to have this will set aside and the one next latest substituted.

Fred Bradbury Takes Poison.

At Anderson, Fred Bradbury, at one time prominent in Elk and theatrical circles, took poison in an endeavor to kill himself. At one time he was considered wealthy, but has lost heavily in the last three years. The climax came two years ago, when he took "Lost in Egypt," an extravaganza, out of Chicago and stranded in Cincinnati. After taking the poison he went to an undertaking establishment and told the proprietor, a personal friend, what he had done. A doctor was called, but it was announced that Bradbury could not live.

Strikers Hold Up a Train.

The striking Chicago and Southeastern shop men at Lebanon sidetracked the eastbound passenger train No. 3 to hold the train for their wages. The road is about eight months behind with the men in wages. Two hours after the train was sidetracked they were offered one month's wages if they would release the train and return to work. The offer was accepted with the understanding that their wages were to be paid hereafter on the 25th of each month. The wages were paid and the train was released.

Within Our Borders.

Ex-Sheriff Robert P. Jones, aged 74, is dead at Valparaiso.

In a runaway at Brazil, Miss Meda Howard was fatally injured.

At Peru, Walter Ullman, 10 years old, was killed with a shotgun in the hands of a playmate.

Twin boys born to William Gregson and wife at Knightsville were named Dewey and Hobson.

About 15,000 uniformed Knights of Pythias attended the recent encampment at Indianapolis.

At New Albany, two young sons of Harrison Mason were drowned in a pond on the farm of Jacob Friedley.

Near Champion, a train struck a carriage, smashing it and probably fatally injuring a man named Graham.

While walking in her sleep, Mrs. Riley Rife of Poplar Grove fell out of a second-story window. She is likely to recover.

Mrs. Anna Wilson, aged 53, was struck by a Wabash fast freight at the Benton street crossing in Peru and fatally injured.

John Long of Gas City, 26 years old, was instantly killed by driving in front of a north-bound freight train on the Big Four crossing in Jonesboro.

The young man who was killed by the train between Farmersburg and Pimento has been identified as Charles Watkins, aged 29, a grocer of Terre Haute.

Some miscreant set fire to a number of stacks of wheat belonging to George G. Pell on a farm near Harmony. The fire spread rapidly and soon consumed his entire crop of over 600 bushels.

Norman Bovee, an engineer in the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad for the last eighteen years, committed suicide in the city park at Michigan City by shooting himself in the head. He has been in poor health for four months.

Seven thousand people were assembled at the Newbern farmers' fair near Columbus in Deep Woods, when a violent storm came. The lightning and thunder were terrific and the rain poured down in a deluge. Trees were blown down, horses broke loose and ran away, children screamed, women fainted and general panic prevailed. Charles Hayman was struck by a falling limb and badly hurt; he will probably die. His wife and son were slightly injured. Mrs. Samuel Cooper was also struck by falling timber and badly hurt; will probably die.

Fire broke out in Frank Wright's restaurant at Pennville, destroying a block of buildings valued at $25,000, and causing injuries to several persons. The injured are Mrs. Frank Wright, who jumped from the second story, dislocated hip and broken ankle, recovery doubtful; Frank Wright, burned while rescuing his children, not serious; infant child of Frank Wright and wife, badly burned, but will recover. The fire spread to the Pennville Gas Company's office, Dr. Mason's office, J. D. Smith & Sons' hardware and furniture store, the Lupton building, Mrs. Jenkins' block and residence, A. T. Place's grocery, Will Allman's barber shop and the Morrow barber shop. The buildings were all frame.

The remains of John Rollinson, who lived a hermit's life in Greenville township, were found in an advanced state of decomposition on the floor of the little house on his farm.

During a heavy electric rainstorm the two-story residence occupied by James Wells and family at Edinburg was struck by lightning and set on fire. Mr. Wells had just retired in an upstairs room and was severely shocked. His wife, daughter and one son, who were still down stairs, were also stunned and blinded by the stroke, but none was dangerously injured.

Diphtheria has broken out in Clinton, and there are grave fears of an epidemic similar to the one of a year ago. There are now several cases, two of the victims being in a critical condition. The physicians are co-operating with the health board in an effort to prevent an epidemic.

John Johns, a barber of Star City, who recently went crazy, is confined in the Sullivan jail. Johns is kept in a cell and tears every particle of clothing off his body and raves and pounds his cell day and night. Johns, prior to going crazy, was of a quiet disposition and had never before exhibited signs of lunacy. His condition is supposed to have been caused by reading cheap novels.

A KISS.

Surrounded by admirers
At Long Branch, Hobson stood,
As any hero under Such circumstances would,
And with his heart in tempest,
His surging soul in swirls,
He calmly faced the muzzles
Of half a hundred girls.

There were eyes of skyey blueness,
There were eyess of beaming brown,
There were eyes of gray and hazel,
There were eyes to bring one down
From heaven to Long Island
To wear the hero's crown.

And Hobson stood among them,
While batteries of smiles
Were turned full on the hero,
In varying forms and styles,
Which filled the air with heart-throbs
And strewed them 'round in piles.

At last one dainty maiden,
A dream of pink-white bliss,
From saintly old St. Louis
(With more of them like this)
Reached up and handed Hobson
A large and luscious kiss.

Then out spake Hero Hobson:
"By all the gods," said he,
"If any one had mentioned
That this would come to me,
For sinking that old vessel
Down in the Cuban sea.
I'd not have been contented
To sink a single one,
But would have sunk a million
Before the job was done."

L'envoi.

Now here's to Hero Hobson,
A true man and a good!
Who wouldn't be a hero
And stand where Hobson stood?

Captain Biggs.

By R. M. Neill.

"'Arty, my lad—'arty."

Why Captain Biggs, not being an Englishman, nor in the habit of dropping his "h" on other occasions, said "'arty," instead of "hearty," will forever remain a mystery. Perhaps he had an idea that it was a right, tight, salty way of saying it; but this is only a theory, and connot be substantiated by proof.

The person addressed on this occasion—a rather good-looking young gentleman, of say twenty-five—smiled his pleasure at hearing of the captain's good health.

"You sea-faring men are remaskably healthy, as a class," he observed.

"Yes, sir," answered the captain, decidedly. "You are right. Look at me, sir—the very picture of health. Right and tight as a vessel fresh from the ship-yard. 'Arty, sir? 'Arty's no name for it, sir!"

Captain Biggs was a stout, red-faced man—in fact, from tip to toe what some people would call a thorough sea-going dog.

The young Englishman—whose name by the way, was Ernest Johns—remarked, as a good thing to say:

"Comparing yourself to a new vessel, captain, is hardly fair to yourself. That has never been tested, and you have; and when, indeed, have you been found wanting?"

Captain Biggs had, indeed, a great reputation for reliability.

"Come down into the cabin," he said to Ernest, "and take dinner."

They were soon dispatching the meal, in the good old American fashion of bolting it.

"So," said the captain, when it was entirely bolted, as he leaned back in his chair in a way that threatened to split the back—"so you're to be my supercargo?"

"I am to have that pleasure," answered Mr. Johns.

"I like that!" exclaimed the old salt, bringing his fist down upon the table with a force that made the dishes rattle—"I like that! A supercargo of the right sort gives a moral tone to a vessel, and if there's anything I like, it is a moral tone."

The captain, having so expressed himself, added additional emphasis by delivering a round oath.

Both the cargo and the vessel were owned by Ernest John's employers, and it was necessary to have an agent at the discharging port; hence his position as supercargo.

Criticism, as regarded the vessel, or its discipline, was no part of his duty, or he might have observed that the cabin-boy, who waited upon them, shrank in terror from the captain's glance.

One inconsistency, however, Ernest could hardly help noticting. The captain, in continuation of his remarks upon moral tone, condemned, in no mild terms, the practice of imbibing spirituous or malt liquors, indulged in, as he knew, by some commanders.

As this tight—tight, it is to be feared, in more respects than one—old salt's breath had a suspicious flavor, and his nose an equally suspicious rosiness, his remarks were not calculated to inspire confidence.

The first week of the voyage passed off without any incident of note. On one or two occasions the captain knocked the cabin-boy down, but this seeming to be nothing unusual, the supercargo only wondered a little, and was silent.

It was the ninth day out. Toward the east nothing could be seen but sky and ocean; in the west, however, land was distinctly visible. The supercargo was standing in the bow of the vessel, watching the dancing waves. Suddenly he heard the noise of a fall, and, turning, beheld the cabin-boy stretched upon the deck, and Captain Biggs standing over him with a face distorted with passion, and exclaiming:

"Break dishes, will you, you young scoundrel!"

The blow had been a terrible one, for the blood was flowing freely down the boy's face.

Flushing with indignation, Ernest ran and was about to lift the prostrate lad from the deck, when the captain pushed him rudely aside, muttering:

"Attend to your own affairs, sir, or I'll give you some of the same."

Suppressing his anger, for he saw the man was much intoxicated, Ernest stepped aside in silence.

Smarting under this slight interference, the drunken captain called two men, and commanded:

"Don't stare at me, you villians; but tie that boy to the foremast, and be quick about it!"

Reluctantly and with pitying looks, the sailors obeyed, first stripping from the lad his coat and shirt, leaving his bare back exposed.

Now Ernest understood the captain's purpose. The boy's cries for mercy, and the stripes already on his back, showed it too plainly. Respectfully, yet with decision, he inquired of Captain Biggs:

"What do you intend to do with that child?—for he is nothing more, remember that!"

"None of your business, you meddling puppy," was the reply.

"I cannot afford to get angry with a man who is drunk," said the supercargo, quietly.

"You lie!" bellowed the captain; "you white faced hound, you lie!"

The supercargo making no reply, the tyrant descended into the cabin, and soon returned, holding in his hand an ugly looking whip. With a glance of defiance at Ernest, he stagrered toward the bound boy. His arm was raised to strike, and in another moment the whip would have left its cruel mark upon the white flesh.

Captain Biggs turned with an angry oath, for the descending blow was stayed by the firm grasp of the supercargo's hand. Snatching his arm away, the infuriated man again raised his whip, and this time it would have struck Ernest's flushed cheek had not a well-directed blow stretched the captain on the deck.

The drunken wretch with difficulty rose to his feet. Ernest stood upon the defensive, but the captain, feeling he had met his master, only muttered:

"This is mutiny, sir. You shall suffer for it when we get ashore."

"No!" thundered the supercargo, now thoroughly roused. "It is not mutiny; neither shall I suffer for it. I am the agent for the owners of this vessel and cargo, and such inhumanity shall not be!"

The crew, who were looking on, waited for the captain's reply, but to their astonishment he only slunk away to his cabin, muttering vows of vengeance.

Ernest, aftef releasing the boy, also descended into the cabin. He entered his state-room, and locking the door, resolved to stay there the rest of the day.

There are some men who, after reaching a certain point in their cups, become reckless, and in their desperation care neither for their own lives nor those of others.

Captain Biggs was one of them. In the morning he had not arrived at this point, or Ernest could not have disposed of him so easily; but in the afternoon he had reached it.

It was four o'clock. Some one knocked at the door of Ernest's state-room.

"Who is there?" the young man demanded.

Recognizing in the reply the voice of the mate, he rose and opened the door.

Seeing the man much agitated, he inquired:

"What is the matter?"

"We're all lost unless something's done," was the hurried reply. "An hour ago, the captain came on deck, more intoxicated than ever, and taking the wheel, pointed the vessel direct for the shore. He either doesn't know what he is doing, or intends to sink us. The coast is very dangerous, and if we keep this course an hour longer we are all doomed men."

"Mate, madness like this is no longer legal authority," said the supercargo. "Will you stand by me in resistance to it?"

"Here's my hand on it, sir," replied the sailor—"mutiny or no mutiny, here's my hand on it."

Ernest quickly opened his trunk, and taking from it two revolvers, handed one of them to the mate, retaining the other himself.

"I hope there may be no need of these," he said, quietly, "but it is best to have them. A revolver is a most powerful argument sometimes."

The mate agreed, and with the air of a man to be depended on. They went on deck. There was a spanking breeze, and there was not a wrinkle in the swelled sails.

Straight before them lay the coast line. Even then the yeast of waves toward which they were so madly moving was plain to be seen. Once in that seething sea, and the song of the wind would lose its harmony in mingling with the discord of drowning men's cries.

A sailor stood by the captain, beseeching him to let go the wheel.

The reckless man took no notice, but was bawling out the fragments of a drunken song as he steered the good ship onward.

Ernest saw that the fire-arms would be needless. He had feared that the crew, dreading a charge of mutiny, might resist any attempt upon their captain's person, but, grouped together in silent, listless horror, they stood like men turned into stone. Long used to obey, they had made no resistance to their commander, but they certainly would oppose no one who did.

Both supercargo and mate stepped to the captain's side. The former touched him on the shoulder, saying:

"Captain Biggs, do you know where you are steering?"

The man turned with a laugh, exclaiming:

"Oh, it's the meddlin' puppy again, is it?" then added, fiercely: "Go to your state-room, sir or I'll have you thrown overboard!"

"Captain Biggs," said Ernest, quietly, "this is no time to waste words or threats. You have overstepped your authority, and I command you to let go that wheel!"

The words were scarcely uttered when, in drunken fury, the captain fell upon him. The action was so unexpected, and the shock so great, that Ernest was borne to the deck, the infuriated man upon him.

The mate sprang to the wheel, and veered the vessel about. The great danger was passed. The crew looked helplessly on, while the captain and the supercargo fought upon the deck.

The captain, though intoxicated, was the stronger man of the two; but Ernest, by reason of physique, youth and sobriety, was his superior in agility. These two, so equally matched, must fight it out.

The mate dared not leave the wheel, as the vessel was not yet in what might be called the open sea. The crew seemed incapable of action.

At last the issue of the contest seemed in little doubt. The captain had seized his opponent in a way that the supercargo's agility was of little avail against such huge strength.

Slowly, surely, Ernest felt himself forced to the side of the ship. It was Captain Bigg's intention to throw him overboard. In vain he strained his muscles till they quivered with pain. On, on, he was pushed toward the vessel's side. In another moment his adversary would have accomplished the attempted purpose.

The mate, hazarding all, was about to drop the wheel, when there was a sharp report, and Captain Biggs fell upon the deck, shot in the breast. Ernest had drawn his revolver only at the last moment, and then only in defense of life.

There is little left to tell. Captain Biggs, although dangerously, was not fatally wounded. When the port of destination was reached, he was able to leave his bed.

He made a charge of mutiny against Ernest Johns and the mate, but both were triumphantly acquitted.

The testimony on the trial, however, ruined that "'arty" old salt, Captain Biggs; and shortly afterward he shipped, as a common sailor, on a voyage to China.—Saturday Night.

A Celestial Map of Cuba.

The other afternoon a curious phenomenon appeared in the Southern sky, where, wrapped in the clouds, was outlined the island of Cuba as plainly as it is outlined on the map. The island, in every line; in its hills and mountans, bays and rivers, was perfectly traced in the clouds. There were the shadows and lights and curves and corners, and to those who had studied the map the island was plainly discernible.

Many saw the strange picture in the clouds and there were many who looked intently at the island. A car going to Decatur was filled with passengers and at an abrupt turn in the track the painting blazed in all its beauty and symmetry upon the gaze of the astonished passengers.

Everybody on the car saw it and the car was stopped so that a better look could be secured. Mr. E. H. Carter of Mississippi was one to see the island.

"It was absolutely perfect," he said. "There was the bay of Havana, the bay of Santiago, and the various inlets that are to be found on the map. It was as perfect as could be found in the geographies and as plain as if printed in ink on fine paper."

"The picture was perfect in its outlines," said Mr. J. H. Smythe, "and the execution of the lines, shadows, and indentations along the coast could not have been excelled by a draftsman. I never saw anything in my life more plain. Above the cloud of island fell the light of the moon, and the picture was one of marvellous beauty and grandeur.

All over the city the strange phenomenon was commented upon. From Broad street bridge an excellent view could be secured, and from the tall office buildings the scene was wonderfully beautiful and sublime. The picture in the clouds remained for several minutes before it vanished.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Sailor Landsman.

Pillsy has a smattering of naval knowledge and loses no opportunity to air it during this period of international unpleasantness. "Heave to!" is the order delivered when he meets a man on the street with whom he wishes to talk. "Just give me my clearance papers," is the way in which he asks for a receipt for money paid, and it is probably due to the pleasure thus afforded him that he is settling a good many bills which the holders had begun to regard as dead ducks. "Sailing under sealed orders' is the remark with which he meets any request for information which he does not desire to give, and "face as long as a yardarm" is his comment upon any one who is not in a hilarious frame of mind. He "hauls close to" when he is confidential and is always on a "stern chase" when looking for a friend. He "anchors" himself when he sits down and "clears for action" when he enters his business office.

"Where's your mother, Will?" asked Pillsey the other evening as soon as he reached home.

"Scrubbing the upper deck," answered Will, who is a chip of the old block, and knows a thing or two about nautical affairs himself.

"Hey, what's that?" shouted the old man. "Don't get cantankerous with me or I'll give you a taste of the rope's end. What do you know about luffing too, main and mizzen rigging, stern davits, spanker booms, bowsprits or hard aport? Don't try to put on any frills with a salty old sea dog like me. Where's your mother?"

"Cleaning house up stairs. Just finishing the last room."

"That's better. Now pipe all hands to grub, for I have a special cruise to make this evening."

Rats on Ironclads.

Confronted with the difficulties which modern builders and householders put in the way of rats in drains, floors, and skirtings, the black rat would probably be baffled, while the sagacious gray rat still remains more or less master of the situation. The case of the rat is typical of the value of brain power. Routine, which is the usual condition of animal existence, does not exist for them. They have to face "reconstructions" of their common surroundings at any given moment, and their resources and adaptability have seldom been found wanting.

Ship rats have survived the era of steam and steel, and only recently thrived so successfully on a big ironclad that they made her Majesty's ship Colossus almost uninhabitable. House rats have learned how to cope with gasfittings, lead pipes, brick drains, and cement floors; "sewer rats" have made themselves a name coeval with modern urban sanitation, and others are now learning to live in "cold stores" and eat chilled meat in an atmosphere where breath turns into snow.—London Spectator.

RIVER'S OMNIVEROUS MAW.

How the Mississippi Is Eating Away the Towns of Southern Illinois.

During the past ten years some of the most remarkable changes that ever take place in the course of any river have occurred in the channel of the Mississippi from St. Genevieve to Chester. When the current of the Mississippi broke across the narrow neck of land which separates it from the Kaskaskia river, and, changed its course to the shorter route, the extreme efforts of the turbulent stream, the rolling, rushing waters of the mighty Mississippi and the slow, peaceful current of the Kaskaskia, to find room in the narrow bed of the Kaskaskia caused a surging and a crowding of the waters that soon ate away the frail soil which formed the river's banks.

The tract of land upon which old Kaskaskia was situated was formed into an island and it was not long until the current of the river succeeded in washing away the fertile soil and undermining the buildings of the old settlement causing the destruction of the village. The washing of the soil along the Illinois side was the same and after working a broader bed for itself at the expense of thousands of acres of valuable farm lands in Illinois, the river began working a straight course for itself, and slowly but surely ever since then the eating away of the land has gone on in ceaseless silence.

Two years ago the river threatened to turn its current upon the Missouri shore and had already begun making great inroads upon the banks opposite Clearyville. When this was found to be disastrous to the towns on the Illinois side of the river efforts were made by the business men of those places which resulted in an appropriation being made by the government and work being done on the river at that point.

The work had the desired effect and since then little attention has been given to the river at that point. But now a picture most disastrous in its execution is spread before the inhabitants of the towns along the river from St. Genevieve to Rockwood. The fate of Rockwood threatens to be the fate of Chester and Menard. The same terrible fate of historic old Kaskaskia hangs gloomily over Clearyville and Boise Brule. These villages lie along the river's bank all oblivious of what seems to be the inevitable.

The serious and rapid encroachments of the river's current upon Kaskakia island at a point directly opposite the Southern Illinois prison has caused a great sandbar to form along the Illinois shore immediately above the prison. The gradual growth of this bar has been continually watched by the prison officials for the past ten months, it being interesting to them from the fact that it was seen that as soon as the bar had pushed itself sufficiently far enough down stream the water supply of the prison would be shut off.

The further into the island the current ate the further down the stream the hoary-headed bar pushed its way, and a month ago all hopes that the bar would not advance to a dangerous position were abandoned by the prison officials and preparations were made for a new supply to be in readiness when the other was shut off. Recently the bar manifested its destructive work. The prison pumps refused to work. The sand had reached the point where the pipes entered the river and they had become clogged.

About a mile above the prison the river makes a great bend into Kaskaskia island, forming a half moon-like depression, which has existed ever since the river cut across from its old bed. The current makes a great sweep along this depression and the frail soil is rapidly washed away and sand bars from continually along the Illinois shore. During the past year almost a mile of land has been washed away from the south end of the island by the hungry waters and they are yet unsatisfied. The current is working a straight course for itself and this is what makes the gloomy picture to the prison officials and the inhabitants of Chester, St. Mary's, Clearyville and Boise Brule. The current in the straightened course will strike the Missouri shore about half a mile up the river's old channel and once more the river will begin its straightening action, but this time it will be much more accelerated, owing to the conditions favorable to the natural action of the current.

The old course of the river will give the current easy access to the Missouri soil, but instead of following the old slough and cutting through the point of land and emerging opposite Chester the current will manifest a tendency to a straight course and the water will spread out over the broad fertile bottoms of the Boise Brule, while the current will gradually work a channel along a course so natural as to appear to have been destined long ages ago to be the future bed of the river.

The muddy stream will rush along the depressions back of Clearyville and Boise Brule and will then enter Fish lake and passing onward the stream will find the least resistance along the course of Boise creek. Once the current begins to run along this route it will be a matter of but a few weeks until the main channel of the river will exist there. Where are now rich farm lands, which each years sends forth the richest products of the state of Missouri, there will then be the dashing muddy waters of the Mississippi. Instead of a great rushing stream in front of the Illinois state prison and the city of Chester there will be a great stretch of white sand, dotted here and there with pools of muddy, murky water and one standing high up on the bluffs on the Illinois side will see the great river steamers plying along their course five miles away.

The villages of Boise Brule and Clearyville will be destroyed, as was Kaskaskia; Chester will be little more than a settlement and the prison will be located in a spot so remote that it will possibly necessitate its removal. The Centralia and Chester and the Wabash, Chester and Western railroads will be left without a terminus and the great Father of Waters will flow on.

A MISMATED COUPLE.

Prince and Princess of Wales Again the Subject of Gossip.

The rupture, for it has come to be looked upon as nothing less, between the prince and princess of Wales continues to be eagerly discussed by the London smart set. All their various differences in the past, and they have been not a few, are being recalled and everyone is wondering how long it will be before a reconciliation is brought about, for there is little doubt that eventually the mismated couple will make up once more. It is pretty well understood that the prince's conduct has at times been very exasperating to the princess and it is equally well known that the latter has a temper which, when it breaks loose, indulges in some very picturesque pyrotechnics. However, the princess, who is a thoroughly good woman, has forgiven in the past and doubtless will again. As prospective queen of Great Britain she is not likely to break permanently with her rather trying husband.

CHEER FOR HEROES

Great Crowds Greet Home-Coming War Fleet.

BIG NAVAL PAGEANT.

New York Makes It the Occasion of a General Holiday.

America's Battle-Scarred Fleet that Sunk Cervera's Ships Thunders Its Tribute at the Tomb of Gen. Grant—One Million New Yorkers Wildly Cheer the Fighters, While Roaring Guns Emphasize the Welcome—Ovation to Sampson and Schley.

New York special:

New York and the nation on Saturday fitly signalized the appreciation of the republic of her victorious fleet. An imposing pageant of warships was received in the harbor of the largest city of the country with acclamations of delight and admiration, and the ovation from shore and from the great flotillas of all sorts of craft on the water significantly gave to the returning heroes some idea of the esteem and admiration in which they are regarded by the people.

Long before sunrise gun was fired at Castle William, Governor's Island, the people were astir and abroad. Crowds were hurrying to the river to be early on the scene. The New York and New Jersey shores were crowded with people. The river and bay were literally alive with craft and the craft alive with people, all cheering and good-natured. An impressive scene was when the flags were raised on the forts and flagships. As the starry banners were raised aloft the bands of the forts and on the flagships played the "Star-Spangled Banner," and the shores rang with patriotic cheers.

There was very little friction in carrying out the program and no more delay than was to be expected. There was considerable wigwagging on the gray battleships, and the police boats formed in line. Then came the Glen Island, and then the battleships began to slowly move up the bay. There was a salvo of cannons and cheers of people, and the toots of thousands of whistles made an indescribable din.

Soon after the monster pageant was in line. First came Admiral Sampson's flagship, New York, then Admiral Schley's flagship, Brooklyn, then the Massachusetts, Oregon, Iowa, Indiana and Texas, and after them a moving mass of all sizes and descriptions, with flags waving and people cheering. The great battleships moved slowly and majestically.

As Governor's Island was passed there was a tremendous report from the guns that did so much execution at Guantanamo and Santiago. The people on shore and afloat went wild. They yelled and screamed, waved flags, and jumped up and down in patriotic fervor. And so it was all the way up to Grant's tomb, where there was a final demonstration of patriotic fervor such as New York has never witnessed before. The pageant was viewed and cheered by hundreds of thousands of people. It was a magnificent and indescribable scene and one never to be forgotten.

Since leaving Guantanamo no incidents of an unusual nature except a temporary breakdown on the part of the Indiana had marred the homeward progress of Sampson's fleet. Few ships were passed. Smooth seas and fair winds made the passage pleasant. There was occasional change of formation. Heading out from Cuba, the armor-clad ships came in single column, the New York leading, the Iowa next, then the Indiana, Brooklyn, Massachusetts and Oregon.

At night the fleet shone with side lights, running lights, portholes lit up by electric lights from within blazed out on the waters as the ships passed through the Windward passage. It is months since such an illumination has been seen in Cuban waters, where warships, blockade runners, transports and all sorts and conditions of craft have been threading their way with all lights screened, great shadows, that passed silently. On the trip from Guantanamo, as the air got cooler the spirits of the 3,000 men and officers aboard the six ships rose correspondingly. The relief from the perpetual heat of Cuba was indeed appreciated.

Saturday's celebration was the first opportunity the American people have had of demonstrating in a public way their gratitude for the great achievements of the Santiago squadron, and throughout a long day of greeting there was no stint in the welcome, no pause in the shouts and cheers, no cessation of the spirit of rejoicing at the sight of the vessels and over the return of the nation's defenders at sea. Enthusiasm knew no limit, and the sentiment of gratitude and rejoicing dominated land and sea and people. The hearts of our naval heroes were gladdened by the royal welcome extended by a million patriotic Americans. Such an outburst of enthusiasm was never before witnessed on the banks of the Hudson or any other river.

Queer Bicycle.

The queerest bicycle on record is one built by John Gilguys, a fence inspector on a station beyond Bourke, New South Wales. So unique is it that its fame traveled to Sydney, where it was published in the Cycling Gazette; thence to the staid and dignified columns of the Mechanical Engineer of London.

Gilguys is a clever inventor, but a poor man. He lives among a wilderness of stones, scrub and sticks, amid the melancholy bleating of thousands of sheep, and his daily duty is to inspect miles of wire fencing. The machine here depicted was the outcome of his lonely leisure and his inventive ingenuity.

QUEEREST BICYCLE IN THE WORLD.

It will be seen that the bicycle combines two of the very latest notions in cycling mechanics—it is chainless and unpuncturable. Though not constructed of aluminum, it is rust proof, and at the same time the expense of enameling and nickel-plating is saved. The frame and wheels are of wood and the saddle is a soogee bag tied with a stringy bark. The stays are of twisted fence wire and the ball bearings and spindles have been superseded by bolts and nuts. The wheels are warranted not to buckle and the exertion of driving the machine one measured mile is rather less than that required in walking the same distance.

Fifty-Miles-an-Hour Bike.

A bicycle, warranted to run fifty miles an hour without any exertion on the part of the rider has been received in San Francisco by Charles L. Fair from Paris. The power for propulsion at this speed is supplied by a small gasoline or naphtha motor which is adjusted on the forward part of the bicycle. The tubing is about the size that was popular in the United States during the '97 season.

The main supply of gasoline is carried in the tank A. Small quantities of the fluid are exploded in the igniter, C, furnishing motive power for the engine B, which propels the flywheel, from which the motion is communicated by a rubber band to the driving wheel E. An ingenious device permits the free use of the handlebars for steering purposes without risk of disturbing the connection. If the machinery should fail the bicycle may be worked by pedals in the usual way. The weight is fifty-five pounds.

A NOVELTY FROM PARIS.

Something New in Toe Clips.

Bicyclists will appreciate a new toe clip, which is hinged to the side of the pedal and has extensions on the front and rear, which spring the clip into place as soon as touched by the foot, the pedal being always balanced for use either side up.

Harmonious Bicycles.

The latest thing "made in Germany" is a "harmonious bicycle." This terrible invention is constructed to grind out 500 tunes. The contrivance is affixed to the handlebar, and worked by the front wheel, and will play for an hour while the cyclist is pedaling at a speed of ten miles.

Tennyson's Love for Flowers.

An elaborately illustrated article, "Tennyson and His Friends at Freshwater," by V. C. Scott-O'Connor, appears in the Century. The author says of the poet: Willingly, he took no part in the destruction of life. "His sympathy with nature led him to mourn over the cutting down of trees, as if they were, like the grove in Dante's 'Inferno,' the abode of his personal friends," and he never would consent to his flowers at Farringford being plucked. "I can very well remember the look on his face," Miss Weld, his niece, tells me, "when he met me, one day, returning from his meadows, with a wheelbarrow full of fading daffodils, plucked by me with the lavish hand of a child. He gazed at them very sorrowfully, and in gentle words expressed his regret that so much beautiful life had been needlessly sacrificed."

House-Heating by Water Power.

The management of the recently completed Lachine Rapids plant, on the St. Lawrence, announces its intention of entering the field of domestic heating in competition with anthracite coal. The comparatively high coal rate, combined with the low cost of the electric power, as developed by this water power plant, will permit of its adoption for cooking purposes, at least on the score of economy, with all its acknowledged advantages as an additional inducement. About 25,000 horsepower has been obtained in this plant at a cost of nearly $2,000,000.

OUR CANDIDATES.

Every voter feels an interest in the men he is asked to put on his ticket, and so we append a very brief sketch of each of the candidates on the democratic county ticket.

REPRESENTATIVE.

Hon. Charles M. Brown was born in Steuben county, in the town of Hamilton, June 24, 1966, his people being early settlers. He received his education in the public schools of that place, and later at the Tri-State College at Angola. He began teaching in Richland township, DeKalb county in 1884, then taught two years in Steuben county, following with five years at Hamilton, one year as assistant, then four years as principal. In 1890 and 1891 he studied law in the law office of Woodhull and Brown, at Angola. In 1892 he became cashier of the Hamilton Bank, which, however, discontined business under the stress of the next year's panic. He then came to Auburn and entered into a law partnership with John W. Baxter under the name of Baxter & Brown. In 1896 he was elected to the legislature and made an excellent record, and which will entitle him to an increased majority this year.

CLERK.

Chas. A Jenkins was born on a farm in Ann Arundel Co., Md., Sept. 10, 1845, and graduated in the common graded schools there in 1860. He worked on his father's farm till 1865, when he came to Indiana, settling on the farm in Concord township, DeKalb county, where he has since lived, following that vocation. He has always been an active democrat, but never a candidate for office before.

AUDITOR.

Franklin P. Seiler, candidate on the democratic ticket for auditor, was born in Wayne county, Ohio, Oct. 11, 1855, and moved with his parents to DeKalb county, Ind., in April, 1863. He helped on his father's farm, and at manhood became a teacher, teaching 18 terms, and then by his own unaided efforts completed his education, including a full commercial and business course at Eastman National Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. For two years he was book-keeper for the large upholstering establisment of Kunkle & Co., in Chicago, then in the same position for the Eagle Knitting Works, Elkhart, Ind., till the firm changed, and then became deputy treasurer of that county under his brother, Cyrus, who was the treasurer. In 1892 he moved to Ashley, where he still resides, being engaged in the business of abstracting and insurance. He speaks fluently both English and German.

TREASURER.

Dr. Francis M. Hines, the candidate for treasurer, was born in DeKalb county, Jan. 26, 1861, the son of the late treasurer, Henry Hines. He was reared on the farm, and in 1880 became a teacher in the public schools of the county. In 1889 he gave up teaching and entered the Fort Wayne College of Medicine, where he graduated in 1892, and at once began the practice of medicine, which he has followed with success. In March, 1885 he was married to Miss Lillie Carper, daughter of John Carper, and for several years they have resided in Auburn.

SHERIFF.

John Hathaway, candidate for sheriff, was born in Keyser township, two miles northwest of Garrett, May 8, 1865, and was reared on the farm. In 1890, he moved to Garrett, which has since been his home. He has been recently established in the livery business in which, as in other persuits, he has been successful.

RECORDER.

Daniel Herrick was born in Concord township, DeKalb county, December 6, 1860. He was reared on a farm, his father being Franklin Herrick of that township. He was educated in the common schools and later followed farming, till four years ago when he opened a meat market in St. Joe, which has since been his occupation.

SURVEYOR.

John H. W. Krontz, present surveyor received a unanimous renomination. He was born April 7, 1871 and reared on the farm, living there till the family moved to Butler four years ago. He was educated in the common schools and later attended Taylor University in Fort Wayne. He became a teacher and was very successful. In 1860 he was elected county surveyor by a handsome majority, and has filled the office acceptaby, and with marked economy. He will no doubt receive an increased majority.

CORONER.

Emlin V. Campbell was born in Butler; this county January 31, 1875, son of John A. and May Campbell. His mother dying while he was young he was reared on the farm of his uncle, Peter Helwig. After closing his common school studies he attended the Tri-State Normal College at Angola, graduating in the commercial course, and later in the Butler High schools. He afterwards graduated in short hand and typewriting at the Northern Indiana Normal College at Valparaiso. He studied medicine and attended lectures at the University of Michigan at Ann Arborn and later at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago and graduated at the Toledo Medical College in 1897. He has since practiced medicine in this county.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH.

Allen Shultz, was born in Ashland Co., Ohio, April 15, 1846, and came to this county with his parents in 1852. He was reared on a farm, but later learned the carpenter trade and followed that fifteen years. He is now engaged in farming and carrying on a saw mill and dealing in lumber.

COMMISSIONER, S. E.

Isaac Gunsenhouser, now serving his first term in this honorable position was born in Stafford township, March 9, 1838. He lived on the farm till 1864 when he was in the lumber and sawmill business at Newville sixteen years then moved back to the farm. In 1896 he was elected commissioner and has served the penple faithfully since, giving us a thorough and careful administration of that difficult office.

State Militia.

It is understood the various companies of the State Militia or National Guard, will be reorganized soon after the regiments get home. Of course, under the state laws the companies are smaller than under the U. S. law for regulars in service. If all our boys wish to re-muster, we are in favor of having two companies. Two of infantry and one of artillery would give Auburn about 200 uniformed and drilled men.

GOV. MATTHEWS DEAD

Governor Claude Matthews died at 6:30 Sunday morning at the home of a friend, near Lafayette, where he had been taken when he fell stricken in the stand where he was speaking to the old settlers of that county.

He had not rallied since he had the stroke and the only word he spoke, was just as he was dying some one asked if he believed in Jesus, and he said "yes."

In his death the whole state has cause to mourn. While he was an uncompromising democrat, he was not a bigoted partisan and while he was governor politics was the least of his thoughts. But it was his beloved state, her good name and fame, and the welfore of all her people, that were always uppermost in his thoughts and directed all his actions. No man who has sat in the chair of governor of Indiana, ever had a larger share of the genuine love of the people. His acquaintance with the people was extensive, and the few who had never met him knew of him and respected and honored him. He filled a place in the state and in the hearts of its people, that there is left no one of any party who can so completely fill. His private life, like his public life was pure and clean, and Indiana's young men can take no higher or better model, than the life and character of Governor Matthews.

The funeral will be at his farm home of Hazel Bluff, in a grove near the cemetery on Wednesday.

FINGER TORN OFF

Miss Emma Mick Met With A Severe Accident.

(Fort Wayne Sentinel Aug. 27.)

Miss Emma Mick, aged fifteen, had the third finger of her right hand torn off this morning while climbing over a fence. The young lady was about to alight from the fence when the ring on her finger caught on a board at the top of the fence. The fence was high and the result was the young lady's finger was very badly lacerated. Dr McHugh was called and he was compelled to amputate the member below the second joint.

HAND CUT

While Brandon Brothers were running their thresher at D. T, Smith's this forenoon, Ollie, who was firing the engine, went to feed the machine a while, and in a short time, as he reached for a sheaf, the band cutter D. T. Smith happened to be cutting the band. The sharp knife made of a piece of reaper sickle struck the back of Ollie's right hand and cut a zigzag gash entirely across it, but it is believed not to be deep enough to cut the leaders. He came to town and Dr. Hines sewed up the wound and dressed it, but he will have a sore hand for some days. No blame is attached to Mr. Smith. Such accidents will happen now and then owing to the close work between feeder and band cutter.

REMEMBER THE MAINE.

This is the name of a neat little restaurant that will be in charge of two worthy ladies during the Carnival. Both are "war widows," their husbands being in Co. FATAL ACCIDENT.

MRS. FRANK RUSH MEETS A FEARFUL DEATH WITH AN EXPLODING LAMP

Six Little Girls Left Motherless And a Loving Husband Bereft

The most terrible tragedy that ever occurred in Auburn, is that in which Mrs. Frank Rush lost her life. In brief the terrible truth is: Last night at a little after one oclock, Mrs. Rush was up and discovered that something was wrong with the lamp which they had left burning in the sitting room. She called Mr. Rush to go out there and see what the trouble was. He went into that room and found the lamp flashing and foaming, in a way he felt sure meant an explosion Finding he could not put it out, he saw he must get it out doors, and told Mrs. Rush to come in and open the front door. She did so and as he saw it was open, he threw the lamp, not thinking of the screen door, which as it happened, she was there yet, trying to unfasten. The lamp struck the screen door and burst, the gas and oil flying over her and setting fire to her clothing. She screamed and started to run. Frank caught her and tried to smother the flames and called one of the girls to bring a coverlet. Then he ran for it himself and hurried back only to find she had disappeared. Following her moans he found her lying in the kitchen, and with the blanket smothered the flames, then sent one of the girls went for Dr. Baxter next door. The doctor was soon there, and was followed by the writer, who living across the street had been aroused by the agonizing cries. The doctor found them in the south room where in all those minutes that must have seemed like hours, the heroic man had been struggling in the alternate darkness and flame and in the thick suffocating odors, to save her. The writer followed in, but the fire flashes had died out and we entered in smoke so dense that nothing could be seen. We groped hastily forward over the broken lamp, felt a quilt under foot that the girls had used to put out the blaze of the lamp, then groped towards the south room, from which we soon heard smothered sounds. From some cause we do not know the room became lighter, and we met Mr. Rush and Dr. Baxter carrying the agonized woman, or rather leading her, toward her bed room. She was a most pitiable sight, though now covered by a blanket. In heart-rending tones she asked "I will die, won't I? On being assured we hoped for the best, she again asked, "Where shall I go?" She was told she was being taken to her bed, and seemed resigned. But her agonized cries continued for some minutes. Soon other physicians arrived, and all possible was done for her. Medicines to deaden her sufferings were given, and when her injuries were dressed she fell asleep. But the physicians could give little hope, for nearly all the surface of her body was scorched, and that meant great danger. Some parts were burned so the skin peeled. She rested well at the morning hours, and at 6:30 was still sleeping and hope sprang up in the hearts of all. But it was a short-lived hope. Before she awoke, it was noticed, that her breathing was labored and difficult, and she rapidly failed and died in a few minutes, breathing her last at a little after seven.

As we said at the first, this is the saddest tragedy Auburn ever had. She was a woman of most lovable traits of character, a model wife and mother, the loving and beloved head of a circle of six sweet children, all little girls from the age of 16 down to the little babe of six months. She was a most loving and dutiful wife and her sudden and tragic death falls with appalling force on the devoted husband and the motherless little ones. No words can do justice to their depth of sorrow No. can words do justice to the sorrow that has fallen on our entire community.

Mr. Rush himself was badly burned, in his heroic struggle to save his wife. The skin is burned more or less on both hands, both are helpless in the necessary bandages. His grief is most poignant, and he keeps saying she would not have suffered, had he not thrown the lamp while she was there But everybody knows he was not in the least to blame. He did exactly what everyone would have done under the circumstances

Justice Court.

Yesterday Auburn's first labor case was on trial. It seems tnat the Chase Construction Co. is in the habit of keeping back five days' pay of its men. Three of those who had been at work objected and got up a case to test the Indiana law on the subject, believing that our statutes compel contractors, etc., to pay their men in full on each regular pay-day. Mr. Moody was employed as attorney, and the claim made was, Saxby McIntosh, 4 days; D. J. White, 2 days; Peter Duffield, 5 days, all claiming $1.50 a day, the wages the company pays being $1.25. The trial came up yesterday before Justice Walborn, with D. M. Link for the Company. The decision was not rendered til to-day, when it was decided that each man is entitled to his pay for the number of days named in the complaint, but only at the same rate as paid all the others, $1 25 a day. The company, it seems, has a rule that if they discharge a man they pay him off at once in full. If he quits himself they will pay him only at the next pay day. But this trial is chiefly remarkable as being Auburn's first labor case.

LINCOLN MEDICINE CO., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger. I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

Jumped From the Train.

Two German girls of perhaps 12 and 14, were on the early east bound Wabash train Sunday morning. They did not seem to speak English very well but made it understood they wanted to get off at Auburn. After passing Auburn Junction they began to fear they should have got of there, and asked the conductor "Is this Auburn?" He probably thought they meant the station just ahead and gave them in some way to understand it so. But it appears they were thinking only of the "Auburn" they had just passed, and not knowing there was another just ahead went to the door and jumped off. The train was then just slowing up near the lumber yard, but was going fast enough to throw them. One was bruised about face and the other, about the shoulder, but neither seriously hurt.

A WORK OF ART

Steel & Son are artists from the ground up. We happened into their room today, and came face to face with the loveliest sign we have seen in many a day. It is a sign painted by them in oil for Albert Weaver, to advertise his make of cigars. The design is original, having been drawn by Geo. Steele, and then transferred to canvas. Its beauties cannot be well described in words, but it will pay our readers to go and see it. It will however soon be placed on the side of the Hebel block and the public can judge of its merits. While in their rooms we were shown a sign that was painted by Steele some years ago, for their own use, when he and Mr. Cass were partners. It is a veritable work of art.

Cincinnati Excursions.

Account G. A. R. National Encampment, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y will sell excursion tickets to Cincinnati and return, September 3 to 6, at one cent per mile, short line distance, good returning until October 2.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

FIFTEEN DEAD SOLDIERS

The Laporte Argus says, that so far, fifteen is the total number of dead, of the near 600 soldiers Indiana sent into the field. If it stops at that it will surely be a low death rate It claims that of these, the 157th has lost 7; the 158th, 3; the 159th 4; the 160th, 1. Of couse, there will be other unfortunate victims to fever and camp diseases before all reach home. And some will come home with the germs off disease in the system, which will no doubt add to the sad list. Le us them home as soon as possible before matters get worse.

Our Six-Year-Old Daughter.

Our little six-year-old daughter had a very sore throat, badly ulceratad, and coughed almost incessantly. Gave the White Wine of Tar Syrup according to directions and she began to improve immediately and soon got well. Mrs Groves and I recommended it to others and we consider it the very best medicine in use. REV. D. H. GROVES, Pastor M. E. Church, Clarksville, Mo.

Saturday's Daily.

—Auburn Carnival Sept. 7, 8 and 9.

—For Fertilizers, see Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind. 31—tf

H. J. Roush, one of our good natured Sedan patrons was a caller today. We are always glad to get acquainted with our patrons.

—J. C. Boyer of Waterloo, and Mr. Howenstein, a relative from Bellefontaine, Ohio, were driving about town this morning.

—Geo. Crays was a caller at this office Wednesday. He is sending the COURIER to his brother Joseph, at Campbellsville, Ky.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, Lesh, Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—A 40-acre, 60-acre and 200-acre farm for sale cheap. Will take good Auburn property in exchange.
WALTER C HARTMAN.

—Mr. Gugerli is moving out the furniture he had stored in the second story of his building so as to give room for Ralph Moody who is living there.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fluke have another little printer in their household, and not so very little either. It is a 11-lb boy, and was born last evening.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Frederick, of Huntington, is visiting Mrs. Clara McClellan. She is Mrs. McClellan's mother-in-law. Both will visit friends in Corunna over Sunday.

—Before you buy a Buggy or Surrey, call on us and examine our line of Eckharts, they are the finest and best made and our prices are right. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—D.N. Myers will keep his fine imported Cleveland Bay Stallion at his feed barn in Auburn every day in the week this season. All interested in good horses, are invited to call. tf

—Bonds of all officers or employes, also administrators, guardians etc issued in the original Baltimore Bonding Company at lowest rates by
WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—The Hicksville fair company is offering more money this year for fast races than ever before. The prospects are for the hottest races ever witnessed on their grounds. 35 36

—Baby photographs a specialty at Lybarger's Gallery North Main, Auburn.

—New every exchange we pick up that is published within forty miles of us has an ad. for the Carnival. That is the way to do business and make a success of it. We not only give people a grand show, but let them know it before hand.

—In the excellence of its hippodrome performances the great combined Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' aggregation is as notably superior as in its menagerie and circus feautures. The many different kinds of races are most brilliantly attracting and exciting.

—Sheriff Stroh is out in a letter saying he will not be Neal Platter's deputy in case the latter is elected Sheriff. He evidently fears his unpopularity would prevent Platter from getting the nomination. He may have the right idea of himself but no one believes that a man not capable of being a sheriff himself would ever try to become a sheriff's deputy.

—Kendallville Sun—Fairs will be held in only forty-six towns indiana this year. This is only about half the number tnat were held in the state two years or more ago. The twelfth district has but two fairs, Kendallville and Angola. It is but a few years ago that the towns of LaGrange, Ligonier, Columbia City, Waterloo, Auburn and Fort Wayne each had first-class fairs. What's the matter?

—Jimmie the Ditcher, was going north on Mrs. Kiblingers' sidewalk today, going leisurely under the cool shade there with a package of matches in his hand. In some way they caught fire and the brimstone end of every match in the bundle was burned—just enough to ruin every match. Jimmie is a gentleman of the real "ould Irish" kind, and fearing some damage might be done he tenderly spread the blackened and hot splinters out on the thick soft grass and when he was sure all was safe, went quietly back and got more.

Monday's Daily.

—W. B. Brown was taken quite sick last night but is better to-day.

—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Draggoo returned from their wedding trip today.

—Remember the Auburn, Carnival, the only Carnival so far, is Sept. 7, 8 and 9.

—Mrs. B. D. Harris and her daughter, started today for her home in Providence R. I.

—Mrs. Chester Hodge's little son had a sick spell last evening that was at first feared to be serious, but he is now out of danger.

—The soldiers' monument in Indianapolis was fitted up with 5,000 incandescent lights last week in honor of the K. P. national meeting.

—Raymond VanAuken and wife and Roy VanAuken are are at Pleasant Lake visiting the relatives and taking a day or so on the lakes there.

—FOR RENT:—The rear room on 1st floor Kiblinger block, and the office and rear rooms in second story. Very reasonable prices.
WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—You invite disappointment when you experiment, DeWitt's Little Early Risers are pleasant, easy, thorough little pills. They cure constipation and headache just as sure as yon take them. H. B. McCord.

—The fountain on the public square is running now a part of the time. There should now be made a permanent fountain as soon as the waterworks are completed.

—Half the convicts in Michigan City will soon be idle. The vicious law of the last session ended all prison contracts for labor, and all these contracts will soon expire.

—Sept. 13, 14, 15, and 16 are the dates of the Hicksville Fair. This brings it on the next week after the Auburn Carnival and will give our people a chance to go over there.

—One of the new features of the Hicksville fair this season will be the Japanese day fire works. This is a new importation direct from Japan, and will be seen for the first time at the Hicksville fair. 35-36

—The birth of a little son to Councilman Potter and wife Saturday, was 'phoned to us all right but for some reason we do not know, it failed to appear in Saturday's paper. But the boy is all right.

—When you buy a wagon why not buy the best. The Turnbull wagon runs easier and will wear longer than any other wagon made. Call and examinine them before you buy. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—Private Beaber, of Co. A. 157th is dead. His home was in Fort Wayne, and he was the one chosen from his company to come home with Adjutant Scott to get recruits. His trouble was a heart affiction resulting from fever.

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures. and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. H. B. McCord.

—S. Z. Dickinson of Waterloo, is visiting friends at Ravenna, Ohio. He writes the COURIER that fruit is very abundant there and crops excellent. Peaches sell at the groceries at 45 cents a bushel and upwards, and other crops of all kinds were never more promising.

—Geo. Campbell is buldhing a new residence on his lot east of the Ninth-st bridge. It will be a desirable place, for he is going to fill it up to the grade. Enterprising young men like him can soon fill that entire vacant line of lots with comfortable dwellings. Who will be the next?

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. H. B. McCord.

—Gen. Blair and wife, and Mrs. Blair's niece, Mrs. Reitze, of Fort Wayne, and Mrs. Reitze's daughter, were callers at the COURIER home yesterday. Many of our business men know Mr. Reitze, as he has for many years been cashier of the Old National Bank at Ft. Wayne. Mrs. Reitze and daughter will visit friends at Kendallville before returning home.

—Army officers do not seem to get along with Secretary Alger. The older ones, who were in the rebellion, keep talking about how Alger, then a colonel in a Michigan regiment, was dismissed from the service for absenting himself from his men and from camp. This all makes worse, the quarrel as to who was responsible for the suffering of our men in camp and on ships.

—The National Union at Warsaw, the only democratic paper in the county, changed hands about a week ago. F. J. Zimmerman who had conducted it for over toirty years, sold it to two young men, Kabrich & Sickles. In three days Kabrich was arrested by parties from Fitzerald, Georgia, who claimed he is an embezzler. Sickles says he will go right on with the paper, and the democrrts of the county are working to get him 3,000 new subscribers.

—Among the many noted people who visited Winona this season, was Dr. Tanner, the famous faster. He went forty days and forty nights without a morsel of food, about twenty years ago. This trial of endurance, was started by a discussion of the forty days fast related in the New Testament. He was watched and guarded every second of teme by men appointed for that purpose, and it is certain no food passed his lips. He had ready a luscious, ripe, cool watermelon, and as the last minute expired one half of it was handed to him. He plunged his hand into the core and thrust pieces into his mouth saying, "Perhaps this don't taste good." It was the most noted performance of its kind ever recorded. He is said to be in good health yet in spite of such a long fast, broken by a feast of melon.

Tuesday's Daily.

—T. S. Murray, of Spencerville, was a caller to-day.

—Dr. J. H. Ford returned from Petoskey, yesterday.

—Mrs. Mattie Dick of Garrett, is visiting friends in this city.

—Read the new ad. of Schaab & Bro. They are giving extra bargains.

—B. F. Blair, of Newville, was a welcome caller today. He was in town on some business matters.

—FOUND: A pair of black silk gloves. Owner can have them by calling at this office.

—A letter from John Lochner he says business is good with him, and all are well. He and his wife will be here the week of the Carnival, next week.

—Billy Latson came home Saturday rom Beulah, Mich., looking the picture of good health. He says his father and the other relatives up there are well.

—The Hicksville fair will be held this year Sept. 13 to 16. This is one of the few fairs that has survived the hard times and always paid their premiums. 35-36

—LOST:—Saturday on the road between here and Garrett, a pocket medicine case. Finder will please return to Dr. Nusbaum, Auburn, and be suitably rewarded.

—John Lochner has a fine picture in the Argos Reflector of this week, showing the Argos public school building. It is somewhat like the new building in Auburn.

—Dr. Nusbaum has moved into his former residence on South Main-st, and his patrons will hereafter find him at his home there or at his office as usual. All please note this change of location.

—The Grain Drill for a farmer to buy is the Superior Single Disc Drill. It will work in trashy ground where Hoe Drills will not work. Call and see us before you buy. Culbertson & Boland.

—The host of male and female aerialists with the Great Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' aggregation are sensational wonders in their line and introduce many most thrilling and daring novelties.

—Board and lodging can be had at Keeran Sisters on South VanBuren during the Carnival. Anyone wanting a good dinner and supper and good place to rest, call on them, second door south of the Lutheran church.

—More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. H. B. McCord.

—Sept. 13 to 16 will be held the annual exposition at Hicksville. The management has arranged for a base ball tournament, and will furnish base ball every day of the fair, by the crack clubs of the county. Big money up every day. 35-36

—C. D. Snyder, of Pierceton, and his wife, are in this place and vicinity visiting the relatives. These include the families of the late Peter Shafer, of Auburn, and Henry Shafer, of Spencerville. We acknowledge a brief call from Mr. Snyder to-day. They were at one time near by neighbors of ours.

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. . H. B. McCord.

—LOST:—Between Auburn and Corunna on Friday Aug. 26, a small shell pocket book containing a small amount of money. Finder is welcome to the money, but the pocket book was a souvenir of Florida and prized as such; finder will leave it at COURIER office or notify Ona Finch at Corunna, Ind.

—Will Davis, of Kokomo, made us a friendly call yesterday, and ordered the COURIER to his address. He says he wants a paper that gives the news. He has been at home several days visiting the family of his father, Alex. Davis, in Jackson township. He has been at Kokomo several years, in the employ of the Pittsburg Glass Co. that employs about 600 hands.

BUTLER.

J. A. Campbell and wife returned last Saturday from a two weeks' outing in Michigan.

Mrs. Edsal Cherry, an old resident of Wilmington township, and well and favorably known by the older residents, died last week.

Reports from C. J. Coat, undergoing treatment at Oxford, Ohio, are not favorable.

Considerable sickness is reported about town and country.

Mrs. Abe Smith, living three miles west of town, is reported serjously ill.

Franklin's new school house is nearing completion.

The Knisely family have returned from their summer outing.

Vigorous efforts are being put forth to make the Butler street fair a success.

Ed. Carle, our marshal and peace officer, was fined last week for pounding a man, much his physical inferior.

The Disciples' yearly meeting last Sunday in Toppen's woods, one-half mile south of town, was a grand success in point of numbers as well as in the excellent discourses by Rev. Brown. Everything passed off in excellent order, and the crowd of 2,000 or more persons seemed to enjoy the occasion very much. The only thing to mar the occasion was the hitching of hundreds of horses to small trees, morking and destroying them. The land belongs to a poor widow, and she is inconsolable in her loss.

Writing at Home.

Wanted:—A limited number of persons to do writing at their homes. Twenty-five cents paid for every hundred words. Promptness and good work necessary. Applications must be accompanied by ten cents for particulars. Address: The Sioux City Business College, Sioux City, Iowa.

SAMPSON'S FLAGSHIP, THE NEW YORK, FIRING A NATIONAL SALUTE OPPOSITE GRANT'S TOMB.

SAMPSON RECEIVING.

THE recent demonstration at New York in honor of the Santiago fleet was a tribute well deserved by the officers and men of the navy. The army has done well, but the navy has gathered the lion's share of the glory. And it may be confessed, now that Dewey and Schley and Sampson have taken their places beside Decatur and Perry and Farragut, that the triumphs of the United States navy were as surprising as they were gratifying. It is safe to say that most people were decidedly uneasy when the war began as to the effectiveness of the navy. Our warships had been running aground, smashing their machinery and jamming their turrets every time they left port. The mishaps of the Texas had become a subject for humorous comment and the mud bank misadventures of the Dolphin constituted a stock topic for the newspaper paragraphers. The country was distrustful—and with some cause—of the fighting and seagoing qualities of the untried battleships and cruisers. But with the first clash of arms the navy redeemed itself. There was no more machinery smashing, no more turret jamming, no more running aground. The once "hoodooed" Texas quit her cantankerous tricks and went through the war without starting a rivet. The Oregon sailed around the Horn, fought in the battle of Santiago and sailed for New York—four months at sea—in as good condition as when she left San Francisco. The Dolphin dodged all the reefs in the West Indies and gave a gallant account of herself in half a dozen fights. There wasn't a screw loose in the North Atlantic fleet and Admiral Montejo can testify that Dewey's squadron was up to the highest standard of efficiency from first to last. Hence it is that the American welcome to Sampson's fleet was doubly warm. The vessels composing it went to sea under more or less of a cloud. They returned in a blaze of glory and victory which shed its radiance over both ships and sailors. The United States navy is all right. Long may it rule the waves!

SCHLEY ON THE BRIDGE.

NO PEACE IN IT.

War's Death Belt Which Girdles the Earth with a Fighting Zone.

Our war with Spain brings out the remarkable fact that all of the battles fought in the world for the past twenty years have occurred in one fatal, narrow zone of the earth's surface. That zone runs just above the equator. It is only fifteen degrees wide, extending from 8 degrees north to the Tropic of Cancer, and yet the belt does not cross a single continent or large group of islands which has not been literally strewn with the dead and dying. Cuba is in that zone, and Spanish official records prove that in recent years 400,000 people have been killed by hunger or the sword in that unhappy island. All told, the dead in the many battles in the Philippines, at Formosa, at Khartoum and Santiago number 450,000. All of the engagements in the Spanish war, though fought on battlefields some 20,000 miles apart, are almost on a direct line with one another. The battle of Santiago and the naval victory of Sampson and Schley, with their accompanying loss of life, occurred on latitude 20 north. Cardenas, Matanzas and Havana all lie just north of 20 degrees. Manila lies almost under the latitude of 15 north.

It is estimated that during the various rebellions which have arisen in the Philippines during the last few years fully 20,000 soldiers have met their deaths at the hands of the Spanish soldiers. Just before the opening of the war between the United States and Spain no one imagined that an American force would ever be engaged in this out-of-the-way spot, and yet the first great battle of the war was fought at this great distance from the continent and within the bloody zone. The Ladrones, which witnessed several engagements between the Spanish forces and the natives, are well within the fatal zone.

The fighting in central Africa, in which the British soldiers have been engaged, has all occurred within the limits of this zone. So too have the various battles in Sierra Leone, resulting in the loss of 100 lives, been within this boundary. Many engagements have also been fought around Khartoum, which is just south of the sixteenth degree north. The loss at Khartoum is fixed by the English government at 5,000.

In Central America the bloodshed is almost entirely confined to the narrow strip of land crossed by this fatal belt. Only a few months ago such an uprising occurred, ending in the assassination of Barrios, in which 150 lives were sacrificed. All the fighting was done between the degrees of 14 and 15 north.

The Japanese fought the Formosan rebels this year under the Tropic of Cancer, which is 23 degrees north. It will be seen that on no continent or group of islands where this fatal belt crosses has there been peace, while the battles fought within its boundary have been fierce and accompanied by much bloodshed.

WAR'S DEATH BELT WHICH GIRDLES THE EARTH WITH A FIGHTING ZONE.

GOES THROUGH AS IF GREASED.

Soft-Pointed Projectiles Will Pierce the Hardest Armor.

The present superiority of shot to armor is largely due to the simple expedient of placing a soft metal cap over the point of the projectile.

It is a matter of history that, just at the time when armorplate makers were discouraged by the ease with which the gun-makers were able to penetrate the toughest nickel steel, Mr. Harvey produced his brilliant invention for giving an intensely hard face to the plate, and succeeded in smashing up the projectiles at the moment of impact. Shots which theoretically should have passed clear through a Harveyized plate failed to do so, because their points could not hold together long enough to break in through the highly tempered face, which was made so hard that it could cut glass like a diamond point.

SOFT-POINTED SHELLS.

Subsequent to the appearance of Harveyized armor the makers of projectiles had been trying to produce a shot which should combine the necessary hardness and toughness to enable it to split open the hardened face and hold together until it had wedged its way through the body of the plate itself. Previous to the year 1896 a few of the best makers had met with partial success. The Holtzer shell in Europe and the Sterling-Wheeler in this country had succeeded in breaking up the face; but the effort proved too much for the shell, which lapsed before it could get entirely through the plate. This has been the case almost invariably when improved, reforged Harvey plate has been attacked.

For many months the reforged Harveyized plate held its superiority, and it looked as though the final victory in the long contest between shot and armor was to rest with the armor. The next move on the part of the artillerist was of a very extraordinary but very successful kind. He placed a cap of soft steel over the point of the shot to protect it, and the soft cap enabled the shot to get through.

SITS UP IN HIS GRAVE.

Willard Aldrich Has His Coffin Made in an "L."

William Aldrich, an eccentric bachelor who died at Mishawaka, Ind., recently, ordered his own coffin built previous to his death, and the casket was constructed in the shape of an "L," with the perpendicular line at a slight angle. Aldrich resided in Berrien County, Michigan, where he was one of the wealthy land owners and quite prominent as a Spiritualist. Being stricken with consumption, he went to his mother's home to die.

A QUEER COFFIN.

When the queer casket was built he had it taken to his home to test it, gave the undertaker instructions as to glass front, hinges and inscriptions. At the funeral the coffin could not be placed in the funeral car, hence several crews of pallbearers were secured to relieve each other. The reclining coffin was placed in a large vault, covered with a monster slab. His mother was instructed to have a similar casket built, that "he might converse with her and rest comfortably until both enter a new world," as he expressed it. Buried with him are many valuables, books, a revolver and a lamp. Hundreds came from neighboring cities to witness the interment of the eccentric individual.

The Krupp Gun Works.

Herr Frederick Alfred Krupp, of Essen, Germany, is the largest employer of labor in the world. On the pay rolls of the great Krupp establishment are more than 25,000 men. Thirty-four Governments have made purchases there. Herr Krupp, the son and worthy successor of the great Krupp, is only 42 years old. His employes live in "model houses," have schools, baths, libraries, hospitals, and pensions under his direction and co-operation. The present head of the establishment has been a member of the Reichstag, but, like his sturdy father, has always refused to accept a title from the Government.

Receipt in Full.

There is a passage in the following paper which might strike the observer as somewhat facetious, but he is assured that no such effect was in mind when the sentence was indited. The paper referred to is a receipt originally given by an enterprising firm of Harrisburg druggists, and the form used was in common vogue at the time. Thus it runs:

"Received July 21, 1795, of Mr. David Scarlet the sum of £200, in full of all accts since the year One, when the Devil was a suckling baby, up to this day, being after the celebration of Independency.

Under His Nose.

She's a tender little maiden,
With nut-brown hair—
A witching little body,
With a charming air;
I love her, though I never
Yet have told her so,
And there'll be a big explosion
Some day, I know!

She smiles upon me sweetly
When our glances meet,
Then she pounds her keys and blushes
And becomes discreet,
And the "old man" vainly fancies
That she loves him—oh,
But there'd be a big explosion
If he could know!

EARL AND COUNTESS OF MINTO

The New Vice-Regal Representatives at Ottawa, Ont.

The Earl of Minto (Sir Gilbert John Elliot Murray, Kynynmound), appointed governor general of Canada, to succeed Lord Aberdeen, comes of an ancient family. His ancestors have been statesmen and soldiers, and he has followed in their footsteps. He was educated at Cambridge, and won fame in the Northwest rebellion in 1885. He married the daughter of the Hon. Charles Grey, a famous beauty, and they have four children. The Earl of Minto is restined to be popular. Twenty-five years ago, as Lord Melgund, he wes recognized as one of the most brilliant cross-country riders in England, and owned many first-class steeplechasers. Lady Minto is still one of the best lady skaters in England, a recreation which she practiced and graduated in at Ottawa. The family residence at Warwick, Roxburgshire, is among the best known of the great places in the lowlands of Scotland. Although Lord and Lady Minto are eminent society people, he is a man of great energy and activity, and he is sure to make every possible endeavor to do what he considers to be his duty in all parts of the dominion, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Ocean Cable's Enemy.

Cable termites are very destructive insects. The French cable at Tonkin, a few months after it was laid, began to show signs of decay. On examining the cavities in the old cable, Prof. Bouvier, of the Paris Academy of Science, discovered that they had been made by a new termite.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

OFF WITH THE MASK.

We learn from Honolulu, via Victoria, B. C., that one of the most important matters to come before the Hawaiian commission when it meets for business will be the question of limiting the elective franchise. There are at least two American parties in Honolulu. They are the ins and the outs. Each professes to be more American than the other, while they disagree about pretty much everything else under the sun, with one most important exception. That exception is the native vote. Both are equally and mortally afraid of that and both are equally anxious that it should be suppressed by setting up qualifications for the exercise of the elective franchise which no one in fifty of the natives possesses. In this respect there is a remarkable agreement between the two American parties.

Such is the information we now have and it is probably correct. Now that annexation is accomplished there is no longer a sufficient motive for concealing the fact that the natives have not been consulted in this business at all; that they had nothing whatever to do with the revolution of 1893 or the creation of the Dole government; that they have at no time been in favor of annexation to this country and that if they were admitted to the exercise of political privileges they would promptly oust the American party and proceed to run things in their own way.

It is just as well to have the false pretenses stripped off. It may as well be admitted first as last that the whole revolution and all the intriguing for annexation have been for no other purpose than to promote the pecuniary interests of a few Americans who have been making fortunes growing sugar and running some other enterprises with slave labor, euphemistically called contract labor. Let us henceforth have the plain truth and no more nonsense. Let it be understood that our annexationists are actuated not by philanthropy or patriotism, but by a lively appreciation of the value of very hard cash.—Ex.

Free Silver the Issue.

What has given the Republican party the courage to come out fairly and squarely for the single gold standard? In the light of the history of the party for the last quarter of a century—a history of quibbling, double dealing and ambuscade on the money question—this new departure cannot fail to excite surprised remark. Explanation is easy, however, when it is remembered that Republicans claimed that "dollar wheat" was the result of the Dingley tariff, and that the modicum of prosperity which followed was brought about through the beneficent influence of Republican legislation. In the presence of prosperity based upon an exceptional condition of affairs abroad—famine in India and short crops in wheat producing countries—the Republicans have gained courage enough to throw off the mask of bimetallism and to advocate the single gold standard.

That the Democratic party welcomes a battle in the open is made manifest by the action of its State conventions, which have uniformly demanded the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, and have enthusiastically recognized the Chicago platform as containing the declaration of Democratic principles. In 1896 the Republicans fought under cover. The St. Louis platform was a cowardly evasion of the issue, and the Republican party to-day admits this fact by refraining from approval of that compact of dishonor.

Preparing to Loot Cuba.

It is a fact full of significance that Republican political leaders are manifesting opposition to the appointment of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee as military governor of Cuba. This opposition is alleged to be based on the fact that Gen. Lee is a Democrat, but the real objection to him is that he is a straightforward, honorable and honest man. There are schemes on foot to loot Cuba, and Republican political leaders are in these schemes and are expecting to benefit themselves financially by their promotion. In order that such plans may not miscarry, it is necessary that a pliant or a venal military governor be appointed for the island of Cuba. Fitzhugh Lee is neither venal nor pliant; hence the objection to him. It would be simple justice and a recognition of valuable service in time of great necessity for President McKinley to appoint Gen. Lee military governor of Cuba. But the same ring of pestilential money grabbers that encircled the President before the war began is now surrounding him. It is greatly to be apprehended that the men who have no aspirations above money and no scruples as to the manner of obtaining it may regain influence over the executive. If Gen. Lee is not given the recognition he deserves it will be a sign that Hanna, Elkins and men of that jackal type are again in control of the administration.

The Referendum in Illinois.

The Republican party of the State of Illinois has seen fit to take issue with the Democrats on the question of direct legislation, as represented in the initiative and referendum. In the State platform adopted by the Democrats the referendum was favored, and the party is pledged to carry such a law into effect in case the people give the party sufficient support to elect. In other words, if the Democrats of Illinois carry the Legislature, the people of the State will thereafter have a chance to vote on all important questions before they become a law. Thus the people at large would become executive, as was originally intended by the founders of our republic. Just why the Republicans can muster up sufficient nerve to oppose the Democrats on this question is a mystery. There is neither logic nor wisdom in their course. Yet the Republican press of the State is unanimous in opposing Democracy on this point. It is too much like saying that the people are not sufficiently wise to legislate for themselves. If the people of Illinois are wide-awake, they will answer the Republicans at the polls in November, and in a manner that will teach them a lesson.

In Behalf of the Soldiers.

When Congress meets there will be an investigation as to the conduct of the war. If the Republicans succeed in retaining a majority in the House the result of that investigation will be simply a whitewashing of Alger and all the rest of the incompetent and venal officials appointed by the Republican administration. There have been many corrupt bargains, great incapacity and innumerable blunders during the short campaign against the Spaniards. These matters should not be hushed up. Soldiers who have been starved by robber commissaries, neglected by incompetent officers, murdered by lack of proper medical attention, should be remembered by Congress, and the men who caused all this needless suffering should be severely punished. But if the Republicans remain in power the Congressional investigation will prove a farce. For this reason Democrats should labor strenuously to return their candidates to the House of Representatives. This is a duty the party owes to the soldiers. The war was brought about largely through Democratic influences, but the injuries to soldiers have all proceeded from Republican maladministration. Soldiers who have suffered will hesitate to bring their cases before a Republican Congress. Therefore, in behalf of these brave defenders of the flag, Democrats should work zealously for success.—Chicago Dispatch.

Wisconsin Republicans.

Republicans in Wisconsin are going to have a lively time in their campaign this fall. General Scofield has been renominated after one of the hottest of factional fights. He goes before the people as an apologist for a bad administration and with the bitterest foes to his election in the ranks of his own party.

Democrats will not need to waste any time in hunting up arguments against Scofield. The republican friends of the opposing candidate, La Follette, have furnished an abundant supply based on the best of evidence. Added to this, the exposure of the horrible condition of affairs so far as the wageworkers of Oshkosh are concerned will cause every man who labors for a living to cast his vote against returning such an oppressive and dishonest party to power.

Republican leaders will endeavor to patch up the troubles in Wisconsin, but this will be an exceedingly difficult undertaking. The party deserves defeat, and the democrats have an excellent opportunity to make a winning fight.

America Will Be Watched.

Our course in regard to Cuba will be closely observed by the nations of Europe, who keep distinctly in mind our formal disclaimer of any purpose of territorial aggrandizement in that quarter. If politicians and political bargains and exigencies, or the personal fads and fancies of those in authority in the War Department should constitute in the end the chief agencies for governing the island, the public would be shamed and disgraced in the estimation of the entire civilized world.—Philadelphia Record.

Need of Prayer Removed.

President McKinley has been urged by a pious woman friend to pray for guidance in the matter of the Philippines. This is entirely unnecessary, as Senator Foraker and half a dozen preachers have already proclaimed the decision of Divine Providence.—Springfield Republican.

Points from the Press.

Now that the end of Spanish misrule and cruelty on the western hemisphere is in sight, the American people will turn their attention to the gold combination.—Silver Knight-Watchman.

If McKinley prosperity puts wheat up when the people have bread to buy, and wheat down when the farmers have wheat to sell, there will soon be an imperative call for prosperity of a different brand.—The New Era.

The "dollar wheat" boasted of by the Republican press leaders is not for the farmers. Last year nine-tenths of the farmers sold their wheat from 60 to 68 cents. In the hands of speculators the same wheat reached $1.85 on the Chicago board. Now, when a new crop is in the hands of the farmers, wheat has dropped to 70 cents. Dollar wheat is not for the farmers.—Vincennes (Ind.) Sun.

An indication of McKinley prosperity is the price of flax. The first of last week we were told the price was 85 cents. On Saturday the price had dropped to 50 cents. You can always depend upon the price dropping when the farmer has a crop to sell. As soon as he has sold, and the speculators have the crop, up goes the price. There is no more demand for these things just after the speculators have cornered the crop than there is just after harvest time.—Kansas Agitator.

The reason why $1,250,000,000 sought an investment in Government bonds bearing 3 per cent. interest is because the owners of the money knew that although the rate of interest was low the dollars in which the bonds were to be paid would continue to grow larger and fatter under the gold standard. Property that is growing cheaper under gold contraction cannot compete in the markets against bonds payable in dollars that are appreciating in purchasing power.—Silver Knight-Watchman.

The Republican party is unable to redeem its promises. It obtained a new lease of power on the promises that it would check importations, put a surplus in the treasury, and raise both the price of the American product and the wages of the American laborer. So far as the fruit industry is concerned, it may have succeeded in checking importations, but wages are no higher, and in many instances they are lower, and fruit is not worth so much as it was before the Dingley bill was enacted.—Yolo Democrat.

London Street Names.

A visitor in London refers to the confusion incident to the duplication of street names in that city. For instance, there are twenty-one High streets in London. But let him tell his own story:

Let us take High street for an example. Suppose I live at 25 High street, and that you are coming to see me. You get out of the Liverpool train at Euston station, and tell cabby, "Twenty-five High street."

"Yes, sir," says cabby. "High street, Camden Town, sir, or High street, Clapham; or High street, Deptford; or High street, Fulham; or High street, Hampstead; or High street, Homerton; or High street, Highgate; or High street, Islington; or High street, Lambeth; or High street, Kingstand; or High street, Marylebone; or High street, Poplar; or High street, Putney; or Hight street, Peckham; or High street, Portland Town; or High street, St. Giles; or High street, Stepney; or High street, N.; or High street, Shadwell; or High street, Whitechapel; or High street, Wapping, sir?"

Of course you are in what the English call "a blue funk" by this time, if you are a stranger, and don't know High street from Low street.

"I don't know," you tell him; "take your choice. I only know that it's not far from Manchester Square."

"Ah!" says cabby; "werry good, sir; that's High street, Marylebone, sir." And off you go, for cabby knows now exactly where it is.

Flogging in the British Navy.

It has been generally believed until now that the barbarous practice of flogging has been abolished as a method of punishment in the English army and navy, and that the cat-o'-nine-tails was altogether an obsolete institution. That this idea is without foundation is shown by the report of the terrible flogging to which a seaman was subjected recently on board the British man-of-war Penelope by order of her captain. The cruiser in question is stationed at Cape Town, and news of the flogging has just been received in London. Moreover, recent official returns go to show that in the military prisons of the United Kingdom there are an average of at least two floggings a week throughout the entire year. Russia, which has an infinitely greater reputation for barbarity than England, has recently not only prohibited flogging by the Government and provincial authorities as a means of punishment, but has also deprived the village elders and the leaders of the peasant communities from inflicting corporal punishment upon refractory fellow-members.

Primitive Incense.

In ancient days sweet odors were obtained by burning aromatic gums and woods; hence the wood perfume, which is from the Latin per, through, and fumus, smoke or vapor. From this arose the idea of incense in primitive worship. It was used by the Orientals long before it became known to the Western world. People of the East utilized it for sacrifice in their temples. At feasts it enhanced the pleasure of the senses. At funerals it was a bribe to appease the manes of the dead, and later, in theaters, a disinfectant against the unpleasant odors of a crowded building.

Pliny assures us that incense was not employed in sacrifice until after the Trojan war, when fragrant woods were applied to give an agreeable smell.

In an ancient magical manuscript it is directed that three grains should be taken with three fingers and placed under the threshold to keep away evil spirits which might come in the form of offensive odors.

TOLD BY THE SERGEANT.

From the Democrat, Grand Rapids, Mich.

At the Michigan Soldiers' Home, in Grand Rapids, lives Sergeant Richard Dunn, hale and hearty, although he carries the scars of several wounds sustained in some of the battles of the Civil War. In recounting his experience to a reporter, Mr. Dunn said:

"About a year and a half ago I began to have trouble with my stomach. My suffering was so intense that I tried different medicines and doctored with several physicians, but without permanent relief.

The Wounded Soldier.

"I read an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People having cured a case much like mine, and I decided to give them a trial, which I did.

"After taking five boxes I was cured. I never felt better than I do now, even in my younger days. I am naturally a robust man, but that stomach trouble, together with rheumatism, which afterward set in, were making fast inroads upon my health, and I am satisfied that it would have been but a short time before my comrades would have been conducting the regulation funeral ceremonies over my remains had I not chanced to read of and taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"There are several others in the home who are taking these pills and are receiving great benefit. RICHARD DUNN."

THE FARM AND HOME

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO FARMER AND HOUSEWIFE.

Changes in Agricultural Conditions During Recent Times—Value of Wood Ashes—Peanuts as a Crop—Green Food for Stock—Farm Notes.

Progress on the Farm.

Every farm differs in some respects from all others, and rules governing the methods in certain localities may be inapplicable elsewhere. Climatic influences and diversities of soils make it imperative that the farmer study the characteristics and surroundings of his farm and improve according to his opportunities. The farmer must contend with changes of seasons, drouth, rains, heat, cold and enemies which destroy his crops. He can not adapt the soil of his farm to the crop, but must select the crops for the soil. Plants thrive best when the conditions are most favorable; but the conditions suitable for one crop may not be favorable to another. There is more to learn on a single farm than any farmer can master if he keeps pace with progress. Systems of farming are changing. The reduction of the cost of labor by the use of improved implements has done much to revolutionize farming, and the co-operative system is gradually working its way into farm methods, as with the creamery system of butter-making the use of traction engines and the shipping of milk, fruit and other produce by associations; yet the individual farmer is not suppressed, but is attached more securely to his farm.

Wood Ashes on the Farm.

As a fertilizer wood ashes stand high, and may be used as medicine for farm animals. For many years I have fed them to stock, and believe they have done much toward preserving the invariably good health of the swine, horses and cattle. Of course, there may be a difference of opinion on the subject, and I have never yet found a veterinary surgeon who would recommend wood ashes as a medicine. Nevertheless, experience is sometimes worth as much as theoretical advice. My plan is to keep wood ashes, charcoal and salt mixed together constantly in the pen for the swine. Three parts of wood ashes to one part of salt will not hurt the swine, and if the mixture is kept before them all the time, and fresh water is given to them freely, they will not eat too much to injure their health. I believe such a mixture is a good preventive of swine cholera and similar diseases. Certainly the beneficial effects are quite apparent.

Clean wood ashes is better than all the condition powders for the farm horses. The ashes can be given to the horses twice a week in their oats at the rate of an even teaspoonful each time. If given carefully and regularly I believe that no medicine will have to be given to horses that are fairly treated and cared for. Every one familiar at all with farm matters must have observed a certain habit in many horses and cows to gnaw wooden posts, trees and similar objects. This craving for something which they do not get from their daily food is satisfied when wood ashes are administered regularly to them. It is just as natural for the animals to desire this as for us to have a craving for acids, salt and even pepper. —Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Peanuts.

Prepare the ground just as you do for potatoes, making it fine and mellow as possible, and throw it up into low ridges, somewhat as sweet potatoes are planted. Carefully shell the peanuts in order not to break the brown skin that covers the kernel. Plant the last of May or early in June, about two feet apart, three or four kernels in a place in the ridge; cover about two inches deep. They will soon come up. Cultivate shallow and keep the weeds down and the soil mellow until they bloom, then hoe every two or three weeks, or oftener if they need it, drawing the fine soil well up to the plants each time.

It is a curious fact that the blooms on the plant produce the tubers under the ground, and some persons think it necessary to cover the blossoms, but it is not. If the soil is kept mellow and loose, each fertile blossom sends down a long root-like stem that pushes its way into the ground, and the tuber, or nut, is produced on the tip end of this stem. As soon as ripe, or when the vines frost, pull and throw into piles to cure. Most of the nuts will cling to the roots, but sometimes they will have to be dug. When cured pick off and rub and shake together to free from earth.

Green Food for Stock.

In summer the pasture is severely taxed, not only to provide for a large herd, but also make growth when the land has not been supplied with plant food in the form of manure or fertilizer. Some farmers relieve the pasture from close and constant cropping by growing some kind of green crop, such as sweet corn, oats or cow peas, the cattle being turned on the crops when the plants are young in order to take them off the pasture long enough to give the grass a start. But little labor is required, the land being stirred with a disc cultivator and the seed broadcasted and the land then rolled. If there is danger from trampling of the green food it may be cut and fed to cows. A mixture of oats and peas, broadcasted together, has long been used by some farmers, but any kind of green crop will answer, as the object is to take the cows off the pasture and at the same time provide a substitute for grass in a manner not to diminish the yield of milk by the cows.

The Farm a Laboratory.

On every farm the manure heap is a receptacle for raw material that undergoes chemical changes, and more changes occur therein than in any laboratory under the control of chemists. The food for plants is therein prepared, and is the same as that purchased in the form of artificial fertilizers. Even in the soil constant changes occur. We now know that minute bacteria work as agents in preparing food for plants, and in some cases are capable of utilizing the free nitrogen of the atmosphere. Every plant after its kind performs a certain duty, assisting in its way to benefit some plant that follows, and everay process of growth, every effort put forth by the farmer, and every beast that exists on the farm, are all aids in farm laboratory work, thousands of combinations being created and hundreds of compounds resulting. To succeed on the farm every farmer should study these things in order that he may more intelligently assist in deriving the most from his farm. There is room for hundreds of experiments, as agriculture is yet in its infancy compared with what is possible in the future, as every year demonstrates that there is more to learn.—Philadelphia Record.

Saving Lettuce Seed.

Probably most people who have grown and saved lettuce seed for years have noticed that after a time the lettuce began to run up to head earlier and earlier each year, until the period of leaf production was materially reduced. This comes from collecting seed from plants that all through their growth have been kept stripped of their leaves. The seedsman never or seldom picks any leaves from his seed lettuce. He only does it when he finds that the lettuce mildew has attacked it, which is the lettuce-seed growers most formidable difficulty. Usually when the leaf mildew gets in lettuce, it goes through the field within a day or two. Very little seed grows on these headed lettuce, much less than from heads stripped of leaves. This is why the best lettuce seed must always be dear.

Value of Whey as Hog Feed.

The Wisconsin Experiment Station reports that 760 pounds of whey effected a saving of 100 pounds of cornmeal and shorts, mixed in equal parts, the latter being worth $12 per ton; the whey was worth 8 cents per 100 pounds. At $15 per ton for the grain, whey was worth 10 cents per hundredweight. Whey was fed in varying quantity; from two to ten pounds to one pound of grain. Feeding pigs on whey alone was not successful. In Danish experiments it required 1,200 pounds of whey (from skim milk) to equal 100 pounds of meal. And several trials at home and abroad indicate that whey has just about the same feeding value for hogs as half the same weight of skim milk.

Competition.

The farmer who does not believe that farming pays can always find other farmers who make a profit. The real drawback to farming is competition, which the farmer must meet as well as the tradesman. The competitor of the farmer is some other farmer who is more progressive than he. Time on the farm cannot be wasted, hence a farmer cannot afford to wait two or three years watching his neighbor make experiments, but must himself go ahead and get to the front as soon as possible. There is strong competition among farmers. Some can produce at a lower cost than others and can consequently sell at lower prices. To meet this competition each farmer must resort to the best stock to be had and keep his farm up to the standard of fertility.

Feeding Oats in the Straw.

Though it saves labor, it is doubtful whether there is any advantage in feeding oats in the straw to ordinary stock. Unless the grain can be ground much of it will pass through the stock whole and will be voided in the excrement. But there is an exception to this in the case of sheep, especially if fed oats in the straw in winter. The sheep masticate the grain so thoroughly that after it has come up and is rechewed in the cud there is scarcely any loss of nutriment. It is best to feed the oats in the straw before any hay is given, and require it to all be eaten. This will prevent waste.

Late Fall Pigs.

The only pig that will attain size enough to safely pass the winter is one that is born six or seven months before cold weather is expected. We have raised pigs in the fall, and that too when we had the advantage of a basement barn to provide warm quarters for them. Yet the growth during the winter, notwithstanding good feed, was never satisfactory. There is too little sunlight during the winter months, and if the pig is kept warm without sunlight it is usually at the expense of poor ventilation. Without good air no animal can maintain good digestion or remain healthy.

Fleas on Plants.

Fleas become pests in some locations. An excellent mode of exterminating them is to use the well-known kerosene emulsion, adding to every gallon of the emulsion a gill of crude carbolic acid and ten gallons of water, applying with a sprayer. Add the acid at the time of mixing the soap and kerosene. It is also an excellent wash for lice on cattle. Apply the mixture on buildings and ground with a sprayer.

Butter Color.

The use of butter color, while not at all necessary during summer, frequently gives good satisfaction in winter months and is by no means harmful, but often beneficial in the way of securing a better separation and texture, as its presence has a tendency to firm butter.

Answers to Oft-Asked Questions.

It takes about three months to grow a broiler.

The goose lays a score or two of eggs in a year.

No brooding pen should contain over fifty chicks.

Broilers shrink about a half-pound each when dressed.

Forty dressed ducklings are packed in a barrel for shipment.

The shell of an egg contains about fifty grains of salt and lime.

Build the house ten by ten feet for ten fowls, and the yard ten times larger.

Ducklings are marketed at five pounds weight, which they attain in ten weeks.

Ten dozen eggs a year is the average estimate given as the production of the hen.

About four dozen eggs are given as an average for the annual output of the turkey.

Duck feathers sell at 40 cents per pound; goose feathers bring double the amount.

Thirteen eggs are considered a sitting, though many breeders are now giving fifteen.

Between forty and fifty degrees is the proper temperature to keep eggs for hatching during winter.

Eggs intended for hatching should not be kept over four weeks. They must be turned every day or two.

JAPANESE DESIGNS.

Largely the Result of Their Methods of Teaching Drawing.

The question is often asked, "Where do the Japanese get the ideas from which to produce the weird and fantastic designs so often seen in their work?" Numerous efforts have been made to answer this question, and the Japanese have been alternately lauded for the beauty of their work and condemned for its crudeness. It would appear that the system by which the Japanese are taught designing is largely responsible for the character of their work. There is no race of people on the face of the earth, with the possible exception of the Chinese, who are more painstaking or skillful in the work which they perform.

The Japanese student who is taught drawing is given a small book in which are designs printed in small squares, and these he reproduces square by square until he has grasped the salient features of each. He is then sent out into the open country and told to observe the works of nature spread out before him in all their luxuriance.

Finding some suitable object for his attention, he proceeds to reproduce the same, introducing, perhaps, some imaginative details. It is right here that the system of squares comes in. Those elegant stems, those feathery petals which are apparently thrown together without restraint, are simply the particular feature of the mass of vegetation which he has selected for this individual study. His long course of study in this line has given him the faculty of following a single vine through tangled underbrush and ignoring all the rest of the growth. The tortuous course of this one vine when brought out by his ready brush appears to the Western art critic as crude and without merit, whereas in reality it is catchy and full of interest.

The wonderful facility of the Japanese in the production of works of art, in the execution, the beauty of colorings and the delicacy of their drawings, is well known. While artists claim the designs of the Japanese, if critically examined, will be found incorrect in form, proportion and construction, these same critics freely concede that in the failings mentioned are found the very highest merits of the Japanese as decorative artists.

Decorative art does not admit of absolute fidelity to nature. Slavish copyists lack imagination, without which they can never be true decorative artists. The very science of the art is the power to conventionalize nature while preserving the spirit and following all the objects represented, and this is where the Japanese excel, as, gifted with a wonderful quickness of perception and delicacy of hand, they seize upon and reproduce with extraordinary rapidity and power of touch the characteristics of natural objects.—Upholsterer.

Long Span of a Few Lives.

Lord Brougham used to tell how he had conversed with an eyewitness of the execution of Charles I., and, as Brougham did not die until 1868, this represented a space of 219 years, with only one life between. Within the last few years there was to be met in London a gentleman whose grandfather had told him of a talk he once had with an old Devonshire laborer who had seen, when a child, the landing of William of Orange in Torbay. The writer of these lines has met at dinner one who had talked with a hostess of Dr. Johnson, in the person of Mrs. David Garrick; while Mr. Gladstone's earlier memories include an interview with Hanah More, who was the great lexicographer's flatterer and friend, and an acquaintanceship with Thomas Grenville, who, not far from 120 years ago, arranged the terms of separation between this country and the United States.—Birmingham (England) Post.

Has Not Slept for Five Years.

It is reported that a man in Indiana has not had an hour's sleep for five years. "Darling," he said, "you are sure that I am the first and only man whose lips have ever come in contact with yours?"

"Of course I am, dearest," she replied. "You do not doubt my word, do you?"

"No, no, sweetheart," he answered; "I love you too devotedly for that. But when I put my arm around you a moment ago and you made a grab for the lines, I couldn't help thinking you possessed wonderful intuition."

MRS. PINKHAM'S WARNING TO WOMEN.

Neglect is the Forerunner of Misery and Suffering—A Grateful Husband Writes of His Wife's Recovery.

Nearly all the ill health of women is traceable to some derangement of the feminine organs. These derangements do not cure themselves, and neglect of the sensations resulting from them is only putting off trouble.

Pathetic stories are constantly coming to Mrs. Pinkham of women whose neglect has resulted in serious heart trouble and a whole train of woes. Here is the story of a woman who was helped by Mrs. Pinkham after other treatment failed:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me very great pleasure to be able to state that I believe my wife owes her health to your medicine and good advice. For three years her health failed rapidly; she had heart trouble, often falling down in dizzy and fainting spells, shortness of breath, choking and smothering spells, bloating of the stomach, a dry cough, dyspeptic symptoms, menses irregular, scanty, and of an unnatural color. She had been treated by physicians with but little benefit. She has taken your treatment according to your directions, and is better in every way. I am well pleased with the result of your treatment, and give you permission to use my letter for the benefit of others.—CHAS. H. and Mrs. MAY BUTCHER, Fort Meyer, Va.

The healing and strengthening power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all female ills is so well established that it needs no argument. For over twenty years it has been used by women with results that are truly wonderful.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

Gov. Matthews Stricken

Friday's Daily.

People all over the state and the nation will regret to hear that a stroke of paralysis Gov. Matthews had yesterday, is likely to end fatally. He was delivering an address to an old settlers' meeting near Layfayette, when he suddenly stopped and came near falling. He was helped to a seat and finally to a house. He was found to be paralyzed on the right side. It is believed he will not recover.

To Raise Plums.

[Laporte Argus.]

Hon. E. W. Davis says he has lot of peaches this year, a great many more than he expect, and he says he made a mistake in not thinning the fruit out more than he did last spring, although he picked off and threw away large quantities. He also says it is no trouble to raise plums if you will only get up early in the morning and jar the curculio off and destroy tdem. He thinks if everybody would take the trouble to kill these beetles for a few years they would soon be cleaned out so they would do but little damage.

Dr. Hill's Lecture

The lecture at the Institute last evening by Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Hill, was well attended and by an audience that could appreciate the bright things they heard. The lecturer, had been spoken of as looking some like Bob Ingersoll, but one could see very little resemblance. Mr. Hill had evidently heard of this, and his allusion to it was very happy, especially when he spoke of a possible monument over Ingersoll's grave, on which might be inscribed the name of the famous Scotch poet "Robert Burns." It took the audience half a breath, to see the point of this brilliant but audacious pun. This brought him into a happy state of feeling with his hearers, and as he slowly warmed up into the pith and substance of his lecture, the interest and attention became intense. There were a few such flashes of wit as would help to set off the fine thoughts that kept bubbling up for expression, but in the main, the beauty of the lecture was in its deep research its strong undercurrent of good sense, of sound judgement and finely developed thought all clothin eloquent and forceful sentences. His gestures were strong and natural and his manner pleasant. Altogether, his audience fell in love with him as a man of great intellectual ability and scholarly qualities. In brief, Mr. Hill leaves with the teachers of the institute and the people of Auburn, only the pleasant memories of an admiring audience. We ought also, to say right here that Supt. Coe has made no mistakes in selecting his lecturers or his working force. The Institute has been a pronounced success.

WORTHY TRIBUTE

To Dr. Wheeler and the Product of His Life's Labor and Research.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

If you seek for a reason for the unquestionable popularity of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, you learn that it is due wholly to the merit of the preparation in making sick nerves strong and vigorous and through them the organs active and healthy.

It has reached the pinnacle of success in the science of medicine and is without a rival. This fact is proven by the thousands who have regained health by it after thorough tests, and failures of other Nervines, Compounds and Sarsaparillas.

No claim is made for Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer that is not accompanied by convincing evidence. In this case Geo. S. Beck, River Styx, O., furnishes the proof. He says: "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is certainly a wonderful remedy. Less than one bottle cured my wife of sleeplessness and nervousness of a very serious nature. I, myself, had a very uncomfortable time from the effect of LaGripp, which was an aggravating nervous trouble. Sometimes I felt as if I would rather be dead than alive to endure it. One bottle of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured me and I gained twenty-five pounds in a very short time. I could add several pages to this stating the merits of the remedy from my own observation. I would not be without it in my house if possible to get it."

It is a specific for sick nerves.

The Fair Association Must Help The War Fund

(Kendallvill Daily Press.)

The Fair association must plank down $100 as its share of the war tax, according to an opinion received from the internal revenue department at Washington. And the tax doesn't stop here. Every side show or exhibition on the grounds not managed by the association must pay a $10 special license. If a man wants to give a comic song and dance and sell medicine, the tax is $10, and few, if any, amusements are permitted to escape the war tax.

Meetings At Helmer.

Special to the Courier

HELMER, IND., Aug. 23, 1898.—God's wondrous power is being manifested here, and people are coming from the north, south, east and west to be healed from their diseases, and many are being saved from their sins. "Praise God." Mrs. Charles Barlett, came from South Milford, Ind., to be cured of a tumor in the stomach, which has been growing for seven years, and two years ago was given up to die, after being in two hospitals. Last April she was taken to Battle Creek, Mich., thinking she could get some help, but after three months, was sent home as she could not get any relief. She heard of Sister Woodworth, and she began to pray to God to spare her life to be brought to her meeting. God answered her prayer, and she was healed at once upon laying on of hand as it reads in James 5th chapter. She gave God the glory, and attends the meetings as a living witness for God's healing power.

Hallie Barber, of Salem Center, Ind., was healed of scrofula and deafness, When only a year old, she had an operation on her neck for a gathering. After the operation, it left and settled in her head and destroyed her hearing entirely in one ear, and almost the same in the other. For the past two years she has been between life and death. She is now sixteen years of age, and praises God for his healing power.

Sarah J. Bowers, of Helmer, Ind., was healed at once of heart trouble. For the past year she was expected to die at any moment, but was saved and healed at once by God's mighty power.

Miss Carrie Kroll, of Auburn, Ind., was healed, after being given up by three doctors, of catarrh and quick consumption. Her entire system was diseased, and death stared her in the face. But God in his tender mercy healed her soul body.

What a wonderful Savior. Helmer was over flowed with people last Sabbath. It was estimated that 3,000 people were here. God is here in his mighty healing and saving power. Meetings will continue all this week, over next Sunday, and all next week. People come to be healed for all kinds of diseases, and go home praising the living God. Praise his name.

J. D. LAHNUM.

Obituary of Alex. Provines

Alexander Provines was born in Bungetstown, Pennsylvania, Jan. 31, 1818, and departed this life at his home in Jackson Township, Aug. 21st 1898, at the ripe age of 80 years, 6 months and 21 days. His parents, Robert Provines and Jane [Smith] Provines were born in Ireland, and moved to this country with their parents at an early age. Thus he was of Scotch-Irish descent, and has ever borne the characteristics of his race. At a very early age he moved with his parents to Harrison county, Ohio. Here he was left an orphan at the age of 11, and from that time on he figured in this big world for himself. In early manhood he moved to Wayne county, Ohio. In 1841, at the age of 23, he was united in marriage to Miss Dorcas Adams. To this happy union were born nine children, of whom six survive them. April 26, 1853, they, with their family, settled on the farm where he and his wife lived and died. His wife, Dorcas, preceded him but a short time to the spirit world, dying March 11, 1897. The farm on which they settled was practically in the woods, and he with his family cleared it. He was a very strong man both physically and mentally, and was the architect of his own fortune. He was the friend of everyone, especially of the oppressed. Seldom ever a favor was asked that was not granted, and that with little thought as to the returns. While not a member of any church, his sympathies and interests were in its favor. He was a man that esteemed honesty and morality very high. He never desired to become very wealthy, but rather wished those about him to be on an equality with himself. This was proven by him in dividing his fortune with his children, helping each of them at the time most needed to get a start for themselves. He filled many positions of trust, all of which were honestly and faithfully discharged. Though his life exceeded the allotted three score years and ten, he was blessed with good health until near the end. He suffered much the last few months, and especially the last few days. A few hours before the end he became quiet and peacefully slept the sleep that knows no waking. He leaves to mourn his death six children, twenty-seven grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren, besides a great many other relatives. The funeral services were conducted from the Grove Bethel church on Tuesday, August 23, at 2 p. m. Interment took place in Evergreee cemetery. Rev J. D. Brosy, officiating.

Rev. C. C. Albertson.

The Rev. C. C. Albertson gave a little talk Tuesday afternoon, which, though very brief, was well worth the hearing. In it he held up to view a little skeleton of history which may serve to broaden the ideas of many teachers. Two thousand years ago, the speaker said in substance, the world contained one man. All besides the emperor were vassals—slaves. The idea of manhood, of essential equality among the children of one God, the father of all, had no existence. But one day there walked through the plains of Galilee an obscure Judean carpenter, who proclaimed the eternal fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man. By and by the emperor no longer stood alone. He was confronted by a knight, and one by one from the teachings of Him who spake as never man spake, have sprung the happy conditions under which we live.

The speaker called attention to some of those great epochs in history which are inevitable when once the idea of manhood is implanted in the hearts of a people to grow silently, to mould and fashion them for higher uses, until finally in the hour of supreme need, a nation throws off the shackles of tyranny, of ignorance and superstition, and the whole moral atmosphere is sweeter, cleaner, purer for the struggle. Let us add that the question for each individual student to ponder and settle within himself is whether he will ally himself with the best men and work for the most noble objects, and thus through the grace of God become a co-laborer with Him for the good of the world, or drift—drift—drift with the tide to an ignoble destiny.

CASTORIA.

FORT WAYNE BOY WRITES.

Wm. Swayne, a Fort Wayne boy in the engineers is at Montauk Point, Long Island, where the new hospital camp has been established and to which the most of the troops from Cuba are being taken. It has never been explained why the extreme east end of that island was chosen instead of the hundreds of places more convenient. But here is a part of what Mr. Swayne says.

MONTAUK POINT, Aug. 21, 1898.

I feel that it is unnecessary to attempt to describe the condition of the poor fellows that have landed here during the past week. The papers have not described it any worse than it is. I have talked with men of the Second, the Thirteenth, and of the Seventh New York, who have left the detention camp and have gone into the regular camp. They say that their suffering was caused more by starvation than anything else; they were not troubled with the fever until they became exhausted by hunger. If the stories of the privates are true, the food and clothing sent south by charitable people was worse than wasted. Several men told me that the goods were confiscated by commanding officers and sold to the Cubans and to the soldiers at enormous prices, and that they saw none of it. This may have been true in exceptional cases but the strict rules and discipline of the government are such that surely such gross wrongs could not be carried on without receiving the punishment deserved.

Several of our boys were talking with some of the rough riders. They say that they are receiving undeserved praise at the hands of the newspapers. They say that the Ninth cavalry, a regiment of negroes, are the real heroes, and every rough rider spoke highly of the colored boys, and one said that hereafter when he met a negro he would take off his hat, for they saved his life. It would be hazarding one's life to speak ill of colored people to the rough riders, either privates or officers.

The water supply here is greatly improved. There is a six inch well about 100 yards from our camp, and it furnishes water to our two battalions and three regiments besides. The well is 130 feet deep and the water is good. Pipes lines are being laid from this well to the detention camp.

I have a Krag-Jorgensen cartridge and I intend to get a set Mausser cartridges if I can. We have been bathing in the ocean four times. It is great sport to let the great waves break into foam over you. We only go in squads with a commissioned officer, so there is no danger of one being taken with cramps, with no one near to help him.

We are entirely ignorant of where we will go after we leave here. Another week will suffice to finish the kind of work we are doing, and there seems to be some doubt whether the railroad we are to build will be begun soon. By the end of this week the soldiers will begin to leave this camp for their posts in the interior unless they are held for the grand review at Washington, which I understand has not yet been decided upon.

ON FALSE PRETENSE.

Dickey, the Insurence Man in the Meshes of the Law.

Dickey is in trouble. He has been getting money on false pretense. He has been here a short time as agent for the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Kentucky and at first made a very favorable impression. He was an acquaintance of Mr. Caldwell at Dr. Ford's and his first trouble was getting Caldwell to cash a check for $35. Then he borrowed $22 of Dr. Ford and soon after, disappeared. Caldwell went to Indianapolis and got back $25 from the company. Dickey returned Saturday, and about that time his wife came on from Chicago. It would seem that she had had a dress or some bill of goods sent down from Chicago, C. O. D., and Dickey having no money, got Herb Weaver to cash a check for $60 on an Indianapolis bank. That evening Herb telegraphed to Indianapolis and learned he had no funds in the bank. Monday, he got Dr. Baxter to identify him at the bank for $35, and it seems he took that money to Dr. Ford. But about this time he was called before Prosecutor Pomeroy, where he promised to get all settled in proper shape that afternoon. So he went up to Caldwell's, and went through his grip and disappeard again. Mr. Pomeroy and Marshal Potter, went after him yesterday and finally found him at Avilla. He was arrested and brought to Auburn, and is now in jail. He is looking for his company at Indianapolis to come up this evening and help him.

A Narrow Escape

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Reguler size 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of Thomas Hamman deceased to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 3rd day of October 1898 and show cause, if any, why my Final settlement accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 25th day of Aug. 1898.

ECHOES OF THE WAR.

At Cavite, near Manila, there was a bad riot yesterday, owing purely to a misunderstanding. Some U. S. soldiers had been sent on the streets on some errand. when one of them fired off his revolver for fun. The native armed insurgents, who are located about there, thought he was going to shoot at them, and a lot of them gathered and attacked our soldiers. Our men were re-enforced and quite a skirmish ensued. We lost one killed and several wounded, and the "Filipinos" lost four killed and a number wounded, Their leader admits it was the result of a mistake, made worse by their not understanding our language, and says t shall not occur again, and he will punish the offenders.

Alger, secretary of war, is laying the blame for so much sickness and discomfort to the soldiers onto the officers of the army. They lay it onto Alger, and he asks to be called before a court martial. It is probably that all are some to blame, but not more so than was to be expected when suddenly a large army had to be raised and provided for, sent across the water, conquer a country, then sent back, all within three months. When we stop to consider these things we should be patient and these officers should be patient.

Anouher account of the riot at Cavite is that a soldier got into a dispute with a shop keeper over the price of some article he was buying, and thought he would scare the shop keeper by firing his revolver in the air. But he only started a row. There was another trouble that night when we caught a lot of natives stealing the iron off one of the ruined Spanish ships. We drove them off after wounding several.

Newspapers in Spain are greatly disgusted since they begin to learn what a poor fight their army made in Cuba. They think Santiago should have held out longer. No doubt they could have held out some longer, but it is certain we would have got them by another day's battle. But the surrender saved life on both sides and ought to satisfy the people of Spain.

Spanish troops surrendered at Santiago are nearly all in the old country now. A great many of them are still on the sick list. Some have not been allowed to land, but kept in quarantine awhile to see whether their disease is infectious. They are being paid off, and will probably go out of service. They are glad to get home alive.

The Spaniards are still holding Havana, and have ordered that all merchandise, etc., brought from Santiago and other points held by Americans must pay duty when brought into Havana the same as goods from a foreign country.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Are you coming to the Carnival.

—A. B. Walsworth returned from London, Canada, Wednesday, where he purchased some fine Shropshire sheep.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—MARRIED:—Last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Solomon Thomas, by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Fred Mohr and Bessie Belle Thomas. After the ceremony the guests were invited to a richly laden table of good things. Mr. and Mrs. Mohr will make their home in Auburn. We wish them a happy future.

—Lagrange county speaks of her "Soldier Boy," which leads one to think she has only one. It takes little DeKalb to send two full companies' after a strict examination has thrown out about fifty. And in addition, Auburn has an organization of 72 artillerymen, whose field pieces are expected here every day. All this means that DeKalb has about 320 men in the service or trying to get in.

—We are informed that volunteers in this war were enlisted for two years. The actual war lasted, counting from the date of the President's declaration of war to the date of his proclamation of cessation of hostilities, just 114 days. This is about a week less than four months. When it began the Spaniards were calling us cowardly pigs. When it ended they were our prisoners and we had destroyed their navy and taken all their colonies.

Thursday's Daily.

—A good many of our people went up to Ashley today, to see the street fair.

—Trustee Madden is out in the country east of town today, restaking the Baughman ditch for recleaning.

—Hicksville News:—Mrs. John S. Hart of Auburn, who has been visiting a few days here, left yesterday for Ashland county for an extended visit.

—Someone stuck up a small sign yesterday by the little pond of water at the crossing of Main and Seventh-st It reads in plain letters "Pleasant Lake."

—McBride keeps on painting big pictures for use at the Carnival, and crowds of people stand a block off and admire. The scenes are very beautiful and attractive.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. H. B. McCord.

—Carey Boyer had an eye banged up at the Eckhart factory to-day noon. Another boy threw a chunk of rubber that struck him in the eye. He will probably be all right in a day or two.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. H. B. McCord.

—Isaac Ochs, of Ligonier, and his ssm Louis, are in town on business. They are both well pleased to learn that the boys are coming home. One is in the 3rd Texas and one in the 157th Indiana.

—Floyd, Ray and Zoa Stoner of Elkhart are here visiting their grandfather, L. S. Stoner, and the family of Frank Bolender. They will also before returning, visit J. W. Bachtel and wife at Waterloo, who are also relatives.

—Daniel Herrick, candidate for Recorder, was in town this morning on his way to Ashley. We wish to say, right heer, that we think no mistake was made when he was selected for this position. He is a young man of more than ordinary intelligence and business ability and the people will be pleased to see him in the office to which he aspires. He is certainly a most worthy man.

CLEAN PEOPLE

Cleanliness goes with health. If we have catarrh anywhere we cannot be wholly clean.

Makes systematic efforts to be free from this disgusting disease. Mrs. L. A. Johnston, 103 Pilham and Ripley Sts., Montgomery, Ala., tells her experience with catarrh of the stomach and how she was cured:

"I will state to you that I have taken eight bottles of your Pe-ru-na and two of Man-a-lin and rejoice to say, 'God bless Dr. Hartman and Pe-ru-na.' And I earnestly assure you that it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken in my life. I prescribe it to every one I meet who is suffering, as the best medicine in the world, and have made many converts who are now rejoicing in the great good which they have derived from the same. I can tell you that I am almost entirely relieved of indigestion, that great foe which has tortured me so many years, and can now eat anything I desire without it is fruits or something acid."

To understand the scientific action of Pe-ru-na it is best to have Dr. Hartman's special book for women or his book on chronic catarrh. These books are mailed free by the Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

—Near Blodgett's on West Seventh, the diggers came across the logs of the old mud road that used to be there. It is a crossway of good sized logs, and as they are most of them as sound as when put in, and now about two feet deep, it is a hard job to cut through them.

—Bishop & Beidler, the new firm in the Raut shoe store, are brisk and capable young business men and will, we feel certain, make the business a success. The store has always been popular, and will under their management continue to prosper.

—The small boys had a little Klondike this forenoon raking over and digging up the ground under Beuret's old sidewalk. They got quite a little coin, the, last reports showing them 40 cents ahead. They said it was an easy way to get money, "just like findin' it."

—MARRIED:—last evening Aug. 24, at the Lutheran parsonage by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Bert E. Seydel and Katie Roos, both of Garrett, Ind., and will make their future home there, as Mr. Seydel is in the employ of the B. & O. R. R. Co. We wish them good success in life.

—Lin Thomas and George Baxter drove to Ashley this afternoon with a highly decorated carriage. Carnival flags floated from the sides and the Carnival cat was tied behind the rig. The cats are a great advertisement. Auburn is always ahead of the times in advertisements as well as entertainments. Very few towns would undertake giving a Carnival without the ordinary street fair features, —The Lake Shore road will run extra trains each way, after the show is over during the Carnival, one going north and one south at about 11 p. m. The special will be from Hillsdale and Fort Wayne. There will be reduced rates on the main line, so that excursionists, can take trains from Bryan on the east and Goshen on the west. So it will be seen that ample railroad accommodations will be provided this year.

—The name of Smith heads the list of name in England and Scotland, but in Ireland Murphy leads while Smith is fifth. In proportion to the population there are more Smiths in Scotland than in England, for in Scotland one person in every seventy is named Smith, while in England only one person in every seventy-two is a Smith. The Smiths are well up in Ireland, the four leaders of the Smiths being the Murphys, Kelleys, Sullivans and the Walshes.

Friday's Daily.

—In spite of the rain, many went to Ashley today. Those who were there yesterday seem well pleased.

—Gladys and Edith McCool returned to their home at Hamilton this noon, after spending a few days with their cousin Ilif Brown.

—Don't forget that the Auburn Band plays at the Carnival every day. And some days there will be other bands to add to the musical features.

—Romeo Fusselman was here Thursday and sends the COURIER to his brother. He means the boy should have something to amuse him.

—Mr. Clarence Hawkins and daughter, of Hicksville are the guests of T. C. Ford and family today. Mr. Hawkins is posting bills for the Hicksville fair

—The COURIER editor met several dozen familiar faces among the teachhere this week, and in that way renewed many of the acquaintances of former years.

—Mrs. Isa Sydel, of New Haven, Ohio is in the city a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Stamets. All three will take advantage of the excursion rates on the B. & O. tomorrow to go to Chicago.

—Will Schaab, Sam Hallauer and Chas. Weaver returned yesterday from their outing at Lake Gage. They had good luck at fishing, one of them having caught a 6-lb bass, a very large fish for one of that variety.

—Winona Assembly closed yesterday for this year. It has been the best season, all things considered they have ever had. They will have every thing closed up next week. They look to see many new cottages go up next year, and to have many other improvements made.

—Raymond VanAuken and wife came on the forenoon train for a visit with the relatives here. Their home is in Cleveland, Ohio where he has been for several years. It is difficult to recognize in the solid, full grown citizen, the tow headed boy we used to know. But he is the genuine article.

—The secretary informs us that the towns along the B. & O. will send a large crowd to the Carnival. The billing extended from Defiance to Napanee. Hicksville people showed him great courtesy and the business men were generous in giving window space for lithographs, etc, We hope to see the Hicksville people here in a body.

—While at Butler this week, the COURIER reporter had a talk with C. P. Urie, the veteran agent of the Lake Shore road at that place, and found him the "same old sixpence," as genial and gentleanly as ever, and as full of the interests of his road as he always is. He has been employed by that company for twenty years, and the old "L. S." could hardly keep house without him.

—The changes on Dr. Nusbaum's house, are more extensive than we at supposed, and now include good sized addition at the southeast that is continued upward as a tower. It changes the looks of the building very much. The barn has also been greatly enlarged by cutting it in two in the middle and making it several feet longer. Fred Kring and his men are doing the work.

REPUBLICAN CO. CONVENTION

A Good Attendance, A Hot Hall; An Unevenly Distributed Ticket.

Yesterday, the COURIER gave the make up of the ticket up to a little after 4 p. m., the only paper in the county that gave it. We now give our readers a full account.

FORENOON SESSION

The convention organized by electing C. E. Emanuel of Auburn chairman, and A. C. Robbins of the same place for secretary. The republican editors of the county were also included, Clyde Willis of the Press, Gordon of the Dispatch and Higley of the Record. Leading republicans took the stage. The names of all candidate for all officers were then announced. Dr. Stemen, their candidate for congress was then introduced and made a speech Then they adjourned for noon.

AFTERNOON.

On assembling Chairman Emanuel said each delegation should appoint its own teller, which was done, and he then appointed Otto Widney, of Concord, and Howard Mountz, of Garrett, as tellers for the convention and they ook their places on the stage. He also declared the eagle to be the emblem for the party ticket, and empowered their central committee to fill all vacancies on the ticket that might happen by death, resignation etc.

REPRESENTATIVE

Nominating began on representative Dr. A. B. Darby, of Waterloo, and J. C. Vernier, of Butler were the candidates. The results was:

Darby	132

Necessary to a choice, 106.

Darby was called for and came forward with much cheering. This he evidently thought meant a speech and he began talking, and the sweat began rolling off the audience. Not seeming to notice their agony, he soon produced a prodigious roll of type-written paper and began to read. This was too much for the crowd. They yelled, and stamped and cried "Sit down," "No speech," etc, but the Doctor was wound up and kept valoriously on. But relief was at hand. From the Union delegation a tall form arose and J. E. Rose, in tones that meant business, objected to more talk. The crowd cheered, and Mr. Rose could have had the nomination for any office left, had he asked it. His objection gradually sank into the Doctor's mind, and he said he would shorten his speech by reading only the most important items. Then he went on the read that DeKalb county was a good county, and the crowd yelled, "We know that," and finally, blushing like the red rose of the valley he retired. After that no one dared to make a speech, and work went on fairly well.

CLERK.

The candidates were E. E. Clark, Garrett, and G, O. Denison, of Grant, Mike Long having been squelched in the forenoon work. The vote stood.

SURVEYOR.

In the forenoon, the names of J. J. VanAuken of Union and M. E. Ingalls of Grant, had been announced. But before a ballot was taken, H. G. Provines of Jackson, asked consent to break the usual rule, and so open the nominations for names. Consent given he announced the name of Maj. A. L. Kuhlman, of Union. The ballot was about to be taken, when G. W. Gordon arose and said he felt sure Kuhlman would not accept. So his name was dropped.

FIRST BALLOT

VanAuken	27

COMMISSIONER NORTH.

E. E. Case and J. W. Bateman had been on the list but Mr. Case got up and withdrew asking to have Bateman renominated by acclamation. This was done.

CORONER

Dr. Bronson, of Newville and Dr. J. H. Holloway, of Butler, had been named. But Bronson withdrew and Halloway was put on by acclamation.

The convention then adjourned.

RIGHT IN IT.

That's where Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is. The greatest remedy for the stomach that was ever put together. Absolutely vegtable with the exception of the Pepsin. Are you constipated? Then try Syrup Pepsin. Have you indigestion or sick headache? Then use Syrup Pepsin. Spend 10c for a trial bottle and you will be convinced. Large sizes 50c and $1 00. A true family remedy. At F. E. Davenports.

Notes On The Convention

Butler is sure of a county officer. Both candidates for coroner are within her borders. The other towns are jealous.

All except Waterloo, which has clerk, surveyor and representative on the republican ticket.

Garrett was lost in the shuffle.

Auburn had her Platter right side up when it raised candidates.

It will now be in order for Stroh to send out another letter pledging himself not to be Platter's deputy.

One of the Concord delegates objected to the term "Mr. Widney of Concord." He said that was not plain enough as the delegation was made up largely of Widneys. This was true, for there was a bright light over there owing to numerous red heads of hair.

Dr Darby secured the good will of his opponent, by claiming that Vernier had descended in a direct line from Lafayette. And a delegate made the remark, that the "descent" seemed to be very plain.

Wm. Kennedy has a 20-year-old quotation, "Thou art so near and yet so far."

Butler made herself solid with all, including newspaper men by furnishing free lemonade.

And in the room below, "it is said" there were more republican politicans, than were ever before crowded into the same space. The democrats "weren't in it," to the evident sorrow of a few.

We shall not tell which successful candidater adjourned to the room below when the meeting was over. We saw one heading that way on a hot gallop. But he only "wanted to hunt the man he was to ride home with."

Next after the lemonade boy in point of popularity, was J. B. Rose, the champion extinguisher.

Vernier is said to have had a long, written speech rolled up in his pocket, expecting to receive the nomination. So the audience appears to have been doomed in either case. He might keep it a couple of years.

Hine was knocked out by too much Grant township in the salte. It is the first time a man was ever refused a renomination under the circumstances.

THE MASKING OF CHILDREN

OBITUARY

On last Monday morning, the people of Auburn were astonished and almost horrified at the intelligence of the sudden and tragic death of Mrs. F. M. Rush, which occurred at about 6 o'clock She with the family retired in her usual health on Sunday night, and about one o'clock was aroused by the noise of an exploding lamp. She with her husband arose and in their endeavor to throw it out of doors, she received the contents on her person, from the burn of which she died.

Mrs. Rush was in the prime of her womanhood, a few weeks more than 36 years of age. She was the center and life of a beautiful home, six charming girls developing under her watchful care. She was a good wife and mother, devoted to her home and family. For a little more than 17 years she has been the faithful, devoted wife of her husband, who sits in the shadows of an awful grief, which not only touches him but all the friends and kinsfolks.

She was a choice neighbor, among the kindest of the kind. No one speaks ill of her, but good, and all remember with appreciation her many kindly deeds.

Of her immediate relatives are, her father and step-mother, her own mother having died Feb. 11, 1868, three brothers and four sisters, all present save one sister.

Seldom do we experience such trying ordeals; seldom are heart strings broken so suddenly; seldom is a whole city so sympathetically touched, words are meaningless before such a tragic scene. We stand in silence before the awful fact, wondering if we can find the meaning of the mystery. The husband and children have the prayers and sympathy of all, in this their irreparable loss.

Mrs. Mary Rush was, but is not now, she bade adieu to life's scene, and lives in the great beyond. A dutiful and devoted wife; a kind, careful and loving mother; a good woman.

Help for the Hair is what a great many men and women are looking for; help against approaching baldness; help against whitening locks; help to restore the lost gloss to the hair; help against fading tresses; help for the scalp attacked by dandruff. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR offers just such help. It restores gray or faded hair to its original color, gives it length, thickness and gloss, and removes dandruff.

"My hair was rough and broken and began to fall out. The use of but one bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR both checked the falling out and rendered my hair smooth, glossy and in splendid condition. It is the finest of dressings."—MRS. F. L. SMITH, Silver Creek, Miss.

"Some years ago my hair began to fall out and I became quite bald. By advice I tried and very soon my hair ceased to fall out and a new and vigorous growth made its appearance. My hair is now abundant and glossy."—THOS. DUNN, Rockville, Wis.

The 157th In Camp.

Saturday's Daily.

The boys marched out of Indianapolis yesterday and got to Camp Mount at the fair ground soon after noon. Tents were at once put up, and all went to work to make the camp as comfortable as possible. They are not in as good health and strength as when they started for the front. But it is supposed to be due to camp life in unhealthly localities. It appears that at each place where they stopped the men had to dig up and clear the ground, and it is well known, that opening up the surface of such lands, results in malaria. It emphasizes what we said recently, that we ought to keep two or three large camps, always prepared, and ready to occupy, so as not to compel soldiers to spend their time in grubbing in malarial localities. At some points, as at Fernandina, it was difficult to get certain kinds of supplies, like food suitable for the sick, etc. Though many are in poor health, there are few or none who are seriously sick now. Three dead have been brought home, Wm. Snyder, who will be buried at Maysville, Clifton Lovell of Fort Wayne and Robert Darling of Elkhart. The members of Co. K reported sick are: Private Miller and private Elson. Lovell's case was a sad one. He died in the guard house, to which he had been sentenced because he fell asleep when on duty at night. In the Angola company the sick reported are Hall, McNabb and Weicht.

From Will Clark.

Mrs. Mat Zerwis this morning received the following telegram from her brother, Will, who is the 20th regulars:

CAMP WIKOFF, MONTAUK, N. Y.
Mrs. Matt Zerwis,
Auburn, Ind.,
Got home to-day from Cuba. Am in poor health. Will write later.
WM. CLARK.

Our readers will remember that no word has been received from Will since he visited Co. K at Port Tampa City while on his way to Cuba. As his regiment was in the fighting at Santiago, there has been a good deal of anxiety about him.

Free Pills.

Send your address to H. E Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample of Dr. King's New Life pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of consumption and sick headache. For Malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranted to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold at Robbins & McCord's drug store. 1

REMEMBER THE MAINE.

This is the name of a neat little restaurant that will be in charge of two worthy ladies during the Carnival. Both are "war widows," their husbands being in Co. K holding up the old flag in the glorious sunlight to dazzle the eyes of all nations. The ladies are Mrs. F. E. Lane and Mrs. Chas. Picker, their room being the small one next north of Rainier's meat market on North Main-st. When in town attending the Carnival, give them a share of patronage. They will begin Wednesday.

RESOLUTIONS

AUBURN, IND., August 30, 1898.

The improved Order of Red Men of this city in regular council passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, Death has invaded the home of our worthy brother, Frank Rush, and taken therefrom a loving wife and kind mother: and,

WHEREAS, Our worthy brother, Frank Rush, has himself received injurics which make him unable to follow the hunt, therefore:

Be it Resolved by Tyadoghton Tribe, No. 288, Improved Order of Red Men that we as members, and also individually, extend to brother Rush and family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this their sad bereavement. Resolved also that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this tribe, published in the city papers, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Extra Work for the Mints.

One of the provisions of the war revenue law requires the coinage of 1,500,000 silver dollars a month out of the bullion of the treasury. The results are that the mints at New Orleans, Philadelphia and San Francisco are working sixteen hours per day and are unable, at present, to supply the demand for other coin without some delay.

Income Tax.

The British House of Commons has refused to amend the income tax law so as to exempt income from abroad which might already have paid taxation in the country from which it was derived.

A Champagne City.

Epernay, in France, is a vast subterranean city, the streets for miles being hewn out of solid chalk, flanked with piles of champagne of all blends and qualities. The largest champagne manufacturers in Epernay possess underground cellars which cover no fewer than forty-five acres, and contain 5,000,000 bottles of wine.

Underground Railway in Berlin.

It has been decided to construct an underground railway in Berlin, and the city assumes control of the construction. The funds necessary, 100,000,000 marks, will be raised by a loan.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals, Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

Distinguished Guests.

London special: The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and Mrs. Chamberlain sailed for New York Friday on board the steamer Majestic.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain desired their departure to be entirely private. They got aboard the steamer unnoticed, but once aboard many people pressed around them and shook hands with the Secretary.

Mr. Chamberlain, who, it will be remembered, married Miss Mary Endicott, daughter of a former American Secretary of War, said that his visit to the United States, which would last several weeks, was purely a family visit.

Admiral Cervera and Officers Will Go Home.

Annapolis (Md.) special: Orders have been received here from the President directing Admiral Cervera to make the arrangements to proceed with his officers and men back to Spain immediately, in accordance with the instructions issued by the Spanish Minister of Marines. The officers were very enthusiastic when they received the news. It is understood that they will return without giving parole. Capt. Enlate has left for New York.

Burned to Death.

Some little children were playing in a field near Bluffton, Ohio, when they set fire to a straw stack. After it was in flames it was found that the 3-year-old son of Thomas Carr had crawled into the stack to hide, but the fire could not be put out. The boy was roasted to death. Both arms and legs were burned off, and nothing was left except the child's charred trunk.

All Smooth for Lawton.

Gen. Lawton has received word that the Cuban leaders Cebreco, Lacret and Pedro Perez have been ordered by Gen. Gomez to place themselves under Lawton's command. He believes the arrangement will expediate the disbanding of the Cuban forces. He has decided to employ Cuban officers in important positions in the civil government in the Province of Santiago de Cuba.

Seven Brave Heroes Lost Their Lives.

Savannah (Ga.) special: It is just reported that Lieut. Morgan, United States Engineer Corps, was drowned off Tybee, in a storm, with six regular soldiers. He went out in a yawl to rescue the sailors of an Italian bark. The yawl capsized and Morgan with his men were drowned. Lieut. Morgan was a Georgian.

Fatal Railroad Wreck.

The fast New York and Chicago passenger train on the New York, Ontario and Western was wrecked by an open switch at Oswego, N. Y. It had been tampered with by tramps or robbers. Engineer Dowd and Fireman Rowe were killed. The express messenger, baggageman and many passengers were injured.

Dastardly Attempt to Wreck a Train

A dastardly attempt was made to wreck the west-bound passenger train on the Chicago and Erie at Lima, Ohio. The train was late and a freight train coming on its time discovered the obstruction, which was a heavy chain fastened around the rails. The train was stopped before any damage was done.

Returning Borrowed Ships.

The Navy Department will soon deliver at Cramps, in Philadelphia, the four vessels chartered from the International Navigation Company, formerly known as the New York, Paris, St. Louis and St. Paul. The ships will be restored to the exact condition in which they were when taken by the Navy Department for use in the war.

Village Burns.

A Central News dispatch from Constantinople says the suburb and village of Buyukdeere, on the Bosphorus, was destroyed by fire, 200 buildings being burned. The upper part of the village was occupied as the summer homes of foreign ambassadors.

Germany Favorable.

The Cologne Gazette says Germany has manifested to Russia her willingness to support universal disarmament. The paper says France is unfavorable to the idea.

Labor Riots.

A riot occurred at Mallory docks, Galveston, Texas, and one man was killed and seven injured as the result of labor troubles.

Double Tragedy.

William Burrow of Bona County, Tennessee, killed his wife with an ax and then shot himself dead.

To Recruit the Regular Army.

In order to keep the army up to the maximum of 61,000 men, the War Department will have recruiting officers at all stations where volunteers are mustered out with a view to giving the men an opportunity to enlist in the regular service.

Pension Report.

Pension Commissioner Evans has sent his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. Over $119,000,000 was spent by the department in the last twelve months, and 56,737 pensions were granted during the year.

Wellman Back in Norway.

The steam whaler Fridtjof, having on board Walter Wellman and members of his expedition to Greenland, has returned to Tromsoe, Norway, after landing an expedition at Cape Tegathoff, on the southern point of Hall's island. The search for Andree, the balloonist, has proved futile.

Big Strike in Wales Ended.

At a joint mass meeting of the Welsh miners at was decided to accept the employers' terms, offered at the Cardiff (Wales) conference, by which the miners get an increase of 5 per cent in their wages. This ends the disastrous six months' strike.

BOLD ROBBERS IN OMAHA.

They Hold Up Street Car Passengers Near the Exposition.

Two daring highwaymen of long and short proportions have succeeded in creating a reign of terror in Omaha by the boldness of their operations. They hold up street cars, citizens, messenger boys, and in one instance are believed to have held up and robbed a policeman while he was walking around on a downtown street. Crooked work has been going on since the exposition opened, but it was only recently that the criminals manifested a dangerous disposition. They started in by holding up a number of people in broad daylight near the center of the city. Later they started in on the street cars and have succeeded very well along this line. Cars were held up within 100 yards of the exposition early in the evening. Each time the robbers seemed to be the same. One conductor failed to put up his hands fast enough and one of the men took a shot at him. The police have made numerous arrests, but fail to catch the right men.

SOLDIERS KILLED IN A WRECK.

Distressing Accident on the Louisville & Nashville Railway.

While going at a rapid rate the tender of the engine pulling the first three sections of a train carrying the 69th New York regiment from Fernandina, Fla., to Huntsville, Ala., jumped the track ten miles above Birmingham, Ala., on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and five cars well filled with troops were piled down an embankment and on the side of the tracks. Two men were killed and about twenty-five others injured. Col. Edward Duffy, commander of the regiment, was on the train with his staff. As soon as possible the wrecked cars were broken into with axes and the injured men and others were assisted out. There is no telling what caused the tender of the engine to leave the track.

JEWISH COLONY IS PROPOSED.

Barnett Pruzan's Plan for Establishing One in Porto Rico.

A Kansas City special says that Barnett Pruzan's plan to form a Jewish colony for Porto Rico has been taken up by several families in other cities. Mr. Pruzan is daily in receipt of letters of inquiry regarding the scheme from every portion of the United States, and many have signified a determination to join. Assistant Secretary of the Interior Webster Davis has been written by the projector for information as to the character of the climate and soil of the island. Should the land be thrown open to settlement Mr. Pruzon estimates that at least 500 families will embark at once for Porto Rico.

CHARGE IS TAX DODGING.

Prominent Citizens of Wheeling, W. Va., Informed On by Nonresidents.

Suits have been entered against 474 of the foremost citizens of Wheeling, W. Va., to recover taxes alleged to be due from them. The information charges false returns, to which there is a severe penalty, as it is classed as felony. The informations were made by non-residents, who expect the 5 per cent information fee allowed by the State. For this reason indignation is expressed and the cases will be taken to the highest courts. The informers worked the same plan in Ohio and Indiana. If they succeed here they will make $30,000.

Wheat Goes Down Three Cents.

R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade say: "The volume of business in exchanges at the principal clearing houses is 20.4 per cent larger than last year and 26.8 per cent larger than in 1892, heretofore the year of largest business and highest prosperity ever known. Part of this increase was due to speculation at New York, but there remains a healthy increase over the best of previous years, and though in some branches business is not satisfactory in character, in nearly all it is in volume larger than ever before. Wheat goes down 3 cents for the week, as if there were no foreign demand coming, the obvious concert of farmers to keep back wheat, the crop being certainly very large, tending to encourage a conspiracy of traders against them, which thus far has entire control of the market. Atlantic exports for the week have been 2,731,594 bushels, against 3,568,369 last year, and for four weeks of August 13,101,079 bushels, against 13,387,638 last year, while Pacific exports were 254,239 bushels for the week, against 770,819 last year, and have been for the month 1,363,794, against 1,405,333 last year. It is wise to remember that the foreign demand on account of last year's shortage is still lapping over, while all reports show that foreign crops are about average. Shipments of boots and shoes have been larger than in any previous year, amounting to 362,293 cases in four weeks of August this year, against 343,258 last year and 356,376 in 1895, much the largest for this month heretofore, and 323,394 in 1892. While leather is quite stiff, notwithstanding extremely light purchases by manufacturers, hides yield a little at Chicago. Failures for the week have been 179 in the United States, against 223 last year, and 26 in Canada, against 34 last year."

Germany Proposes to Divide.

Trouble is brewing over the Samoan islands, which, under the treaty of 1890, are governed under a joint protectorate by the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Germany had marked the islands for her own before this treaty was negotiated, but her scheme for absorbing them was blocked chiefly by the United States, which, by the treaty of 1878, had acquired the right to establish a naval station at Pago Pago harbor, and had virtually established a protectorate over the islands. Mr. Cleveland favored withdrawing from the joint protectorate, but President McKinley is determined to retain all the rights in Samoa guaranteed to this country by the treaty. He is now taking steps to improve and fortify Pago Pago harbor, and dispatches from Europe show that Germany does not like this action. Correspondence is now in progress by the United States and Germany that may lead to serious friction. The Germans wish to divide the islands, each nation taking a share. This the United States refuses to consider for an instant. Great Britain has always taken a rather passive interest in Samoan affairs, but there is no doubt that her influence will in the future, as in the past, be thrown on the side of the United States.

Excludes the Woman's Bible.

After a discussion lasting a week the board of censors of the Topeka, Kan., Federation of Women's Clubs has excluded the woman's bible from its library on the ground that it is "written in a flippant, coarse and inelegant style."

Father and Son in Prison.

Robert Weaver, aged 60, and his 19-year-old son Fred got into a fight near Milan, Mo., and when Simpson White, a boy, attempted to separate them they attacked him with knives, fatally stabbing him near the heart.

Sad Ending of Pleasure Trip.

A railroad train on the Boston and Maine Railroad struck a buckboard at Whiting's crossing at Ware, Mass., and killed five members of a pleasure party. Three others were seriously hurt.

First Brush with the Enemy.

A brigade of friendly Arabs, commanded by Maj. Stuart Wortley, it is announced in a dispatch from Wad-El-Obeid to Cairo, Egypt, which has been pushing around Omduran, the Dervish camp near Khartoum, with the view of cutting off the retreat of the forces of the Khalifa, had its first brush with the enemy on the east bank of the Nile and captured five men and a grain-laden boat. The Dervish scouts, the dispatch continues, are now frequently sighted, and the whole Anglo-Egyptian army has reached Omteriff, thirty miles from Omduran. It will move into a new camp, ten miles further south. The gunboat Melik has been wrecked while reconnoitering ten miles up the river in a terrific sand storm.

CONTEST OF THE SUTRO WILL.

Heirs of the Deceased Ex-Mayor Beg'n Proceedings.

In San Francisco, four heirs of the Adolph Sutro estate have begun a contest of the will on the ground that the ex-Mayor was mentally incompetent to execute a valid instrument at the date mentioned in the document. Those who challenge the probate of their father's will are Mrs. R. V. Morbio, Mrs. K. Neusbaum, Edgar Sutro and Miss Clara Sutro. Their attorneys will attack the will on all the legal grounds allowed by the statutes of California. Two of the heirs, Mrs. Dr. Emma Merritt and Charles Sutro, have not joined in the contest.

REGENCY ENDS IN HOLLAND.

Wilhelmina Takes Up the Scepter in That Little Nation.

The Queen Regent of Holland, in a proclamation just issued, upon the occasion of the end of her regency, her daughter, Queen Wilhelmina, coming of age, expresses warm pleasure at seeing the whole nation "ranged joyously around the throne of the young queen," thanks God that her dearest wish has been heard, and, after thanking the people for their loving and faithful support of herself, invokes God's blessing upon the youthful sovereign and concludes: "May our country become great in everything in which a small nation can be great."

Smallpox at Put-in-Bay.

For several days smallpox has existed at Put-in-Bay Island, Lake Erie, and thousands of people who have visited the island have been exposed and thousands more will be exposed by contact with the people who managed to escape the quarantine established there by the State Board of Health. The State Board of Health took the matter in hand and made the startling discovery that there had been two deaths and that there were now six cases of smallpox in an improvised pest-house near the hotel.

Will Fight Chicago Grain Interests.

With $150,000,000 behind him, young Thomas A. McIntyre of Wall street, New York, is planning a flour trust. It will be a combination of all the great flour mills throughout the United States. Mr. McIntyre will go abroad in a few days to swing the London stockholders into line. "It is our intention," said Mr. McIntyre, "to fight the great elevators controlled by the Chicago wheat pit. We will build elevators of our own."

Potato Famine in Barbadoes.

Advices received from the island of Barbadoes, belonging to Great Britain, report widespread potato riots. Riotous gangs of men have been looting the produce of the plantations during the night. Following the recent shooting of the speaker of the house of assembly, these demonstrations are considered to be of a serious nature and more troubles are anticipated.

Killed by a Desperado.

Ben Johnson of Middlesboro shot and killed Nathaniel Cloud, a deputy sheriff of Claiborne County, Tenn., as the latter was attempting to arrest Johnson at Tazewell, Tenn. John Cadle, a bystander, was also shot and killed.

$20,000 Fire in Maryland.

A fire which originated in Milstead's livery stable at Laurel, Md., destroyed that building and spread to the Herbert House and a stable belonging to William Schaefer, both of which burned. The loss will not exceed $20,000.

Pennsylvania Town Suffers.

A fire at New Kensington, Pa., destroyed the opera house, Harmer's block, Jacobin's block and a number of dwellings. The Central Hotel was badly damaged. The loss is estimated at $50,000, partially insured.

Drowned While Boating.

Halvor Floren, aged 22, and Annie Dillnar, aged 18, were drowned while boating on Diamond lake, near Grove City, Minn. Morris Elofsen and Jennie Nelson, who were in the same boat, had narrow escapes.

Fire Loss in Austin, Texas.

A special from Austin, Tex., says the dry goods store of Phillip Hatzfield, the largest of its kind in that section of the State, was completely destroyed by fire. Loss about $135,000.

Ex-Governor of Indiana Dead.

Claude Matthews, ex-Governor of Indiana and the leading candidate of the Indiana Democracy for the United States Senate, is dead at Crawfordsville.

Samoa's King Dead.

Malietoa Lacupepa, King of Samoa, died of typhoid fever.

Transport Brings to Montauk from Cuba 200 Sick Regulars and Evidence of Somebody's Mismanagement—Suffering of the Volunteers Due to Red Tape—Thousands Ill at Camp Thomas and Fever Is Claiming More Victims Daily.

Washington correspondence:

Facts of the most sickening character continue to flow in upon horrified people in reference to the number and condition of the soldiers in the various camp hospitals throughout the country. It is impossible to deal with the subject in detail, so widespread is the evil and voluminous the story of suffering and horror. It is remarkable that some of the most horrible of these details should come from the camps situated in the heart of the States.

From the following table a faint idea may be had of the extent of sickness and suffering among the soldiers. The tabulation is by no means complete and cannot be made so until compiled from army records, but is made up generally from the reports received from the camp hospitals. Thousands of whom no record now exists, or ever will exist, have gone to their homes on furloughs and are being cared for there. Hundreds of others are arriving almost hourly in the hospitals and camps of the North from Cuba and Southern camps. Following is a partial list:

Sick in Various Camps.

Santiago	557
Philippines (estimated)	500
Porto Rico	323
Boston	416
Massachusetts towns	342
New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Maine towns	231
Camp Wikoff	1,555
Dunn Loring camp	318
Fort Meyer Hospital	339
Washington barracks	263
Camp Meade	205
St. Louis	176
New York City hospitals	138
Camp Miles, Lexington	279
Chickamauga	2,500
Jacksonville	100
Fernandina	125
Tampa	60
Camp Alger	100
Huntsville	25
San Francisco	467
Fort Sheridan	40
Total	9,059

One of the worst pest-holes seems to be at Camp Thomas, on the site of the old battlefield of Chickamauga, which was chosen as the site of a camp of instruction early in the war on account of its supposed sanitary advantages. Here the number of sick, in hospital and outside, is estimated at nearly 2,500, while nearly as many have been sent home to hospitals or their friends. Camp Wikoff is filling up daily with accessions from the troops returning from Santiago or Gen. Miles' army in Porto Rico. Loud complaints are made of the need of nurses and proper food, and yet it is not many weeks since some of the officials of the medical department were protesting against the employment of Red Cross nurses, although they have shown themselves most efficient both at the front among wounded men and in the fever hospitals.

The tales of horror which have been related by soldiers arriving on pest ships in weeks past were repeated Sunday, when the Yucatan got to the pier at Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, and began to discharge the troops who came from Santiago. She had on board six companies of the Seventh regular infantry. The shocking condition of the men and the appalling scenes through which they passed can be imagined from the fact that seven men were starved to death on the passage, and three more died while in the harbor before they could be landed, because the ship left Santiago without proper food or supplies for the sick or anything else but the regular army rations, "salt horse, sow belly and shingles," as the soldiers call the corn beef, salted pork and hardtack, which the sick were unable to eat.

When the Eighth Ohio landed from the Mohawk Sunday, 300 were reported sick and were carried in ambulances to the hospital, but it was soon discovered that 170 of them were only suffering for food, and as soon as they had drank a glass of milk or two and had got something wholesome in their stomachs they were able to go to their camp. If the vessel had been delayed three or four days more the Eighth Ohio would have lost 100 men from starvation, for many of them had been ill with fever and their stomachs rejected the only food that was provided for them.

Before Secretary Alger left Camp Wikoff he ordered the surgeon general to send immediately twenty-four physicians and eighty more nurses to assist and relieve the devoted women serving as volunteers, who have been working night and day, week after week, until their strength is exhausted. Some of the Red Cross nurses have not had their clothes off for ten days, and there are no accommodations for them to rest and refresh themselves.

The regulars who have returned from Santiago are in excellent condition compared with the volunteers. This is particularly true of the negro troops. They seem as strong and hearty as they were when they left for Cuba, although they have endured the same hardships and have eaten the same rations. This is accounted for by the ability of the negro race to endure hot weather and to resist miasmatic poisons. It is also true and noticeable everywhere that the regular soldier knows how to live in camp and how to take care of himself on the march much better than the volunteer. He is hardened to hardships and exposure. He is accustomed to his rations, while the great majority of the volunteers have been fed all their lives upon a different diet. The experience of the regular has taught him to take care of his health and to make himself comfortable by little tricks that the volunteer knows nothing about. This difference is very noticeable in making camps. The regulars will march to a vacant piece of ground, and have their tents up, their kitchens located, their dinner cooked and stretch themselves out under the canvas to rest before the average volunteer realizes what is necessary to be done.

WILL BE SENT TO BARRACKS.

Regular Troops to Be Given the Best Possible Accommodations.

All regiments of regular troops whose stations before the war were east of the Mississippi river will be returned to their posts with as little delay as possible. Secretary Alger said that he considered this step desirable in order to preserve the health of the commands, for the troops would be much better situated in permanent barracks than in camps.

MEMBERS OF THE PARIS PEACE COMMISSION.

ALGER IS INDIGNANT.

Says Conditions of Military Camps Have Been Grossly Misrepresented.

Secretary Alger is indignant at the wanton misrepresentations of the conditions at Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, and at the indiscriminate charges made against the department by people who take no pains to investigate. To a Washington correspondent he said that the talk of ex-Secretary Sherman is an example of reckless assertion without investigation, for Mr. Sherman spent a week at Amagansett, only a dozen miles from Montauk, without going near it, but he returns to Washington talking about the horrors of the camps and the necessity for investigation and impeachment. Secretary Alger says that the loss of life in battle and from disease is much less than was estimated by the most conservative authorities, when the army was sent into an enemy's country, and to a place about which little was known, except that it was regarded as one of the most unhealthy spots in the West Indies. This army was brought home as soon as it could be.

Montauk Point was selected as a detention camp for recuperation. It could easily be isolated and safely quarantined. Secretary Alger says that the camp, having been established for this purpose, will of course be abandoned when all the Santiago troops are able to leave and be mustered out of the service. But the report that it will be abandoned because of its unhealthy conditions is false, for the camp is in a very healthy location, and men who come from the transports sick with fever and go into the hospital are discharged in a few days in comparatively good health. All the sickness at Montauk is brought there from Santiago, and Secretary Alger says it would be as reasonable to call the finest hospital in the land unhealthy because all its inmates are invalids.

CRITICISED BY SHERMAN.

Former Secretary of State Says Investigation Is Needed.

The interview with John Sherman, charging neglect and mismanagement upon the War Department, created no end of sensation in Washington. To another interviewer he recited some of the criticisms and spoke with deep feeling of what he termed "monstrous mismanagement." He added:

"The whole story is too horrible to talk about, and there can be no possible excuse offered. I cannot undertake to say what individual authority is responsible, but the facts themselves are monstrous, and whether the fault lies with officers in the field, those in the department or the Secretary of War himself, the responsibility should be fixed and the person responsible should be severely punished.

"It was known that there was to be a battle; our army was sent there for that purpose, and it was nothing short of criminal to neglect those necessary preparations for the care of the wounded and sick and to provide for the sustenance of the army.

"An investigation should be had at once, and an example should be made of those responsible."

BOMBARDED WITH KISSES.

Admiral Schley Retreats Under a Feminine Volley.

When Admiral Schley visited the Navy Department the other day he expected to shake hands with his old friends and knew that he would be warmly congratulated, but it is doubtful if he was prepared for anything like the demonstration that took place. Brave Lieut. Pearson Hobson was kissed by a St. Louis girl at Long Branch, but Schley, the old hero of Santiago, who never lost his nerve when Cervera's men were pouring volley after volley into the fleet, found himself cornered—fairly bottled up—in one of the corridors of the department by a regiment of fair women clerks. He withstood the bombardment of kisses for something like five minutes, and now and then found time to shake the hand of an old hero like himself here and there. And then he did something he never did before—retreated under fire. The kisses were too much for him, and he found cover in Captain Crowninshield's office, where he met a number of army and navy officers, who were gathered there to pay their respects.

CUBANS WILL DISBAND.

Are Becoming Less Hostile to the American Army.

Gen. Castillo of the Cuban army, at the invitation of Gen. Lawton, had an interview with the American commander regarding the disbandment of the Cuban forces in the Santiago province. Gen. Castillo expressed the opinion that the disbandment of the Cubans could be effected without trouble. He said that the hostility of the Cubans growing out of the refusal of the Americans to permit the joint military occupation of the conquered territory, with the Cuban flag floating over the palace beside the Stars and Stripes, was disappearing, and, under the advice of cool heads, their scheme of making an armed demand for their alleged rights had been abandoned.

BLAME THE OFFICERS.

War Department Chiefs Deny the Charges of Mismanagement.

The bureau chiefs of the War Department who are charged with incompetence or neglect in failing to provide the army with necessary comforts and proper medical attention are charging that the crusade against them is wholly without foundation, and that the newspapers are engaged in wholesale lying about them and about the condition of the men. They insist that matters are nowhere near as bad as stated, and that the privations complained of are the unavoidable incidents of every war. Quartermaster General Ludington deposes that the men had all the clothing they wanted and the right kind of clothing and a superabundance of blankets and tents. Commissary General Egan declares that the soldiers had more food than they could possibly use, and that if it was not always available the fault was in every instance due to the failure of the men themselves to take it. He insists that he should not be held accountable for the ignorance of the officers in not knowing how to get what was coming to them and their men. Surgeon General Sternberg proclaims sturdily that he bought medicines enough for everybody and that if they did not get where they were needed it was not his fault. Secretary Alger and all his bureau chiefs say that no complaints of inadequate provision for comfort or health were made officially, and the Secretary adds that he did not know of existing lamentable conditions until his attention was called to the facts by the newspapers.

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED.

Medical Officers at Camp Thomas Accused of Negligence.

An investigation has been ordered of the charges of negligence made against the medical department at Camp Thomas. Orders have been sent to Gen. H. V. Boynton to find out what is the real basis of the many complaints as to conditions at Chickamauga, and who is to blame.

If the report of Gen. Boynton fixes the responsibility the party or parties named will be immediately brought to trial by court martial.

Surgeon General Sternberg says there has been more sickness at Chickamauga than in any other camp. The investigation under Gen. Boynton will be far-reaching, as the natural surroundings at Chickamauga were such as is thought to be conducive to health. Notwithstanding the practice during the civil war of keeping men in one camp continuously only for about a week and of putting them together in numbers not to exceed a division, 40,000 men have been crowded together in Chickamauga for about three months.

The inquiry will proceed upon this basis: To discover why a protest from Surgeon General Sternberg has not been forthcoming against such an unheard-of disposition of troops for so long a time. The percentage of fever cases will be compared with those of other camps, and the number of nurses and doctors will be noted, and if not found to be sufficient, such finding will be embodied in the report. Complaints from there have been so clear and pronounced that it is thought the root of the evil may be quickly found.

WHO STARVED THE TROOPS?

Congressman Wants to Know Who Is to Blame.

The terrible condition of the sick and wounded soldiers at the several camps scattered throughout the country has aroused the greatest indignation among the members of Congress. "I wish Congress were in session now," said a member the other day. "We would soon appoint a committee to fix the blame. It is an outrage that soldiers should starve when the people pay millions of dollars to take care of them properly. Army contractors get rich, while soldiers die. We want to know and must know who starved the soldiers and neglected them when sick."

LIPTON AIDS THE SOLDIERS.

Contributes $10,000 for Relief of Sick and Wounded.

Sir Thomas Lipton, challenger for America's cup, and well known philanthropist, has contributed $10,000 for relieving the sick and wounded American soldiers. When Sir Thomas was in New York in June he expressed great solicitude for the sick American soldiers and sailors in Cuba. At that time he remarked that he would be glad to assist them in any way. The $10,000 demonstrates his feeling toward the Americans.

THOUSANDS ARE SICK.

Appalling Distress at Guantanamo and Vicinity.

C. I. Ray telegraphs that the condition of the Spanish prisoners and the inhabitants of Guantanamo is appalling. Of the 7,000 Spanish troops there 1,062 are sick. Yellow fever, malaria and dysentery are the prevailing diseases. The sickness in Guantanamo is caused by exposure, starvation and the unsanitary condition of the place. The death rate is frightful.

THE ORIGIN OF KALAMAZOO.

Have you heard the pretty legend, sad and mournful and yet true,
Of the brave and dusky lover and the Indian maid Mahzoo?
How they lived and loved and wandered on the river's shady shore,
Happiest of Indian lovers in the days that are no more?

All day long the maiden labored, weaving baskets by the stream,
Thinking of her love, her Kahla, weaving him into her dream,
Then as twilight came, descending softly, faintly o'er the land,
Mahzoo watched and waited, eager for the clasp of his strong hand.

She would climb into an elm tree o'er the water hanging low,
While the shadows on the ripples danced and played and wavered slow,
Soon he comes—she hears the rowing of his light birch-bark canoe,
"Kahla!" calls she; cries he, "Coming, coming to my own Mahzoo!"

Ah! one night she waits in silence; sad her face—her love is dead.
Wounded in the chase, her warrior in a fortnight to be wed.
In the morn they find sweet Mahzoo lying silent in the stream,
Gone unto her lover Kahla, nevermore to watch and dream.

Still the echoes o'er the river may be heard soft thro' the air,
Echoes of the warrior Kahla and of young Mahzoo the fair.
All the trees repeat the whisper, all the ripples murmur, too,
In the stream that bears their name now—bears the name "Kalamazoo."

How Zalezzo Ended The War.

Zalezzo was good and tired of it. He had defended the republic until his patriotism had begun to have callouses upon it. He had marched around with a bayonet stuck in his belt, being martial for at least a dozen dictators, two or three pretenders and seven presidents, and afar in the mist of the past he remembered that he had upheld the throne of Spain. It seemed to him that about every time he got a good job cutting bananas for the cantracting fruit shippers of New Orleans some dark-complexioned man with fierce Spanish discourse would come out upon the plantation and inform him that it was time for him to get his machete and come along and defend the country against the invader. Privately Zalezzo much preferred using his machete in cutting banana suckers, and thereby earning the money of the Northern dealers, but being a true Nicaraguan he must perforce leave congenial employment and go out and bluster around in ragged attire and wearing his gunless bayonet and with his empty cartridge-belt cinched around him.

So far as he knew Zalezzo had never killed a man in the many campaigns in which he figured. Of course, you can argue out that that was most natural, for he had never carried a gun; and an empty cartridge-belt, even though augmented by a dull bayonet, is not effective upon an enemy which keeps the width of the isthmus away. His conscience, therefore, was easy, but his mind was not. He had been waiting for five years to get together enough money to pay the high premium on a marriage license, so that he might fetch Kisti into his house with propriety and establish himself as the head of a Nicaraguan family. Zalezzo was a soldier of the Government, and he felt that the right thing to do was to do things right and get married with a certificate of permission printed in three colors and bearing the triangular design of the seal of Nicaragua. Several times he had been within a sol or two of the price of this documentary magnificence, but on every occasion, just as he was reaching out for it, some kind of a war was sure to break out—a revolution, a revolt, an insurrection, an assault upon the Government—and a call would come to him to take up the bayonet and the empty cartridge-belt and go strutting about for the intimidation of the miserable wretches of the opposition.

As I have said, Zalezzo was getting tired of it. He had, indeed, been tired of it for some time. The last time the conscripting colonel summoned him it had been a tight footrace between the commissioned officer and the private soldier through three hundred acres of banana plantation, and not until some tropical Hessians had introduced tripping ropes into the quest had Zalezzo been overcome and hauled away in triumph. He fought through three months of warfare, which amounted to nothing more than the loss of his job in the banana plantation, and returned a scarless veteran, without even the comfort of having anything brave to lie about.

The banana-cutter had been working but three weeks when his last summons came to him—three weeks of earnest hoping against revolutions; three weeks of aspiration in the matter of Kisti and the Government license to wed. Then came the colonel once more and mentionad casually the fact that the President had decided to make an aggressive movement against the Filessina faction, which was concentrated somewhere up on the Pacific Coast.

"You will get your bayonet," said the colonel, "and also your cartridge-belt, and join the command at Bluefields."

Bluefields was about as far away from the scene of disorder as it was possible for a military base to be without infringement upon the Caribbean Sea. But that was the manner of Nicaraguan fighting—to get a long way off and shout and make a fuss. Zalezzo, who was now but thirteen sols away from the amount which would buy the license, was in woe of spirit. He tried to convince the colonel that he was suffering from an infectious disease, and that if he were to join the regiment—which meant forty-six men—the command would be decimated. It was useless, however. Jingissez, Zalezzo,s neighbor, had offered exactly the same excuse but fifteen minutes before. The colonel was immune against such argument. So Zalezzo had to throw away his job once more and go ploughing down to Bluefields.

It was the same old routine—of walking up and down the long, curling, crooked street of the town between the Governor's "palace" and the cuartel on the hill overlooking the lagoon. Zalezzo walked up and down in an aimless and really unguided way for a dozen days, just as he had done in a dozen previous campaigns. The white people, who had come to live in Bluefields for the sake of trading and getting rich, laughed at him and spoke of the unlaundried condition of his shirt. The Jamaica Africans, glorying in the fact that they were British subjects and therefore free from conscription by the President, lounged grinningly past and asked him about his gun—which he did not carry, guns being forbidden to soldiers. Zalezzo walked and walked, and tried to feel like a bare-footed hero in ragged clothes, but he was not an amateur at this thing and could not muster up the illusion.

On the thirteenth night a girl named Ghoza came to him as he was loafing in a military way past the hotel—the English hotel—and said to him:

"Do you know of Kisti?"

"No" said Zalezzo.

"She has married the rubber-fibre company's clerk—the big young man who came up the last Yulu."

The measure of time is not by years or months or week in that region, but by steamer trips. "The last Yulu" meant the last time the Yulu had come from Greytown.

The girl went away, and Zalezzo continued to walk his aimless, unplanned beat. As he walked he thought. He remembered the wars, the revolts, the terms of his service, the frequent near approach to the price of the license—and the loss to him of Kisti.

Now, the ordinary man placed as was Zalezzo would have bent most of his thoughts toward the white clerk who had come up on the last Yulu, but with Zalezzo it was different. He looked beyond the mere superficiality of the case and found the bassic reasoning.

"Wars," he said, "bloodless but busy wars, have kept me sixteen times from getting money enough to get that license. This white clerk is a mere incident. The wars are the thing. Yes, and who is back of the wars? You cannot stab a war or shoot a war if you are injured by a war; but you can go deeper and see who caused the war, and make it even with him."

He walked up and down and up and down in his bare feet, with his bayonet sticking out almost rectangularly from his cartridgeless belt.

The moon came up, and it shone on the white "palace" of the Governor, with its weedy yard and its dirty, muddy steps of entry. Zalezzo sat upon an old, foolish, rusty cannon and thought of his situation and of the author of his wrong. He turned at last and caught the gleaming of the moon on the window of the Governor's room. It was but two stories—the white frame "palace"—and the window was plainly within the reach of any man who could get a good "boost."

"The man who makes war is in there," said Zalezzo. "What do I care for the white clerk? Did he make the war of last year, when I was within seven sols of the license, or of the year before, when I had but four to win? Not he. I'll do it."

He looked about for a ladder or something which could be used as such, but the prudent house guard had put all such things away at the outbreak of the war. The only thing which could be of help was the cannon—ten feet long, and old and rusty. Zalezzo looked at it. It weighed over two tons dead metal. The spirit of injury within him, however, knew nothing of muscles or horse-power.

* * * * * * * * *

It was the strangest thing! The Governor had been stabbed to death as he slept—evidently by means of a bayonet. But how the assailant got into the window was a marvel beyond the Nicaraguan army's comprehension. There was no ladder, no plank, nothing. And, above all, the old cannon, heavy and unwieldy, stood there in its place to intimidate any stranger who might come with offensive purpose.

The murder of the Governor ended the war. Some great event like that was needed to bring the thing to a close. Zalezzo went back to the plantation, and afterward he never bothered about Kisti, for he realized that it was quite right for the white clerk to have her.

The Woodchuck in Connecticut.

The Connecticut local authorities are paid for woodchuck scalps under the authority of the town boards. From all accounts the Connecticut woodchuch has a cheek and persistence that would frighten its kind anywhere else, shy and suspicious and wary as it ordinarily is.

"The Connecticut woodchuck," says a native of that State, "doesn't hesitate to invade village dooryards with his unsightly burrow, which he can complete in a night, and many a housewife rises in the worning to find some cherished garden spot or well-kept lawn strewn with the debris of a woodchuck's excavating, while at the mouth of the cavern from which it was dug the audacious doer of the mischief sits and chuckles at the good wife's discomfiture. This impudence on the part of the Connecticut woodchuck is the more surprising from the fact that there is a race of dogs in that State which seem to have been evolved for the purpose of keeping down the woodchuck. Why Connecticut alone should be blessed with this dog is a mystery, but the unique specimen is there, and its mission is woodchuck.

"The Connecticut woodchuck dog is apparently a cross between a shepherd dog and common cur. He will not be trained to hunt with a hunter. He doesn't hunt from training at all, but from natural instinct and inclination. He will not follow a rabbit, and he spurns a fox. I have known him to show an inclination for coons, but that was perhaps an accidental strain, for woodchuck is his game. He knows the only way the woodchuck can be bagged with absolute certainty, and he takes untiring advantage of his knowledge."—New York Sun.

INDIANA'S EARLY GOVERNMENT

Relics of the First Capital and Constitutional Elm Still Standing.

At Corydon, the first capital of Indiana, are the relics still standing of the first government of the State. One is the old State house, built in 1811 for the Territorial Legislature and offices. The building was not completed until 1815. The State was admitted into the Union in 1816 and the State officials used the building until 1825. The building is still a solid structure.

The second relic is the constitutional elm. The constitutional convention met at the State house in June, 1816, but the weather was so hot that adjournment was taken to the shade of the old elm. The tree has wide-spreading branches and covers a space 124 feet in diameter.

use during the Crimean war when transportation was so bad some vehicle became a necessity. It was a very light four-wheeled vehicle, being composed of wood battens and basket work, its interior lined with water-proof canvas. A canopy ran the full length, and there were curtains at the sides, so that it might be inclosed at will. The sides were padded, and it was fitted with patent brakes, so as to allow it to go gently down the steep Turkish roads. All through the campaign she worked with well-nigh incredible courage and patience, almost succumbing at one period to the terrible Crimean fever, but recovering and taking up her work again, in spite of a naturally fragile constitution, still further weakened by hardships innumerable and overwork. The national gratitude knew no bounds, and England subscribed $250,000, which sum was devoted to the founding of the Nightingale home, where nurses are trained for the splendid work of which Florence Nightingale may be called the pioneer. The Queen, who had followed her career with intense interest and sympathy, presented her with a costly and beautiful decoration.

One of the Greatest Naval Duels.

Henceforward—to use Nelson's words about his own most desperate action—"there was no maneuvering, there was only downright fighting;" and great as was Jones' unquestionable merit as a handler of ships, it was downright fighting endurance, of the most extreme and individual character, that won this battle. When thus in contact, the superiority of the British eighteens over the American twelves, though less than at a distance, was still great; but a far heavier disparity lay in the fabrics of the two enemies. That Richard was a very old ship, rotten, never meant for naval use; the Serapis was new, on her first commission. The fight hitherto having engaged the port guns of the latter, the starboard lower gun-ports were still closed, and from the ships' touching could not be opened. They were therefore blown off, and the fight went on. "A novelty in naval combats was now presented to many witnesses, but to few admirers," quaintly wrote Lieut. Dale, who was in the midst of the scene below decks. "The rammers were run into the respective ships to enable the men to load;" that is, the staves of the rammers of one ship entered the ports of the other as the guns were being loaded. "We became so close fore and aft," reported Pearson, "that the muzzles of our guns touched each other's sides;" and even so, by the testimony of the lieutenant on the lower gun-deck of the Serapis, her guns could not be fully run out, owing to the nearness of the vessels.—Scribner's.

GRANDSON OF BRIGHAM YOUNG

He Commanded the Utah Artillery in the Glorious Fight Near Manila.

In the fight at Malate, in the Philippines, in which the American soldiers fought so gallantly and repulsed the Spaniards with great loss, one of the interesting figures who took part in the engagement was Capt. Richard W. Young, commander of the Utah Light Artillery, who is a grandson of Brigham Young, the late Mormon leader. The Utah Artillery drew forth the commendation of Gen. Greene for their brave work in repelling the Spanish attack. Capt. Young is a West Point graduate and was connected with the artillery branch of the army. He resigned from the army to practice law in Salt Lake City, having been graduated from the Columbia University Law School. When the war broke out he volunteered his services and was placed in command of two batteries of

ON THE ROAD FROM PONCE TO SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO.

This sketch is made from a reproduction of a recent photograph, which shows the wild nature of the country over which General Miles' forces had to march to reach the Porto Rican capital.

The Absent Boy.

They miss him in the orchard where the fruit is running over,
And in the meadow where the air is sweet with new-mown hay,
And all about the old farm which knew him for a lover,
From the early seedtime onward till the crops were piled away.

They miss him in the village where nothing went without him,
Where to-day the young folks' parties are dull and incomplete.
They cannot just explain it, there was such a charm about him,
The drop of cheer he always brought made common daylight sweet.

And now he's gone to Cuba, he's fighting for the nation,
He's charging with the others, a lad in army blue.
His name is little known yet, but at the upland station
They all are sure you'll hear it before the war is through.

And when you talk of battles, and scan the printed column,
His regiment's the one they seek, his neighbors think and care;
The more they do not speak of it their looks grows grave and solemn,
For somewhere in the thick of strife they know their boy is there.
—Margaret E. Sangster, in Collier's Weekly.

A Spanish Prisoner.

High o'er his head the starry flag is floating,
But on his breast he wears the saffron gold;
Our prison bars securely close around him,
Though, Migo, friend, the name we have enrolled.

But never once he seems to hear the cheering
That greets the story of a victory won;
And cares no whit that we are all rejoicing
When news is brought us of a brave deed done.

He sits apart and sings, with sweetest cadence,
The songs learned long ago in sunny Spain,
We cannot chide him, for we love the rebel;
Our gold canary from the Spanish Main.
—Lucie E. Thurston, in Boston Evening Transcript.

"Jubilate Deo."

Jubilate, jubilate! Peace again triumphant reigns:
Jubilate! Vale and mountain send aloft the welcome strains.

Shout! ye echoes hoarse, with thunder of an outraged nation's cry;
Shout! till white-robed angels answer Jubilate from on high.

"Make a joyful noise, ye people," herald ye his triumphs dread
Who hath made our arms victorious and, with honor, crowned our dead.

Thou, O Lord, hast tried us, proved us, taken of our loved the flower;
Yet we echo Jubilate! Thine the glory; Jubilate! Thine the power.
—Margaret Newell Goodnow.

AN EXCELLENT RECORD.

Capt. Barker Has Served Nearly Twenty Years on the Sea.

Captain Albert S. Barker, who was detached from the command of the cruiser Newark and ordered to take charge of the battle-ship Oregon, filling the vacancy made by the invaliding of Captain Clark, was one of the original members of the Naval Board, and in that capacity rendered valuable services in preparing the navy for the excellent work accomplished by it in the war. He commanded the Oregon while she was attached to the Pacific station.

Captain Albert S. Barker has an excellent record of nearly twenty years' sea service to his credit, as well as some hard fighting in the Civil War. Born in Massachusetts, he entered the Naval CAPT. A. S. BARKER.

Academy in 1859, but was ordered into active service on the frigate Mississippi when the war broke out, and took part in the capture of New Orleans and the fight at Port Hudson when the Mississippi was lost. He commanded the Enterprise in 1883-86, when a line of deep-sea soundings was run across the Atlantic and Indian oceans, and from New Zealand to the Straits of Magelland. Captain Barker has published the log of the cruise, including an interesting account of the great earthquake at Krakatoa. He was incommand of the flagship Philadelphia, under Rear Admiral Gherardi, at the international naval review in Hampton Roads in 1893.

During the opening weeks of the present war Captain Barker served as aid to Secretary Long and as a member of the Military War Board, but on May 6th was assigned to the command of the remodeled and newly commissioned Newark.

Elderdown from Norway.

The rearing of eider ducks for their down is a novel industry on the Norwegian coast islands, which are owned by private individuals. The birds are naturally wild, but, being fed when necessary by the keepers, who also protect them from the ravens and eagles, lose much of their shyness and come at feeding time in great numbers, attended often by a train of gulls and wild ducks of many varieties. The industry is highly profitable.

Left Teeth Used Oftenest.

The natural habit of human beings appears to be the use of the teeth on the left side of the mouth for masticating the food. During a lengthened period of observation only one person out of thirteen was found who used both sides of his mouth for chewing and masticating his food.

Wise men change their minds occasionally, but fools have none to change.

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Methodists to Raise $500,000 for De Pauw University—Double Tragedy in Columbus—Brakeman Leaps Fifty Feet to Escape Death.

Fixes Debt on Church.

At a council of presiding officers of the Methodist Church held at Anderson, it was decided to saddle an endowment of $500,000 upon the churches of the State for maintaining De Pauw University. It is proposed to raise this fund during the years 1899 and 1900 and it is to be known as "the twentieth century gift of Indiana Methodism to the permanent endowment of De Pauw University." The demands are to be apportioned to the three Indiana conferences, about $150,000 to each one. The university has been running in hard lines for the past year. The failure of the De Pauws crippled the institution to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars. During the past year it has been necessary to make a beggerly appeal to every source for revenue to carry on the work. It is proposed to put this $500,000 out on interest and not touch the principal.

Elopes with a Mere Child.

Milo Wilson and Lula Hancock eloped from Monon and were married at St. Joseph, Mich. Wilson is 50 years old and the girl 13. A warrant was out for Wilson's arrest on the charge of decoying the girl from home, and they were arrested at Logansport. Wilson is the father of four children, one almost as old as the Hancock girl, who comes from an excellent family. Wilson had been paying her attention for several months, despite the protestation of her mother. Indignant citizens finally warned Wilson to cease paying the child attention and he promptly induced the girl to elope.

Wife and Husband Suicide.

Mrs. Ellen Hill of Columbus committed suicide by hanging herself in the barn. The cause of her death was due to the unsteady actions of her husband. Henson C. Hill, her husband, also committed suicide the next morning by taking strychnine. He was seized with horrible convulsions and died four hours after. Mr. Hill was a very prominent man in the vivinity, having served as city councilman for two successive terms, and was connected with a manufacturing company at Indianapolis. The death of his wife completely unmanned him and it was no doubt the immediate cause of his suicide.

Brakeman's Perilous Jump.

At Clinton, Albert Brown, a Chicago and Eastern Illinois brakeman, escaped a violent death by jumping from the railroad to the ground, a distance of fifty feet. Brown had gone out on the bridge to make a coupling when a car loaded with heavy timber struck him, causing him to lose his balance. It was either jump or be ground to pieces by the cars, and with wonderful presence of mind he leaped. He lit squarely on his feet, where he stood for a moment, and then fell unconscious to the ground. His injury is not regarded as serious.

Within Our Borders.

At South Bend, Mrs. August Schlemmel, aged 19, recently married, took rat poison and died.

At Martinsville, Hugh, the 17-year-old son of William Williamson, was drowned in White river.

The deadly disease anthrax has made its appearance among a herd of cattle belonging to Hamilton Like of Harrison township.

The young man who was killed by the train between Farmersburg and Pimento has been identified as Charles Watkins, aged 29, a grocer of Terre Haute.

While John Gardner of Clinton township and his young son were crossing the track in a wagon, they were struck by the Big Four express and both were instantly killed.

Some miscreant set fire to a number of stacks of wheat belonging to George G. Pell on a farm near Harmony. The fire spread rapidly and soon consumed his entire crop of over 600 bushels.

Norman Bovee, an engineer in the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad for the last eighteen years, committed suicide in the city park at Michigan City by shooting himself in the head. He has been in poor health for four months.

Willie Evans, aged 10, near Lake Mixinkuckee, was bitten by a rattlesnake and will probably die. He was cutting grass with the lawn mower and cut the reptile in two. In trying to remove some obstruction from the mower he was bitten on the end of the little finger.

Seven thousand people were assembled at the Newbern farmers' fair near Columbus in Deep Woods, when a violent storm came. The lightning and thunder were terrific and the rain poured down in a deluge. Trees were blown down, horses broke loose and ran away, children screamed, women fainted and general panic prevailed. Charles Hayman was struck by a falling limb and badly hurt; he will probably die. His wife and son were slightly injured. Mrs. Samuel Cooper was also struck by falling timber and badly hurt; will probably die.

Fire broke out in Frank Wright's restaurant at Pennville, destroying a block of buildings valued at $25,000, and causing injuries to several persons. The injured are Mrs. Frank Wright, who jumped from the second story, dislocated hip and broken ankle, recovery doubtful; Frank Wright, burned while rescuing his children, not serious; infant child of Frank Wright and wife, badly burned, but will recover. The fire spread to the Pennville Gas Company's office, Dr. Mason's office, J. D. Smith & Sons' hardware and furniture store, the Lupton building, Mrs. Jenkins' block and residence, A. T. Place's grocery, Will Allman's barber shop and the Morrow barber shop. The buildings were all frame.

The remains of John Rollinson, who lived a hermit's life in Greenville township, were found in an advanced state of decomposition on the floor of the little house on his farm.

During a heavy electric rainstorm the two-story residence occupied by James Wells and family at Edinburg was struck by lightning and set on fire. Mr. Wells had just retired in an upstairs room and was severely shocked. His wife, daughter and one son, who were still down stairs, were also stunned and blinded by the stroke, but none was dangerously injured.

Diphtheria has broken out in Clinton, and there are grave fears of an epidemic similar to the one of a year ago. There are now several cases, two of the victims being in a critical condition. The physicians are co-operating with the health board in an effort to prevent an epidemic.

John Johns, a barber of Star City, who recently went crazy, is confined in the Sullivan jail. Johns is kept in a cell and tears every particle of clothing off his body and raves and pounds his cell day and night. Johns, prior to going crazy, was of a quiet disposition and had never before exhibited signs of lunacy. His condition is supposed to have been caused by reading cheap novels.

CAMPAIGN OPEN

The political campaign in DeKalb county is now open, both tickets being in the field. As usual, some dissatisfaction was caused in both conventions. In the democratic convention, it appears that Waterloo felt slighted. So when the republican convention met at Butler Thursday, they set about it to secure a share of the candidates for that locality. But they did worse than we, for they overdid the matter, putting down three candidates, representative, clerk and surveyor in Grant township, and came within a fraction of choosing the treasurer from there. In fact the treasurer was the one they should have taken, and if they had taken him, and possibly the representative, the matter would have seemed fair. But by leaving out the only man entitled to anything, and putting on others who had no particular claims, they made a serious mistake. It left the other parts of the county with no candidates, and they feel slighted. Then there is the quarrel over Vernier in Butler. He wanted the nomination for representative, but his party remembered he had been voting a mixed ticket. It is always advisable for a man who hopes to get an office, to vote straight at each election. But it appears that at the last two or three city elections, Vernier has helped to cause trouble for the republicans by voting in a part of the democratic ticket. All these things caused trouble, and for some things that appeared in the Record, the republican organ there, Vernier got mad and had the editor Mr. Higley, arrested for libel. This quarrel no doubt had the effect of frightening away delegates from Vernier, and adding one more to the list of nominees for Grant. Then too, there is a good deal of feeling in Keyser, as there was plainly no intention of giving anything to that township. Wilmington township got treasurer, but the town of Butler got nothing. So those who have been hoping for trouble in the democratic camp are liable to be disappointed. There are two months now, for active campaign work, and we expect to see lively hustling. With a ticket made up of good men we see no reason why the democrats should not win by a handsome majority.

ANGOLA, IND., Sept. 5, 1898:—Saturday morning E. L. Bryan, who lived just north of the Angola fair grounds, went out to cut corn, and as he did not come home to dinner, a search was made and his body found in the cornfield. Death was due to heart failure.

The case of Asiatic cholera reported from Orland last Friday, is believe to have been a case of cholera morbus and heart failure. The victim, Miss Weirick, a sister of our townsman, Henry Weirick, the barbar, took sick at 3 o'clock and died at noon. Dr. Moore of Orland, pronounced it Asiatic cholera, and so the story started.

Warren Luse, the soldier who came home a few days ago with chaplain Charles S. Medbury, took the typhoid fever and died at the home of Mr. Medbury Saturday evening. Mr. Medbury is believed to be improving but is a very sick man. Quartermaster, H. L. Hutson, who came home with the typhoid fever is still quite low.

Court convenes today, and the docket is rather lengthy.

A hailstorm visited this place Saturday evening, and a heavy thunder shower this morning.

Angola will be largely represented at the Auburn Carnival this week.

OBITUARY

Emily Burns was born near Millersburg, Ohio, Dec. 26th 1833, died in the asylum for the insane at Logansport, Ind., Aug. 30, 1898. Age 64 years, 8 month and 4 days.

She was buried in cemetery at Fairfield Ceter, DeKalb county, Sept. 1, '98. Funeral services at the home of her son, conducted by Rev. Hoyt, Baptist minister of Auburn, assisted by the pastor of the Christian church at Corunna.

She was the youngest of five children of whom but one, Garrett Burns, of Holmes county Ohio, survive her. She gave her hand in marriage to John Buchanan, of Holmes county Ohio, Sept. 1, 1859, and they moved to DeKalb county, in 1855. To the union were born three children, Amina, wife of Dr. James W. Squires, of Churubusco, and James Buchanan, of DeKalb Co., survive her with nine grand children three of whom are now soldiers in the army, all of them under twenty-one years of age. Clara Bell having preceded her to the other side of the dark river, Feb. 14, 1864. Her husband also preceded he Nov. 29, '93.

Her reason became dethroned about thirty-two years ago, rendering her an object of sympahy and pity for the balance of her life, the greater portion of which she spent in the hospital for the insane.

She was brought up in the faith of the Presbyterian church and lived a consistent christian life as long as reason ruled that human throne, loved, respected and admired most by those who knew her best.

The Electrical Display

We should have given Alt Moody credit for his share of the work of arranging for the electrical fountain. Of course he attends to the electrical part of that. All over the town, in the stores, the streets, in Madden's field and elsewhere, all the arrangements and electrical effects are his. Many of these are original and intricate, involving a thorough knowledge of applied electricity and a liberal amount of ingenuity and genius. This is true of all the displays we shall gather about and admire.

DIED.

Saturday morning, Sept. 3, 1898, Helen Lucile, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Groscop, at the age of 7 months and 21 days. She was taken suddenly with a violent form of cholera infantum, aggravated probably by teeth difficulties and nothing could be done for her, she died in about two hours. The funeral was at the home at 2 p. m. Sunday, and interment in Woodlawn. Rev. Geo. Engleman, officiating.

Our Six-Year-Old Daughter.

Our little six-year-old daughter had a very sore throat, badly ulceratad, and coughed almost inceseantly. Gave the White Wine of Tar Syrup according to directions and she began to improve immediately and soon got well. Mrs Groves and I recommended it to others and we consider it the very best medicine in use. REV. D. H. GROVES,

LOVELY VISIONS.

Sweet Auburn, Truly the Loveliest Village of the Plain.

HER CARNIVAL DECORATIONS

She Knows How to Fix Up, and Each September Shows Her Beauties Forth.

At every step and every corner every door and window we see the decorations that are to make Auburn a vision of beauty for the Carnival. And only about half are in sight yet. For when you pass a big show window and see its curtain drawn down or a lot of big papers pinned up, you know what it means. Some one is on the inside devising and making beautiful forms of lovely material to dazzle the eye when at last the curtain is raised. It will not be possible to describe all these forms of grace and beauty, but in justice the thousands who read the Daily and Weekly, we mention them in a general way. The immense window of Bishop & Lackey comes first for it is one of the very largest, and gives the artist a better chance to carry out his ideal. It is elaborate and beautiful, like many others, it is expensive, for no business man seems to regard expense, when the interests of the Carnival are at stake. G. H. Yesbera's is grand, the Carnival colors of blue and yellow being set of by big lillies, Wilson's shoe store has substantially the same plan as last year and is very elaborale and tasty. Sprott & Knapp have decorated nicely. Olds not only has fine decorations, but puts a great many of his lovely china lamps into the picture. Bishop & Beidler have their window nicely draped, and Culbertson and Boland's big window is being arranged and draped in elaborate style, Ollie Clay's grocery is fixed up nicely. Marion Willis is beginning his, The Sheets Brothers have made fine decorations and so have Trentman Sisters and Harry Trentman. Hebel's store is elaborately decorated. The little restaurant, "Remember the Maine," is decorated as well as so small a place could be. Mc Cord's drugstore is fine. And we have not seen one more artistic and sweet than that of R. Shull in the corner window of the Kiblinger block. D. A. Aodge will have the other window. In this is a lovely windmill elaborately decorated, with a background of Carnival colors. The Hollister House has a big Eagle and Shield over the main entrance, while the Swineford has a handsomely decorated window at the north of the office room. Will Kruger will have a monster flag, and lights. The Fischler Pharmacy has drapery in Carnival colors, with lights and flags. Davenport has a beautiful window in drapings of the Carnival colors, and the background rich with costly pictures. With its colored lights, the effect will be fine. Cowan Sisters have lovely drapings in colors, and a heart-shaped arch that occupies the whole window. F. J. Yesbera has the other window and makes it beautiful, by an elaborate background of goldenrod blooms and sprays, then filling with plants and flowers, amid which will flutter and sing a number of live, free canaries. Schaab Brothers have not only a window display, but as in case of last year, the greater part of the south side is occupied by a large and lovely display in colors. To see this, one should go inside. The view from the outside, however, is elaborately beautiful. The background and canopy are of silk goods in brilliant colors, and tastefully arranged. There are two squares of incandescent lamps. 24 lamps in each group. And a lovely center piece of large lilies, the work of Mrs. Alt Moody. In the center of the big bouquet of lilies, is another lamp. The effect will be magnificent, because, the lights in the 24 groups will rotate, lighting and going out in a certain order, and when the last has gone out, the bright one in the center of the lilies flashes out, then goes out and the 24 start around again. Similar effects in electric lights are at G H. Yesbera's and Culbertson & Boland's. There are few neater or more original displays than at Bishop & Beidler's. The Farmers Bank has a big, draded, spreading eagle. Jones & Son have made both windows lovely by artistic drapings in colors, with rosettes, and more beautiful forms than we can name. The Bazar on the corner, has expensive and beautiful lamps in the south window with drapery around, and all lighted by electricity. The north one is draped with a big mirror in the center and the space is filled with palms, ferns and laces, all made brilliant by lights J. L. Davis has a draped window full of highly polished and ornamental hardware, such as guns, cutlery, etc., and bright lights. Schaab & Murphy are also putting in lovely displays, which as they are not yet done, we cannot fully describe, but they will be up with the rest, and we hope to see them later. Frank Kosht drapes his grocery window and so does John Roberts, adding flags, etc., to the colored drapings. Ed. Eldridge has his windows beautifully draped, and lovely electrical effects. Tom Sommers has a big horse shoe hanging up and a row of incandescent lamps all around the edge. The Red Men have an immense emblematical transparency hung out from their room extending over the street. G. H. Yesbera has the biggest flag ever seen in Auburn, being twenty feet, so long that his flag staff lets it droop on the building when the wind is not strong. Dr. Swarts has the both sides heavily draped in upright bars of yellow and blue, giving a fine effect. There are others to be noted, when the work is nearer done.

The Houlton Reunion.

Gen Blair, of Waterloo, was in town this morning and reported having been at the Houlton reunion yesterday. They had a grand time, as they always do, over 1000 being present. And such a dinner, it ranged in everything from roast beef to pie, and there was an abundance of it. Many invitations had been given out, mostly to pioneers, but it appears that while the invited list is necessarily limited, everybody can go and hear the program, which generally consists in a speech followed by songs music and recitations by children and friends of the family. The family has a regular association, Matt Houlton being president this year. After he had called to order, Hon. R. M. Lockhart made some remarks and was then followed with the speech by Gen. Blair. Being himself a pioneer, he could recall the scenes of pioneer life with vividness. It was indeed the tale of a pioneer hero. John Houlton in 1833 was going to the settlements at the Hawpatch or in Elkhart county, for corn. There was no settlement in DeKalb, but he noticed a good site for a home, and in September of that year came back, put up a cabin and moved into it. The smoke from his mud chimney was the first that went up from a white man's home in DeKalb county. Who says that courage endurance and faith were not absolutely necessary for such a thing? Mr. Houlton died about twenty years ago, in a comfortable frame house that had taken the plan of the cabin. Hiason Lewis now occupies it. The other brothers live nearby, except Roger, who is a music teacher and leader in Ft. Wayne He and John Houlton jr. could not attend this time. But Matt, Wm. L. and Lewis, with their families were all there. The writer knew both Mr. Houlton and his second wife, and from experience can testify to the character of pioneer hospitality. We think the sons do well to thus keep alive the memory of this first of the many pioneers of DeKalb, the men who took this county as a dark, damp wilderness and themselves and successors left it to us, the garden of the state. We wish some of these early pioneers could see the county this summer, and note the great changes in 65 years.

TAKES WORK

It takes a lot of work for an officer to settle accounts with Uncle Sam. Lieut. Col. May, of the 157th, who is a regular army officer says:

"The volunteer officers will find making a settlement more tedious work than they now expect. They will have to give an accounting of every bit of government property which has been or is now in their possesion. They will find the government will be as particular in knowing what became of a pair of army socks as it will be about a full regimental outfit. If the officers can not give this accounting, they will be asked to explain why. If this can not be done, they wfll have to make up the shortage. But if an officer has a surplus of anything—if he has three cents more money than he should haye to turn over to the government—he will be asked where it came from. The government will be as insistent in getting at surpluses as it will be in shortages. It will want the accounts to balance with its records to a cent. The officers will find that until they can give an accounting they wlll not be discharged from the service."

WILL BE QUEEN

Mrs. Moody will be queen of the Carnival, the vote this afternoon standing for the three highest names:

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger. I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

Dangerous Accident.

This morning came near furnishing another fatal accident. While Mrs. A. W. Bates was getting breakfast, she had the gasoline stove a small one, setting on the cook stove. After lighting the gasoline, she took up the little stove, to take it off of the other stove, when the gasoline in the tank spilled over onto her and caught fire. She was badly burned on the right arm and side, but is getting along very well.

WHISTLES AS HE FIGHTS.

There Is Absolutely Nothing Indicative of Fear in the Yankee Tar.

A half-naked man, sticking his head out of the forward eight-inch gun turret on the Brooklyn to get a breath of fresh air, said to me as a couple of big shells whistled over our heads and struck in the water beyond, "Funny song they sing, sir," and then disappeared. In the two hot engagements in which I have watched the fighters closely, I have never seen anything indicative of fear. True, everybody has a curious sensation as the first few shells of the enemy whistle overhead, and when one strikes, with its frightful explosion, you look around anxiously for an instant. If the smoke is cleared from your ship you will see a puff of smoke from a battery ashore. Then, just as you have forgotten the smoke, about three seconds later, you hear a sound like a swarm of bees humming over your head. Pretty soon shells began to come faster and faster. They drop in the water on both sides of you. One hits the military mast and the debris of steel and rope and wood comes tumbling about you. You look up wonderingly, but give it merely an instant's thought. Then your mind reverts to the terrible roar of your own guns, and then comes the single idea of keeping outside the radius of fire, not of the enemy's guns, but those on your own ship, equally dangerous to your safety, the preservation of your ear drums and your life. I stood by Commodore Schley's side, with Flag Lieutenant Sears, during the two first bombardments of Santiago, and we all found ourselves absolutely forgetful of peril, watching the shots from different turrets and telling the gunners whether to depress or raise the muzzle of the gun. We kept accurately the times of the movements, of opening fire, of good shots, of silenced batteries, and of "cease firing." The balls whistle about you with a nasty whine, as if they deplored not being able to hit you, but half the time the roar of the fusilade of your own ships drowns the complaint of the enemy's missiles. You experience at first a feeling of enjoyment not unmixed with terror. Then you grow animated and discover a peculiar sort of charm in the danger and in the game of life or death.—Leslie's Weekly.

TABLE TALK.

—Mrs. Ann Culbertson came home this morning from Winona, and we are sorry to say she is in very poor health. She seems to have grown worse for the past few weeks.

—Before you buy a Buggy or Surrey, call on us and examine our line of Eckharts, they are the finest and best made and our prices are right. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—D.N. Myers will keep his fine imported Cleveland Bay Stallion at his feed barn in Auburn every day in the week this season. All interested in good horses, are invited to call. tf

—Aaron Bair of Spencerville, was brought before Squire Walborn yesterday on a charge of assault and battery by Owen Rummel of the same place. It cost him all told, over $13.

---Baby photographs a specialty at Lybarger's Gallery North Main, Auburn.

—While DeKalb county had little or no apples this year, yet it seems to have been a peach year, for nearly every one who had even poor trees, seemed to have a few peaches, and generally good ones.

—Dr. Ford is still as lively as a cricket and appeared just that way this morning when he informed us that just seventy-five years ago this morning, he began the business of "kicking the blankets." He was born in the morning, Sept. 3, 1823.

—Mr. and Mrs. Colvin came back last evening from an extended trip at his old home in eastern Ohio, and will remain here a week or two. Today, he went up to Cassopolis where he preaches to his church and congregation tomorrow.

—James Donaldson of Jackson was here yesterday and brought us a sack of fine, large peaces, raised by N. P. Ferguson on his farm down there. Though they are seedlings, they average the largest of any peaches we have seen so far this year.

—Claude Refner has a copy of the Harper's Weekly of 1884, in which is a group of the officers who went with the Thetis on the Greeley Relief expedition. The central figure is "Commander W. S. Schley," looking much younger than he does today, but he was not as famous then.

—A full grown rat was discovered in Mrs. Borst's rooms after the family had retired last night. After it had frightened her nearly to death, it got into Mrs. Miller's rooms, and more screams were added. We believe Geo. McNabb finally killed the "varmint" with the aid of Orrin and Charlie. But it was a lively time.

—W. S. Purdy, returned Wednesday from a trip to his old homestead in Harding county, Ohio. It is the first time he has visited his old stamping for 33 years and says a great change has taken place. They have a 1,500 acre only onion patch and an harvesting from 2,500 to 3,000 bushels a day from land that was nothing but a swamp he left.

—St. Joe News:—Gus Barnett, the little short egg buyer from Kendallville, made his last trip to St. Joe, this week, as next week he assumes the office of marshal of Kendallville, a position to which he was elected last spring. His son will take his place and drive the egg wagon. We wish "Shorty" success in his new role, and and hope he will "yank the stuffin" out of the fellows who violate the law up in his section of coutry.

—Mrs. Woodworth's meeting at Helmer, closed last evening, there being about 4000 in attendance. About 150 are reported to have been healed and a number of conversions. She goes to Benton Harbor. There is talk of her coming to Auburn, next year.

—Mrs. Hattie Millard, of Connecticut Mrs. Julia Flint, of Lansing, M. Edward Griswold of Cleveland, will be here this week. They will be guests of James Griswold and wife and James McDowell and wife. Mrs. Millard will be remembered as Hattie Griswold.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. H. B. McCord.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Opera House tonight.

—Morgan Gibney at the OperaHouse all week.

—The Kendallville fair promises to be greater this year than ever.

The big Arch of Peace was put up across Main street today, at the public square

—Henry Krabill, of St. Joe, made the Old Reliable COURIER a business call today.

—Going to business college? Write to Huntington (Ind.) Business University for information. 34-37 d & w —Better races; larger purses; greater stock show, at the Kendallville fair this year than ever before.

—The Kendallville fair will be remembered on account of its green trees and the great show for the money.

—One man went before the county commissioners yesterday for a right to sell watermelons. The Board referred him to the Carnival folks.

—Co K will be home about Friday. A letter from Capt. Lahnum to his wife brings this word. All the sick including himself are better.

—Rev. W. L. Meese preached at Norris Chapel, Sunday evening. He makes it a point to preach once a year at all points where he ever organized a class.

—The Hicksville fair will be held this year Sept. 13 to 16. This is one of the few fairs that has survived the hard times and always paid their premiums. 35-36

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. H. B. McCord.

—Joshua Miller's son in Butler township is having a pull of typhoid fever. Mrs. Miller has just recovered from something of the same sort.

—Doc. Hendrickson's mother-in-law, Mrs. Hagenbaugh, died here yesterday afternoon. She has been ill for some time at Mr. Hendrickson's home in the north part of town.

—The play at the Opera House last evening was excellent, better even than that of Monday evening. There is an excellent play tonight, and those who attend will be pleased with it.

—Board and lodging can be had at Keeran Sisters on South VanBuren during the Carnival. Anyone wanting a good dinner and supper and good place to rest, call on them, second door south of the Lutheran church.

—Dr. Miller, will again be at F. J. Yesbera's jewelry store, Tuesday Sept. 13, Eyes carefully examined for glasses, as this is a special visit you should avail yourself of the opportunity. Come between 8 a. m. and 3. m.

—MARRIED:—Sunday, Sept. 4, 1898, at the residence of the bride's father, Wm. Helms south of Garrett, Mr. Lynde A. Murphy, of Newville township to Miss Rosetta Ann Helms, by Rev. W. L Meese. The bride and groom will make their home in Garrett.

—Sept. 13 to 16 will be held the annual exposition at Hicksville. The management has arranged for a base ball tournament, and will furnish base ball every day of the fair, by the crack clubs of the county. Big money up every day. 35-36

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. H. B. McCord.

BUTLER.

A large number of the Butler lodge of Oddfellows were in attendance at the Byron Woodcox funeral, near St. Joe, last Sunday Rev. Frech of the M. E. church preached the funeral sermon. His remains were interred in Newville cemetery.

Howard Berger, one of our most popular and highly respected young men, died at the Aldrich house last Sunday night of typhoid fever. Mr. Berger was married about one year ago to Miss Grace Leiter. He has occupied the position of telegraph operator for the Lake Shore for many years. His loss will be surely felt by his employes and most deeply by his young wife and a large circle of friends and relatives.

Geo. Geddes' wife and daughter are both sick, but not seriously as we suppose.

There was a lively runaway on our streets Sunday night but inquiry fails to identify the parties.

M. V. Troutman, for a number of years, acting as agent, and operator for the Wabash has severed his connection with the company and is moving to Virginia to take up like work for a company there. Our people will miss them very much from church and society circles.

Our new attorneys Dunten & Holmes formerly of Lagrange, are creating a favorable impression among our people

Obituary

Byron A Woodcox, the subject of this sketch was born on the banks of the St. Joe River on what is now known as the Walter farm in Concord township August 8, 1843, died Sept. 3, 1898, aged 55 years and 26 days. His early life was uneventful spending his youth on the farm; at the age of 18, in 1861 he entered the volunteer service of the United States and served three years and three month in the Eleventh Ohio Infantry, coming home in August 1864. In October of same year he again entered the 35th Indiana Infantry and was mustered out at the close of the war. For several years he was engaged in farming but later became a painter and paperhanger of which business he became an expert. In the spring of 1890, his party saw fit to nominate him for the office of township trustee, to which he was elected by fifteen majority in a township considered at that time very close, How he conducted the office is a matter of history and of record; suffice it to say that when he surrendered to his successor his trust, Concord was out of debt, something that had not happennd for years before. During the last few years he has been a great sufferer from diseases innumerable. First his eye sight was affected losing the sight of one some six years ago. Later he was attacked by sciatic rheumatism with which he has suffered untold agonies, Last April a year ago he went to the Hot Springs, Arkansas, for treatment and came back greatly benefited, but in a few months the disease returned greatly aggravated and from that time on gradually grew worse until death ended his suffering. He leaves a wife and three children, two sons and one daughter, one brother and one sister, besides numerous other relatives and hosts of friends. The funeral was from his residence, conducted by the Rev. T. J. Frech, of Butler, Ind., and by the I. O O. F. of which the deceased was a member. The remains were laid to rest in the Newville cemetery and was followed to his last resting place by perhaps as large a procession as the vicinity ever saw.

IN February, 1895, both branches of the Spanish Cortes—in which Cuba had forty-three representatives—unanimously passed a bill brought forward by Senor Abaruza, a Cuban, to establish in Cuba a liberal regime which should virtually confer autonomy, or home rule. This was in response to the demands of the autonomist Cuban members of the Cortes. Ten days after the enactment of the reform law an insurrection was begun in the province of Santiago. Their purpose, it has been stated, was to prevent the success of a reform which would content the people and render them indifferent to the idea of Cuba libre.

A republic was proclaimed and Cuebitas was made the capital, but the civil government was imaginary. The chief command and entire local government was in the hands of Gen. Gomez. He, with Maceo and others, gradually extended the rebel operations over the whole island, destroying everything outside the towns. Stealing in small bands through the bush and traveling by night, they eluded the Spanish troops and burned and plundered everywhere, driving the rustics into the already congested towns. To prevent the rebels from living off the rustics the Spanish forbade agriculture in exposed districts, thus also adding to the congestion of population in the towns. The wretchedness of the reconcentrados, imputed to Gen. Weyler, became the chief burden of the cry of inhumanity raised against Spanish rule.

By cutting the island into several isolated sections by means of trochas and by following up the rebel bands pertinaciously in the restricted areas Gen. Weyler had at length by December, 1897, virtually freed the island from all ravages except in the two easternmost provinces, where a desolate mountain country gave the insurgents impenetrable retreats. The nature of the jungle was such that the complete extinction of the rebel bands in Santiago was impracticable so long as they received supplies and encouragement from abroad. Their operations were on a small scale and unimportant except so far as the existence of their movement—even on a small scale—afforded a basis for the growing disposition at Washington to interfere to exclude Spain from her possessions in the West Indies.

In December, 1896, Congress signified its purpose to recognize Cuba libre until Secretary Olney, instructed by Mr. Cleveland, let it be known that in the President's view recognition was an executive function exclusively and action by Congress would be ignored. Mr. Cleveland's position, as indicated by his representations at Madrid, was that the plan of autonomy embodied in the Abaruza law of 1895 and much broadened in the decree of February, 1897, should be given a trial and the United States would not interfere until it was shown by experience that the new home rule scheme was a sham and failure.

With the beginning of the McKinley administration a less patient policy was favored and the idea of getting Spain to withdraw from Cuba by friendly insistance was entertained. Congressmen who wished to recognize Cuba's independence were at once advised that such result could be attained in a better way. Recognition was staved off. Meanwhile Spain was asked to make various concessions, as respects the removal of Weyler, the reconcentrados and an armistice, etc. All were granted. The hope was entertained that with Blanco favoring conciliation, the reconcentrados provided for and peace offered the rebels, a way would be found for giving Cuba a government as free as that of Canada. The retention of a nominal sovereignty was now at length all that Spain asked. It was resolved not to concede this and on April 11, 1898, President McKinley asked Congress to authorize him to interfere in Cuba with force. Congress assented on the 19th and an ultimatum was sent to Spain demanding the evacuation of Cuba.

Destruction of the Maine.

Hostilities were precipitated by the sinking of the battleship Maine in the harbor of Havana in February. The vessel sank after an explosion, the cause of which has not been ascertained. It is not known whether it was the work of a Spanish fanatic, animated by blind hatred of the United States, or of a Cuban patriot anxious to embroil Spain and Cuba. The explosion of the Maine, whatever the cause, fired popular resentment against Spain. There was a loud demand for revenge, and "Remember the Maine!" became a popular cry.

Long before the declaration of war our warships were assembled in large numbers at Key West, near Havana. War existed before the formal declaration on April 25, and the congressional resolution took cognizance of the situation by stating that hostilities dated from April 21. On that day the Buena Ventura, a Spanish ship, was captured by the gunboat Nashville, Lieut. Washburn commander, and on the same day President McKinley ordered the North Atlantic squadron under Admiral Sampson to sail from Key West to inaugurate the Cuban blockade. The fleet left the harbor the following day. On April 23 President McKinley called for 125,000 volunteers, and ordered Commodore Dewey at Hong Kong to "find and destroy the Spanish fleet."

Spain declared war on April 24, the day which saw Dewey's fleet weigh anchor and steam away for Manila bay. On April 26 militia camps were formed in nearly every State of the Union.

Matanzas was bombarded on April 27 by Admiral Sampson with the New York, the Cincinnati and the Puritan. Great damage was done the fortifications. Cienfuegos was bombarded on April 28, and on that day, also, Admiral Cervera began the series of maneuvers ending in the Santiago bottle, by leaving Spanish shores with his fleet, en route to the Cape Verde Islands.

The Cabanas batteries were silenced by a bombardment from the New York on April 30, the day which brought word from Rio Janeiro telling of the safe and wonderful voyage of the battleship Oregon on its way from San Francisco to join Sampson's fleet.

Dewey's Great Victory.

On Sunday, May 1, the first great sea battle of the war was fought. Commodore George Dewey made himself Rear Admiral Dewey and won undying glory for the American navy by leading his fleet into the mined harbor of Manila and, under the guns of the fort on Corregidor Island and the heavy fortifications defending the arsenal and navy yard, destroying the entire Asiatic fleet of Spain. The Olympia was his flagship, and his remaining vessels were the Baltimore, the Boston and the Raleigh, protected cruisers; the Concord and Petrel, gunboats; and the McCulloch, dispatch boat. With this force, equal but not superior in armament to the Spanish fleet, far inferior when the land batteries are counted, he sunk, burned or blew up eight Spanish cruisers, six gunboats and three transports.

The sea victory was followed by an attack on the land fortifications, which were razed. The arsenal at Cavite was also captured, and before noon his guns commanded the city of Manila. In the engagement not one American life was lost, while in killed and drowned the Spanish loss has been placed between 500 and 900.

In the first week in May the definite division of the ships of the American navy in Atlantic and Cuban waters into squadrons and fleets was made. The flying squadron, Commodore Schley in command, was formed at Hampton Roads, the vessels being the Brooklyn, flagship; the Massachusetts, the Texas, the Columbia and the Minneapolis. Admiral Sampson in the blockade line at Havana had with him besides his flagship, the New York, the battleships Iowa and Indiana, the cruisers Cincinnati and Marblehead, and a dozen torpedo craft and gunboats. Matanzas was bombarded for a second time May 7.

The first American casualties of the war were on the torpedo boat Winslow, off Cardenas harbor. The killed were Ensign Worth Bagley and five seamen. The Winslow attacked three Spanish gunboats and the shore fortifications, and in disregard of peril the boat was run too far inshore. It was crippled by the fire and the men were killed before other boats could come to its assistance. The Spanish gunboats were disabled by the re-enforcements and the batteries silenced.

Admiral Sampson appeared before San Juan, Porto Rico, on May 12, and bombarded the forts for three hours. Morro was partially reduced. Sampson was in search of Cervera's fleet, known by this time to have left the Cape Verde Islands and to be well on the way to Cuban waters for its famous game of hide-and-seek, and he made no pronounced effort to reduce the fortifications. One American was killed in the attack, while the Spanish loss was heavy.

On the following day the flying squadron put to sea to aid in finding Cervera, who was reported then to be at Curacoa, off Venezuela. The two fleets cut off Cervera from Havana and on May 18 it was reported that the Spanish admiral had taken refuge in Santiago bay.

Schley Traps Cervera.

Commodore Schley, with the flying squadron, reached Santiago before Admiral Sampson, and it is known now the arrival was just in time to prevent a dash by Cervera for Cienfuegos or Havana. The presence of Cervera in the bottle was known to a certainty in a few days through the daring trip of Lieut. Victor Blue, who made a circuit of the bay, even entering Santiago. Admiral Sampson arrived, and the combined fleets began their long wait for their prey.

The invasion of the army to co-operate with the fleet at Santiago was planned as soon as Cervera's whereabouts was known. President McKinley issued a second call for 75,000 volunteers on May 25. The demand was instantly met by the men who had failed to secure a place on the first call. The first expedition to re-enforce Dewey at Manila sailed also on May 25. It numbered 6,000 men. Daily bombardments of the forts at the entrance of Santiago bay continued.

Though Cervera was bottled, it was feared that a storm might scatter the blockading fleet and give him a chance to escape from his harbor prison. Accordingly it was concluded to sink a vessel in the narrow channel between Morro Castle and the Estrella battery. An iron collier, the Merrimac, was selected, and the perilous work of destruction was assigned to Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson and a volunteer crew of seven men.

In the early morning of June 3 the vessel was guided into the channel under a terrific fire from the Spanish guns. One shot disabled its rudder and rendered it nearly uncontrollable. It was driven by its engines, however, into the narrowest part of the channel, and the attempt was made to swing it broadside to the entrance. The force of the current prevented success, as was shown by the passage of the Spanish fleet around its hulk at a later day, but failure did not detract from the bravery of the exploit. Hobson fired the torpedos which blew out the bottom of the ship, and, with his crew, took to a boat, surrendering in an hour to the Spanish admiral, who complimented him for his bravery, and sent a message to Sampson telling of his safety and that of his men.

The order was given June 8 to prepare a landing place for the army of invasion, and on June 10 Col. Huntington, with a force of marines landed at Guantanamo, established Camp McCalla, and for five days fought a body of Spaniards superior in numbers and protected by impenetrable brush. The Spaniards were repulsed in every attack, but the marines lost several men.

The fleet, with the aid of the marines, demolished Fort Caimanera and captured Baquiri, which was to be the landing place for Gen. Shafter's army, which left Tampa in transports on June 14.

Shafter appeared off Baquiri on June 22 and two days were occupied in landing. Juragua was captured on June 24, and the advance toward Santiago began. The Spanish resisted, and Roosevelt's rough riders and the Tenth United States cavalry, in the van of the American army, found themselves engaged with a superior body of Spaniards. The enemy were driven back by the furious charge of the Americans, but the loss was heavy, the greatest of any of the conflicts of the war up to that time. Thirteen were killed and sixty wounded.

Sevilla was ocupied on June 26, and on the last day of June 13,000 American troops were before Santiago, 5,000 more on their way from the coast, with 3,000 Cubans near at hand.

Assault on Santiago.

The general assault began July 1, El Caney being captured at severe cost. The Spaniards retired from their trenches before the American advance, but the last of the outworks were not in the possession of the American army until the evening of July 2, while on one side the heights of San Juan were still untaken.

Gen. Lawton's division assaulted San Juan on July 3 and carried the heights in the greatest charge of a great battle. Santiago was surrounded and Gen. Shafter demanded its surrender. The American loss in the three days' battle was 231 killed, 1,283 wounded and 81 missing.

Convinced that the city must fall, the Madrid authorities, who were in cable communication with Santiago throughout the battle, ordered Admiral Cervera on July 2 to make a dash from the harbor. He carried out his instructions on the morning of July 3, and two hours after the Maria Teresa led the way past the sunken Merrimac his vessels were hulks, lying at intervals along the beach for fifty miles.

Admiral Sampson with the New York had gone to consult with Gen. Shafter when the Spanish ships were seen coming from the harbor, but Commodore Schley, with the Brooklyn, Oregon, Iowa, Texas, Indiana and Gloucester, were more than a match for the Maria Teresa, Cristobal Colon, Oquendo, Vizcaya and the destroyers Pluton and Terror. The Colon made the longest run, but was overhauled by the Brooklyn and the Oregon. One American sailor on the Brooklyn was killed, while of the Spanish 600 were killed and 1,100 taken prisoners, including Admiral Cervera.

The bombardment of Santiago was begun, and on July 14 Gen. Toral, recognizing the hopelessness of further resistance, surrendered the entire province and all its garrisons of 25,000 soldiers, the United States agreeing to send them back to Spain.

Gen. Miles, who arrived in Santiago before the surrender, prepared immediately to lead an army against Porto Rico. It landed near Ponce on July 25, the day that the rumor went abroad that Spain was ready to cry enough. Gen. Merritt reached Manila on that day also. The landing in Porto Rico was without loss and with no engagement other than a skirmish at Guanica, ending in the hoisting of the American flag over the town.

Spain made its direct appeal for peace through Ambassador Cambon on July 26, but suggested no terms. On July 27 the public learned of the outbreak of yellow fever in the camp before Santiago, and on that day Ponce surrendered to Gen. Miles. President McKinley sent terms of peace to Spain on July 29.

The second battle of Manila was fought on July 31, on a Sunday, as was the first. It was a land attack under cover of darkness by the Spaniards, and its purpose was to turn the American flank and drive the Americans into the sea. It was repulsed. The American loss was nine killed and forty-five wounded, the Spanish loss in killed and wounded was 600.

Army Ordered North.

The generals of the American army at Santiago surprised the country Aug. 3 by a "round robin" letter declaring that the army must be moved north away from yellow fever or it would perish. The army was ordered north the following day.

Spain sent an evasive answer to the United States on Aug. 5, and it was received after much delay in transmission on Aug. 9. President McKinley responded with an imperative reiteration of the original terms, and with bad grace Spain at last, on Aug. 11, gave permission to Cambon to accept them in its behalf. The protocol was signed on Aug. 12, President McKinley issued a proclamation declaring a cessation of hostilities and the war with Spain was at an end.

BOY HERO OF SANTIAGO.

Thirteen-Year-Old Youth Carried Water on the Battlefield.

Bronzed by the sun of a southern clime, and in his ears still ringing the whizz of Mauser bullets which he heard at the battles of San Juan Hill and Santiago, there arrived in New York Charles Escudero, 13 years old, who marched by the side of his father, a regular army soldier, during the campaign in Cuba. This lad carried by his side during the battles a canteen, which he replenished from time to time with cold spring water, drafts of which he gave to those who were active in battle or lying helpless and wounded on the field.

CHARLES ESCUDERO.

The boy's home is in Columbus, O. His father has been in the regular army many years and was stationed at Madison Barracks, Sackets Harbor, N. Y., with the Ninth Infantry, when the war broke out. Charles was visiting at Sackets Harbor when the regiment was ordered south, and he went with them. He describes his experience as follows:

"The fellows, the boys of my father's company, asked me to go along, and I did; that's all. They said I'd be their mascot. We stayed at Tampa two months. I worked as 'helper' to the cooks. Then we took the Santiago to Cuba from Port Tampa. We landed in the sand in Siboney. We stayed there one day and then moved up six miles the next day, and then we got into the fight. That was the battle of San Juan Hill. Only one man in our company was wounded. He was hot in the foot before we got into battle. Where was I? Why, by my father's side most of the time, but I carried water to all the fellers. I kept filling my canteen. I got water from a spring. Why, the further we marched, the further away the spring was. Say, the Sapniards had sharpshooters up in the trees, but we got on to them, and the negro troops just hunted those sharpshooters like squirrels."

THE "YANKEE ROOSTER."

Peculiar American Fighting Cock Mystifies the Spaniards.

Back in the '40s a little story went the rounds of the newspapers. It was the story of the American eagle and the Spanish cock. An American ship visited one of the ports of Spain, and while lying at anchor in the harbor the officers went ashore to see the sights. Among the places they took in was a cock pit, a popular resort, to see the sport. The game cock of the Don is a diminutive bird, but a fighter.

One of the Americans expressed contempt for the bird and boasted that he had aboard his ship a "Yankee rooster" that could whip any bird ashore. The Dons accepted the challenge and a match was arranged. On the ship the sailors had an American eagle, which they proceeded to starve and trim of his feathers so as to resemble a Shanghai cock, strange bird to the Spanish, and on the appointed evening carried him ashore for the battle.

The Dons eyed him suspiciously, but he was dumped into the pit, where he stood, hungry and ugly, taking in the surroundings. The Spanish cock, a champion fighter, was brought in and likewise pitched into the pit. Strutting and crowing, he sparred for an opening at his silent and watchful Yankee enemy, and finally let drive at him with his "slashers," knife spurs, and drew first blood. Aroused, with one wild scream the eagle lit on him, tore off his head, and to the horror of the Spaniards, began to eat him. They lost their money, their honor was trailed in the dust, and to this day they do not understand the peculiar nature of the American fighting cock.

Not to Be Believed.

"I suppose you think I can't tell time?" exclaimed the man whose chronology had been questioned.

"No," was the reply; "I don't say you couldn't tell time, but time would be a fool to believe you, whatever you told him."—Boston Transcript.

SOME FALL ODDITIES.

STRIKING FEATURES OF A FEW NEW GARMENTS.

The Cutaway Cape, a Stylish New Jacket, an Unusual Tailor Rig and a Peculiar Skirt—New Forms of the Fancy Waist.

Fashions for Feminine Readers.

New York correspondence:

FEARS roused by the report circulated each season that fancy bodices will be discontinued, year after year prove groundless. The fancy bodice came to stay. This season the bodice is almost sure to have some sort of a yoke, and the sleeve has either a cap at the shoulder or a slight and cap-like arrangement of fullness there. In to-day's initial and the illustration following it is shown a representative quartet of these waists. The first of these was, more than the others, a class by itself. It was in pale blue surah, trimmed with velvet ribbon in a darker shade, and had a yoke of cream lace over white silk. Lawns, chiffons and all transparent materials are also employed, as a glance at the other waists shows. Above the choker collar appears the little lace points so much used a season or so ago. Sometimes the little triangles are sewed in just under the ears, and sometimes slightly stiffened that they may stand up. Sleeves are usually plain, but the elaboration in the first of these three bodices, which was white taffeta, was very pretty with its tucks and bands of embroidery.

For a very slender figure the bodice beside this one presents a very clever feature. It was of white ladies' cloth, as smooth and glossy as silk, and had a skirt to match, though it will be pretty with almost any skirt. It fastened at the right side and just at the bust line extended out in a jog that gave a greater width there than elsewhere, and that thus suggested a fullness of curve. This suggestion was added to by the lace under the edge of the fastening. This is one of the few new models without a yoke, and were it not for the perfectly new sleeves one might suspect it of being a left-over. The fitted narrow belt with its slight curve down in front is of this season also, and the hand embroidery, put on after the fitting of the belt, was a little touch of this season which the trained eye would not miss.

For early fall wear very attractive bodices are made of light flannel, ladies' cloth and even novelty cloths. They are trimmed with braiding, are of bright color—the next pictured model was of scarlet cloth with black rings—and are set on bright silk yokes either heavily braided or covered with lace. The bodice sketched had an especially stunning yoke of scarlet silk covered with a lace of heavy black net, solidly embroidered leaves and flowers of red appearing upon the net. The braiding of the bodice was black, and it was worn with a black cloth skirt and a jaunty fall hat with very good effect. It hinted that the field of the fancy bodice is widening. Time was when it was an expedient of fancy stuffs for theater, dinner or other occasion when the skirt "didn't count." But as a feature of the street gown it is new this season.

As some of the characteristics of former fancy bodices are echoed more or less clearly in all these admirable garments, none of them possessed striking features. Starlers are not few, however, in the styles now coming forward, and a few of the more artistic of the oddities are put in the third illustration. First is a view of the latest form the cut-away cape has taken. This first appeared last season as a complete novelty. This season it is to be the correct theater and dress wear, having won cordial acceptance. It hangs long at the back, almost to the bend of the knees, the corners are rounded off in front, it is made with sloping effect of shoulders, and altogether belongs distinctly to the "romantic school" of millinery and dressmaking. Usually the trimming consists of frills of lace, ribbon or silk to match the material of the cape. The frills are wide enough at the back to make the trimming reach a third of the length of the cloak, while they narrow to almost nothing as they reach the throat. To increase the slope of the shoulders, the model shown here, which was of electric-blue surah satin, showed a flat cap finish of applied lace at the shoulders. There is little warmth to them, because of their cut in front, but worn with a trained skirt they add greatly to the length and grace of the figure and are most suitable for carriage wear and calling. In black and delicate shades of gray and fawn they are considered the swellest sort of wear for young matrons and brides.

The new thing in jackets is more striking than this cut of cape, and because it lacks the other graceful lines does not seem so attractive at first glance. But it is extremely stylish and just at present gives to its wearer most desirable distinction. It is called the directoire jacket, and is sketched beside the cape. This one was bright green, the buttons large gray pearl and the frills at the edge of the pronounced revers were gray satin. Gray and green is a new combination. The ruff at the neck was gray lawn corded to stand up close and stiff. The distinctive feature of this cut of jacket is the long line of the front and the rounding short sides. The back is one piece and fits closely. Such are to be worn with all sorts of costumes, and are stunning additions.

NEW FORMS OF FANCY WAISTS.

Unusual features were apparent in the tailor rig of this group, both in its jacket and skirt. The latter was trained and ridiculously full for a cloth affair, though its lines were graceful. It was not, however, intended for walking, a skirt for that purpose being a separate feature of the suit. The material was biscuit colored cloth. The loose revers and wide standing collar were striking features of the jacket, and equally new was the neck finish, the string tie that knots without loops, the ends standing stiff and long. This one was glossy black satin. The sleeves of the jacket were very square, and if such are to become the fashion we are in for ugly shoulder lines.

The concluding model of this group was chosen for illustration because of the singular features of its skirt. That was long and plain, and being of heavy gray rep corded silk, did not attract through suggestions of lightness. It was not, however, as heavy as it looked, and since at the hips it showed the results of lessons learned from bicycle skirts, it still had its practical features. It fastened at either side of the front, after the manner of the conventional wheeling skirt, and fitted like a glove. Under one fastening was let a deep flat pocket. The dip of the belt to the front was a marked feature of this dress. That and the slope of the bolero jacket in front almost restored the long line which the blouse front showed women was so essential to grace of figure.

Spanish Women Expert Fencers.

Spanish and French women of the higher class are usually expert swordswomen. They are taught to fence as carefully and accurately as their brothers, and there are numerous schools in the two countries where young women are taught not only to fence but to handle the broadsword. It is considered one of the best possible forms of athletic exercise.

Pluck.

A remarkable act of pluck and bravery on the part of one of the gentler sex was displayed at Wissahickon station, on the Reading Railway. A bevy of young ladies, who were out on a chestnutting picnic from West Philadelphia, were waiting for a trolley car to convey them to Norristown. A man much the worse for liquor came walking along the station platform and just as a train was approaching attempted to cross the tracks. One of the young ladies saw his danger and quicker than a flash she jumped on the track, seized the unfortunate man by the nape of the neck and threw him out of harm's way. The next moment the train rushed past. All the girls and the rescued victim got aboard the trolley car, and before they reached Roxborough the man sobered up sufficiently to realize the peril he had been in, and to show his gratitude offered to marry the girl at sight. She, however, declined on the plea that it was the first offer she had ever had.—Philadelphia Record.

Marriage and Longevity.

Dr. Schwartz, of Berlin, after protracted study, has come to the conclusion that marriage is the factor in human life most conducive to longevity, as of 200 persons who attained the age of 40 125 were married and 75 single. At 60 the proportions were 48 to 22; at 70, 27 to 11, and at 90, 9 to 3. Among fifty centenarians not one bachelor or spinster could be found, nor, for the matter of that, one married couple, all these venerable individuals being widows or widowers. It may be urged that these statistics only prove the numerical superiority of married folk, but Dr. Schwartz declares the rate of mortality for husbands and wives between the ages of 30 and 45 to be 18 per cent., whereas unwedded persons perish at the rate of 23 per cent. "Marry early and marry often" appears to be the worthy doctor's advice to all who desire a long, if not a happy, life.

TO MRS. PINKHAM

From Mrs. Walter E. Budd, of Patchogue, New York.

Mrs. Budd, in the following letter, tells a familiar story of weakness and suffering, and thanks Mrs. Pinkham for complete relief:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I think it is my duty to write to you and tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I feel like another woman. I had such dreadful headaches through my temples and on top of my head, that I nearly went crazy; was also troubled with chills, was very weak; my left side from my shoulders to my waist pained me terribly. I could not sleep for the pain. Plasters would help for a while, but as soon as taken off, the pain would be just as bad as ever. Doctors prescribed medicine, but it gave me no relief.

"Now I feel so well and strong, have no more headaches, and no pain in side, and it is all owing to your Compound. I cannot praise it enough. It is a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to every woman I know."

TOPICS FOR FARMERS

A DEPARTMENT PREPARED FOR OUR RURAL FRIENDS.

Feed Wheat Should Be of the Best and Thoroughly Cleaned—Fertilizers in Grain Drills—The "Razor-Back" Hog for Bacon—Farm Notes.

Cleaning Grain for Feed.

Too many farmers forget that as they sow so shall they reap. When seed time comes they use whatever is most convenient, and pay very little attention to its being properly cleaned and selected. Looking after the seed wheat first look around and see what variety has done best in your locality, and if you have not grown that variety find out where the best seed can be obtained. Get it when it has been threshed by a good machine, where grains have not been cut, and as clean as possible. It is best to procure your seed from grain that has been stacked and gone through a sweat, as it will be plumper and better in every way. Store it in a dark, dry place if you have it about the barn, and, sometime before seeding give it a thorough scouring and cleaning. See that there isn't a single grain of anything else in it. Very few fanning mills are to be found on farms these days, which is probably the reason why so much poor seed is sown all over the country. But it will pay any farmer to keep a wheat fan of modern pattern if for no other use than to clean his seed wheat. If you don't own a fan, arrange to have one for a day in order that you may have clean seed.

If you can't do better take your wheat to the nearest mill, where you can have it scoured and made perfectly clean for a very few cents a bushel. It always adds to the ready sale of a wheat crop to have it clean and nice. And if you will look around you will find that the very few farmers who have the reputation of growing nothing but pure, clean seed wheat can most always dispose of their crop at an advance over regular market rates among farmers who desire to change their seed.

Some farmers make it a rule to buy their seed wheat each season, procuring grain that has been grown upon land different in formation from their own. Thus the farmer on clay land will go to the farmer that grows wheat on sandy soil and vice versa, but whether or not there is enough in this sort of exchange to pay for the trouble, we will not stop to argue. At any rate, when seed is procured from abroad, particular attention should be paid to cleaning same, or you are likely to get some sort of weed pest on your farm that you do not care about. Have your seed particularly clean of smut. A very successful wheat grower once told us that he never had smut for the reason that he always wanted his wheat to get dead ripe before it was cut, and when he did this he never had any sign of smut in his crop. If the price of wheat is to remain low we must work up to better crops if we expect to make a profit, and begin our next crop with as perfect seed as possible.—Farmers' Guide.

Fertilizers in Grain Drills.

To very many farmers it is not merely a surprise, but almost incomprehensible, how the small amount of fertilizer, usually not over 156 to 200 pounds per acre, can produce such results as they are used to seeing. It may help farmers to arrive at just conclusions in this matter if we explain how the fertilizer works. In the first place, it usually has a small percentage of nitrogen in available form. This is just what the young plant wants. It is not a stimulant, for plants have no nerves. But to supply them with what they need is to plants much the same as a stimulus is to man. It incites the roots to spread out in every direction, and as each rootlet carries both carbonic acid gas and a small proportion of ammonia, both are powerful solvents. Thus it is that the young grain, which is thus fertilized so quickly, extends its roots into adjoining drill marks that it apparently and really injures those which have not received such abundant supplies of plant food. If any one will examine the roots of grain in drills, he will find that within ten days they have extended into the rows of the drills not fertilized, enough to dwarf the growth in the latter. Where all the drill tubes distribute fertilizer this effect is neutralized.

The New Bacon Hog.

Strange as it may seem, the "razor-back" hog is assuming considerable prominence in several sections, both North and South. It is being boomed as the coming bacon hog, and there are many who believe that the perfect bacon hog will be found in a cross of the razor-back and the Berkshire or Tamworth, of more civilized antecedents.

There has been a great change in the demand for bacon. Formerly consumers were satisfied with one streak of lean to two of fat in their bacon, but now they want it regularly striped with lean and fat, and the more lean the better. This new fashion is an imported one and comes from those who have learned how delicious Danish and Irish bacon is. American feeders have this problem before them, and until they solve it they must be content to take the lowest price for their bacon.

The razor-back makes good bacon when well fed and given unlimted opportunities to roam at large. The Berkshire is the most active of the popular breeds, and a cross of these two promises to make a great improvement in the bacon produced. It is predicted that the razor-back cross will infuse vigor and a tendency to produce muscles instead of fat, and our Southern brethren on the farm are working at the problem of producing a bacon breed with considerable enthusiasm. The Northern breeder watches this work complacently, knowing that no possible cross could make a more unpromising animal, so far as appearances go, than the pure razor-back that glides through the forests of the South with a nose so long that he seems balanced on his fore legs and an anatomy so thin that the old story of tying a knot in his tail to keep him from crawling through the fences does not seem entirely ridiculous.—Farmer's Voice.

Wet Grain in Mows.

During the rains which have lately fallen, much grain has been put in mow and stacked in much too wet a condition to keep well. While the grain itself is in not much danger, because it is surrounded by chaff, which being always dryer helps to take up its superfluous moisture, there is danger that the straw, especially where the bands enclose the bundles, will rot, and this may extend before checked all through the bundle, and may even affect the grain. It is a great deal of work to turn over a mow and relay it again, especially if this is done when the air is nearly saturated with moisture, so that exposure to it dries it out very little. The best remedy we know is to thoroughly dry some bricks or tile in an oven, and after digging down into the stack, deposit a few of these through it. A well-dried brick or tile will absorb nearly or quite its own weight in water. In other words, weigh it when you put it in and when it is taken out, and any one will be surprised at the increase in weight after a few weeks exposure to damp grain. Care is needed when threshing such grain not to put the brick or tile through the threshing machine. The remedy for damp grain is applied without this danger if brick or tile is put among grain in the bin.

Bees and Fruit.

The charges that bees pierce the skins of grapes and feed on the juices of this fruit are wholly mistaken. The bee cannot bite anything as hard and smooth as a grape skin. But there are many kinds of grapes that have the bad habit of cracking. The Concord sometimes does this, but still more often the Creveling and Hartford Prolific. This kind drops from the stem, and where the grape is joined to the stem the bee can get an entrance and suck the juices. Bees also often gather on the bruised surfaces of apples, pears and peaches which have fallen to the ground. Though the bees are very fond of these fruit juices, it is not good for them to indulge. It is mostly done because honey flowers are less plentiful at this season than they are in June and July. A field of buckwheat coming into blossom at this time will be visited by millions of bees every day wherever there are many bees kept within a mile or two. It is far better to make even buckwheat honey than to force bees to sip the juices of grapes and other fruits. They weaken the bees, giving them a diarrhea, and often this involves the loss of the swarm of bees the following winter.—Exchange.

The Country Boy.

The country bred boy has the distinct advantage over the city bred fellow in two things: His strength is greater by reason of his country birth, and he has a clearer idea of hard work. The country bred boy, as a general rule, has to struggle for his existence; he has to help on the farm, and generally it is at hard work. This gives him strength and power of endurance, while all the time he is breathing an atmosphere of pure air into his lungs. Experience prepares such a boy for hard work. The city bred boy hardly knows what hard work is, and when he meets it as a young man he cannot endure it. It is true that the country boy approaches city problems with a lesser knowledge of them than does the city bred boy. But often, as has been said, the two fundamental essentials in carving out one's way to a successful career are good health and hard work. With these a young man can accomplish almost anything he desires; without them he can do nothing.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Feeding Chickens for Eggs.

By actual experiments, I found it pays to feed my chickens twice a day, although they have the free run of the fields. Whenever I feed only once a day, my egg receipts drop off 50 per cent. I feed wheat which costs me 65 cents per 100 pounds. I have the pure Golden Wyandottes and also R. C. Brown Leghorn hens crossed by roosters of the former. They lay eggs the year round. They bug my potatoes, worm my cabbage, and, by liberal feeding, they never trouble my garden stuff. I find this cross the most profitable, all plumage alike; no black chickens, good size, quick to feather and mature, and very healthy.—G. Camerer, in Practical Farmer.

Signs of a Good Cow.

One or two signs will denote a good cow, Prof. Haecker says, as well as twenty; in a poor cow the thigh runs down straight, so there is no space between the thigh and the udder on one side and the tail on the other. One of the best ways to tell what kind of a cow you have is her temperament. A good dairy type has a sharp, spine, strongly developed nervous system and sharp hip bones. A good cow has a large, wedge-shaped stomach, for she must have a large and powerful digestive system to use up her food quickly and make the best returns for it.

For Marking Sheep.

An authority says that, to make an indelible marking ink for sheep, use shellac, 2 ounces; borax, 2 ounces; water 25 ounces; gum arabic, 2 ounces, and lamp black. Boil the borax and shellac in water until they are dissolved, and withdraw from the fire. When the solution has become cold, add water to make 25 ounces, and lamp black enough to bring the preparation to a suitable consistency. When it is to be used with a stencil, it must be made thicker than when it is applied with a brush. This formula gives a black ink; for red ink, substitute venetian red for lamp black.

Average Potato Yield.

According to the Florida Agriculturist the average price realized for Florida-grown Irish potatoes is $1.20 a bushel. This is said to be a much higher average than is obtained in any other State of the Union. South Carolina stands next with $1.05 a bushel, and Georgia third with $1 a bushel. The average yield per acre in Florida is 75 bushels; South Carolina, 65 bushels; Georgia, 52 bushels. The State of Washington has the largest average production per acre, 160 bushels, but the growers only get an average price of 28 cents a bushel.

To Destroy Ticks.

To get rid of ticks on the pasture keep the cattle away until the grass has attained height and becomes dry. Then set fire to the dry grass and burn the field over clean. Any spots not burned over should be fired again, using straw or other material. The grass for next season will not be injured by this method of destroying ticks.

Colored Preacher's Wit.

The Boston Budget says that a merchant who lives near Boston numbers among his acquaintances and friends an old colored preacher, by whom he was recently invited to make a Sunday morning call at the church over which the latter presides. The merchant, although wishing most heartily to accept the invitation and to bring his wife also, was somewhat in doubt as to the propriety of so doing. "I am afraid," he said, in explanation, "that our presence would not be wholly pleasant to your congregation." The shepherd reassured him. "Why, sah," he exclaimed, "dere's so many white folks in dat church some Sundays mah congregashun looks like a han'ful of blueberries in a bowl of milk."

HEROES OF WAR.

From the Chicago Times-Herald.

The feeling of admiration for heroes of war seems to be innate in the human heart, and is brought to the surface as the opportunity and object, for such hero worship presents itself.

Among those who proved their heroism during our Civil War was A. Schiffeneder, of 161 Sedgwick Street, Chicago. He is an Austrian by birth, came to America at the age of twenty, and soon became an American citizen. He was living at Milwaukee when the call for volunteers came, early in 1862, and he promptly enlisted in Company A, of the Twenty-sixth Wisconsin Volunteers. In the Army of the Potomac our hero saw much fighting, campaigning in the Shenandoah Valley.

He received a wound.

In the first day's fighting at the battle of Gettysburg, Schiffeneder received a wound in the right side, which afterward caused him much trouble. With a portion of his regiment he was captured and imprisoned at Bell Island and Andersonville, and afterward exchanged. He returned to his regiment, which was transferred to the army of General Sherman, and marched with him through Georgia to the sea.

In this campaign Mr. Schiffender's old wound began to trouble him and he was sent to the hospital and then home. He had also contracted catarrh of the stomach and found no relief for years.

"I happened to read an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People about a year ago," he said, "and thought that they might be good for my trouble. I concluded to try them. I bought one box and began to take them according to directions. They gave me great relief. After finishing that box I bought another, and when I had taken the pills I felt that I was cured."

A Contrast

One man, through favor or influence or interest, gains a high office in political life. Another, without any of these accessories, wins an equal place through his fitness for it, gained by long years of faithful, loyal service and gradual preparation. The former, notwithstanding his official position, has undergone no more improvement than the mineral which was dug from the earth. As he was before, so he remains. The latter has become truly elevated, for he has risen in worth; the force from within has developed his powers and fitted him for higher usefulness. One youth has been through the various stages of school and college life, he has been sent abroad for culture, and he has had done for him all that money and friends can do; yet, with all this external pushing upwards, he may not have half the true mental elevation of another who, without any advantages but what he has earned for himself, is yet a close thinker, a sincere seeker after truth, an earnest wrestler with mental difficulties, a student, not merely of books, but of men and of nature.

AMERICAN GAME PICTURES.

For Decoration of Homes.

Probably at no time in the world's history has as much attention been paid to the interior decoration of homes as at present. No home, no matter how humble, is without its handiwork that helps to beautify the apartments and make the surroundings more cheerful. The taste of the American people has kept pace with the age, and almost every day brings forth something new in the way of a picture, a draping, a piece of furniture or other form of mural decoration. One of the latest of these has been given to the world by the celebrated artist, Muville, in a series of four handsome porcelain game plaques. Not for years has anything as handsome in this line been seen. The subjects represented by these plaques are American wild ducks, American pheasants, American quail and English snipe. They are handsome paintings and are especially designed for hanging on dining room walls, though their richness and beauty entitles them to a place in the parlor of any home. These original plaques have been purchased at a cost of $50,000 by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Elastic Starch, and in order to enable their numerous customers to become possessors of these handsome works of art they have had them reproduced by a special process, in all the rich colors and beauty of the original. They are finished on heavy cardboard, pressed and embossed in the shape of a plaque and trimmed with a heavy band of gold. They measure forty inches in circumference and contain no reading matter or advertisement whatever.

Until Oct. 1 Messrs. J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co. propose to distribute these plaques free to their customers. Every purchaser of three ten-cent packages of Elastic Starch, flatiron brand, manufactured by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., is entitled to receive one of these handsome plaques free from their grocer. Old and new customers alike are entitled to the benefits of this offer. These plaques will not be sent through the mail, the only way to obtain them being from your grocer. Every grocery store in the country has Elastic Starch for sale. It is the oldest and best laundry starch on the market and is the most perfect cold process starch ever invented. It is the only starch made by men who thoroughly understand the laundry business, and the only starch that will not injure the finest fabric. It has been the standard for a quarter of a century and as an evidence of how good it is twenty-two million packages were sold last year. Ask your dealer to show you the plaques and tell you about Elastic Starch. Accept no substitute. Bear in mind that this offer holds good a short time only and should be taken advantage of without delay.

Where Fish Cannot Live.

The forms of sea life in the upper portion of the ocean waters may descend to a depth of 1,200 feet or so from the surface, but then succeeds a barren zone, which continues to within 360 feet to 300 feet from the bottom, where the deep sea creatures begin to appear.

Swallowed a Needle and Died.

A tailor accidentally swallowed a needle and died as a result of the inflammation. Little things frequently have great power, as is seen in a few doses of the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, however, has an entirely different effect. The Bitters make nervous, weak and sickly persons strong and well again.

Oldest English Business.

Probably the oldest business in England is an ancient linen drapery concern which has been in existence since 1600. Under the title of the Sign of the Crowne, the industry has been carried on in the old town of Shefford, in Bedfordshire, upward of 300 years, for more than half of which time it has been in the hands of a single family in an almost direct line. Since 1750 this ancient drapery shop has been under the control of Cator & Sons, who occupy the original building.

OUR TEACHERS

By the kindness of Mr. Harrison, the superintendent, we give the following complete list of his assistants:

High School, H. G. Brown.
Eighth year, Mrs. E. M. Richards.
Seventh year, C. R. Clark.
Sixth year, Miss Nellie Buckley.
Fifth year, north, Miss Eva Nichols.
Fifth year, south, Miss Pauline Rose.
Fourth year, Mrs. Minnie K. Henderson.
Third year, Miss Mary Baxter.
Second year, Miss Margaret Buckley.
First year, Mrs. Jennie B. Clifton.

WARD SCHOOL.

Fourth and Third year pupils, Miss Leila Baker.

Second and first year pupils, Miss Mina VanAuken.

It will be seen from this list, that our pupils and their interests will be well cared for. Auburn has good schools, a fact that has been known for several years, and it is this that secures for us such a large attendance each year, of pupils from outside the city. And as these outside pupils are generally a very desirable class, we think everything should be done by the school board to make the school attractive and profitable for them.

For Sale or Trade.

One Gramophone good as new, regular $40 outfit, at much less money. The Gramophone is three times louder than any Graphophone or Phonograph. It can not fail to please. For particulars, address this office.

Blaze at Butler.

Special to the Courier.

Butler Ind., Sept. 2, 1898—About 9 o'clock last evening the pump house of the Wabash railway was discovered to be on fire. The fire ladies were called to the scene and did all that could be done, but it was too far gone. The building was consumed but no damage was done to surrounding property. There was a considerable coal and oil in the building, and it was feared these might help start a bad fire. However the pumps started up again this morning.

ACTION NEEDED.

Not Stimulated Action, but Sustaining, Nourishing and Fixed Action as Generated by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

To be healthy, strong nervous action must be well supplied to the organs. There is no activity in the body except by and through the nerves. The heart, liver, kidneys and everything are inactive from lack of nerve power. Poisons remain in the body because there is no nerve power to expel them. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cures by its action on the nerves; it is at once food and medicine for them. It sustains and nourishes by its soothing effect; produces refreshing sleep, which enables them to recuperate. It regulates so that no waste occurs; it cures the cause, goes to the root and restores health. C. N. Pace, Roseville, Ohio, tells in the following words what it did for him:

"I was prostrated about a year ago and kept growing worse under treatment of my physician until I could not sleep or hold a small object safely. I was reduced to 110 pounds and to a state of absolute hopelessness. I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Improvement was noticable from first dose, was able to sleep, regained muscular control, nervousness abated; I continued to improve, and from the use of seven bottles I am today in perfect health, weighing 152 pounds, a gain of 42 pounds in a few weeks."

When his nerves were restored to healthy action, his food made good, rich blood; the blood made flesh, strength and health.

A Drive Through Michigan.

On August 14 we drove to the Michigan line and remained over night with friends. On the morning of the 15th we started on the long haul of our journey in a steady down-pour of rain, which proved a great advantage in making the sand roads easy to travel. We reached Coldwater at 9 a. m. and spent a short time looking around one of the neatest little cities in the southern part of the state. We noticed a fair crop of apples and a few peaches, while all other crops have been very good. We stopped for dinner in a beautiful grove by a school house a few miles north of Tekonsha. We reached Marshall, another beautiful town, at 2 o'clock, and Belleview, another very nice town, at 4 o'clock, and our destination for the day, near Nashville, at 6:30, having covered fully seventy miles. A warm welcome and a good supper restored us to usual equanimity. Our ride for the day was a very pleasant one. One the 17th we visited about Nashville, and drove to Hastings, the county seat of Barry Co., over a fairly good road. They have a very fine court house and many fine residences and business blocks, but some poor tumbled down buildings on the main streets. Its principal industry is that of felt boots. Ringling Brothers' circus was there and the town was filled to overflowing. On Wednesday we drove to Charlotte, which is said to be the prettiest town in Michigan, and took cars to Lansing and Liangsburg; then a buggy again to friends in the country. Night had nearly overtaken us, and we narrowly escaped a wreck in a broken bridge. Our short stay at these places was very pleasant, and on Thursday morning we drove southeast six miles to Shaftsburg and thence back to Lansing and Charlotte, and onward to Nashville. Friday morning we started to the coast of Lake Michigan. Our route lay through Hastings, 12 miles Bowen's Mills, 13 miles; Wayland, eight miles, to Hilliards, 4½ miles. Owing to the numerous lakes the distance from point to point is greatly augmented, and the deep sand and hills did not diminish the long Michigan miles. Near Bowen's Mills we struck a beautiful country that continued across Allegan county to Allegan. We finished our day's journey at Mrs. Malinda Packer's, after whom part of Butler was named, about 2 p. m., and had a delightful visit with her and her five sons for the balance of the day and night. Time had dealt kindly with them all. Mrs. P., though 75 years old, has most of her old sprightliness left, and converses very intelligently about old times. She and her sons are all comfortably located on as good land as this favored state possesses. We cast about us for a route across the desert lying east of and near the shore of Lake Michigan, and stretching north and south for a hundred miles. We decided to try the Allegan route, and found a splendid road to the city of Allegan. From this point we took the state road which spans the plains and reaches the lake near Glenn. We were soon floundering in loose white sand into which our house would sink several inches at every step, and the buggy drag like a log across a plowed field. We soon saw the last house disappear among the grubs and pine stubs, and proceeded to find our way through about ten miles of uninhabitable country. The sun shone bright, and by consulting my watch I was enabled to keep a westerly course, though the roads wound around in nearly all directions. Noon found us still wandering in this desert. Our lonely dinner was discussed under the friendly boughs of oaks and pine grubs. There is a stream called Black Creek that flows through the middle of the desert, down whose steep sandy banks we flounder and cross on a rude bridge and find water for our horse.

With much difficulty we climbed the loose steep bank on the west side and are soon lost in the maze of grubs and stumps. After five hours of the hardest toil I ever had in this country, daylight glimmers on the border of the desert and we reach the little sand girt town of Pearl, on an oasis in swamp and plain, and imagine our toils are over. Hills are visible in the distance and we trudge on only to find we had to pass through King Dodd's peppermint domain. A strong odor of peppermint soon fills the air, and we are dragging our way across a muck swamp many miles in extent, with pepperment fields as far as we can see. We reach his headquarters in the swamp where his enormous buildings have been erected, and see a small army of workers cutting, curing, hauling and distilling the mint. Telegraph and telephone wires connect him with the outside world. His fields cover thousands of acres, and he is the largest producer of this article in the world. Two hours more hard pulling through the loose muck and we reached the belt of hard soil that is found just east of the lake. After reaching a moderate elevation we find ourselves in the far famed peach belt of Allegan county. Orchards after orchards of peaches are in sight, and soon trees loaded with ripe red peaches are seen on each side of the road with nothing between them and ourselves but a few feet of empty air. Could we be blamed for sampling them? We reached our friends on the lake shore road about 4 p. m. in excellent condition except a tired horse. Letters and papers from home were eagerly read that had been awaiting our arrival. We spent Sabbath with friends at the lake, and in a walk through orchards of apples, peaches, plums and pears. The extent and quantity seems inexhaustable, yet the crop is a very small one, perhaps one-third of a crop, at which the growers are all rejoicing, as a small crop means but moderate labor in gathering and more money for the fruit sold than for the large crops and low prices. Monday we paid a brief visit to Bald Head Park, at Saugatuck. This is a strange freak of nature which I fully described in a letter published a few years ago. It is a sand mound hundreds of years old, spreading over nearly a square mile of area, and rising to a height of about two-hundred feet. The east and north sides are very precipitous, the slope being about 70 degrees. Loose sand drifts in from the lake, carried by the wind and gradually buries everything in its course. Great pine trees are buried until only a little of the tops are visible. An inclined stairway leads up the steep side of the hill. We ascended 224 steps only to find our further progress stopped by layers of sand that completely covered the remaining part of the stairway. We looked longingly upward toward its glittering sandy top, but could get no further up to get the magnificent view its summit commands—where the steamboat ascending the Kalamazoo river looks like a great white bird walking across green fields, and the roads stretch out like a birds-eye view of a city, and trains of cars six miles distant look like huge snakes as they seem to crawl across the fields. Wednesday morning we started on our return trip, reaching Kendall, distant about 40 miles, at 2 p. m., after one of the sandiest and dustiest trips I ever endured. Sand and dust were everywhere. A day and a half of rest and Thursday finds us on our return trip, passing Kalamzoo, Vicksburg, Colon and Bronson, reaching Orland about 8 p. m. after a drive of 75 miles. A rest over of a half day and another call and we reached home Saturday morning. Our trip was most delightful. Our drive was 378 miles in fourteen days.

An Indiana Prodigy.

Special to the Courier

BUTLER, IND., Aug. 30, 1898:—Perhaps one of the most interesting musicial and literary programs given to Butler people in years was presented at the Church of Christ last night to a large and most appreciative audience. The entire program of full twelve numbers was executed by Miss Nona McCormic, of Indianapolis, a mere child of twelve years, of whom it may be truly said, that nature has endowed her with a genius, and that genius musical. She has a voice rich, clear and deep, the volume of which varies through a wide compass of tone and power—now ringing like a bell and in a second trilling like a bird. Hard indeed, was it to tell which selection was the best. When she sang "Asleep at the Switch," one thought that was the best, and when she sang "I Don't Care if You Neber Come Back," the same thought came for that. So it was all through the program. But she touched the tenderest chord in the Hoosier breast, when she sang James Whitcomb Riley's "On the Banks of the Wabash." This song is particularly suited to Miss McCormick's voice, and it is said she has given it popularity in her native city. As a pianist, this little lady won her way to the hearts of all who enjoy the classical in music and art, and it is with a sense of pride that Indiana claims her for its own child prima donna and musician. She came with Evangelist Chas. Reign Scoville to assist in the annual meeting of the Church of Christ held here last Sunday.

Congressman Botkin's Statement

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 1, 1898.
Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.

MY DEAR DOCTOR:—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines:

HON. J. D. BOTKIN,
Congressman-at-Large from Kansas.

Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have been afflicted, more or less, for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation; a residence in Washington has increased these troubles.

A few bottles of your medicines have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of their use will effect a permanent cure.

Pe-ru-na is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections.

J. D. BOTKIN.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

The following letter from Mrs. R. Blum to Mrs Barns will be read with interest here:

ARROYO GRANDE, CAL., San Luis Obispo Co., Aug. 21, 1898.

Mrs. J. A. BARNS,

Dear Friend:—This pleasant afternoon I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know how we are getting along. I remember when I left you at Omaha, I promised I would do so. After leaving you on Thursday we reached our destination on Monday evening. We were very tired as we were one day and night crossing the sand desert in Nevada. It was so hot and the wind blew the sand so we could not have the windows raised, and the sun beat in so hot we almost suffocated. Mr. Blum was very tired but stood the trip much better than I expected he would. He has gained so much in strength, but the condition of his throat is about the same. The climate here does not agree with him, it is so damp and cool. We are only six miles from the coast, the fog comes in about 6 p. m. and does not raise until 9 or 10 a. m., during that time it is very cool and damp, sometimes it is like fine rain, then about 10 a. m. the sun shines and seems warm, but no time unless the sun is very hot can you sit in the shade. The wind is so cool being so near the coast. Our summer wear was out of date, as they wear flannels and very heavy cotton goods here. We spent one day at the beach, took our dinners with us. We brought home some clams and had clam soup for supper. We get such fine fruit here, plums, prunes, cherries, pears, grapes, peaches, such nice large yellow ones, called the orange peach, all sold by the pound. Those named from 1c to 1½cts a pound. Blackberries and raspberries 5c a lb., potatoes 1c a lb. They don't use the pennies, nothing less than 5cts., and instead of saying shillings, they say "bits". The country here is hills and valleys.

This is a very dry summer, not having the usual amount of rain last winter. It is so dusty, and vegatation is so poor. The rains will set in about October and during November the rest of the year they depend on fog and irrigation for moisture. Will has 20 acres here, but the climate does not agree with him. It is too damp. He took cold while irrigating, that caused his sickness. He has sold his place since we are here, just a few days ago, and he and Mr. Blum are away now hunting a location. Will's wife and I are still farming until they send for us. He needs the same kind of climate as Mr. Blum does, and they have started out to find one to suit their cases. The children have been so well. I have not heard from Auburn since I left. I wish you would write me the news, I get very lonesome and a letter from home would be very acceptable. I was so glad to get to enjoy a visit with your mother and sister at Omaha. How lucky to find you all there together, we enjoyed the day so much. I shall ever remember the day spent with Mrs Gorden with pleasure. I wrote to Bertha telling her of my visit with Lizzie and finding you and your mother there. Well I will close this letter hoping this may find you all enjoying the best of health, and also to hear from you soon. Soon as we locate I will write you again. I send you a wild rose I gathered from one of the hills on brother's place. The flowers in this part are beautiful.

My regards to all inquiring friends and the same to you. I remain as ever your friend,

ROSE BLUM.

ECHOES OF THE WAR

The 157th started from Fernandina, on Tuesday evening. They ought to be in Indianapolis this evening. But as arrangements are being made to quarter them in the city or in the parks, it is hard to say when they will get home. It now looks as if they will not be here before the first part of the week.

Gen. Garcia second in command in the Cuban insurgent army, has been relieved of command, as the disagreement he had with Gen. Shafter makes it wise to let some one else take his place.

Spain is in doubt as to just what she wants. She is having too many statesmen just now, each of whom thinks he knows more than all the rest. Even Weyler thinks he could govern Spain ever so easy. He even thinks he governed Cuba well.

THIS WEEK

At the Opera House all week, the Gibneys, who will occupy the boards during the entire week. The opening play will be the rural comedy-drama entitled, "Angie, The Country Girl." The repertory for the remainder of the week includes, "Life for Life," "A Soldier and "Life in New York," The company carries a number of vaudeville artists who will entertain between the acts.

Writing at Home.

Wanted:—A limited number of persons to do writing at their homes. Twenty-five cents paid for every hundred words. Promptness and good work necessary. Applications must be accompanied by ten cents for particulars. Address: The Sioux City Business College, Sioux City, Iowa.

CORUNNA.

Rev. Kemp and wife are expected home this week from their western visit.

Mrs. S. B. Brant and children are enjoying a visit at Millersburg.

Mrs. Geo. Crane and son of Wawaka, visited relatives here last week.

O. P. Raber and wife spent Thursday in Kendallville.

Miss Delia Kiplinger, of Waterloo, and Miss Maude Link, of Auburn spent Sunday with Maude Raber.

Miss Agnes Daily and Miss Ona Finch spent Friday in Auburn.

Ira Weimer has been under the doctors care for a few days.

W. J. Thomas and wife were the guests of Auburn friends Sunday.

John Dunfee who has been in Uncle Sam's service with company I, at Fernandina, Fla., is home on a thirty days furlough, and is suffering from typhoid fever.

Jesse Shook has moved his family to Auburn. They will be greatly missed by their many friends.

Mr. John Oats was the guest of his parents at Hamilton Sunday.

A little stranger has taken up his abode with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gushwa since Sunday, Aug. 28.

The following persons from this place took the excursion to Chicago last Sunday were, Mr. and Mrs. George Stamets, Mr. and Mrs. James DeLong, Levi Treesh, Doll Knepper and Miss Edna Becker.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wallace, of Hudson, called on friends at this place Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Knauer and children were the guests of Mrs. K's. mother at Avilla Sunday

The farm residence belonging to James Finch came very near being destroyed by fire Monday noon, it was first discovered by seeing smoke issuing from the upper windows, the fire was located in a corner of a room but how it got started is a mystery as no one had been in since morning. It was promptly extinguished and not much damage was done.

A hay rack party consisting of the L. A. S. of the M. E. church was entertained at the country home of Mrs. Buchanan, ice cream, cake and fruit were served. A jolly time is reported by all.

BEAUTIFUL HOME WEDDING

At The Residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKay.

From the Ohio Gazett Sept. 1

On west High street, occurred last evening at 8 oclock, when their only daughter, Miss Ethel, was united in holy wedlock to Shirley N. Longsworth, of this city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. J. Thomson, with the simple and beautiful service of the Presbyterian church.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of China silk with lace trimmings. The groom was attired in black.

After receiving the hearty congratulations and best wishes of their friends, all sat down to a delicious wedding supper. There were in attendance only the immediate relatives and a few close friends.

The following persons from outside of the city were present. Dr. Wm. N. Longsworth and Miss Katie Longsworth of Convoy; Miss Emma Jones, of VanWert; Mrs. P. M, Edson, of Alleghany, N. Y. and Mr. R. F. Longsworth, of St. Marys.

The bride is an accomplished young lady with decided musical ability, who has a host of friends. The groom is an exemplary young man in the employ of the Ohio Oil Co.

The Gazette joins with their many friends in wishing them the best of good things in life.

Beats the Klondike.

Mr. A. C. Thomas, of Marysville, Texas., has found a more valuable discovery than has yet been made in the Klondike. For years he suffered untold agony from consumption, accompanied by hemorrhages; and was absolutely cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. He declares that gold is of little value in comparison with this marvelous cure; would have it even if it cost a hundred dollars a bottle. Asthma, Bronchitis and all all throat and lung affections are positively cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Regular size 50 cts. and $1.00. Guaranteed to cure or price refunded. 2

This distribution will cost us thousands of dollars—and make us thousands of friends. Each spoon is of a different design—four U. S. Battleships, including the Maine, Soldiers in Camp in Cuba, and Morro Castle. These spoons are not the cheap kind advertised extensively at $1 to $1.50 a set. They are warranted best coin silver plate on a base of pure nickel silver (not low grade brass). They will wear for years and become a priceless heirloom for future generations. Send for a copy of our catalogue to-day. You should enclose a stamp or two two help pay postage. QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., 357 W. Harrison St, Chicago.

Wednesday's Daily.

—C. W. Miller of Ashley, was in town yesterday. He is a cousin to Cory Shugers, but was here on business matters.

—Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mills in East Auburn, have a fine boy baby left there by the storks, last evening as reported by Dr. Baxter.

—Frank Rush's hands are still very sore, and are burned so badly inside that it may interfere with the free use of them more or less.

—Mrs Rolap and grand daughter Engelie Baltes, and Rosy Reniman returned to their home at Fort Wayne this morning after spending a few days with J. B. Rolap.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—Ora May, got a piece of iron in his eye Monday, while at work. The piece flew in such a way as to cut through the eyelid, but did not injure the ball. Still it is causing some trouble. He was up again today to have Dr Baxter dress it.

—L. Bowers was out at his farm in Richland township yesterday. This is the old J. M. Goetschius farm, always a good one but still getting better, as continued drainage has made the low grounds the best of all. His crops this year are excellent and corn cutting has already begun. His son-in-law, Cyrus Olinger is working the place.

—James Simon started today for Springfield, Ohio, where he will begin his second year's attendance at Wittenberg which is located there. This excellent institution is under charge of the Lutheran church, and has done a great deal of good. It was there that the Gardner boys of Fairfield were educated. Mr. Simon is a worthy young man, and we look to hear a good report from him. He has our best wishes.

Thursday's Daily.

—Mrs. Milo Calkins, of Warsaw is in the city visiting Mrs. Frank Borst.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. H. B. McCord.

—After the members of the A. O. U. W. had concluded their exercises last night, they were invited by Peter Lochner to remain and partake of a feast of muskmelons. They all staid all ate, and all pronounced Bro. Lochner's melon delicious.

—Wm Sheffer was married yesterday at 4 p. m. to Miss Myra Sidell. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride four miles west of Auburn by Rev. J. D. Brosy. The happy couple will occupy Mr. Sheffer's pleasant home on North Main-st. The COURIER joins in congratulations.

—John Ketel came near having a serious accident with his ice wagon last evening. He was driving along near Garrett's grocery, when, the reach of the wagon having been broken, the fore end of the box slid down. Mr. Ketel held himself in somehow, and held onto the team as the box slid against them and others caught the horses by the head till he could get down. As it happened no one was hurt and no damage done.

—The railroads are offering a low rate to Indianapolis during the State fair week, and the program issued by the managers of the fair indicate that all who attend will be highly entertained. Many new attractions will be exhibited and the stock show will be the best ever made in state. This has been a prosperous year for the farmers and many will doubtless take the opportunity to visit the capital city. Fair is held Sept. 12 to 17.

Friday's Daily.

—Mrs. Rebecca Dickison is again as prompt as usual in paying up her subscription to the COURIER. She has been a constant reader many years.

—Dr. Nusbaum has moved into his former residence on South Main-st, and his patrons will hereafter find him at his home there or at his office as usual. All please note this change of location.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. H. B. McCord.

—W. H. McIntosh has just completed a solid new wooden walk along the entire south face of his residence grounds. It is the longest single line of walk built by any one man for several years. It is a good job.

—It will be interesting news to all our readers, old and young, that Miss Ethel McKay was married at the home of her parents in Lima, Ohio, on Wednesday of this week, Aug. 31. The fortunate man is Mr. Shirley N. Longsworth of that city, and the announcements read. "At home at 1149, W. High street." The editor and his wife, as well as many other friends, send congratulations and an abundance of good wishes. We have known Ethel from childhood and hope her future may be one of sunshine and happiness.

Echoes of the War.

Before the war the limit of the regular army was fixed at 25,000 men. Now it is at 61,000. In order to keep this up and fill all the regular regiments to the highest an opportunity will be given to all soldiers of the volunteer regiments that are to be mustered out, to enlist into the regular army. Recruiting officers are to be stationed at each point where a regiment is to be mustered out. It is well known that many of the younger men are anxious to continue in the service.

On Hoosier Soil.

The several trains bearing the 157th Indiana volunteers reached Indianapolis this morning one after another, the train with their baggage etc., having reached the Belt Line at the city limits at one o'clock in the night. It does not appear that Indianapolis had made much provisions for their entertainment, not having even decided whether to send them back to Camp Mount at the fair ground, or to Fairview Park, or to an unoccupied grove on White river, belonging to Mayor Taggart. What's the matter with Indianapolis? She seems to have forgotten about the recent Spanish war. The boys should be furloughed at once and allowed to come home. Later accounts indicate that the fair grounds will be their camping place, locating them at the north end, and they may be kept there a week or more.

MIDDLE OF THE ROAD.

Boys are born populists. They show this at every returning visit of a show or the marching of a band. They take the middle of the road. They can't help it. Probably they don't know it. But they do it. As we write this, hundreds of lads of all ages and and sizes are trooping wildly behind the several band wagons. There they go with hasty steps, looking neither to right nor left, not conscious that they are in the middle of the road and not caring either. Like the boys who followed the "Blind Piper of Hamelin" to their destruction, they see nothing but the band ahead, hear nothing but the entrancing music, care nothing not even for the good natured jeers from the sidewalk. Did any of us old fellows ever do such foolish things. Don't ask us. We have poor memories or very convenient ones. People are boys and girls but once, though every period of life has its enjoyments. Let boys be boys and girls be girls, all in an innocent way.

Wilkins is Here

Last year "George" was in Auburn, This year a fat boy—one fat enough to kill, is on George's ground, but the chief attraction this year is "Wilkins." August 18, we gave a brief sketch of "Wilkin's of Antwerp." He had been posing at the great Bishop & Lackey store, as a regular wax works, and was wonderfully. successful. He is with us once again. Beginning in the morning a fine looking "wax figger" in the window drew a crowd. A military scit of rather ancient pattern hung on a slender figure in just the way it would on a wax figure and the face and mustache and been fixed up to suit the general idea. And how natural were the motions! The eyes would turn, and roll and look down and even the head moved. Crowds gathered and watched, and discussed. There was "a division among them" as to whether it was a man or one of Artemas Ward's celebrated "waxworks," It must have been vary tiresome work for the man. After a while, he got up and walked off. Still there are those who have their doubts.

A CLEVER TRICK

It certainly looks like it, but there is really no trick about it. Anybody can try it who has Lame Back and Weak Kidneys, Malaria or nervous troubles. We mean he can cure himself right away by taking Electric Bitters. This medicine tones up the whole system, acts as a stimulant to Liver and Kidneys, is a blood purifier and nerve tonic. It cures Constipation, Headache, Fainting Spells, Sleep essness and Melancholy. It is purely vegetable, a mild laxative and restores the system to its natural vigor. Try Electric Bitters and and be convinced that they are a miracle worker. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cent bottle at H. B. McCord's Drugstore. 3

Political Changes.

C. M. Phillips, of Waterloo, has been appointed attorney for the county board of commissiones, but we believe only for the first quarter, and then the matter will be made permanent for some one. The choice, as far as we have heard, is satisfactory. There has been no fault found with his predecessor, Mr. Rose, as far as we have heard. It was, as in the case of the court reporter, merely a matter of politics. Judge Roby has appointed a man from Angola, as court reporter, in place of Geo. Henderson. Mr. Henderson's ability we have never heard questioned. It is merely another case of politics. So wags the world.

OUR CHURCH FLAG.

There is one flag afloat before which the Stars and Stripes are lowered year in and year out, and that with the cordial content of our naval officers and men.

It is a banner with a white Greek cross on a blue field, and every Sunday weather and other circumstances permitting, it floats proudly over Old Glory at the mizzen peak of our larger warships. It is the flag of the Church and when it is flying men are at worship in a place made strange and impressive by unusual surroundings.—From "The Church in the Navy," in Demorest's Magazine for September.

THE PARADE.

It was the largest and grandest ever seen in Auburn, and by far better than anything Barnum or Barnum & Bailey ever showed anywhere. Such a number of fine horses never appeared in a parade here before. There were twenty to one rig. If the show compares with the parade it will be by far the best ever seen here.

Sugar Beets.

The Sugar Beet Association of the Kankakee Valley has a meeting at North Judson, on Tuesday, Sept. 20, to discuss methods of advancing the interests of that industry. One thing they propose to do that is wrong, they propose to ask the government to give them a bounty. No industry has a right to ask for a law that will compel all other industries to contribute money for its support. If it cannot be made to pay it should not be attempted. Let it stand or fall on its own merits, just as wheat, corn, potatoes and other farm products must, for if we give a bounty to beet raising, we must give one to wheat, corn, etc. Let our infant industries cease to be babies. The facts are, that beet sugar making, if started with proper capital, will pay better than wheat or corn. It is the same old plan of helping "infant industries" till they get so rich they form trusts and ride rough shod over the people. Let these infant industries feed themselves, as other industries have done.

RIGHT IN IT.

That's where Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is. The greatest remedy for the stomach that was ever put together. Absolutely vegtable with the exception of the Pepsin. Are you constipated? Then try Syrup Pepsin. Have you indigestion or sick headache? Then use Syrup Pepsin. Spend 10c for a trial bottle and you will be convinced. Large sizes 50c and $1 00. A true family remedy. At F. E. Davenports.

THE PATROL WAGON.

Just about 11 this forenoon the patrol wagon with half a dozen blue coated policemen rattled north up Main-st. to the show ground, and quelled a riot going on there. They had hardly got back when an alarm was sent in for east Seventh, and the wagon rushed back to that point, chased a pickpocket up the stairway and captured him. He had been trying to rob Mr. Stoner, Hovey Hanna and others. And still the blue coats are flying over town, for pickpockets are everywhere.

Veteran Murdered

South Bend Times

William Blocher Stoll, only brother of the editor of this paper, was murdered near his residence, at Muncie, last Saturday night. No satisfactory clue to the foul deed had been found up to Monday night. Deceased was a peaceable, inoffensive, unassuming and unpretentious citizen, and was not known to have had an enemy in the town. He was 53 years of age, and leaves a family consisting of wife and three children. His remains were buried at the Muncie cemetery Monday afternoon. He served in the war for the Union as a member of Co. F. 127th Reg't Pennsylvania Volunteers, was in the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13 and 15, 1862, and though wounded in that terrific engagement, and dependent on his daily labor for an income, he never applied for a pension, and never joined an army post nor any other organization He has been a resident of Muncie for about 11 years.

MILLIONS GIVEN AWAY

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord Druggist, and get a trial bottle free. Regular size 50 cents and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded. 3

The Electric Fountain

After the close of the living pictures last night, which were much finer than Wednesday night and even better than last year, the electric foundtain began to play. It was many times better than last year, and the loveliest sight, as far as far as it went, of the great Carnival Those who went home so early missed the great event of their lives. It was simply wonderful, And we wish right now to give full credit to Alt. Moody the electrician and Rus Guilford the plummer, who gave us an hour of the most complete enjoyment.

Carnival Notes.

As the special friend of the Carnival and its interests, the COURIER keeps its readers posted on the events that happen while they are too busy at home or in business to see them. Read also the program in the DAILY COURIER.

This morning, soon after day light, people began to come in by the wagon load, and before nine o'clock there was as many in town as there was yesterday. Some had come fifteen or twenty miles through the sharp morning air.

The early special from Fort Wayne, brought a load, 95 tickets sold, being reported from there.

Paul Wooten, now of North Manchester, is here. Paul is growing to to be a fine looking young man.

Hoffman the "Foto" man got out bright and early this morning and in the gray dawn took a picture of Dr. Swarts' office and residence. It will be a nice view.

Bootblacks are in evidence everywhere and if the town don't shine it will be no fault of theirs.

Roy VanAuken and the Greenbergs, father and son had a little scrap at the north side of the public square last night. But our ample police regulations nipped it in the bud, or soon after it had budded.

In response to several anxious inquiries, we would say, the fat man near the Bazar corner, weighs 540 pounds. He ranks as one of the most substantial citizens in some little town.

Reader, did you ever try to edit a paper, with a big crowd surging outside and about 'steen happy young people chattering in groups all through the office? Oh! well, let them enjoy themselves. This is Carnival week, and no one expects a very good paper even from the COURIER office.

The Last Day.

The Carnival ended last evening with the big combined parade, and the closing scenes of the electric fountain, the search light and living pictures. The combined parade was the loveliest that even Auburn ever had—made lovelier by the colored lights burned all along the way, and in the censers fixed in many of the floats. It is true the flowers did not show as well, at least not in their loveliest hues, but in their general effect they were as gorgeous as in the day time. The other displays, including floats of all sorts, showed off to marked advantage. We were not familiar enough with the list to tell whether all of both the other parades were present in this, but presume they were. And we feel like repeating the compliments we gave to the various societies and individuals who were in the other parades, and especially to the ladies who made such beautiful displays at such a sacrifice of time, thought and labor. They were themselves the loveliest part of the display they had made for the Auburn Carnival.

The Carnival has compared well with that of last year. In most ways it has been much better. The little flurry caused by Pain's bad management of the fireworks did much to keep people away the last day, for people are sometimes thoughtless about such things. They placed the blame on the society, when it was all the fault of Pain. At the worst, it resulted in nothing more serious than a delay, and then we had a show of the best sort, and all free. Yet this little incident made as much talk as all the good things we gave for nothing. It is not quite doing us justice But those who were patient and staid to see the grand display went home satisfied Of course the managers may have made some mistakes of a minor character, but altogether they deserve great credit for the ability with which they carried out their difficult trust.

The Old Thirtieth.

The old Thirtieth Indiana veterans have their reunion at North Webster, in Kosciusko county, Sept. 28. This is the one that J. W. McKay, Phil. Noel, J N. Ohlwine, Capt. Braden and many others we do not just now recall, belonged to. It might be said in passing that the famous Gen Henry W. Lawton, now in command at Santiago, was their colonel when they were mustered out at the close of the rebellion. The Thirtieth has no reason to be ashamed of its make up or its record. It should also be noted that an attempt is being made to unite the old Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth hereafter, as the numbers are getting pretty small to hold each a reunion alone. It looks like a good plan but there is a shade of sadness over the reason for it. The veterans are passing away.

FIRST BOY HOME

Will Clark gave the writer a big smile as he came up the street about 8 o'clock last evening. He had just come in and was looking for familar faces he grabbed the hand belonging to the first familiar face he saw and we had a short but animated talk. Will's regiment is the 20th regulars, and they were in the hottest of the fight in the hard work of charging up the fortified hills around Santiago. Will says the experience was a terrible one, but they had set out to take that hill and they took it before they quit, though they lost heavily. Will says the excitement of climbing a steep hill in the face of deadly fire, and having to stop every little ways to cut fences of barbed wire was so great he seldom thought of the danger, till now and then he had to step over the bocy of a dead or wounded comrade. Then it was all brought back to him with a terrible reality. He had a touch of yellow fever afterwards, and later was moved with the rest of the troops to Montauk Point, Long Island, and then when he was sufficiently recovered, he was given a sick leave to come home. He looks thin, but we believe the air of old Indiana and the care of his people here will do more to fix him up in shape then all the doctors in the army. We hope so.

A RISKY FALL.

Last evening J. W. Smith came down town after the parade to take home his wife and her baby and his wife's mother, who had been down town viewing the parade. They started home, sitting on one seat, the wife with the baby sitting on the near side, her mother on the off side and Mr. Smith in the middle. This crowded them a little, but they were all right as long as they were in the smooth street. But just as they came to the depression made by taking up the crossing at the intersection of Main and Fifth-sts. the wagon dropped into the sunken part suddenly and the horses stopped as suddenly and Mrs. Smith lost her balance and fell out dropping to the hard street just ahead of the hind wheel. She kept hold of the baby with a desperate grip and screamed. But Mr. Smith held the team so the wheel did not go over her. Joe Rainier who was passing helped the frightened lady up and with the help of Mr. Smith she was supported till she could get control of herself, for she was nearly frightened into hysterics. However, in a short time, she regained self-control and was helped back into the buggy and taken home. The child though frightened, was not hurt, but it was a narrow escape for both

JANE HAGENBAUGH.

Jane Hagenbaugh was born in Naples, New York October 10th 1835. and departed this life at the home of her daughter Mrs. Hendrickson on North VanBuren-St., Sept. 6th, 1898 at the ripe age of 62 years, 11 months and 10 days. Mrs. Hagenbaugh was a great sufferer from Paralysis and dropsy for a long time, but during all her suffering she was patient She leaves to mourn her death, two daughters, one sister and one brother. She looked up to Christ for eternal salvation. Kind friends and willing hands ministered unto her wants during her long sickness. A short service was conducted at the house Sept. 7, by Rev. J. D. Brosy, after which the remains was taken to Sherwood Michigan, on the noon train for interment. The funeral service will be held tomorrow at 10:00 a. m.

HELEN LUCILLE GROSCOP.

Helen Lucille Groscop was born Jan. 13th, 1898 and died Sept. 3d, 1898 her age was 7 months and 21 days. The child was formerly taken care of by Mr. and Mrs. Harley Baker, but Mrs. Baker being sickly released her charge to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Groscop who took the child about two weeks ago with the intention to adopt it when so could be done. Last Friday the child took sick with cholera infantum and died Saturday morning, and was buried Sunday afternoon. The funeral services were conducted by George Engleman, Pastor of the Reformed church.

Saw His Cousin

E. M. Bishop's big dog saw his cousin this morning, or thought he did. Ed. was holding him by the collar to let him see the animals go by in the big parade. He took an intense interest in all. But when the monster lions appeared, so near his color and so near his his size, he went wild with delight, and barked in that deep, rich bass voice he is so proud of, and pulled so hard to get away that it took all his master's muscle to restrain him. He wanted to shake hands with his cousins.

Results of American Occupation in Cuba.

American occupation of Cuba, either permanent or of sufficient length to insure the establishment of a stable and responsible government there, will yield two conditions of incalculable value to the United States. The first will be the minimizing, if not the absolute extinction, of the causes of yellow fever, by means of the sanitary agencies that have rescued Memphis, New Orleans, and other southern cities from periodic epidemics. The fever that ran its course in Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas last year was not due to original local conditions, but was brought from Cuban ports.

Plant Malformation.

A curious case of plant malformation is illustrated in La Nature. A remarkable ear of corn is shown which, through regular fission, has assumed the appearance of a human hand. The four fingers and thumb are clearly indicated, while the wrist is well defined. It is rather an unpleasant-looking object.

State Veto in Paris.

In his inaugural address Dr. Navarre, the socialist who has just been elected president of the Paris municipality, denounced the state veto on decisions of that body and the refusal to it of the autonomy enjoyed by other cities.

EMPRESS STABBED

Wife of Austria's Ruler Killed by an Assassin.

ITALIAN ANARCHIST

STABS HER MAJESTY TO THE HEART.

Geneva the Scene of the Crime—A Gasoline Explosion Creates Havoc at Philadelphia—Many Were Killed—Miscellaneous Telegraph News.

Stabbed to Death.

The Empress of Austria was assassinated at the Hotel Beaurivago, Geneva, Switzerland, Saturday, by an anarchist, who was arrested. He stabbed her Majesty with a stiletto.

It appears that her Majesty was walking from her hotel to the landing place of the steamer at about 1 o'clock when an Italian anarchist suddenly appeared and stabbed her to the heart. The Empress fell, got up again and was carried to the steamer unconscious. The boat started; but, seeing the Empress had not recovered consciousness, the captain returned and the Empress was carried to the Hotel Beaurivago, where she expired

General Clay Gets a Divorce.

Richmond (Ky.) special: Gen. Cassus M. Clay, the sage of Whitehall, has been granted a divorce from his girl wife, Dora Richardson Clay, by Judge Scott of the Madison Circuit Court.

The decree restores the defendant to her maiden name, Dora Richardson.

The suit for divorce was filed several weeks ago, and as it was not contested by the defendant every effort was made to hurry it through the courts.

No reference was made to alimony, as it was understood by the attorneys and the Court that Gen. Clay had already made ample provision for his wife by the purchase of a large and productive farm near her old home. The marriage contract which existed between them was dissolved.

Fifth Member Chosen.

The President has named Senator George Gray of Delaware, as the fifth member of the Peace Commission. This completes the personnel of the Commission, which stands:

Hon. William R. Day, Secretary of State, from Ohio.

Hon. C. K. Davis, United States Senator, from Minnesota.

Hon. William P. Frye, United States Senator, from Maine.

Hon. George Gray, United States Senator, from Delaware.

Hon. Whitelaw Reid, from New York.

Cubans in Politics.

A special from Santiago says: Major Giberga, chief of Gen. Garcia's staff, has arrived at Jiguana with the news that the Cubans of the interior are hurrying preparations for an election of delegates to the Camaguay convention, to be held October 1. The object of the convention is to decide the disposition of the army and draft a new constitution and new laws, and establish a government. Major Giberga will sail for the United States to explain Garcia's conduct to the junta.

A Daylight Robbery.

A. D. Long, a young farmer, was the victim of a hold-up in broad daylight just outside the city limits of Chillicothe, O. He had started to drive home, when a big negro climed into his wagon and demanded his money. A desperate fight followed, the negro chewing one of Long's fingers almost off before the horses ran away and upset the wagon. Long was badly injured, but his assailant escaped.

Many Lives Lost.

By the explosion of forty gallons of gasoline in the cellar of a grocery store at Philadelphia, surely four and possibly a dozen more lives were lost. As an immediate consequence of the explosion, the building where it occurred and those adjoining it on either side collapsed, and four hours after the occurrence four bodies had been recovered from the ruins.

Jews Barred from Palestine.

The Turkish Legation at Washington issues the following statement:

"The entrance into Palestine is formally prohibited to foreign Israelites, and consequently the imperial ottoman authorities have received orders to prevent the landing of immigrants in that province."

Modern Civilization.

Victoria (B. C.) special: The Indian Department and the police are convinced that the two human sacrifices were made by Indians of the Stikine River tribe of a boy and girl accused of being witches.

Big Michigan Wheat Yield.

The Michigan crop report for September says that threshing reports show the average yield of wheat this year to be 19.64 bushels per acre, which on a basis of 1,725,148 acres of wheat in the State gives the total wheat yield of the State at 34,162,565 bushels. This is the greatest wheat yield ever reported in the State.

Memphis Blaze.

Memphis (Tenn.) special: The Memphis Grain and Elevator Company's elevator A and the Dixie Mills burned with a loss estimated at $175,000.

EASTERN.

Edward C. Smith of St. Albans was named for Governor of Vermont by the Republicans.

Frank and John Mane, 16 and 17 years old, respectively, and George Grass, 14 years old, were drowned while bathing in Lake Erie at Buffalo, N. Y. There was a heavy sea on and the boys were caught by a receding wave and carried into deep water.

Two south spans of the International bridge of the New York and Ottawa Railroad, now under construction across the St. Lawrence river, about three miles above St. Regis Indian village, fell without warning, with sixty men at work on the bridge, all being thrown into the river, some sixty feet below. Over thirty were picked up and twenty-seven are missing.

An appalling disaster occurred in Cohoes, N. Y. A trolley car of the Troy City Railroad Company was struck by the night boat special of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad at a crossing at the west end of the Hudson river bridge which connects the city with Lansingburg, and its load of human freight was hurled into the air. Eighteen of the thirty-five passengers are dead and at least ten of the remainder will die.

Fire in the Newark celluloid works and neighboring buildings at West Scott and Darcy streets, Newark, N. J., did fully $200,000 damage. Owing to the inflammable nature of the contents of the factory the blaze made an intensely hot fire. The fire started in the converting department of the big building and spread with greater rapidity than had the building been oil-soaked. Most of the surrounding buildings were three stories high, and were occupied by people working in the factory. They were rescued with difficulty and most of them lost all their household goods. Fourteen persons were injured and taken to hospitals, some of the persons being seriously burned.

WESTERN.

Elmer Gerren of Conneaut, Ohio, shot himself in the head and is dead.

The schooner Winslow sank in a heavy gale near White Shoals in the straits of Mackinaw.

At San Francisco, Cal., the expected contest of the will of Adolph Sutro has been filed. The most important allegation is that the deceased millionaire was of unsound mind May 22.

There was an exceedingly heavy frost at Gordon, Neb., the other night. Ice froze thick on standing water. Corn will be softened, while melons, garden truck and wild fruit ripening are cut short.

Private Alex La Duke, Company I, Second Wisconsin volunteers, was placed in the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., to remain for life, for the murder of Private Thomas Stafford of the Thirteenth United States infantry in a saloon row in Ponce, Porto Rico.

Two robbers traveling on bicycles are traversing Missouri. They stopped at a hotel in Sedalia, but the second night they left, carrying with them jewelry and valuables secured from the guests' rooms. They were next heard of at Olean, Mo., where they robbed a store and several farm houses.

There is a great rush at the San Francisco land office to place filings upon about 1,000,000 acres of land thrown open to settlement through the decision recently made in the overlapping land grant cases. The lands extend from Pasadena to Tehachapi Pass. Places in the line sold for big sums. People waited in line for four days.

A tornado struck South St. Joseph, Mo., the stock yards suburb, at 5:30 o'clock the other afternoon, and the damage is variously estimated at $25,000 and $50,000. Nearly every house in the town was more or less damaged. Roofs were blown off, corners were torn out and a number of buildings in course of construction were completely destroyed. The damage by water was also heavy, as the wind was followed by a perfect deluge. Much damage resulted to manufacturers and railroad shops in the south part of the city proper. Sewers were washed out and railroad washouts were numerous in all directions.

The political war between the two factions of the silver Republican party in Colorado resulted in the death of Charles Harris of Denver. It was the result of an attempt by the Broad faction to capture the opera house in Colorado Springs, which was guarded by the Sprague faction. A rush was made by seventy-five or one hundred of the Broad men from both front and rear of the building, and the Sprague men, who held possession, in repelling the attack fired a volley into their assailants. Harris fell with a bullet through the abdomen. The shooting occurred just outside the opera house door. Several arrests have been made. The man who fired the shot which struck Harris is undoubtedly in custody. Harris died soon after he was shot. Another man was struck in the cheek by the same bullet that killed Harris. Sheriff Boynton and Chief Gathright took control of the opera house and made a thorough search. The sheriff said they discovered a whole arsenal in the building. The officers seized six Winchester rifles and ten revolvers.

The members of the expedition which sailed from San Francisco on the schooner Volcan in June of last year to buy reindeer for the United States Government in Siberia, have returned. They were John W. Kelly, Conrad Siem and Alfred St. Leger. They landed on July 17 in St. Lawrence bay. The natives seemed friendly and there was every prospect of a successful mission. Dr. Sheldon Jackson came over on the Bear and remained a few days, satisfied that the object of the expedition would be attained. Their trouble began, and for a year Kelly was in imminent danger of incurring the hostility of the natives who object to any diminution of their stock of reindeer. In October, 1897, an attempt was made to shoot Siem. Then it was rumored that a Russian was coming to oust them from their station. The men, who had procured 450 deer and 250 fawns, thought it best to leave, and took passage on a whaler to Port Clarence, across the straits, on July 6 of this year. From that point they made their way to San Francisco, glad to have escaped with their lives.

SOUTHERN.

The body of Foster M. Payne, a telegraph operator for the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroad, was found in a railroad yard in Memphis, Tenn., the head having been severed from the body. It is thought the young man was murdered.

Heavy rainfalls and a cloudburst in the lower portion of Knox County, Tenn., occasioned a general flood in that section. Several streams running through Knoxville overflowed their banks, washed away lumber and coal yards and also did damage to buildings by filling cellars with water.

The Government steamboat John I. Meigs was destroyed by an explosion at St. Philip, La. She had aboard Lieut. Jervey and a party engaged in removing the torpedoes laid in the Mississippi river during the beginning of the war. Lieut. Jervey had a narrow escape. Four men were killed and two badly wounded.

Arkansas elected a full set of State officers, 100 members of the lower house of the Legislature, sixteen State Senators and local officers in each of the seventy-five counties and voted on the adoption of two important constitutional amendments, as well as the question of the liquor license in the different counties. The Democratic State ticket, headed by Dan W. Jones, was elected.

WASHINGTON.

A dispatch from Washington says President McKinley has consented to visit Omaha Oct. 12, during the week of the peace jubilee at the Transmississippi exposition.

Ever since the printed reports of the sensational utterances of the naval chaplain, Joseph P. McIntyre, reached the Navy Department at Washington the officials have been making a quiet inquiry into the accuracy of the newspaper publications. The chaplain, who was attached to the Oregon, and was on board when the battle of July 3 was fought, was credited with some savage criticism of Admiral Sampson, Captain Evans and various others of the officers of the American fleet, insisting that to the officers and men of the Oregon alone belonged the victory achieved over the Spanish squadron. He was particularly severe on Captain Robley D. Evans, whom he charged with cowardice. Apparently the Navy Department has now satisfied itself that the chaplain really uttered the language ascribed to him, for it has ordered his trial by court-martial on charges to the prejudice of good order and discipline and conduct upbecoming an officer. The chaplain is now on leave of absence in Denver.

FOREIGN.

Li Hung Chang has been dismissed from power. It is presumed it was done in accordance with the demand which it was rumored the British minister at Pekin, Sir Claude M. MacDonald, was instructed to make.

The London war office received the following dispatch, dated at Omdurman, from the sirdar, Gen. Sir Herbert Kitchener: "This morning the British and Egyptian flags were hoisted with due ceremony upon the walls of the sarays (the palace) in Khartoum.

The sidar, Gen. Sir Herbert Kitchener, with the khalifa's black standard, after a bloody battle, entered Omdurman, the capital of Mahdiam, opposite Khartoum, Nubia, at the head of the Anglo-Egyptian column, after completely routing the dervishes and dealing a death blow to Mahdiam.

Candia, Island of Crete, is in a state of anarchy. A collision between the Mussulmans, who were demonstrating against European control, and the British authorities, who have been installing Christians as revenue officials, culminated in bloody fighting between the Mussulmans and the British troops. Riots took place in various parts of the city and many have been killed.

War between France and Germany as a result of exposures to be made in the Dreyfus case and war between Great Britain and Russia over complications in the far east are confidently predicted by well posted politicians in Europe. Paris is excited over the disclosures following Colonel Henry's suicide and the wildest rumors are affoat. The people are demanding a retrial for the prisoner of Devil's Island and the government faces the prospect of war with the Kaiser if this is granted and the whole truth told and a revolution at home if it is refused. Officers of the French army threaten to resign and tell all they know of the Dreyfus case, and many of the highest men in military circles are implicated in the promised exposures. No order for a revision of the Dreyfus verdict can be secured until the cabinet meets, and the ministers are now scattered, apparently wishing to keep out of the way for the present. Zola, from his hiding place, has written Dreyfus' wife congratulating her.

IN GENERAL.

Indians from the far north who have reached Dauphin, Man., report that a strange man descended from the clouds on the shores of Hudson's Bay. It is believed that the man is Prof. Andre.

The United States gunboat Bennington has been ordered to Pago Pago bay, Samoa, according to Mare Island reports, to make a survey for a coaling station. Upon finishing the survey she will proceed to Manila and relieve the Concord, which will go to Mare Island and go on dry dock, the English docks not being available.

Bradstreet's says: "The advent of September finds fall trade apparently in full swing at the west and northwest and more reported doing at Southern Mississippi valley points and in the east, but the volume of business in wool and dry goods in the latter section is rather smaller than expected. Reports from the iron and steel trade are in a high degree favorable, the tonnage movement being unprecedentedly large and the tone of prices firm at the advances recently scored. The western crop situation remains practically unchanged, cash wheat being lower on a rather larger movement of spring wheat, but an active demand for export has furnished sustaining power. Corn has been ruled in surplus-producing States by the weather, which is dry and hot, with a steadying effect on prices. Distributive trade is active in the west and northwest, with dry goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, millinery, clothing and hardware in most active distribution by jobbers, and with iron and steel and most of its products in active demand and consumption by manufacturers. Wheat shipments for the week, including flour, aggregate 3,687,040 bushels, as against 3,563,476 bushels last week, 6,263,647 bushels in the corresponding week of 1897, 3,369,862 bushels in 1896, 2,260,261 bushels in 1895, and 2,207,300 bushels in 1894. Since July 1 this year the exports of wheat aggregate 29,393,592 bushels, against 32,850,246 bushels during the same period last year. Corn exports for the week aggregate 1,661,700 bushels, against 2,648,933 bushels last week, 3,185,064 bushels this week last year, 2,527,516 bushels in 1896, 1,405,370 bushels in 1895 and 127,000 bushels in 1894. Since July 1 this year exports of corn aggregate 24,539,001 bushels, against 25,533,409 bushels last year."

GRAND ARMY REUNION

NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT HELD AT CINCINNATI.

Number of People Present Is Larger than Ever—Elaborate Decoration of the City—All Things Conducive to Comfort of the Veterans.

The thirty-second annual encampment of the G. A. R. at Cincinnati was a success so far as attendance was concerned, even for those national events, which are phenomenal for crowds. The opening day surpassed expectations. The posts arrived in bodies and were escorted to their quarters by local posts. The special trains arrived faster than they could be handled at the terminals in the early hours, and the crush continued so that later trains were stopped at Camp Sherman and other suburban points, where street cars and other transportation had been provided. There were over 200,000 strangers in the city, and in the evening the sidewalks were almost impassable, while the streets were crowded with bands, drum corps and marching delegations.

There was a capacity of 15,000 in the tents of Camp Sherman, and it was well filled, as well as the smaller camps. The decorations were unusually elaborate, the electric light designs in the public squares and at street intersections surpassing even the finest structures of expositions, and the entertainment was equally lavish.

Monday was mainly devoted to the naval veterans, and in the morning the exercises in connection with the dedication of their "harbor" in horticultural hall of the exposition buildings were held. Commander in Chief Gobin came from Camp Alger via Camp Meade and had a leave of absence for six days only, so that he was compelled to get back to Camp Meade by Saturday. Gen. Gobin and staff arrived while the big Labor Day parade was in progress, and he was most enthusiastically received all along the line from the Pennsylvania depot to the Grand Hotel.

Commander-in-Chief Gobin and staff visited Camp Sherman in the afternoon, when the camp in charge of Captain Byrne was formally turned over to him. The official salute was fired upon the arrival of the commander-in-chief, after which the bands rendered concerts. Prayer was offered by Rev. David H. Moore, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, who was a colonel in the civil war; Major Joseph W. Wilshire, chairman of the committee on camps, made the presentation speech and Gen. J. P. S. Gobin responded in an eloquent address of acceptance. The ceremonies attending the raising of the flag were in charge of Captain J. B. Sampson, after which there was a concert, with other festivities.

G. A. R. PARADE PASSING GRAND TRIUMPHAL ARCH IN CINCINNATI.

In the evening the streets were densely packed with people to witness the illumination and dedication of the triumphal arches. These separate ceremonies drew the throngs to different points and thus relieved Government Square and the neighborhood of the general headquarters. The camp fire of the naval veterans known as the dog watch at Music Hall was attended by over eight thousand people. Congressman Jacob H. Bromwell presided.

The parade of Tuesday was under command of Grand Marshal M. L. Hawkins, with Lieut. Col. George M. Finch as chief of staff. The first division was composed of Union naval veterans, then the national association of ex-prisoners of war, the Union Veteran Legion, Sons of Veterans, regimental organizations and survivors of the Lopez expedition to free Cuba. It was commanded by Maj. Joseph W. Moore. Following this came the second division commanded by Maj. Joseph L. Gauland, consisting of the Eighth regiment United States volunteer infantry brigades, mostly bearing arms. The parade required an hour or more to pass a given point and was everywhere watched by crowds of deeply interested spectators. The afternoon was given over to river excursions and the evening was filled with receptions—at the Scottish Rite Cathedral to visiting ladies; at the Lincoln Club by the Ohio commandery of the Loyal Legion to visiting veterans without regard to the organization to which they belong; at the Grand Hotel by the Woman's Relief Corps and the Ladies of the G. A. R. These various social functions were patronized by uncounted thousands. Tuesday evening Music Hall was packed denser than ever for a political meeting, the occasion being the second of the camp fires, where addresses were made by many. A letter was received during the day from President McKinley, stating that public business would prevent him and Mrs. McKinley from attending the encampment.

The National Association of Ex-Prisoners of War elected the following officers:

Commander—James Atwell, Pittsburg.

Vice-Commander—John Kissane, Cincinnati.

National Chaplain—The Rev. John S. Ferguson, Keokuk, Iowa.

Historian—Louis R. Fortescue, Philadelphia.

Adjutant General and Quartermaster General—Stephen M. Long, East Orange, N. J.

Crowds See the Parade.

The annual parade of the veterans, which took place Wednesday, strung out for miles, and when the first division had finished the march the last was still waiting to get in line. Enthusiasm was never greater. The events of the past year have intensified the love in the American heart for the defenders of the nation.

Strains of martial music filled the air, and from the beginning to the end of the march the streets were densely packed with people. The enthusiastic ripple of applause which started at Central avenue swelled into a roar of patriotic cheers before the head of the column had gone half a dozen squares. Thence, to the end of the march, past the reviewing stands, through lines of windows filled with patriotic women and sidewalks crowded to the curbs, it was one grand ovation for the nation's old fighting men. It was a typical American scene. It was at the same time a welcome to the old soldiers and a peace celebration.

BARKER FOR PRESIDENT.

"Middle of the Road" Populists Nominate a Ticket for 1900.

Wharton Barker, the Philadelphia financier and editor, is the first presidential nominee in the field for 1900. In national convention at Cincinnati the anti-fusion Populists selected him as their standard-bearer, and named Ignatius Donnelly of Baconian cryptogram fame as his running mate. The naming of the ticket was preceded by riotous scenes, during which the tumult attained such threatening proportions that the manager of the Lyceum, in which the convention was held, requested the delegates to leave the hall. Order was restored only when the delegates in the Butler faction, said to be friendly to fusion and openly opposed to the plan of naming a ticket at this early day, withdrew from further participation in the convention's work.

WHARTON BARKER.
First Presidential Nominee for 1900.

The convention adopted the referendum system in its entirety, and the ticket, as a result, must be submitted to popular party vote. A resolution was adopted providing that hereafter the nominations for all offices, whether national, State, county or city, shall be made through the initiative and referendum or by petition indorsed by popular party vote. Friends of Messrs. Barker and Donnelly, however, have no fear of their rejection by the party at large when the test of popular vote is taken.

The bolters were led by Joseph Palmer of Illinois. Included in their ranks were the delegates, either in whole or in part, from Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas. They adopted an address declaring the majority had placed themselves beyond the pale of Populism and formed a new party and appealing to Populists throughout the country not to join in the movement. The address of the Barker-Donnelly faction, on the other hand, likens Chairman Butler to Benedict Arnold, champions the greenback as the ideal currency, expresses the hope that gold will soon be "relegated to the diseased teeth of the people" and points to the postal service and the public school system as "exemplifications of a beneficent State socialism."

DREYFUS TO BE RETRIED.

New Minister of War and Cabinet Agree to Revision.

It is a generally accepted fact in Paris that Captain Alfred Dreyfus will have a new trial. The Matin says that Col. Picquart has signed a demand for the provisional liberation of Dreyfus. Gen. Zurlinden, the new minister of war, is in harmony with the remainder of the cabinet and favors revision.

The cabinet has discussed the conditions under which the new trial shall take place. The prisoner will be conveyed to France on an unknown vessel, and shall be disembarked at an unexpected port and taken to Paris with absolute secrecy. Dreyfus will be confined in the military prison of Cherche Midi, and there he will be retried when nobody suspects his presence. There is a demand for a public trial, but international complications are feared.

COL. HENRY, THE FORGER.

DROP TO THEIR DEATH.

Forty Bridge Workmen Are Hurled Into the St. Lawrence.

More than eighty workmen employed in building a bridge were hurled into the St. Lawrence river by the collapse of the structure, and it is believed at least forty were drowned or crushed to death by the falling beams. Thirty-three men were taken out of the water and placed in the Cornwall hospital and eighteen of these afterward died. The others, it is feared, were swept away by the swift current and the bodies will probably never be recovered.

It was about noon when the two south spans of the international bridge of the New York and Ottawa Railroad, which is now under construction across the St. Lawrence river, about three miles above St. Regis Indian village, fell without warning. All the men at work were precipitated into the water sixty feet below. The bridge consists of three spans, of which two were completed and the third was nearly completed when the south pier gave way at its foundation, causing both spans to fall sixty feet into the water, taking their human freight with them.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

A Terre Haute Young Man Released from a Mexican Prison—Woman Charged with Trying to Murder Her Daughter-in-Law—Found Dead.

Freed from a Mexican Jail.

Mrs. R. N. Hudson of Terre Haute has received a telegram informing her of the release of her son, Morton, who had been held in a Mexican jail on a charge of murder. Several weeks ago Hudson and a companion, when riding into Mexico from their ranch in Texas, met two highwaymen and shot them. Fearing they would not get justice in a Mexican trial, they hid for a day or two, and this fact caused some feeling against them. Ex-Secretary of the Navy Thompson, W. R. McKeen, Congressman Faris and Senator Fairbanks enlisted the State Department at Washington in Hudson's behalf, and Minister Powell Clayton asked the Mexican Government to expedite the case. Hudson and his companion were well treated while in jail.

Woman Charged with Murder.

Mrs. Sarah Shankenberger was arrested at Frankfort, charged with the murder of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ed. Shankenberger. Mrs. Shankenberger died a few days ago. She made an ante-mortem statement expressing the belief that she had been systematically poisoned by her mother-in-law. The contents of her stomach were taken to Dr. Hurty of Indianapolis for analysis, and his report was that he had found arsenic in deadly quantities. Mrs. Shankenberger accepted her arrest coolly and denies guilt. The dead woman's husband is a member of the United States navy, on board the cruiser Minneapolis. He has arrived home. The accused was committed to jail without bail.

Widow in Fear of Death.

When Mrs. Norton of Terre Haute returned to her home from the funeral of her husband she found her 17-months-old child dead. When she left the house there was no indication of approaching death. At the time Norton was dying the dial on the side of the court house clock, which could be seen from the house, darkened until the time could not be read. Immediately upon his death the shadow passed away. The widow now believes there is the same fate in store for herself and is prostrated.

Found Dead Near His Home.

Thomas Stall, 53 years old, a veteran of the civil war, was found dead within fifty feet of his home in Indianapolis. He had been struck on the left temple, the blow causing concussion of the brain. The fact that his clothes and hands were free from dirt, that the ground was undisturbed and that there were no signs of a struggle suggests the theory that he was murdered elsewhere and that his body was placed near his home by the murderers.

Within Our Borders.

A $1,650 brick parsonage is being built by the Christian Church at Edinburg.

City Clerk Daniel S. Monaghan of Washington has mysteriously disappeared.

Oscar Fawber, 26, unmarried, was killed at Kokomo by a Panhandle passenger train.

Joseph Heber, a wealthy farmer of Holt township, aged 80 years, died suddenly.

Rev. T. J. Shuey, pastor of the Edinburg Christian Church, has resigned and will locate in Seattle, Wash.

The new Hotel Davis at Sullivan was opened Thursday with a reception to one hundred citizens of that city.

A strange man and woman rifled the safe of A. J. Haworth at Greentown, taking $180 cash and other valuables.

Greensburg will hold a big free street fair for six days, beginning Monday, Oct. 3.

The Newby family held its annual reunion near Cadiz Sept. 1. Representatives from every town in the county were present.

James Mills, a prominent grocer and dry goods merchant of Knightstown, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

At Anderson, Thayer Thomas, Forest Burton and Ernest Hunt, 7-year-old boys, have been arrested charged with wholesale horse stealing.

C. C. Van Pelt of Monticello, a track walker for the Monon Railroad, was run down and instantly killed at St. John. Invitations had been issued for his marriage.

William Bigler of New Albany was probably fatally wounded by Louis Kreutzer, while squirrel hunting in Franklin township. Kreutzer's gun was accidentally discharged and twenty-eight shot entered Bigler's right side. Bigler is in a critical condition.

The town of Smithville is excited over the work of a number of men who rode in on horseback and demolished the May saloon, a resort that has created much feeling in that vicinity. The doors were broken down, windows shattered and the beer and whisky distributed in every direction.

Miss Laura Winslow of Seymour, a domestic in the family of Mrs. Erwin Ross, was stricken totally blind while working about the house. She has not experienced any previous trouble with her eyes, and the blow has almost set her crazy. She has been taken to the home of her mother at Vallonia.

Webb Casto, a well-known Republican, died at Terre Haute of apoplexy. He had a quarrel with a court official. Casto accused a friend of the official of having been a traitor to W. R. McKeen at the time the latter was a candidate for United States Senator in 1896, and in the quarrel struck the official. The excitement brought on the fatal attack.

The Dealers' Distilling Company has practically closed negotiations for the erection of a distillery at Hammond to cost $1,000,000, on the site owned by Marcus M. Towle and State Senator Gostlin, whose plant was destroyed a few years ago by fire.

An excursion train on the Lake Erie and Western Railway was wrecked at Gould's cut, near Laporte. William Byers, baggageman, was dangerously hurt, Harvey Williams, engineer, seriously, and Fireman Stuart slightly injured. The passengers escaped. The damage is estimated at $15,000.

George Smith, aged 35, of Chicago, and William Smith, aged 16, of Bloomington, were arrested in Greensburg on a trivial charge. On their persons was found a miscellaneous stock of notions not generally carried by traveling men, including jewelry and ladies' hosiery. The Greensburg police believe the goods were stolen.

The annual meeting of the Delaware County Old Settlers' Association was attended by a thousand people. The following new officers were elected: President, John S. Ellis; vice-president, Gabriel Payton; secretary and treasurer, N. N. Spence. J. Harvey Koonts, Mrs. A. A. Truitt and Rev. J. W. Heath were appointed as an executive committee.

M'KINLEY AT MONTAUK.

President Cheers the Soldiers by Kind Words While Making Inspections.

President McKinley spent seven hours in Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, bareheaded most of the time, visiting the sick in the hospital and inspecting the well in their cantonments. He made a speech to the assembled infantrymen, reviewed the cavalrymen, expressed his opinion of the camp to the reporters, and issued an order directing the regulars to return to their stations east of the Mississippi. With the President were Vice-President Hobart, Secretary of War Alger, Attorney General Griggs, Senator Redfield Proctor of Vermont; Brigadier General Eagan, commissary of the army; Brigadier General Ludington, quartermaster of the army; Col. H. Hecker and Secretaries to the President Porter and Cortelieu. The ladies of the party were Mrs. Alger and Miss Hecker, a daughter of Col. Hecker. Gen. Wheeler, his staff, and nearly every officer of prominence in the camp met the President at the station. After greetings and introductions on the railway platform, the President took Gen. Wheeler's arm and went to a carriage. The column of carriages wound up a hill, escorted by the Third cavalry regiment, and the mounted band of the Sixth cavalry, and drove Mr. McKinley to Gen. Shafter's tent in the detention camp. The general, who was flushed and weak from a mild case of malaria fever, was in full uniform, sitting in a chair at the door of the tent. He tried to rise, but Mr. McKinley said: "Stay where you are, general. You are entitled to rest."

The President congratulated Gen. Shafter on the Santiago campaign, and after a few minutes' rest proceeded to the general hospital. The soldiers recently arrived on transports and detained in the detention section of the camp lined up irregularly on each side of the road and cheered. Mr. McKinley took off his straw hat then, and scarcely more than put it on for more than a minute at a time during the remainder of his progress through the camp. Miss Wheeler, a daughter of the general, happened to be in the first row of the hospital tents, and she showed the President through her division. Gen. Wheeler announced in each ward: "Boys, the President has come to see you," or, "Soldiers, the President of the United States."

Some of the soldiers were unconscious, some listlessly raised on their elbows, others feebly clapped their hands. Mr. McKinley gently shook hands with many, and at every cot he paused an instant, and if he saw the sick men looking at him he bowed in a direct and personal way. He had many bits of talk with the men, and seemed to be in no hurry. He almost outwore the patience of all his party by slowly going through ward after ward.

PANDO STEALS AWAY.

Spanish General Starts for Madrid with 12,000,000 Francs.

Havana is in a state of surprise at the secret departure of Gen. Pando with 12,000,000 francs. Few can offer any explanation of the general's conduct, and apparently no one can tell where the big amount of treasure came from. The army and civil pay rolls are both several months in arrears, and there is much dissatisfaction among the Spanish at the withdrawal from Cuba of a sum of money which more than represented the amount due them. Gen. Pando, with the big hoard of money secretly went aboard the French steamer Notre Dame de Salut. He turned his wealth over to Captain Pillard and locked himself in his cabin until the boat left the harbor.

SPANISH CORTES MEETS.

Sagasta Introduces Bill for Surrender of Lost Islands.

The Spanish Cortes opened Monday, and, contrary to general expectation, small interest was shown in the proceedings. The public galleries were densely crowded, but those occupying them were silent. In the Senate Prime Minister Sagasta read a bill authorizing the Government to conclude peace with the United States and also authorizing the alienation of territory. He said that the immense superiority of the Americans deprived the country of means of defense. The destruction of the squadrons compelled Spain to seek peace and necessitated the acceptance of the dismemberment of the colonies proposed by the United States.

NAVY TO HAVE 20,000 MEN.

Enlisted Force Will Be Maintained at This Strength.

The enlisted force of the navy is to be maintained to the full strength secured during the war, and as fast as vacancies occur through discharge and expiration of enlistment period they will be filled by other seamen. The highest number of men enrolled in the navy reached 24,000, including about 4,000 naval militia, all of which have been mustered out. Reduced to 20,000, there is every indication that it will soon be less unless enlistments are made to make up the deficiency.

Registered War Bonds Issued.

The Treasury Department on Saturday sent out its first batch of the registered war bonds, the issuance up to now having been confined to the coupon bonds payable to bearer. The department started putting out the coupon bonds in the last week of July, and the issue has comprised $20, $100, $500 and a few $1,000 bonds. There are about 20,000 cases calling for the coupon bonds still to be met. About 45,000 cases are on file calling for registered bonds, and these will be met as rapidly as possible. The issue will be in the 20s, 100s, 500s, 1,000s, 5,000s and 10,000s.

All to Be Released.

Acting Secretary Allen has authorized the release of all the Spanish naval prisoners captured in the battle of July 3 from Cervera's fleet. These are now at Annapolis and Seavey's Island, Portsmouth, the officers being at the academy and the sailors at the island. The condition of the men physically is all that could be desired. The prisoners are to be returned to Spain at the expense of the Spanish government. This was the condition upon which our government agreed to release them without parole or other restriction.

Ordered Mustered Out.

A statement prepared at the War Department shows that up to Friday eighty-three of the organizations in the volunteer army have received orders looking to their being mustered out of the service. This number includes fifty-three regiments and a number of minor organizations, such as batteries of artillery, independent companies of cavalry, etc., and probably represents almost one-third of the approximately 220,000 men called for by the President in the two proclamations issued by him.

Camp to Be Deserted.

By Oct. 1 Camp Wikoff, at Montauk Point, Long Island, will have shrunk to slender proportions. The well men, according to the War Department's present designs, will leave the camp as fast as transportation can be conveniently provided, probably at the rate of 3,000 or 4,000 a week. The convalescent from the hospitals, instead of being sent again into camp with their commands, will go to their homes.

Thank General Boynton.

Gen. Boynton's complete report was read at Camp Thomas. Gen. Boynton was thanked cordially by the medical officers for the defense he made of them.

TWO BROTHERS.

O, Jim he went to war,
En John he staid t' hum,
En beat the kyarpits fer his mar,
While Jim he beat the drum.

En Jim he worked a gun, b' gosh,
En seen the Spaniards die;
John helped his mother do the wash,
En ca'med her when she'd cry.

Now, Jim was in the very thick
Of battle more'n once,
While John he nussed their grandad, sick,
For eight long mortal months.

En Jim come home with shoulder straps,
When fightin' all was done,
En all the gals they sot their caps
To ketch this widder's son.

Well, Jim he j'ined his Betty fair,
But John, he's still t' hum
A-keerin' of his mother there—
A hero, too, b' gum!

Vendetta.

By C. D. Clark.

A woman with a tattered shawl wrapped closely about her, and a face blue and pinched, as if from cold and hunger, stood before the door of a stately mansion, which was erected in the midst of spacious grounds in the most aristocratic street of a manufacturing city—a woman who had once been comely, but who was worn down by care and suffering until only the shadow of her former self.

The portly servant, who held the door partly open, and shielded his rotund form from the cold blast by shrinking behind it, was endeavoring to prevail upon the poor woman to go away.

"It's no use, ma'am, I assure you. I might give your message to Mr. Stanley, but he wouldn't see you; he has other things to employ his mind. You'd better go away, ma'am, indeed."

"I must see him," said the woman, in a voice rendered sharp by pain. "It is life or death with me now, and if you do not speak to him I must force my way in, in spite of you."

"You are unreasonable," pleaded the servant. "Now what good can you get by seeing him? He won't listen to you for a moment."

The woman pushed by him into the hall in a fierce way, and nearly upset him by doing so. As she stood in the warm hall, brilliantly lighted, a gentleman came out of an inner room—a well-preserved, handsome man, of forty or upwards, with a face which showed at once pride of station and utter scorn of the lowly.

"What is this woman doing here, William, and why does she not come to the servant's door?" he demanded.

"I could not keep her out, Mr. Stanley. She insists upon seeing you."

"Very well, madam," said Mr. Herbert Stanley, the factory owner, playing with the handsome seals pendant from his watch-chain. "What is your business with me, my good woman? My time is limited, please to remember."

"I am the wife of James Fenton, the loom fixer you ordered discharged yesterday," she said.

"Ah, yes; I remember now. He was insolent to the superintendent, I believe," in a drawling, affected tone.

"He was not insolent, sir—at least, he did not intend to be insolent. Mr. Phelps found fault with him for something which was neglected by another person."

"Well, well! what do you want?"

"I came to plead to you to take him back. We have had bad luck, Mr. Stanley, and I have two sick children at home, and we must have work or die."

"I don't want to hear a word in reference to taking him on again," said the factory owner, quickly. "Your husband is a dangerous man, madam. He creates discord between the manufacturers and the employes. Mr. Phelps was acting under my orders when I made an issue with your husband, and I am glad he is gone. There! not another word. William, show this woman out. I won't take her husband back."

"Yes, sir," responded the flunky.

"And don't admit her again."

"I'll be careful, sir. Now, Mrs. Fenton, you are keeping the door open. Please go out."

"Trouble will come of this, Mr. Stanley," she said, quietly, as she walked toward the door. "There's some gipsy blood in my veins, and we of the Romany race never forgive an injury. You may hear from me again. I don't know when, but I'll remember your kindness."

The door closed after her, and she went home through the driving sleet and entered her poor house. A man who was crouching over a small fire, rocking a baby on his knees, looked up quickly, and saw no hope in her face.

"He is harder than stone, Jamie," she said, softly. "God help us now, for man is against us."

He quietly put the baby into her arms, rose from his chair, and started for the door, but returned and kissed her passionately, twice.

"You've been a good wife to me, Zada," he said—"patient, tender and true. Don't sit up for me to-night. I've something to do, and may be late."

He went out, never to enter that door alive, for next morning he was found in the river, into which he had thrown himself. They buried him kindly, and his shopmates followed him to the grave; and Mr. Stanley sent William to the house with a present of money, but the widow flung it in the face of the messenger.

"His money perish with him!" she cried. "The man who murdered my poor husband shall never help care for his wife and his unhappy children. I'll die of hunger first!"

She did not go away at once, but worked at plain sewing. Both the sick children died and were buried, and, as the poor funeral passed the door of Mr. Stanley's great house, the anguished wife and mother looked up and saw him standing in the window, and close beside him a golden-haired boy, three years old, his only son—for Herbert Stanley had married late in life. The poor woman cast a fierce glance at the child.

"One is taken, and another left. Yes, yes; I see my way now!"

Two days after the funeral, she disappeared and was not seen again, and passed out of the memory of the people. But, three weeks later, an appalling calamity fell upon Herbert Stanley. Little Edward, upon whom so many hopes were set, disappeared from his nursery one night. The nurse had been drugged and the child taken away, and upon the coverlet of the little bed, pinned fast by a long-bladed dagger, was a paper upon which was written these words:

"Vendetta! I will return the child in fifteen years. Wait for him."

The blow was fatal to the mother of Edward, and she died within the month. All that wealth could do was done to find the child, but he seemed to have disappeared as utterly as if buried in the depths of the sea.

Herbert Stanley sold out his business, and spent three years in travel, searching for the boy, aided by skilled detectives; but his search was in vain. Some thought that the boy had been stolen for a ransom, and an immense sum was offered through the medium of the public press, but no response was made.

Herbert Stanley returned to his law office, which he had left to become a manufacturer, and soon reached the bench, and was known far and wide as a learned but austere judge, who had no mercy upon crime.

At last, while holding court in a city adjacent to the place where he had lived and suffered, a case of peculiar atrocity came up for judgment. It was a bank robbery, in the course of which a man had been shot, and one of the robbers had been taken red-handed.

When brought up for trial, he was seen to be a young, fresh-colored, handsome man, little over twenty years of age, but with the impress of crime marked upon every feature. He made no defense, and after a short trial was convicted of murder in the second degree. The judge rose to pronounce sentence, which would send the young man to prison for life.

"Thomas Welch—" he began.

"Hold on, old fellow!" said the prisoner. "I'd like to have you start fair and make no mistake. Thomas Welch is not my name."

"What is your true one?"

"Edward Stanley; so the old woman says. And see here, judge, before you go on I'd like to say a word—not because I'm going to craw-fish, for I ain't that kind of a little boy, but because I want things on the square; and in the first place I was stolen, when a child, by a woman named Zada Fenton, from Enfield village."

"Great heaven!" gasped the judge, sinking into a seat.

"She took me to a gipsy tribe, and we went to Europe, and until I was ten years old I was in England. I was taught to steal as soon as I could walk. The woman laid herself out to teach me evil, and made me think that every man's hand was against me. I've robbed, and stolen, and lied, and committed every crime under her teaching; but I didn't know any better. Now go ahead with your sentence. I'm guilty; but, after all, I ain't to blame."

"A sentence—a sentence!" screamed a voice from the seats in front of the railing, and a woman forced her way in and stood before the judge. "Look at me, Judge Stanley. Fifteen years ago you drove me from your door, and with such cruel words that my husband went out and killed himself. My children died and were buried, and I swore the Vendetta against you. Do you remember the promise I made you—to give the boy back in fifteen years? I have kept my word, and here he is—the child of my teachings, but the child of your heart, Edward Stanley! He pleads guilty; sentence him, I say. I am Zada Fenton, the wife of the man you murdered!"

Judge Stanley clutched at the air wildly, and fell down in a fit, and when they raised him he was dead. Another judge pronounced the sentence which sent the unfortunate son to prison for life, to which he went defiantly. A year later, in an attempt to break out of prison, he was shot by a guard, and the vengeance of Zada Fenton was complete. As for her, she disappeared, and it is thought went back to her tribe; but no one in that section ever saw her face again.—Saturday Night.

Agriculture in the Yukon.

A pamphlet has been issued by the Director of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, Ontario, on the agricultural possibilities of the Yukon district. One of our newspapers, in a review of it, said that the Director had issued a pamphlet on the agricultural possibilities of the Yukon, the most characteristic feature of which was that the Yukon district seemed to have no agricultural possibilities at all. At one or two points attempts have been made to grow vegetables, but with limited success. Mr. Harper, who resided at Pelly since 1891, had a garden in which he grew some very poor potatoes and other garden stuff. What succeeded best was lettuce. To protect them at night, when the sky was clear and frost threatened, he lowered an immense awning over them, raising it in the morning after the plants had recovered from the effects of the cold.

At Forty-Mile they have several gardens in which they grow a very fair potato, but it is not dry, and not at all well-tasting. They also grow good lettuce and a small cabbage which is very much relished, because it is the only vegetable supply there, and at present you cannot import any. This shows conclusively one need not count on anything in the way of agriculture as food supply, for two reasons: the extent of available soil is very limited in comparison with the rest of the country, and it might be said frosts occur every month in the year. Close to the river, the temperature of the water from June to September runs from about forty-six degrees to fifty-eight degrees. Of course, the proximity of a large body of water at those temperatures considerably aids vegetable life and helps its development close to the river, because it modifies the adjacent temperatures. But away from the river a mile or so you have serious frosts every month in the year.—Geographical Journal.

A Timely Warning.

While a British brig was gliding smoothly along before a good breeze in the South Pacific, three months ago, a flock of small birds about the size, shape and color of paroquets settled down in the rigging and passed an hour or more resting. The second mate was so anxious to find out the species to which the visiting strangers belonged that he tried to entrap a specimen, but the birds were too shy to be thus caught, and too spry to be seized by the quick hands of the sailors. At the end of about an hour the birds took the brig's course, and disappeared, but towards nightfall they came back and passed the night in the main-top. The next morning the birds flew off again, and when they returned at noon the sailors scattered some food about the decks. By this time the birds had become so tame that they hopped about the decks picking up the crumbs. That afternoon an astonishing thing happened. The flock came flying swiftly toward the brig. Every bird seemed to be piping as if pursued by some little invisible enemy on wings, and they at once huddled down behind the deck-house. The superstitious sailors at once called the captain of the brig, who rubbed his eyes and looked at the barometer. A glance showed that something was wrong with the elements, and the brig was put in shape to outride a storm. The storm came about twenty minutes after the birds had reached the vessel. For a few minutes the sky was like the waterless bottom of a lake—a vast arch of yellowish mud—and torrents of rain fell. Why it did not blow very hard, no one knows; but on reaching port, two days later, the captain learned that a great tornado had swept across that part of the sea. The birds left the vessel on the morning after the storm and were not seen again.—Maryland Bulletin.

Passing Away of the Old Curiosity Shop.

The most curious of all curious shops are decidedly the curiosity shops, now becoming scarcer every year. Certainly these have lots of useless things to sell, and, strange to say, nobody ever purchases them. This is unusual in the ordinary course, as for some useless things there is quite a large demand, but for the articles of vertu and knick-knacks from all corners of the globe there is little or no market, except at fitful seasons. How the old gentlemen, who frequently keep such shops, amass such a heterogenous stock is beyond a limited comprehension.

Old china, bowie knives, pistols, shells, interesting things in ivory and what nots of every order are jumbled together in a surprising manner; still, nothwithstanding that the affable old man will show you everything he has to sell, and is perfectly willing to deal with you if you have aught to dispose of, he never seems to have any customers to buy. And the old gentleman does not mind. He opens his shop regularly at irregular hours and shuts it at irregular hours, and if he wants to go anywhere on business he locks and bars and bolts the door and leaves the place deserted and unprotected, and contentedly goes his journey.

Curiosity shops grow rarer every year, but it is hardly possible that they will disappear altogether. Their place is largely taken now by fashionable establishments that sell cracked saucers, chipped plates and consumptive teapots and fans. The trade in "ancestors," too, is going out of date; people don't want ancestors, they want money; so shops that only supply reminiscences of other days are out of place.—London Globe.

The First Glimpse of a Continent.

It was early in the year 1605. Europe was but just awakening to the great changes introduced by the destruction of the Spanish Armada. England was but just transferred from the last of the house of Tudor to the first of the house of Stuart; Shakespeare was still acting his own plays at the Globe Theatre; Bacon was meditating his philosophy; and Sir Walter Raleigh was still dreaming of new discoveries and settlements in America. In the East the star of Portugal was already setting, and that of Holland was rising to its short-lived brilliancy; and only five years has passed since Queen Elizabeth had signed the charter of the Merchant Adventurers, trading to the countries of the Indies, which laid the foundation-stone of the empire of British India.

The Dutch adventurers in the East were, like their English rivals, merchants first of all. It was with no idea of founding empires like those of the Spaniards in Mexico and Peru that the thrifty burghers of Antwerp and Rotterdam sent their vessels to the Asiatic Archipelago and took possession of Java. To exchange the goods of Europe for the spices and gold, the pearls and precious stones of the East was the object with which they set out, and the purpose from which they allowed nothing else seriously to divert their attention. It was to this that Holland owed the honor of having been the first to discover the last of the continents, and perhaps it may have been to this also that she owed it that she discovered it for others and not for herself.

The Dairy of the Ants.

Students of insect life are aware that ants keep in their homes small creatures that answer the purpose served by cows. These aphides secrete honey upon which the ants feed. Among the curious facts noted in the study of ants and their habits, is that certain other insects live upon what they steal from the ants when they are fed. They take up their abode in the ant hills. Some of these boarders or dependents seem to have no special reason for being, others serve excellent purposes. Ants keep slaves and compel them to work. They cultivate the soil and raise crops to supply their households with necessary food.

Zoologists say that all known species of wild animals are gradually diminishing in size.

CUBAN AS A MAZEPPA.

ADVENTURE WITH A BAND OF MERCILESS GUERRILLAS.

Senorita Monica Tied to the Back of a Wild Horse Which Was Turned Loose on the Plains—Her Companions Murdered.

Rescued and Avenged.

There is one happy young woman in this town, writes a San Antonio, Tex., correspondent. Her name is Valencia Monica, whose father is an officer in the Cuban army. Miss Monica is the heroine of a most remarkable escape from the hands of the merciless Spaniards.

About a year ago she was in Cuba, and, in company with a family of reconcentrados, she attempted to make the journey across the country from the little interior plantation of Palma to Santiago in the hope of finding some opportunity at the latter place to escape to the United States. An officer with a spark of humanity in his bosom, touched by the miserable condition of the unfortunates, furnished them with a pass and assured the young lady that no soldiers would harm them.

They passed several columns of soldiers in safety, but one evening a dozen or more drunken Spanish guerrillas rode up to their cart and overturned it.

VALENCIA MONICA.

The young lady showed her pass, but the leader paid no attention to it. After offering her a drink from his bottle he staggered against her and made an attempt to take her face in his hands.

Now thoroughly alarmed and preferring death to dishonor, the little Cuban quickly drew a stiletto from her bosom and sprang at the monster's throat, barely grazing his beard with the keen blade.

"I cannot tell you what happened or at least repeat one-half of the horrors of that terrible night," said Miss Monica. "I cannot recall it without a shudder. While drinking and carousing they butchered the man who was with us with their machetes, and laughed at his dying agonies. One threw a lariat over my neck, and after they had disarmed me they bound my hands to a tree."

A very slight circumstance doubtless saved the young lady from a fate worse than death, though it subjected her to one of the most frightful ordeals ever endured by mortal flesh.

One of the guerrillas came into the camp leading a very wild-looking black stallion, which he in his drunken recklessness declared was the devil's own saddle horse. They had just stolen the fine animal, and he had thrown every one who had mounted him.

"Do you think you could ride him, my little tigress?" said one of the guerrillas, approaching Miss Monica and making an attempt to become familiar. Her answer, which was, "I should like nothing better than to try," seemed to tickle the desperate characters immensely. Miss Monica says that she hardly knows why she made such an answer. She realized that he had no chance of escaping from the drunken set and would willingly have exchanged her position for the back of the wildest horse in the world.

"All right," shouted the guerrilla chief, "the little tiger came near cutting my throat and I will just send her to the devil on horseback."

The big guerrilla seized the young girl in his arms, and, running to the wild horse, he threw her across the animal's back and shouted to his comrades to fetch ropes.

"Let us have some fun," he roared. "Lash the little rebel to the wild devil's back and turn him loose and we will chase her off the island and save somebody the trouble of slaying her."

The next moment the fiends were binding the terrified girl on the back of the equally terrified horse.

Before Miss Monica realized what her tormentors were doing one of the wretches cut the rope that was about the horse's neck and fired a pistol. The frightened animal sprang into the air and struck the earth running. Pistol balls rained about him, but, unharmed, he seemed to sail above the earth with the wind, and was soon beyond the reach of the guerrillas.

SENORITA MONICA LASHED TO A WILD HORSE.

The girl had little hope of escaping with her life. But her good angel had not deserted her. A party of Cuban soldiers who had followed the guerrillas saw the horse coming. He was nearly exhausted, and when he saw the soldiers' horses he ran among them and stopped. He was completely frightened out of his senses, and so weak that he made no attempt to move when a soldier threw a rope over his neck.

Many of the Cubans knew Senor Monica, and their anger knew no bounds. At sunrise they fell upon the guerrillas' camp and shot every one of them to death except the leader of the gang, who was captured and hanged later in the day.

NOT FICTION, BUT REAL LIFE.

Story of a Daughter's Devotion and a Lover's Faithfulness.

Twenty-five years ago there was a romance at Maysville—a love story in which there was nothing out of the ordinary. It became known here that two young people, who will be called John Smith and Mary Jones, were engaged to be married.

The wedding day was set, and nearly all the preparations had been made, when the mother of the bride-to-be became ill. On account of her illness the marriage had to be postponed.

In a short time it became apparent that the mother of Mary Jones was insane. Arrangements were made to send her to the asylum, and it was then that her daughter raised objections. She would not have her mother sent to the asylum at all, and declared that she would devote her life to taking care of her.

Whein she made the vow Mary Jones was 18 years old, a bright, intelligent young woman, handsome and talented. She triumphed over the arguments of her friends and settled down to a life in which there appeared to be little hope, except the reward for filial duty.

She put aside all thoughts of the life she had contemplated, and from that day she has been her mother's loving and devoted attendant. The mother's mind is a total wreck. She is not violent, but her mind is gone, and she must have constant care and attention. Twenty-five years have passed since she became demented, and during that time her daughter has not been away from her a single day.

John Smith still makes the Sunday night visits as regularly as in the olden time. His hair is gray, and there are wrinkles in his face. The girl he expected to claim as his bride is an old maid now, and her once bright eyes are beginning to lose the luster of youth, but she is still firm in her determination to remain with her mother as long as her mother lives.

The engagement has never been broken. The young man said he would wait until her task at home was over, and he has waited. The years seem long to him, but he is true. If he ever grows impatient the patient face of the woman whose devotion is more than remarkable is enough to make him ashamed of his impatience. It is said to his credit that he has never made the slightest effort to persuade the daughter to leave her mother.

Stories like this are often told in books, but this is one in real life.—St. Joseph News.

WILL THE CUBAN LEARN HIS LESSONS?

FIGHT TO A FINISH.

Duel to the Death Between Wounded American and Spaniard.

The battle cry, "Remember the Maine," still ring in the ears of the wounded Americans on the field of Santiago. Round about lay the bodies of the dead, keeping silent companionship with the wounded. Groans and sighs filled the air. The brushwood, thick and sturdy and straight, trampled down by the hoofs of the Rough Riders' horses, was saturated with the blood of friend and foe, until it no longer hid from each other's view the fallen of two nations.

In the distance the sharp report of the guns told of the onward march to victory. It goaded the wounded Americans to action—the stricken foe to revenge. From behind a tuft of grass on the blades of which blood hung congealed, a head arose. It was the visage of a Spaniard, deathly pale, with a stream of blood trickling from his temple. His fiendish gaze was fastened upon the outstretched form of an American soldier, who, face downward, lay with his head against a tree. He was still, as one in death, his life blood ebbing away, he thought, through a wound in his side.

THE DUEL.

Slowly the Spaniard propped his arms beneath his body and grasped his gun. There in the brush beside him was his deadliest foe. Crawl to his aid? Not he. He would riddle the body with Mauser bullets. He would rejoice to mutilate even the lifeless to demonstrate his hatred. Quick as a flash he fired, the bullet striking the American in the leg. The sting of the lead brought the soldier back to consciousness. At a glance he took in the situation. The gleam of fierce, fiendish hatred in the eye of the Spaniard convinced him that this would be a duel to the death. He returned the fire, and sent shot after shot toward his antagonist"s quarter. A fusillade followed, and ceased only with the death of the Spaniard. The American, who had dropped in his tracks beyond his battle line, was rescued by his comrades, who had been attracted to the spot by the terrific struggle of the two wounded men.—St. Louis Republic.

"Hardly Worth While."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat tells what purports to be a true story of an "Eastern woman" who used to be notorious among her friends for the long time it took her to dress. As the newspaper puts it, "There was no case on record of a guest who had been greeted under her roof with any degree of promptitude." Now she has reformed, and this is how the reform came about:

One evening, at a private entertainment of some kind, she encountered a certain bishop, an old friend of the family.

"Ah, my dear Mrs. Smith," remarked the ecclesiastic. "How are you? I passed your house yesterday, and thought of dropping in to see you.'

"And you didn't do it? That was very unkind of you."

"Well, no. You see, I said to myself, 'I have just one hour to call upon Mrs. Smith. She will take fifty-seven minutes to dress. That will leave just three for our talk. It is hardly worth while.' "

Bagpipes in India.

Several Punjab regiments of infantry march to the sound of the bagpipes. The harsh tones of the Indian instrument, and its limited range of notes, jars on the ears of Englishmen. "That tired feeling," which is common to all who live outside the Land o' Cakes when the national music is in full blast is actually shared by the Highlander himself when the pipes are in the hands of a Goorkha. There is no one who expresses such pain at the sound of the native Indian bagpipes as our Scotch friends. In their estimation the Goorkha is just "makin' a fule of the instrument."

WORLD'S LARGEST MELON.

Attained Enormous Dimensions Without Loss of Flavor or Quality.

Watermelons five feet long, thirty-four inches thick and weighing ninety-eight pounds would make a pickaninny's eyes "bug out" to an alarming degree. Those accustomed to huge and luscious watermelons would feel as if slighted by Providence at sight of the dimensions asserted for the product of Rocky Ford, Colo. But the size herein recorded is duly and authoritatively asserted for the product of State Senator G. W. Sevink's farm in the Centennial State. The particular melon which was measured and found to be thus great was the last of last year's crop. It was placed in storage for the winter and recently formed a portion of a feast given by Mr. Sevink to his neighbors.

SEVINK AND HIS MELON.

The cultivation of melons, cantaloupes and similar fruit was commenced by Mr. Sevink and a number of neighbors in the Rocky Ford region some eighteen years ago. The fruit grew successfully, attaining enormous dimensions without losing flavor or quality. In fact, the usual penalty of overgrowth was entirely lacking, the products being exceptionally sweet and juicy, as well as of mammoth girth. The superiority of these melons was attributed to the nature of the soil about Rocky Ford, which has been found the best in the land for such propagation. The melons grown there exceed in size, flavor and juiciness all others in the world.

Four years ago Nat Wetzel, a St. Louis, Mo., provision merchant, visited Colorado and sampled some of these big melons. He was so well pleased that he contracted for a part of a car load for sale in his home city. The introduction was fortunate, for that year there was a failure of the Missouri crop. The venture proved a success, and the following year eighteen car loads were contracted for and disposed of without trouble. Last year the entire product of the region was shipped to St. Louis and found ready sale, 124 car loads being the total amount shipped to the Missouri metropolis.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

Keep at It.

When trade is flush, and with a rush
Large orders to you come,
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
And keep things on the "hum."

When trade is poor don't close the door;
The rule is still the same;
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
And thereby win fresh fame.

Indeed 'tis true whate'er you do,
This is the safest plan,
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
For then you lead the van.
—Henry Morrill Warren.

There are some men in every town who do not advertise. You may not know them; very few people do. They call themselves business men, but they are not. Everybody who is in business is not a business man or a business woman, by any means. The moment you enter a store you can tell whether or not the proprietor is endowed with business capacity. The real business man advertises. There is a snap and bustle about his place that denotes business ability and activity, while in the store of the one whose announcement you never see in the newspapers there is lack of business energy, lethargy, and a general air of dilapidation. This man is not really in business; he is only hanging to the ragged edge of the business world. In this age to be really and truly in business one must advertise.

Advertising pays. Yet, there are a few men who spend money for advertising space who do not make it pay. They would not buy a farm and dump a lot of wheat or corn on its unplowed surface with the expectation of raising a bountiful crop, but they treat the advertising space they buy in just that way, and then wonder why the harvest doesn't come. Or, they tell the newspaper man that nobody reads advertisements.

Advertising Axioms.

A good advertisement in a good paper—a good business follows.

Roosting on a dry goods box and groaning over hard times won't bring success. Advertising will.

Shrewd firms, like kites, rise against the wind when they keep their wares constantly before the public eye.

The logic of an easy reading ad is like a raw oyster, you swallow it before you are conscious of the fact.

The success of a good ad, like that of a good salesman, is largely dependent on the dress given it. We dress ads.

In order for an ad to make a "home run" it must touch four bases—the eye, the interest, the heart and the pocket book.

One unique clause in your ad, if born of truth, will often make people go miles out of their way to find your store.

When the argument of your ad strikes the bull's eye of public approval the clink of change will be heard in your tills.

HOW SO?

The Fort Wayne Gazette has this letter flung at Hon. J. M. Robinson, our member of Congress:

James M. Robinson deserves credit for the successes he has achieved in rising from modest surroundings to a position of eminence, but the people would feel better about it if it were earning his salary, instead of misrepresenting them on every public question in which their welfare is involved.

Will the Gazette kindly state in what regard Mr. Robinson misrepresents "the people?" A large majority of the people voted or Mr. Robinson, and as they are going to do so again it looks as if his sentiments must agree with theirs. But perhaps the Gazette thinks a congressman's duty is to agree in sentiment with the minority of his people.

CASTORIA.

OH RATS!

The last issue of the Butler Herald says:

The Auburn COURIER has refrained from speaking of the Butler street fair which will explain itself. The Auburn people, papers and all have it in for Butler. The Clipper and COURIER should be remembered by Butler people. The fair is a donation to the people.

The COURIER has not refrained from speaking of the Butler street fair. Auburn people and papers do not "have it in" for Butler, but have always been friendly to that town, We do not know what the Clipper has said of Butler or its fair but we do know that the COURIER has spoken well of both and has been friendly to both. There has never been a street fair in Butler, but we have given it free notices for they never think of paying for them. Butler papers can do their town a service by showing a spirit considerably different from that indicated in this clipping. The Butler papers have not as much space given to their fair as the COURIER has. But we would have been unwise to have made such a spread over it till our Carnival was over.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Prisoners Were Polite Enough To Leave Part of the Jail.

DIDN'T TAKE THE SHERIFF.

For These Small Favors We Are Thankful.

This morning it was found that the regular thing had occured. Prisoners had been sawing the bars at the jail as usual. This time Sheriff Stroh and his deputies were not standing around on the outside listening to the rasping of the files, as they did once or twice before, and as no one was by to suggest again that the prisoners be searched, why of course they got away. There were only two of them, so could not very well carry away the jail or that would have disappeared also.

This morning the prisoners did not come to breakfast, and there was an echo of emptiness in their cells. They were absent. But the absence or presence of a few prisoners more or less has not made much excitement over there for the past four years. But when it was found there was a ragged hole at the barred window at the extreme east end, it was believed by outsiders that something was wrong. Yes, the men had gone. They were the pickpocket who tried to rob Constable Stoner at the postoffice Saturday, and the man who has been boarded at the county's expense for some time for stealing hides. They had pried open the door of their cell and got into the corridor. Here they tackled the east window which has double bars, inside and outside, crossed and interlocked bars. They proceeded evidently at their leisure to saw enough bars off of both sets to crawl through. It was then only 8 or 10 feet to the ground. Sheriff Stroh was absent, and his deputy, Platter, was probably at home, at least he was not there. The prisoners had probably put in all night and possibly the daytime of Sunday at the work. They probably had help from outside. Two men, supposed to be the ones who escaped when the third pickpocket was captured Saturday, were said to have been around town all day Saturday and Sunday, and it is claimed they had lots of money. They may have bribed some one to go to the jail and pick out the window most out of sight on account of trees and buildings, and got him to help the men out or keep watch while the two outside confederates helped. And both sheriff and deputy were out of sight. So it is no wonder the fellows escaped. Well the men are gone, and we wont have to board them any more. The commissioners ought to cut off the board bill already in. Let us hope that some time in the near future we may have a sheriff, who can keep prisoners in a strong jail like this.

OH, PSHAW.

The Butler Record last week had this editorial:

"The COURIER still has something mean to say occasionally about Sheriff Stroh."

Now we dont know about this. We have said nothing about Sheriff Stroh but what was the truth and which everybody knows to be the truth and can all be easily proved; more than this, we have not told all we could nor said all the mean but truthful things we might have said. All the trouble between the COURIER and Stroh comes from our saying that Stroh was in exactly the same boat with Moody. He was short in his accounts and was not able to settle with the county, at that December term. He had used money he had no right to use. So had Moody, Moody went to prison; Stroh continued to hold a public office and in the following March term, he had earned enough money to settle with the county. The COURIER told of this. Then Stroh's friends got mad mad and said it was not Stroh's fault, but that all the office work and keeping the accounts were in the hands of his deputy, Mr. Platter. And now they have gone and nominated Platter for Sheriff: Now which is right, the COURIER, which exposed the wrong, or the men who did it, or then men who now seek to give a county office to the man they then said did it? The COURIER hates to be dragged into a personal controversy. But if forced in, it is always in shape to take care of itself.

LOVELY VIEWS

Hoffman the photographer, took over 60 views of the lovely things shown at the Carnival and has them now finished and on exhibition at his gallery corner of 7th and Jackson. These include nearly all the flower wagons and floats, the biggest window decorations, outside decorations etc, etc. They must be seen to be appreciated. He has also a birdeye view of the city taken from the top of the new waterworks smoke stack 90 feet high. Call and see them.

Can Catch A Thief

John Hathaway the democratic candidate for Sheriff is getting his hand in nicely. He was on hand Saturday and helped to arrest the pickpocket who got Stoner's pocket book. The thief had with his confederates crowded into the postoffice door behind Stoner and others, and when Stoner turned on them and they tried to escape, two get away and one ran up stairs, into the hall and when Stoner got there, he found him sweeping the hall as innocent as could be. Stoner asked him if he worked there, and the man said he did. This satisfied Stoner, and he went down to look for his man, but Hathaway had followed up and was very handy in helping to nab the thief. Hathaway has talents that will make him a sheriff who can catch a prisoner some time during his term of service.

JOSEPH PFEFFERL

The sudden death of Joseph Pfefferl at Fort Wayne Sunday 3 a. m., was a surprise to many who did not know his condition. His wife had gone down with him Saturday, so he might receive medical treatment, as we are told. He had a bad spell with his heart while there that day, but was resting easy when she returned on the evening train. But in the night he got worse, dying at the hour stated. Mr. Koons of the Shaffer undertaking establishment, went down and brought the remains home, leaving the city at about 1:30 and reaching Auburn about 6 p. m. The funeral will be tomorrow. He had been in a critical state of health for some time, We believe he had heart trouble accompanied with dropsy.

THE FURLOUGH

The Electric Fountain

Why can't we keep the electric fountain just as it is and turn it on now and then on the evenings when the band plays, It would be a great attraction and add to the crowds from other places, who come in to hear our band, It ought to be made permanent as the town owns the waterworks and the electric lights, both. Let us save the fountain.

Scared By A Ladder

David Keller had his horse hitched to the rack at the northeast corner of the public square when a ladder leaning against a tree fell over onto the horse, which broke loose and ran around east, across 7th street bridge and then south on the next street east of McClellan's. For some distance it carried the ladder and finally it got rid of that as well as of the buggy of which little is left worth picking up. It was a queer but very dangerous runaway.

THE AUBURN CARNIVAL.

The Ladies Take an Active Interest in the Festivities of the Town.

(Ft. Wayne News, Friday)

Many Fort Wayne young ladies were at Auburn yesterday attending the street fair and carnival and were surprised to find the interest taken in the different events by the ladies of Auburn. They make an effort not only to entertain everyone, but also to assist in making the different events a success. The flower parade, which was the most attractive feature of the program yesterday, was entirely in charge of the ladies and it will be safe to predict that it was the most attractive feature of the entire carnival, and also the most successful. It was entirely under the supervision of the ladies. The display was worthy of a much larger city, and it will compel the Fort Wayne ladies to look to their laurels.

DASTARDLY ATTEMPT

Fire Bugs Try to Destroy the Eckhart Carriage Factory.

One of the most dastardly attempts at crime ever known here, was that of last evening, by which the great Eckhart factory came near being destroyed. Cal. Baird, who lives up the north road, a quarter of a mile from the factory was on his way home between eight and nine last evening, when on nearing the factory, he was surprised to see two men start from behind the east side of the factory and run north, and at about the same time he saw the light of a flame shine from around the building. He hurried up and found a fire starting at the east side by the blacksmith shop, and called the night watch, Charlie Marvin who was sweeping in another part of the factory at the time, a fact which it would appear the scoundrels took advantage of. It took lively work to put out the flames, but by the aid of the fire grenades always kept at the factory, and by chopping away boards it was got under control. It appears that kerosene had been thrown over the side of the building and over an old buggy box they had turned up against the building in such a way as to secure the success of the fire. The kerosene had been brought in a Mason fruit jar, which was thrown away as the men ran north, and was found this morning. There is no clue as far as we know, but there is a determination on the part of our people to hunt the criminals down. Bloodhounds have been sent for to assist, and we hope they may soon be landed behind what jail bars we have left.

Smart Man

A Fort Wayne Smart Alexander thought to play a trick on a farmer last week by buying his entire wagon load of pumpkins. He paid the farmer a nickel to find the bargain and had him unload them into a barn. Then he refused to pay for the load as agreed on, $1.50, His idea was that the farmer would go and load up the pumpkins again and sell them elsewhere, and would only have the nickel for his work. But there is where he was fooled. When the farmer saw he was being made fun of he had the fellow arrested and not till the jail stared him in the face did he shell out the $1 50 and pay the costs.

Royally Welcomed.

The train bearing Companies K, I and H, reached the Junction Saturday at a little before 3 p. m. and after setting off the four coaches containing the Waterloo and Angola companies, the train came up to the Main-st station. Here was a crowd of several thousand people and many carriages, besides the flower wagons, etc. The artillery were also there. After getting out of the cars, several of the boys who had been sick or were still feeble, were taken into carriages, some straggled off up town, but the great bulk of them marched in a body carrying their guns and accouterments. They made a fine showing, even though they were dust-stained by travel and bronzed by exposure. At the court house square, a brief speech of welcome was made by Capt. E. D. Hartman and then all were given a fine supper at the "Remember the Maine," restaurant, run by two soldiers' wives, Mrs. F. E. Dane and Mrs. Charles Picker. Then the country boys were picked up by relatives in waiting and started out home. Those who belonged in town went to their homes, and put in the time shaking hands and receiving the greetings of all they met Geo. W. Everett and private Loveland took a bee line for the COURIER office and took a good scrubbing, and then went into the handshaking also. All said they were glad to get back, and by the hearty welcome they received, they surely know everybody was glad to have them back again.

Matheny And Casebeer

This is the present title of a well known and popular old firm, that was familiar to our people for years, till Dr. Casebeer removed to Indianapolis three or four years ago. Now he is home again at Auburn and he and Dr. Matheny again entered into a partnership about a week ago, and have begun practicing together again. They have already had good business for the past week. Their old patrons as well as new ones, will find them located in the rooms lately occupied by Dr. Matheny, in the Zeigler building across north from the Swineford House, and at the rear of Mr. Nebelung's Bazar Store. They are in the active practice of medicine and surgery and will no doubt get their share of the patronage.

The above amount is offered if they fail to cure.

Columbus, Ohio, March 24, 1898.

LINCOLN MEDICINE CO., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger. I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

WARM TIME AT FT. WAYNE.

Big Street Fair and Carnival Will Be Held There Next Month, Some of the Features and Attractions.

Fort Wayne is making great preparations for the great Street Fair and Carnival which will be held there next month commencing on the 4th and continuing four days. Everybody remembers the big Centennial celebration given there three years ago and that was considered a big thing but was nothing compared with what the Fort Wayne people promise this year. The first day will be children's day, Introducing a parade, one of the attractions of which will be a living flag composed of 260 children; then there will be brownies, horribles, local and state bands, and other attractions. In the evening, will be the coronation of the Queen and the presentation to her of the keys of the city, the ceremonies being similar to that attending the coroation of the Queen at the New Orleans Mardi Gras, St. Louis Veiled Prophets, etc

After the coronation there will be a grand ball at the Princess Rink, at which the Queen and her court will be the guests of honor. This will be the swellest affair that ever happened at Fort Wayne. On Tuesday will be the Flower Parade, the first of the kind ever given in the state. It is expected that over 200 decorated vehicles will participate in this parade. In the evening will be give the great Steeet Pageant of illuminated floats upon the construction of which no expense has been spared. On Thursday, "National Day," forenoon and afternoon, there will be speaking at the rink and in the evening will be the greatest parade and street pageant participated in by all who are in any way connected with the carnival, together with civic societies, military companies, the floral parade, etc., all of which will be reviewed by the Queen and her court, the governor and other distinguished persons. Friday will occur the Stock Parade and in the evening the grand illumination of the city with fire works, calcium lights, search lights and Mardi Gras en masque bringing the carnival to a close in a blaze of glory. All this while there will be numerous other attractions, such as band concerts, balloon ascensions, a complete Midway, with trained animals, contortionists, ærialists, etc., a woman's building, curio hall and numerous other attractions. Altogether it will be the most stupendous event ever attempted in the state and the Fort Wayne people who are noted for always doing as they agree to will be able to put another proud feather in their caps.

OBITUARY

Oliver William, son of Harlend and Clara Bherns was born in Auburn, Ind., Dec. 26, 1894, and departed this life last Friday Sept 9, 1898, at the early age of 3 years, 8 months and 14 days. Little Oliver leaves to mourn his death, a mother and father, one brother and one sister. Thus another precious bud has been nipped by the frost of death, but one consoling thought remains to comfort us, that his little spirit is in heaven with Jesus. The funeral services were conducted from the house yesterday at 2:30 p. m. Interment took place in Evergreen cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

The Band at the Carnival.

The Auburn Band should have praise for their fine work at the Carnival. They were one of the chief attractions, helping to keep up a "continuous show" by filling all the pauses with enjoyable music. They put in time faithfully at $45 a day, or $1.50 for each member. The $45 a day looks like a good deal of money, but the $1.50 a day for each man, looks small enough when we remember that so many are professional or business men.

Carnival Finances

The officers of the Carnival have partially settled up their matters, and report the money received from stand rights was $460 this year in spite of the heavy loss by refunding to the ones driven out. Last year, the receipts from this source were $305. But altogether they may come out a little behind, but not much.

Vendetta.

By C. D. Clark.

A woman with a tattered shawl wrapped closely about her, and a face blue and pinched, as if from cold and hunger, stood before the door of a stately mansion, which was erected in the midst of spacious grounds in the most aristocratic street of a manufacturing city—a woman who had once been comely, but who was worn down by care and suffering until only the shadow of her former self.

The portly servant, who held the door partly open, and shielded his rotund form from the cold blast by shrinking behind it, was endeavoring to prevail upon the poor woman to go away.

"It's no use, ma'am, I assure you. I might give your message to Mr. Stanley, but he wouldn't see you; he has other things to employ his mind. You'd better go away, ma'am, indeed."

"I must see him," said the woman, in a voice rendered sharp by pain. "It is life or death with me now, and if you do not speak to him I must force my way in, in spite of you."

"You are unreasonable," pleaded the servant. "Now what good can you get by seeing him? He won't listen to you for a moment."

The woman pushed by him into the hall in a fierce way, and nearly upset him by doing so. As she stood in the warm hall, brilliantly lighted, a gentleman came out of an inner room—a well-preserved, handsome man, of forty or upwards, with a face which showed at once pride of station and utter scorn of the lowly.

"What is this woman doing here, William, and why does she not come to the servant's door?" he demanded.

"I could not keep her out, Mr. Stanley. She insists upon seeing you."

"Very well, madam," said Mr. Herbert Stanley, the factory owner, playing with the handsome seals pendant from his watch-chain. "What is your business with me, my good woman? My time is limited, please to remember."

"I am the wife of James Fenton, the loom fixer you ordered discharged yesterday," she said.

"Ah, yes; I remember now. He was insolent to the superintendent, I believe," in a drawling, affected tone.

"He was not insolent, sir—at least, he did not intend to be insolent. Mr. Phelps found fault with him for something which was neglected by another person."

"Well, well! what do you want?"

"I came to plead to you to take him back. We have had bad luck, Mr. Stanley, and I have two sick children at home, and we must have work or die."

"I don't want to hear a word in reference to taking him on again," said the factory owner, quickly. "Your husband is a dangerous man, madam. He creates discord between the manufacturers and the employes. Mr. Phelps was acting under my orders when I made an issue with your husband, and I am glad he is gone. There! not another word. William, show this woman out. I won't take her husband back."

"Yes, sir," responded the flunky.

"And don't admit her again."

"I'll be careful, sir. Now, Mrs. Fenton, you are keeping the door open. Please go out."

"Trouble will come of this, Mr. Stanley," she said, quietly, as she walked toward the door. "There's some gipsy blood in my veins, and we of the Romany race never forgive an injury. You may hear from me again. I don't know when, but I'll remember your kindness."

The door closed after her, and she went home through the driving sleet and entered her poor house. A man who was crouching over a small fire, rocking a baby on his knees, looked up quickly, and saw no hope in her face.

"He is harder than stone, Jamie," she said, softly. "God help us now, for man is against us."

He quietly put the baby into her arms, rose from his chair, and started for the door, but returned and kissed her passionately, twice.

"You've been a good wife to me, Zada," he said—"patient, tender and true. Don't sit up for me to-night. I've something to do, and may be late."

He went out, never to enter that door alive, for next morning he was found in the river, into which he had thrown himself. They buried him kindly, and his shopmates followed him to the grave; and Mr. Stanley sent William to the house with a present of money, but the widow flung it in the face of the messenger.

"His money perish with him!" she cried. "The man who murdered my poor husband shall never help care for his wife and his unhappy children. I'll die of hunger first!"

She did not go away at once, but worked at plain sewing. Both the sick children died and were buried, and, as the poor funeral passed the door of Mr. Stanley's great house, the anguished wife and mother looked up and saw him standing in the window, and close beside him a golden-haired boy, three years old, his only son—for Herbert Stanley had married late in life. The poor woman cast a fierce glance at the child.

"One is taken, and another left. Yes, yes; I see my way now!"

Two days after the funeral, she disappeared and was not seen again, and passed out of the memory of the people. But, three weeks later, an appalling calamity fell upon Herbert Stanley. Little Edward, upon whom so many hopes were set, disappeared from his nursery one night. The nurse had been drugged and the child taken away, and upon the coverlet of the little bed, pinned fast by a long-bladed dagger, was a paper upon which was written these words:

"Vendetta! I will return the child in fifteen years. Wait for him."

The blow was fatal to the mother of Edward, and she died within the month. All that wealth could do was done to find the child, but he seemed to have disappeared as utterly as if buried in the depths of the sea.

Herbert Stanley sold out his business, and spent three years in travel, searching for the boy, aided by skilled detectives; but his search was in vain. Some thought that the boy had been stolen for a ransom, and an immense sum was offered through the medium of the public press, but no response was made.

Herbert Stanley returned to his law office, which he had left to become a manufacturer, and soon reached the bench, and was known far and wide as a learned but austere judge, who had no mercy upon crime.

At last, while holding court in a city adjacent to the place where he had lived and suffered, a case of peculiar atrocity came up for judgment. It was a bank robbery, in the course of which a man had been shot, and one of the robbers had been taken red-handed.

When brought up for trial, he was seen to be a young, fresh-colored, handsome man, little over twenty years of age, but with the impress of crime marked upon every feature. He made no defense, and after a short trial was convicted of murder in the second degree. The judge rose to pronounce sentence, which would send the young man to prison for life.

"Thomas Welch—" he began.

"Hold on, old fellow!" said the prisoner. "I'd like to have you start fair and make no mistake. Thomas Welch is not my name."

"What is your true one?"

"Edward Stanley; so the old woman says. And see here, judge, before you go on I'd like to say a word—not because I'm going to craw-fish, for I ain't that kind of a little boy, but because I want things on the square; and in the first place I was stolen, when a child, by a woman named Zada Fenton, from Enfield village."

"Great heaven!" gasped the judge, sinking into a seat.

"She took me to a gipsy tribe, and we went to Europe, and until I was ten years old I was in England. I was taught to steal as soon as I could walk. The woman laid herself out to teach me evil, and made me think that every man's hand was against me. I've robbed, and stolen, and lied, and committed every crime under her teaching; but I didn't know any better. Now go ahead with your sentence. I'm guilty; but, after all, I ain't to blame."

"A sentence—a sentence!" screamed a voice from the seats in front of the railing, and a woman forced her way in and stood before the judge. "Look at me, Judge Stanley. Fifteen years ago you drove me from your door, and with such cruel words that my husband went out and killed himself. My children died and were buried, and I swore the Vendetta against you. Do you remember the promise I made you—to give the boy back in fifteen years? I have kept my word, and here he is—the child of my teachings, but the child of your heart, Edward Stanley! He pleads guilty; sentence him, I say. I am Zada Fenton, the wife of the man you murdered!"

Judge Stanley clutched at the air wildly, and fell down in a fit, and when they raised him he was dead. Another judge pronounced the sentence which sent the unfortunate son to prison for life, to which he went defiantly. A year later, in an attempt to break out of prison, he was shot by a guard, and the vengeance of Zada Fenton was complete. As for her, she disappeared, and it is thought went back to her tribe; but no one in that section ever saw her face again.—Saturday Night.

Agriculture in the Yukon.

A pamphlet has been issued by the Director of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, Ontario, on the agricultural possibilities of the Yukon district. One of our newspapers, in a review of it, said that the Director had issued a pamphlet on the agricultural possibilities of the Yukon, the most characteristic feature of which was that the Yukon district seemed to have no agricultural possibilities at all. At one or two points attempts have been made to grow vegetables, but with limited success. Mr. Harper, who resided at Pelly since 1891, had a garden in which he grew some very poor potatoes and other garden stuff. What succeeded best was lettuce. To protect them at night, when the sky was clear and frost threatened, he lowered an immense awning over them, raising it in the morning after the plants had recovered from the effects of the cold.

At Forty-Mile they have several gardens in which they grow a very fair potato, but it is not dry, and not at all well-tasting. They also grow good lettuce and a small cabbage which is very much relished, because it is the only vegetable supply there, and at present you cannot import any. This shows conclusively one need not count on anything in the way of agriculture as food supply, for two reasons: the extent of available soil is very limited in comparison with the rest of the country, and it might be said frosts occur every month in the year. Close to the river, the temperature of the water from June to September runs from about forty-six degrees to fifty-eight degrees. Of course, the proximity of a large body of water at those temperatures considerably aids vegetable life and helps its development close to the river, because it modifies the adjacent temperatures. But away from the river a mile or so you have serious frosts every month in the year.—Geographical Journal.

A Timely Warning.

While a British brig was gliding smoothly along before a good breeze in the South Pacific, three months ago, a flock of small birds about the size, shape and color of paroquets settled down in the rigging and passed an hour or more resting. The second mate was so anxious to find out the species to which the visiting strangers belonged that he tried to entrap a specimen, but the birds were too shy to be thus caught, and too spry to be seized by the quick hands of the sailors. At the end of about an hour the birds took the brig's course, and disappeared, but towards nightfall they came back and passed the night in the main-top. The next morning the birds flew off again, and when they returned at noon the sailors scattered some food about the decks. By this time the birds had become so tame that they hopped about the decks picking up the crumbs. That afternoon an astonishing thing happened. The flock came flying swiftly toward the brig. Every bird seemed to be piping as if pursued by some little invisible enemy on wings, and they at once huddled down behind the deck-house. The superstitious sailors at once called the captain of the brig, who rubbed his eyes and looked at the barometer. A glance showed that something was wrong with the elements, and the brig was put in shape to outride a storm. The storm came about twenty minutes after the birds had reached the vessel. For a few minutes the sky was like the waterless bottom of a lake—a vast arch of yellowish mud—and torrents of rain fell. Why it did not blow very hard, no one knows; but on reaching port, two days later, the captain learned that a great tornado had swept across that part of the sea. The birds left the vessel on the morning after the storm and were not seen again.—Maryland Bulletin.

Passing Away of the Old Curiosity Shop.

The most curious of all curious shops are decidedly the curiosity shops, now becoming scarcer every year. Certainly these have lots of useless things to sell, and, strange to say, nobody ever purchases them. This is unusual in the ordinary course, as for some useless things there is quite a large demand, but for the articles of vertu and knick-knacks from all corners of the globe there is little or no market, except at fitful seasons. How the old gentlemen, who frequently keep such shops, amass such a heterogenous stock is beyond a limited comprehension.

Old china, bowie knives, pistols, shells, interesting things in ivory and what nots of every order are jumbled together in a surprising manner; still, nothwithstanding that the affable old man will show you everything he has to sell, and is perfectly willing to deal with you if you have aught to dispose of, he never seems to have any customers to buy. And the old gentleman does not mind. He opens his shop regularly at irregular hours and shuts it at irregular hours, and if he wants to go anywhere on business he locks and bars and bolts the door and leaves the place deserted and unprotected, and contentedly goes his journey.

Curiosity shops grow rarer every year, but it is hardly possible that they will disappear altogether. Their place is largely taken now by fashionable establishments that sell cracked saucers, chipped plates and consumptive teapots and fans. The trade in "ancestors," too, is going out of date; people don't want ancestors, they want money; so shops that only supply reminiscences of other days are out of place.—London Globe.

The First Glimpse of a Continent.

It was early in the year 1605. Europe was but just awakening to the great changes introduced by the destruction of the Spanish Armada. England was but just transferred from the last of the house of Tudor to the first of the house of Stuart; Shakespeare was still acting his own plays at the Globe Theatre; Bacon was meditating his philosophy; and Sir Walter Raleigh was still dreaming of new discoveries and settlements in America. In the East the star of Portugal was already setting, and that of Holland was rising to its short-lived brilliancy; and only five years has passed since Queen Elizabeth had signed the charter of the Merchant Adventurers, trading to the countries of the Indies, which laid the foundation-stone of the empire of British India.

The Dutch adventurers in the East were, like their English rivals, merchants first of all. It was with no idea of founding empires like those of the Spaniards in Mexico and Peru that the thrifty burghers of Antwerp and Rotterdam sent their vessels to the Asiatic Archipelago and took possession of Java. To exchange the goods of Europe for the spices and gold, the pearls and precious stones of the East was the object with which they set out, and the purpose from which they allowed nothing else seriously to divert their attention. It was to this that Holland owed the honor of having been the first to discover the last of the continents, and perhaps it may have been to this also that she owed it that she discovered it for others and not for herself.

The Dairy of the Ants.

Students of insect life are aware that ants keep in their homes small creatures that answer the purpose served by cows. These aphides secrete honey upon which the ants feed. Among the curious facts noted in the study of ants and their habits, is that certain other insects live upon what they steal from the ants when they are fed. They take up their abode in the ant hills. Some of these boarders or dependents seem to have no special reason for being, others serve excellent purposes. Ants keep slaves and compel them to work. They cultivate the soil and raise crops to supply their households with necessary food.

Zoologists say that all known species of wild animals are gradually diminishing in size.

CUBAN AS A MAZEPPA.

ADVENTURE WITH A BAND OF MERCILESS GUERRILLAS.

Senorita Monica Tied to the Back of a Wild Horse Which Was Turned Loose on the Plains—Her Companions Murdered.

Rescued and Avenged.

There is one happy young woman in this town, writes a San Antonio, Tex., correspondent. Her name is Valencia Monica, whose father is an officer in the Cuban army. Miss Monica is the heroine of a most remarkable escape from the hands of the merciless Spaniards.

About a year ago she was in Cuba, and, in company with a family of reconcentrados, she attempted to make the journey across the country from the little interior plantation of Palma to Santiago in the hope of finding some opportunity at the latter place to escape to the United States. An officer with a spark of humanity in his bosom, touched by the miserable condition of the unfortunates, furnished them with a pass and assured the young lady that no soldiers would harm them.

They passed several columns of soldiers in safety, but one evening a dozen or more drunken Spanish guerrillas rode up to their cart and overturned it.

VALENCIA MONICA.

The young lady showed her pass, but the leader paid no attention to it. After offering her a drink from his bottle he staggered against her and made an attempt to take her face in his hands.

Now thoroughly alarmed and preferring death to dishonor, the little Cuban quickly drew a stiletto from her bosom and sprang at the monster's throat, barely grazing his beard with the keen blade.

"I cannot tell you what happened or at least repeat one-half of the horrors of that terrible night," said Miss Monita. "I cannot recall it without a shudder. While drinking and carousing they butchered the man who was with us with their machetes, and laughed at his dying agonies. One threw a lariat over my neck, and after they had disarmed me they bound my hands to a tree."

SENORITA MONICA LASHED TO A WILD HORSE.

A very slight circumstance doubtless saved the young lady from a fate worse than death, though it subjected her to one of the most frightful ordeals ever endured by mortal flesh.

One of the guerrillas came into the camp leading a very wild-looking black stallion, which he in his drunken recklessness declared was the devil's own saddle horse. They had just stolen the fine animal, and he had thrown every one who had mounted him.

"Do you think you could ride him, my little tigress?" said one of the guerrillas, approaching Miss Monica and making an attempt to become familiar. Her answer, which was, "I should like nothing better than to try," seemed to tickle the desperate characters immensely. Miss Monica says that she hardly knows why she made such an answer. She realized that he had no chance of escaping from the drunken set and would willingly have exchanged her position for the back of the wildest horse in the world.

"All right," shouted the guerrilla chief, "the little tiger came near cutting my throat and I will just send her to the devil on horseback."

The big guerrilla seized the young girl in his arms, and, running to the wild horse, he threw her across the animal's back and shouted to his comrades to fetch ropes.

"Let us have some fun," he roared. "Lash the little rebel to the wild devil's back and turn him loose and we will chase her off the island and save somebody the trouble of slaying her."

The next moment the fiends were binding the terrified girl on the back of the equally terrified horse.

Before Miss Monica realized what her tormentors were doing one of the wretches cut the rope that was about the horse's neck and fired a pistol. The frightened animal sprang into the air and struck the earth running. Pistol balls rained about him, but, unharmed, he seemed to sail above the earth with the wind, and was soon beyond the reach of the guerrillas.

The girl had little hope of escaping with her life. But her good angel had not deserted her. A party of Cuban soldiers who had followed the guerrillas saw the horse coming. He was nearly exhausted, and when he saw the soldiers' horses he ran among them and stopped. He was completely frightened out of his senses, and so weak that he made no attempt to move when a soldier threw a rope over his neck.

Many of the Cubans knew Senor Monica, and their anger knew no bounds. At sunrise they fell upon the guerrillas' camp and shot every one of them to death except the leader of the gang, who was captured and hanged later in the day.

WILL THE CUBAN LEARN HIS LESSONS?

NOT FICTION, BUT REAL LIFE.

Story of a Daughter's Devotion and a Lover's Faithfulness.

Twenty-five years ago there was a romance at Maysville—a love story in which there was nothing out of the ordinary. It became known here that two young people, who will be called John Smith and Mary Jones, were engaged to be married.

The wedding day was set, and nearly all the preparations had been made, when the mother of the bride-to-be became ill. On account of her illness the marriage had to be postponed.

In a short time it became apparent that the mother of Mary Jones was insane. Arrangements were made to send her to the asylum, and it was then that her daughter raised objections. She would not have her mother sent to the asylum at all, and declared that she would devote her life to taking care of her.

When she made the vow Mary Jones was 18 years old, a bright, intelligent young woman, handsome and talented. She triumphed over the arguments of her friends and settled down to a life in which there appeared to be little hope, except the reward for filial duty.

She put aside all thoughts of the life she had contemplated, and from that day she has been her mother's loving and devoted attendant. The mother's mind is a total wreck. She is not violent, but her mind is gone, and she must have constant care and attention. Twenty-five years have passed since she became demented, and during that time her daughter has not been away from her a single day.

John Smith still makes the Sunday night visits as regularly as in the olden time. His hair is gray, and there are wrinkles in his face. The girl he expected to claim as his bride is an old maid now, and her once bright eyes are beginning to lose the luster of youth, but she is still firm in her determination to remain with her mother as long as her mother lives.

The engagement has never been broken. The young man said he would wait until her task at home was over, and he has waited. The years seem long to him, but he is true. If he ever grows impatient the patient face of the woman whose devotion is more than remarkable is enough to make him ashamed of his impatience. It is said to his credit that he has never made the slightest effort to persuade the daughter to leave her mother.

Stories like this are often told in books, but this is one in real life.—St. Joseph News.

FIGHT TO A FINISH.

Duel to the Death Between Wounded American and Spaniard.

The battle cry, "Remember the Maine," still ring in the ears of the wounded Americans on the field of Santiago. Round about lay the bodies of the dead, keeping silent companionship with the wounded. Groans and sighs filled the air. The brushwood, thick and sturdy and straight, trampled down by the hoofs of the Rough Riders' horses, was saturated with the blood of friend and foe, until it no longer hid from each other's view the fallen of two nations.

In the distance the sharp report of the guns told of the onward march to victory. It goaded the wounded Americans to action—the stricken foe to revenge. From behind a tuft of grass on the blades of which blood hung congealed, a head arose. It was the visage of a Spaniard, deathly pale, with a stream of blood trickling from his temple. His fiendish gaze was fastened upon the outstretched form of an American soldier, who, face downward, lay with his head against a tree. He was still, as one in death, his life blood ebbing away, he thought, through a wound in his side.

THE DUEL.

Slowly the Spaniard propped his arms beneath his body and grasped his gun. There in the brush beside him was his deadliest foe. Crawl to his aid? Not he. He would riddle the body with Mauser bullets. He would rejoice to mutilate even the lifeless to demonstrate his hatred. Quick as a flash he fired, the bullet striking the American in the leg. The sting of the lead brought the soldier back to consciousness. At a glance he took in the situation. The gleam of fierce, fiendish hatred in the eye of the Spaniard convinced him that this would be a duel to the death. He returned the fire, and sent shot after shot toward his antagonist's quarter. A fusillade followed, and ceased only with the death of the Spaniard. The American, who had dropped in his tracks beyond his battle line, was rescued by his comrades, who had been attracted to the spot by the terrific struggle of the two wounded men.—St. Louis Republic.

"Hardly Worth While."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat tells what purports to be a true story of an "Eastern woman" who used to be notorious among her friends for the long time it took her to dress. As the newspaper puts it, "There was no case on record of a guest who had been greeted under her roof with any degree of promptitude." Now she has reformed, and this is how the reform came about:

One evening, at a private entertainment of some kind, she encountered a certain bishop, an old friend of the family.

"Ah, my dear Mrs. Smith," remarked the ecclesiastic. "How are you? I passed your house yesterday, and thought of dropping in to see you.'

"And you didn't do it? That was very unkind of you."

"Well, no. You see, I said to myself, 'I have just one hour to call upon Mrs. Smith. She will take fifty-seven minutes to dress. That will leave just three for our talk. It is hardly worth while.' "

Bagpipes in India.

Several Punjab regiments of infantry march to the sound of the bagpipes. The harsh tones of the Indian instrument, and its limited range of notes, jars on the ears of Englishmen. "That tired feeling," which is common to all who live outside the Land o' Cakes when the national music is in full blast is actually shared by the Highlander himself when the pipes are in the hands of a Goorkha. There is no one who expresses such pain at the sound of the native Indian bagpipes as our Scotch friends. In their estimation the Goorkha is just "makin' a fule of the instrument."

WORLD'S LARGEST MELON.

Attained Enormous Dimensions Without Loss of Flavor or Quality.

Watermelons five feet long, thirty-four inches thick and weighing ninety-eight pounds would make a pickaninny's eyes "bug out" to an alarming degree. Those accustomed to huge and luscious watermelons would feel as if slighted by Providence at sight of the dimensions asserted for the product of Rocky Ford, Colo. But the size herein recorded is duly and authoritatively asserted for the product of State Senator G. W. Sevink's farm in the Centennial State. The particular melon which was measured and found to be thus great was the last of last year's crop. It was placed in storage for the winter and recently formed a portion of a feast given by Mr. Sevink to his neighbors.

SEVINK AND HIS MELON.

The cultivation of melons, cantaloupes and similar fruit was commenced by Mr. Sevink and a number of neighbors in the Rocky Ford region some eighteen years ago. The fruit grew successfully, attaining enormous dimensions without losing flavor or quality. In fact, the usual penalty of overgrowth was entirely lacking, the products being exceptionally sweet and juicy, as well as of mammoth girth. The superiority of these melons was attributed to the nature of the soil about Rocky Ford, which has been found the best in the land for such propagation. The melons grown there exceed in size, flavor and juiciness all others in the world.

Four years ago Nat Wetzel, a St. Louis, Mo., provision merchant, visited Colorado and sampled some of these big melons. He was so well pleased that he contracted for a part of a car load for sale in his home city. The introduction was fortunate, for that year there was a failure of the Missouri crop. The venture proved a success, and the following year eighteen car loads were contracted for and disposed of without trouble. Last year the entire product of the region was shipped to St. Louis and found ready sale, 124 car loads being the total amount shipped to the Missouri metropolis.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

Keep at It.

When trade is flush, and with a rush
Large orders to you come,
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
And keep things on the "hum."

When trade is poor don't close the door;
The rule is still the same;
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
And thereby win fresh fame.

Indeed 'tis true whate'er you do,
This is the safest plan,
"You'll find it wise to advertise,"
For then you lead the van.
—Henry Morrill Warren.

There are some men in every town who do not advertise. You may not know them; very few people do. They call themselves business men, but they are not. Everybody who is in business is not a business man or a business woman, by any means. The moment you enter a store you can tell whether or not the proprietor is endowed with business capacity. The real business man advertises. There is a snap and bustle about his place that denotes business ability and activity, while in the store of the one whose announcement you never see in the newspapers there is lack of business energy, lethargy, and a general air of dilapidation. This man is not really in business; he is only hanging to the ragged edge of the business world. In this age to be really and truly in business one must advertise.

Advertising pays. Yet, there are a few men who spend money for advertising space who do not make it pay. They would not buy a farm and dump a lot of wheat or corn on its unplowed surface with the expectation of raising a bountiful crop, but they treat the advertising space they buy in just that way, and then wonder why the harvest doesn't come. Or, they tell the newspaper man that nobody reads advertisements.

Advertising Axioms.

A good advertisement in a good paper—a good business follows.

Roosting on a dry goods box and groaning over hard times won't bring success. Advertising will.

Shrewd firms, like kites, rise against the wind when they keep their wares constantly before the public eye.

The logic of an easy reading ad is like a raw oyster, you swallow it before you are conscious of the fact.

The success of a good ad, like that of a good salesman, is largely dependent on the dress given it. We dress ads.

In order for an ad to make a "home run" it must touch four bases—the eye, the interest, the heart and the pocket-book.

One unique clause in your ad, if born of truth, will often make people go miles out of their way to find your store.

When the argument of your ad strikes the bull's eye of public approval the clink of change will be heard in your tills.

—Dr. Morr and family of Orland, who have been the guests of his brother and mother here for a few days, returned home yesterday.

—The Hicksville fair will be held this year Sept. 13 to 16. This is one of the few fairs that has survived the hard times and always paid their premiums. 35-36

—Miss Lizzie Johnson returned Saturday to her home at Fort Wayne, after several days at the Carnival and visiting Mrs. C. C. Shaffer and other friends.

—Mrs. Herman Groscop was brought back for burial yesterday. There were many sad features surrounding her early death and her husband has the sympathy of all.

—The Hicksville fair company is offering more money this year for fast races than ever before. The prospects are for the hottest races ever witnessed on their grounds. 35-36

—Miss Nailer, who visited during the Carnival with the families of Sheriff Stroh and Charles Pommert, returned to her home at Sharpsville Tuesday morning.

—M. B. Masters has been working off and on as special night-watch at the Eckhart factory, whenever the regular night-watch, Mr. Marvin, had to be absent or was sick.

—Team and hands are cleaning up the streets now. The public square and some of the streets looked pretty tough over Sunday. But Auburn now begins to look again like our own neat little city.

—The Grain Drill for a farmer to buy is the Superior Single Disc Drill. It will work in trashy ground where Hoe Drills will not work. Call and see us before you buy. Culbertson & Boland.

—One of the new features of the Hicksville fair this season will be the Japanese day fire works. This is a new importation direct from Japan, and will be seen for the first time at the Hicksville fair. 35-36

—When you buy a wagon why not buy the best. The Turnbull wagon runs easier and will wear longer than any other wagon made. Call and examinine them before you buy. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. H. B. McCord.

—Father's remedy Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., have a cure for constipation called Father's Favorettes. A very large field is open, as a great portion of the people are sufferers, and this is the first assured cure for old and chronic cases; besides these Favorettes cure all stomach troubles. Get a sample of your druggist.

—FOR SALE:—Two good top buggies for sale cheap, Inquire at this office.

—Lew Will's and wife went home this forenoon. He is foreman of the trimming department in the great Parry Carriage factory at Indianapolis.

—Sept. 13 to 16 will be held the annual exposition at Hicksville. The management has arranged for a base ball tournament, and will furnish base ball every day of the fair, by the crack clubs of the county. Big money up every day. 35-36

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. H. B. McCord.

—C. W. Heitz, our young New Era friend, was in town today, he and a fellow soldier, Phil Holman, having come up from Butler township this forenoon. Mr. Heitz was in the Angola company and Mr. Holman in ours, and both got along fairly well in the service. Mr. Heitz will begin teaching his school but has made arrangements for a vacation at the time they go back to Indianapolis. Then if he is not mustered out he will drop the school and help whip Spain till she gets some sense. Mr. Holman has a school also.

—More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. H. B. McCord.

BUTLER.

Butler people contributed most liberally by their presence in making the Auburn Carnival a success.

Vigorous efforts are being put forth to make this year's free street fair, far outstrip any previous one.

A number of 157th boys from Butler are home on furlough. They all show the effects of out door life. Some of them are in poor health.

The canning factory is running overtime and the tomato harvest exceeds all former ones in quantity. If the frost holds off the output will be an immense one.

Mrs. Sarah Warner still lingers on the brink of dissolution. Her death is expected any time.

The vicinity of Hamilton was visited last week by the first death from diptheria in the person of James Renner's little daughter.

Mrs. Sylvester Shoup is slowly convalescing from a hard attact of typhoid fever.

J. A. Campbell visited Corunna last Monday on business, and while there adjusted a small matter for James Finch, township trustee.

There are still some murmurings of complaint about the town business, and the enforcement of the laws relating to saloons and gambling. It is claimed that one saloon is run in open opposition to law, not having obtained a corporation license.

SEDAN.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, of Hudson visited old friends in Sedan last week and also attended the Auburn Carnival.

The soldier boys from this place belonging to Company I, 157th returned home on a 30 day furlough last Saturday, all except Ed Casselman, he not being able to come, but is expected home during the week. The boys in general are not in the best of health, but all seem to be in good spirits and willing to return at the expiration of their furlough. We were glad to see the young men of Sedan respond as they did to their country's call and truly we are putting it mildly to say that we are glad to see them return. Sedan has a lot of young men which any community might feel proud of.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Crane spent Sunday in Hudson.

Willis Wheaton of Co. I. 157th went to Ashley Sunday morning to spend a few days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Rinesmith.

Everybody went to the Carnival last week or at least we have not heard of anyone that missed it and all agree in pronouncing it grand.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Wheaton visited in Ashley Sunday.

People from this way who attended the Carnival last week found a great of fault with and about the bridge across the tamarac swamp as it is not safe to cross after night and has been condemned by the commissioners now we would like to know why this is not attended to. Our commissioner from the north district crosses this old tumble down rickety thing every week, and wants the people to reelect him.

Food for School Children.

Every public school in Paris has a lunch-room on the premises where the children are provided with warm meals, free to those who are too poor to pay. The cost of the food thus furnished is about 2 cents a head.

Sugar Bounties in United States.

During the six years ending June 30, 1897, the United States government has paid out $36,041,134 in bounties on sugar produced in the United States.

THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII

The commission appointed to settle matters in Hawaii has decided on a name for the islands composing the group heretofore known as the "Sandwich Islands." It will recommended that Congress name the group, "The Territory of Hawii." And as far as the different conditions will permit the territorial government is to be the same as in our other territories. The president appoints a territorial judge and attorney, and then the people can choose their own territorial legislature But as different islands, and the different localities in the same island have different conditions, some arrangements will be made to see that all are properly treated and their reasonable rights secured. Local self-government will be secured as far as possible and each island will have a seperate local government as far as deemed wise or necessary. It might be added that some form of government like this will probably be arranged to suit the needs of Porto Rico, and possibly of Cuba.

OBITUARY

Joseph Pfefferl was born March 9, 1851 in Bavaria, Germany, and departed this life in the hospital at Fort Wayne, Ind., last Saturday night Sept. 10, 1898, at the age of 47 years, 6 months and 31 days. Mr. Pfefferl came to this country at the age of 24 years. He embarked at Leopold-Germany and arrived at New York City on the 25th day of May 1873. On the 4th day of 1875 his naturalization papers were issued in the Clerks office in the city of Fort Wayne where he took oath of allegiance. On the 20th day of Dec. 1876, Mr. Pfefferl was joined in marriage to Miss Catherine Gause. To this union were born seven children, 4 sons and 3 three daughters, two of whom preceded him to the spirit world. After their marriage they lived in Fort Wayne for one-year, from there they moved on the Hanna farm west of Huntertown Allen County Ind., here they lived two years. Nearly 17 years ago Mr. Pfefferl with his family moved to Auburn where they have since lived. For several years he occupied his time farming and teaming to support his family. He was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Headly as town marshal, and then was elected by the town of Auburn as Marshal for two years, which position he filled with credit. Mr. Pfefferl was a kind father and husband, and provided well for his family. His place in the home will be greatly missed by his wife and children. Mr. Pfefferl was a great sufferer the last few weeks of his life; last Saturday morning he was taken to Ft. Wayne to hospital with the view of securing better medical aid, but soon succumbed to the enemy, death. Mr. Pfefferl was reared in the Catholic faith in his native land, and before he departed this life the Priest of the Catholic church in Fort Wayne, visited him, and administered to him the last sacrements. Mr. Pfefferl leaves to mourn his death a devoted wife, 5 children, one brother and one sister are living in the old country and the other sister in Fort Wayne. The funeral service was conducted from the house Tuesday at 2 p. m. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemitery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

Extra Work for the Mints.

One of the provisions of the war revenue law requires the coinage of 1,500,000 silver dollars a month out of the bullion of the treasury. The results are that the mints at New Orleans, Philadelphia and San Francisco are working sixteen hours per day and are unable, at present, to supply the demand for other coin without some delay.

German Employment Bureaus.

The public employment bureaus of the German government find situations for the unemployed at the rate of about 13,000 a month. The number found in January, 1898, was 13,648.

Deep Bore in Silesia.

A boring has just been made at Rybintz, in Silesia, in which the earth's crust has been penetrated to the depth of 2,210 yards. This is the greatest depth thus far attained. The boring was made for scientific purposes. No unusual features, however, presented themselves, except that the thermometer indicated at that depth the pretty high temperature of 150 degrees Fahrenheit.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

NO RISE IN PRICES.

Heretofore when the United States was at war there was a considerable advance in the prices of commodities and products as compared with times of peace. The present war, however, is an exception to the general rule, though over 200,000 men have been changed from producers to consumers by entering the military service. The price of labor has not materially advanced, if at all. The war has created no appreciable demand for labor, though thousands are engaged in manufacturing clothing and uniforms of war for the army and navy. Wheat and breadstuffs generally have declined in price since war was declared against Spain, the failure of Leiter, the great grain speculator, having much greater effect upon the market than the withdrawal of 200,000 men from civil life.

Of course, there are many articles which necessarily have advanced or will advance in price because of the war. Sulphur, niter, and other materials used in the manufacture of gunpowder are higher; but lead and iron are not. Wheat and flour are lower than they were before the war commenced, but the decline is caused by more abundant crops this year than last year in foreign countries. Hay is higher, especially on this coast, but that is due to the drought, not to the war nor to the administration.

The principal reason why the war has not increased the prices of products is that there is no more money in general circulation than there was before the declaration of war. The bonds issued by the government took $200,000,000 out of circulation for the time being. This tends to reduce prices, and would do so were it not that there is no more money in general circulation again for the purchase of supplies and the payment of the troops. A part of the $50,000,000 appropriated by Congress, to be expended by the President as he saw fit, was paid to foreign countries for vessels and war materials, and very little of the money paid the troops and sailors at Manila and in Cuba will find its way back to the United States. A Spanish steamship line will receive half a million dollars or more for transporting the Spanish soldiers who surrendered at Santiago to their native land, so that on the whole the war reduces instead of increases the volume of money in circulation in the United States.—Gardnersville (Nev.) Record.

Starving the Soldiers.

While death at the hands of the Spanish soldiers has been a rare event during the late war, death from the neglect of the war department has been frequent. Especial attention to this shameful and criminal condition of affairs has been called in more than one instance, and the death of Lieutenant William Tiffany, of the rough riders, in Boston will intensify the feeling of resentment which has arisen against the war department. Lieutenant Tiffany served at Santiago and was brought north in the Olivette and landed at Boston. He was taken to a hotel, given care, but could not rally. The death certificate, signed by Dr. F. M. Johnson, gives this as the cause of young Tiffany's death: "Death due to protracted fevers, due to war life in Cuba, and starvation."

While the government cannot control fevers, it can provide food and medicines and decent shelter for its soldiers, and this it has not done. There have been criminal blunders in the selections of camps, criminal blunders in sending troops home in pest ships, criminal blunders in exposing men to contagion, criminal blunders in failing to supply medicine and surgeons. In addition there have been robbery, inefficiency, carelessness and cruel neglect in the commissary department. Alger has much to answer for, and by the storm of popular indignation which is rising he will be swept out of public life into an oblivion which is his just deserts.

Trouble for Hanna.

Mark Hanna is not going to have everything his own way, even in his own party. When young Garfield was "turned down" by the anti-Hanna Republicans of Cleveland the rotund bass who boasts that he "conciliates with an ax" received a gentle hint that trouble was brewing for him. But just now the sensation of the hour in Ohio politics is the alleged alliance between former Secretary of State Sherman and Governor Bushnell. These two prominent leaders of the Republican hosts in the Buckeye state have not as a usual thing worked together, but a common hatred for their common foe, Mark Hanna, has made them friends and allies.

John Sherman visited Columbus and had a long and confidential conference with Governor Bushnell. Under the circumstances this is almost the equivalent of a declaration of war against Hanna. It is so considered by Republicans, and the greatest anxiety to the boss. In addition to the trouble Hanna is going to have in his own party, the Democrats have devoted a plank to him in their state platform demanding that the senate of the United States investigate the charges of bribery formulated against him by the state legislature.

On the whole, it looks as though Hanna might be forced before long to arrive at the conclusion that a politician's life is not a happy one.

Jobbery in the War Department.

Alger has been surrounded by a coterie of jobbers always on the make. It is surmised they have been preaching patriotism to cover their boodling. The expenditures of the war should be thoroughly inquired into when Congress meets by an independent committee, not for any partisan or personal purpose, but to find out the weak spots of our system that they may be guarded against in the future. We want to have in stock the benefits of our experience, no matter what party may be in power.—Pittsburg Post.

No Large Standing Army.

The plutocracy, while charging that the Democracy is seeking a new issue, is depending upon the issue it is attempting to make on the question of foreign conquest, to distract the attention of the people from vital questions of taxation, finance, the aggressions of corporations, and the subordination of every branch of the Federal Government to the influence of concentrated wealth. Once a large standing army becomes a fact, with the attendant force of officialism that will grow up under the colonization policy, election will become a farce; our legislative halls and courts the mere tools of an aristocracy that will trample with impunity on constitutional government and perpetuate its power on the absolute destruction of personal liberty.—Cleveland Recorder.

Needless Bond Issue.

Professional financiers rose to the occasion during the war with Spain and demanded an issue of $500,000,000 worth of government bonds. This demand was finally reduced by $100,000,000 and an issue of $400,000,000 was authorized. Secretary Gage was besought by the money dealers to offer the whole amount, but decided to issue only half the number of bonds authorized. His decision has proved fortunate for the people of this country, and it would have been still more fortunate if he had waited sixty days, because in that event he would not have issued any bonds at all. There is a great surplus, growing greater every day, in the treasury, and there is no way to get this idle money into circulation except for the government to buy back its bonds. In the meantime the people of the United States have been burdened with an interest-bearing debt of $200,000,000.

Democratic Congressmen pointed out the mistake when the suggestion of issuing bonds was made by the Republicans, but the cry of "obstructionists" was raised and the Democrats yielded rather than to place themselves in a position which would have been construed as an opposition to war measures. Republicans will have to bear the responsibility of the needless and costly issue of bonds. Democrats suggested methods of meeting war expenses which events have proved would have been amply equal to the emergency, but the Republicans wanted to serve the money dealers, and now they find themselves in a serious dilemma.

"Object Lesson for Bryan."

So the tradesmen of Santiago refuse to take the American silver dollar except at 50 per cent discount? Let Shafter be recalled and send Colonel Bryan in his place. If he cannot turn the Santiagoans from the error of their ways he may learn a thing or two which will be useful to him in his political campaign.—Boston Transcript.

How about the discount on American gold coin at Ponce? For whom is that an "object lesson?" Why do not the gold-worshiping fanatics give us a few "object lessons" from the conditions which have prevailed in India since the mints of that country were closed to the coinage of silver? Why do they not lay some stress upon the fact that even with gold bars as security, money has frequently commanded 12 per cent interest at Bombay? Why do they not advert to the historic fact that there have been times when money could not be borrowed in Calcutta at all upon the security of gold? That the merchants and business men (native and foreign) would have nothing but silver? They would take silver bars quickly enough, but not gold bars. Why? Simply because they could have the silver bars coined into money, while the gold bars were merely a commodity the same as pig iron. And the law made the difference, but it is safe to say that not one gold scribbler in ten knows it.

The Repudiators.

The Republican newspapers are berating the unpatriotic express companies who are refusing to pay the stamp tax required by the war revenue bill. They are deserving all the pounding they may get. To refuse to pay a just share of the war tax is nothing short of treason. They do not deserve to be protected in this country and ought to be kicked out.

But we wonder if these same Republican newspapers remember how they abused the Democrats in 1896 for what the Chicago platform said on corporations and trusts? Because the Democrats said all men were not treated alike, the Republicans howled traitor, anarchist, and repudiator till they grew black in the face. Nothing was too vile nor too low-lived to apply to anyone who dared suggest that may-be the corporations had more than their share of influence with the powers. Now it is different. This is a horse of another color. Somebody else is pinched, and how they howl! We wonder who are the real repudiators this load of poles. Sic 'em, Tige!—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

A Momentous Contest.

We are now entering upon a momentous contest. Gold monopoly has the Executive, and is making superhuman efforts to control both houses of Congress. In that event, legislation will be devised whereby the machinery of government control for the good of the people will be placed in the hands of bankers, money changers and stock jobbers with which to tax, harass and impoverish the mass of the people. You must not allow gold monopoly to continue to own the executive branch of the government. You must not allow gold monopoly to acquire a complete title to the two houses of Congress, for if you do your government is a despotism. It will rob you and treat you with more cruelty, harshness and oppression than the Russian government is said by its enemies to treat the serfs of that country.—Silver-Knight Watchman.

Needful Preparations for War.

"In time of peace prepare for war" is a saying which has been tremendously emphasized by the affair between the United States and Spain. There is a considerable extent to which war preparations can be made without violation of the time-honored precepts against the maintenance of a large standing army. The American objection to a large standing army is opposition to a military establishment that means constant invitation to war.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

You Know What to Expect.

If gold monopoly rules, you know very well that it is more heartless, more cruel, more relentless and more grasping than any other despotism that can be invented by man. There is no passion as wicked as avarice. There is no sin so far reaching and destructive as usury, and if you permit avarice to rule and usury to fatten on the labors of the people you will be slaves. Resist now while it is in your power. Arouse your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor, and keep the good work moving on, so that you will be ready for the great battle at the next election in which the fate of humanity is involved.—Silver Knight Watchman.

THE PEOPLE'S MONEY

Stable Dollars.

Goldbugs frequently speak of money as though its only function was as a medium of exchange to effect transactions in present. Almost any form of money—whether gold or clam shells—would answer that purpose. The important thing in money, however, is to have it remain stable for periods of time, so that contracts will be paid with the same value as at the time of their inception. The chief end to be sought is to maintain the parity between money and property.

The foregoing illustrations make it clear that there is only one possible definition of honest money. That is, an honest dollar would be one that maintained the same average purchasing power yesterday, to-day and forever, as measured, not by the prices of any particular articles at any particular time, but by the general average of prices. Such a dollar would do justice to every one. The creditor would get all that he bargained for; he has no right to insist on being paid in a dollar that is not worth more property than the one he lent.

The debtor, too, would pay a dollar representing the same amount of property as that he borrowed. But if a choice must be had between a slightly rising dollar and a slightly falling dollar—in other words, between falling prices and rising prices—it is clear that rising prices are more beneficial to the community, as a whole, than falling prices.

Gold as a Standard.

Current production of silver, like wheat and cotton, is absorbed by current demands. The world's silver product is sixteen pounds to one pound of gold. Why refuse the natural, logical ratio of 16 to 1? Gold is constantly diminishing in output compared with demand. The price barometer is proof of this. The index numbers of prices show the cause and cure of this financial depression. If nailed to the masts of the press Dun and Bradstreet would be powerless to "fool some of the people all of the time."

The authorities teach that independent bimetallism and parity are a simple undertaking for this country, because price level and money level are international. Our present prices require our present money volume of about $1,750,000,000. To lose our gold without a primary substitute means to lower our prices and raise in "the same proportion" the prices in countries receiving it. Yankee trading and the "greed for gain" prevents this. Hence it is axiomatic that our gold cannot leave us until a substitute fills the void.

Alger and the Press.

Secretary Alger believes that he can stave off an investigation with his barrel.—Salt Lake Herald.

The administration should devise ways and means of losing Alger as soon as possible.—Pittsburg Post.

Things are now coming General Alger's way—such things as brick-bats, clubs, rocks, etc.—Kansas City World.

Doubtless Secretary Alger has heard of the French saying that he who excuses himself accuses himself.—Boston Herald.

Secretary Alger's defense, as published in administration organs, is a string of evasions.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

No doubt Secretary Alger realizes by this time the folly of attempting to bolster a bad cause by letter writing.—Boston Herald.

Secretary Alger cannot make any mistake in providing too bountifully for the needs of the men at Camp Wikoff.—New York World.

The coon that won't come down is certain to fall. Secretary Alger might as well paste that sentiment in his hat.—Boston Herald.

By the time Congress meets, the people will know just who were Alger's accomplices in the neglect of the American soldier.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A strong effort is to be made to get Alger out of the cabinet. If it succeeds and Alger is philosophic, he will retire to his barrel like Diogenes did to his tub.—Salt Lake Herald.

Secretary Alger is having an opportunity now to compile a large scrapbook, all about himself, that might make even a Guggenheimer indulge in questionable French.—Boston Globe.

Camps in unhealthy localities, poisonous water, scanty and bad food, exposure to the elements for want of tents, cots and blankets—these have killed hundreds of men, unwounded men, who entered the army to fight for their country.—New York Journal.

Prosperity Notes.

About 1,500 cloakmakers in New York and vicinity are on strike.

There were only sixty-five suicides in Cleveland, Ohio, during the past year. The number of suicides has increased 100 per cent in six months.

The sheet and steel manufacturers of Pennsylvania are closing their plants, and they will remain closed for at least six weeks. The reason given is that it is desirable to curtail production in order to raise prices.

The Hamgut Cotton Mills at Bristol, R. I., which are operated by the Richmond Manufacturing Company, have been shut down for the month of August. A dull market for goods is the cause of the curtailment.

BATTLE OF THE NILE.

DETAILS OF BRITISH TRIUMPH IN THE SOUDAN.

How Gen. Kitchener's Great Victory Was Won—Dervishes Fought with Fanatical Bravery, Throwing Away Life—Operations Before the Fight.

In a terrific battle Gen. Kitchener and his Anglo-Egyptian column dealt a death blow to mahdism and to the dervishes of the Soudan, capturing the cities of Omdurman and Khartoum, and adding a large stretch of the Egyptian hinterland to the British possessions in Eastern Africa. In this engagement the dervishes fought their last great fight. Though Khalifa Abdullah escaped with Osman Digna and a handful of men, the dervishes can never again harass the British and Egyptians on the Nile with their predatory raids, for their army has been almost wiped out, their black standard has been captured, and their leaders are henceforth destined to be fugitives until they become prisoners. At last the murder of "Chinese" Gordon is avenged, and the last of the Mohammedan strongholds in Africa is practically destroyed.

GENERAL KITCHENER.

This great British victory is due to good discipline, fine arms, steady work and excellent generalship. The British have made the Egyptians into effective soldiers under English officers. Both the natives and the redcoats were armed with the best rifles and machine guns known to modern military science. The strength of the dervish army was estimated at 60,000, while the British force that dealt out such a terrible defeat to this army consisted of only 25,000 men—10,000 British regulars and 15,000 Egyptian natives. Accurate figures as to the losses on both sides are still lacking, but various estimates place the Anglo-Egyptian casualties at from 200 to 500 and those of the dervishes at from 8,000 to 15,000.

The most impressive features of the battle were the fanatical courage of the dervishes and the terrible execution of the Maxim guns. It was another demonstration, if any were needed, to show the impotency of the fiercest courage before the modern rapid fire machine guns. The Arabs threw themselves in fierce charges upon various points of the British formation, but the Maxims hewed horrible lanes through their ranks, and the deadly volley fire of the British and Egyptian battalions annihilated them in the act of charging. The attack of the dervishes began at dawn, the battle raged all day, and at 4 o'clock the great army lay in white heaps on the field or had surrendered as prisoners. The Khalifa and his elusive chiefs escaped with a mere corporal's guard. It was a great triumph for the British arms.

The British Soudan campaign resembles our Cuban campaign in the nature of the original provocation, in the suspense attendant upon its events, in the marked disparity of the death lists on the two sides, and in the ultimate increase of territory accruing to the conqueror. For years the raiding and implacable dervishes have been a menace to all civilized life on the borders of upper Egypt. There could be no peace or safety until the power of the Mahdi, or of his successor, the Khalifa, was crushed. The present situation in the Soudan is the outgrowth of the fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon and the massacre of Hicks' army. The Soudan, formerly belonging to Egypt, was then taken by the Mahdi and Gen. Gordon, the governor, was put to death. That was in 1885, and not a moment since then has the British public or the British Government rested satisfied with the Soudan in the hands of the Mahdists.

The Mahdi is a religious fanatic, whose followers are no less fanatical. When the Mahdi died Abdullah Bin Sayd Mohammed, one of the Mahdi's khalifas, proclaimed himself successor, and he has made a cunning and cruel ruler.

While the above was the immediate cause of the British expedition against the dervishes, the ultimate aim of securing another large slice of the African continent and the taking of another stride toward the completion of an unbroken stretch of British territory from Cape Colony to the Mediteranearn, was equally definite and avowed. The fall of Omdurman and Khartoum means that these cities are ultimately to be way stations on a British transcontinental railway running the whole length of eastern Africa on British territory.

The advance of the expedition from Cairo along the Nile has been slow, but considering that a railroad has been constructed as the columns moved forward, the march has been rapid, from a military view point.

Americans Rush to Hawaii.

The effect of the tremendous advertising Hawaii has received as a result of the war and of annexation is now being felt. People from all over the United States are pouring into Honolulu. Report says they come by every steamer and every sailing vessel. Many are already practically stranded, and the captain and agents of every vessel leaving are besieged with applications for free passage back to the States.

CRETAN MOSLEMS RIOT.

Attack British Soldiers in Candia and Burn Houses.

Candia, Island of Crete, is in a state of anarchy. A collision between the Mussulmans, who were demonstrating against European control, and the British authorities, who have been installing Christians as revenue officials, culminated in bloody fighting between the Mussulmans and the British troops. Riots took place in various parts of the city and many have been killed. When the outbreak was fiercest a warship stationed in the harbor began firing shells, with the result that a portion of the city was soon in flames. The greatest confusion and uproar prevailed.

The trouble began with the attempt of the British military authorities to install Christian officials. They had appointed a council of internal control to administer the tithe revenues, and a detachment of soldiers was stationed outside the office as a precaution. A crowd of unarmed Mussulmans who had been demonstrating against the Christians attempted to force an entrance into the office. The British soldiers fired and wounded several. The Musulmans ran for their arms and returning attacked the soldiers. Other Mussulmans spread rapidly through the Christian quarter, shooting into windows and setting many houses and shops on fire.

REPORT ON PENSIONS.

Commissioner Evans Says Roll Is Increasing in Numbers and in Value.

The annual report of Hon. H. Clay Evans, Commissioner of Pensions, was made public Saturday. The commissioner says that the roll is not only increasing in numbers, but in value. It is believed that it will increase from the war of the rebellion, as there probably are 200,000 ex-Union soldiers living who have never had pensions, and it will increase in amount naturally by reason of increased disabilities as provided by law. The amounts paid out at the several agencies for the year on account of pensions under the general laws were $75,275,383, and on account of pensions under the act of June 27, 1890, $66,255,670. The number of pensioners in foreign countries at the close of the fiscal year was 4,371, having increased 309. The total amount paid to pensioners living abroad was $669,862.

COUNTRY'S YIELD OF WHEAT.

Not So Large as Expected, Yet Larger Than Ever Before.

The wheat crop of 1898 is not quite up to promise, according to the report of the American Agriculturist. This says that in a few States it now appears the promise of wheat was not fulfilled in actual gain by what must seem like a large margin, while in a number of States the rate of yield was even greater than indicated on July 1. But with full allowance for all disappointment, the fact remains that the crop this year is the largest on record. The reported rate of yield in winter wheat is 14.8 bushels and in spring wheat 15.4 bushels. If the present rate of yield indicated shall be maintained the total production of winter wheat will be rather under 400,000,000 bushels, and spring wheat fully 300,000,000 bushels.

The present report of the American Agriculturist on corn places the condition 85.4, as compared with 85.6 a month earlier. The condition of oats when harvested is placed at 78.4, 2.2 lower than on Aug. 1, with the general quality not as good as last year.

QUEEN OF THE DUTCH.

Wilhelmina Places Upon Her Head the Crown of Holland.

The ceremony of the enthronement of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland was celebrated in Amsterdam Tuesday morning. The coronation ceremony was democratic in its simplicity, but the court festivities and processional displays, both preceding and following the ceremonies at the church, were attended with much pomp and circumstance. The ceremonies began with the preaching of a short sermon. In taking the oath the queen remained seated. As a part of the ceremonies she took from the hands of the president of the states general the jeweled crown and scepter and placed the crown upon her head.

After the ceremonies there was a triumphal drive through the gayly decorated and crowded streets, followed by a public reception at the royal palace. In the reception hall the queen received the congratulations of her ministers, the admirals of the fleet, the officers of the army, the members of the diplomatic corps, the burgomasters of the leading cities of the kingdom, the governors of the provinces and the representatives of the Dutch colonial possessions in the East and West Indies.

Disappointed Gold-Seekers.

The steamer Del Norte arrived at Seattle, Wash., Saturday from St. Michael with a hundred disappointed miners, some of whom were almost penniless. Two of the Del Norte's passengers had gold dust. They were Peter Johnson and J. Langford, who have been in Alaska for the past fourteen years. They brought out about $50,000 worth of dust, which was taken from the Little Minook district.

SIZE OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The Islands Compared with Some of Our Seaboard States.

A good idea of the size and extent of the Philippine islands, about which so many conflicting statements have been made since the group came into prominence a few months ago, may be obtained from an observation of the accompanying map. The islands are there shown superimposed upon a map as a part of the Atlantic seaboard of the United States, beginning at the north with New York and extending through South Carolina. The Philippine group and the States are drawn to precisely the same scale, so that the comparison is accurate.

The total length of the group, from the northernmost point of Luzon to the southern extremity of Mindanao, is about 950 miles, or fifty miles less than the distance from the northern boundary of New York to the southern point of South Carolina. The Philippines have never been thoroughly surveyed or explored, and consequently the estimates of the total area of the several hundred islands of the group have differed widely. The most trustworthy calculations fix this total area to be between 114,300 and 115,500 square miles, an extent of territory equal to the combined areas of the States of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland. The largest of the Philippine islands, Luzon, upon which Manila is situated, has an area of 40,875 square miles, being thus of almost exactly the same size as the State of Virginia and over 8,000 square miles smaller than New York State. In length Luzon extends for about 475 miles and would reach from a point slightly north of the northern boundary of New York almost to the mouth of the Potomac River.

SIZE OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Mindanao, the next largest of the islands, has an area of 37,256 square miles. It would require the combined territory of West Virginia and Maryland to equal the island in size. Mindanao extends nearly 300 miles from north to south, or, in comparison with the part of the map upon which it is superimposed, it would reach from the mouth of the Roanoke River, in North Carolina, to Charleston, S. C. Projecting from its western coast, Mindanao has a long, irregular peninsula, which makes the extreme width of the island something over 300 miles.

The two smaller islands of Mindoro and Panay, upon the latter of which is the port of Iloilo, are each over 4,000 square miles in area. Together they equal in size the State of New Jersey. Samar island, southeast of Luzon, covers 7,000 square miles.

There are estimated to be about 1,200 islands in the Philippine group, though any accurate statement is impossible. Probably not more than one-third of these are inhabited. It is as difficult to obtain correct statistics regarding the population of the Philippines as it is to get a definite statement of their area, because a careful census has never been taken. Various writers estimate the present population at from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000.

HERO OF THE CIVIL WAR.

Capt. Higginson, of the Massachusetts, Has a Splendid Record.

Capt. Francis J. Higginson, of the Massachusetts, is a naval hero of the civil war. By a singular coincidence he is a native of the States for which his ship was named. He has a splendid record. He came out of the academy in 1861 and just in time to go into the war of the Union a finished young naval officer. He fought in the bombardments of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, of the Chalmette batteries, in the capture of the Judith and in the taking of New Orleans. He assisted in the bombardment of Fort Sumter, and in 1864 was assigned to the academy, where he remained until after the war. Then he was transferred to the Asiatic station, next to the European station, and then to various posts in many parts of the country. He got his commission as captain in 1891.

SORE EYES Dr. ISAAC THOMPSON'S EYE WATER

Queen and Poet.

Tennyson was a man of such great personal independence that his honest eccentricities sometimes approached quite near to rudeness. But that there was no flavor of snobbery in his indifference to formalities, and that he was as likely to offend a prince as a workingman, is proved by many occurrences in the poet's life.

Dr. Max Muller relates that the late Queen of Holland frequently came to England, and was fond of meeting, while there, distinguished literary people. On one occasion she lunched with Dean Stanley, and asked him to invite several literary men, among whom were Tennyson, Lord Houghton, Huxley and Max Muller himself.

Luncheon was ready, and everybody had come to the deanery except Tennyson. Dean Stanley suggested that the party should wait no longer, but the queen refused to sit down before the laureate's arrival. There was another period of waiting, painful to all the company.

Finally some one suggested that probably Tennyson was "mooning about in the cloisters somewhere;" one was sent to see, and the poet was indeed found there, apparently oblivious that anything was going on. He was brought in and placed at the table next the Queen of the Netherlands.

The queen took the conversation into her own hands, and in particular tried to draw Tennyson out. He was not in talking mood. She addressed him a question.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered.

Then there was another question.

"No, ma'am," came from Tennyson.

Again she asked his opinion about something; the question was not susceptible of answer by "yes" or "no."

"Ma'am," said Tennyson, after a great effort, "there is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question!"

Presently he turned and whispered to Max Muller, "I wish they had put some of you talking fellows next to Regina!"

No Pity for Pirates in China.

They make short work of pirates in China. In July last a vessel in charge of Chung Kwei, the son of a wealthy merchant at Singapore, while on its way to Canton was seized and run aground by pirates and looted of its full cargo of silks and money. The Canton authorities immediately sent a gunboat down the river and the pirates, twenty in number, were captured. They were taken in triumph to San Ling, near Canton, and were condemned by a military tribunal and beheaded in the course of a few hours.

WOMAN'S HEROISM.

From the Register-Gazette, Rockford, Ill.

During the Civil War nearly as much heroism was shown by the women of our nation as by the brave soldiers. Many a woman, weeping for her dead son, bound up the wounds of his suffering comrades, rejoicing in their renewed strength, even while sorrowing for the one who was gone. At that time, was laid the foundation for the world-famed organization known as the Woman's Relief Corps.

On the Battlefield.

One of the most earnest members of the corps at Byron, Ill., is Mrs. James Houseweart, but illness once put a stop to her active work. A year or so ago, when she was nearly fifty years of age, the time when women must be more careful of their strength, Mrs. Houseweart was taken seriously ill. The family physician told her that she had reached a critical period of her life, and must be very careful. His prescriptions and treatment did not benefit her, and other treatment proved unavailing.

At last Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were brought to her notice, with indisputable evidence that they were helpful in cases such as hers, and with renewed hope she tried the remedy. Last March she took the first box of the pills, which gave much relief. She was determined to be cured, and kept on with the medicine, until now eight boxes have been consumed, and she feels like a new woman.

Mrs. Houseweart said: "I have taken only eight boxes, but I have been improving since I took the first dose. I do not believe I could have lived without the pills. They certainly have done me more good than any physician or any medicine I have ever tried."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. "VIVAN LOS AMERICANOS!"

How Gen. Miles and his staff were cheered as they rode through the streets of Ponce, Porto Rico.

ENGLAND'S FUTURE KING.

Always Clothed in the Very Plainest Kind of Frocks.

Those wise little mothers who decry the American habit of overdressing wee bits of babies will be interested to know that Prince Albert, the small mite of 4 years, who is in the direct line of succession to the throne of England, wears the plainest kind of frocks and bonnets. The children of the royal family are always clothed simply. Their little arms are unhampered with frills and furbelows, and ribbons and bows are not continually getting into their precious mouths or tickling their soft, pretty necks. Little Prince Albert, whose picture is here given, wears tucked skirts of pique and blouses of the same material, trimmed with braid of plain white or turkey red. The children of many of the well-to-do Americans are costumed in small garments every bit as costly.

PRINCE ALBERT.

Prince Albert's younger brother, Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George of York, who is one year younger than the eldest baby of the Duke of York's interesting family, plays his baby games in ordinary frocks of nainsook, trimmed perhaps with a few dainty tucks or edgings of delicate hand embroidery. The little sister, Princess Victoria, who was 1 year old April 25 last, has for everyday wear plain fine little slips that have neither heavy lace-trimmed flounces to hamper her small legs or elaborately made yokes to fret her infant mind.

RELIC OF MEDIEVALISM.

Quintain Said to Be the Only Surviving Specimen in England.

A curious clause, taking one right back to the middle ages, appears in the title deeds of a house which is now to be sold in the village of Offham, in Kent, says the Westminster Gazette. Scheduled as part of the "messuages, lands, hereditaments and premises" is the village quintain, which still swings on its stout oaken post before the house, and the purchaser must covenant to keep the relic of a bygone pastime in good repair. One end of the swinging crossbar of this quintain (said to be the only surviving specimen in England) is shaped like a square target pierced with a number of holes into which the point of the player's lance would enter. When struck it would swing round, and unless the player were nimble the sandbag hung on the other end of the crossbar would swing round and unseat him. Here is a chance seldom met in these modern days of getting back into medievalism. The owner has only to don the contemporary costume, tilt at the quintain and imagine that the clock has been put back a few centuries.

True Hospitality.

The Washington Post prints a "true story," told by a retired army officer. The occurrence happened in New Mexico. Colonel X. was making a long march, and the provision wagons had gone astray. He was hot and tired and hungry, when he met Major B., who invited him home—presumably to some fort—to breakfast.

The major's fortunes were at a low ebb, and when the breakfast was brought on it proved to consist entirely of rice—rice cooked in the wonderful Southern fashion, with every kernel perfect. The hungry guest ate a spoonful. He detests rice. Then he waited for a second course.

"Have some rice, colonel," said the major, whom nothing ever disconcerts, quite as if the rice had but that moment disappeared.

"No!" snapped the colonel. "I'm a Kentuckian, sir, and I don't eat rice. I don't eat rice, sir. Give me something else."

"Why, certainly colonel, certainly," said the host. "Try some of the mustard; it's very fine, sir, very fine."

VICTIM OF CONSPIRACY.

Beautiful Mrs. "Jack" Wilmerding's Friends Claim She Is Not Insane.

For some time past New York society has been deeply interested in the unfortunate case of Mrs. "Jack" Wilmerding, the beautiful scion of the Vanderbilt family who is confined in the Bloomingdale Asylum. Her friends claim that she is not insane and that she is the victim of conspiracy and they have gone to the courts to secure her release.

Mrs. Wilmerding was Marie Allen, the daughter of Vanderbilt Allen, and grandniece of the old Commodore Vanderbilt. She was a pretty, dashing girl, and "Jack" Wilmerding fell in love with her and married her in 1892. Husband and wife were both fond of gayety, and Mrs. Wilmerding spent money freely. She was not without some fortune of her own, and her gowns were the envy of many women who had more wealth but less originality. The marriage was unhappy. There were violent quarrels and disputations until things were brought to a climax one night in Delmonico's, when "Jack" threw a plate of ice cream into his wife's pretty face. A separation followed and Marie went to live with her father, who was in Italy.

MRS. "JACK" WILMERDING.

Her nervous system was entirely broken, and at her father's advice she returned to America to seek rest in a sanitarium. In a few hours after her landing she was in Bloomingdale Asylum.

Worldly Wisdom.

A relative whom Mrs. Uppenup had not seen for many years came one day to visit her.

"Maria," said Mr. Uppenup, after the family had retired to rest that evening, "it seems to me you weren't any too cordial to Cousin Harriet, considering the fact that this is the first time you and she have met for nearly a quarter of a century. You didn't even smile when you greeted her."

"Henry," replied Mrs. Uppenup, "have you noticed that when I smile it wrinkles my face all over? Well, I didn't want the wrinkles of twenty-five years to take effect on her all at once."

Juggernaut Story a Fake.

The ghastly stories told of many of the Indian fanatics who, at the religious festivals, throw themselves beneath the wheels of the Juggernaut car are for the most part imaginative. These car festivals, which sometimes attracted as many as 100,000 pilgrims, have certainly resulted in loss of life; but it is stated these deaths were purely accidental.

One of the most distressing things in the world is to hear any one scold who is so old and feeble that his breath gives out.

Men do not propose marriage outside of novels, though the result of calling on a girl and treating her to soda is just the same.

What has become of the old-fashioned people who on a hot afternoon used to make their own soda water?

Some politicians are like corkscrews—rather crooked, but they have a strong pull.

HANDSOME PICTURES.

Four Plaques of American Game Within the Reach of All.

Probably at no time in the world's history has as much attention been paid to the interior decoration of homes as at present. No home, no matter how humble, is without its handiwork that helps to beautify the apartments and make the surroundings more cheerful. The taste of the American people has kept pace with the age, and almost every day brings forth something new in the way of a picture, a draping, a piece of furniture or other form of mural decoration. One of the latest of these has been given to the world by the celebrated artist, Muville, in a series of four handsome porcelain game plaques. Not for years has anything as handsome in this line been seen. The subjects represented by these plaques are American wild ducks, American pheasants, American quail and English snipe. They are handsome paintings and are especially designed for hanging on dining room walls, though their richness and beauty entitles them to a place in the parlor of any home. These original plaques have been purchased at a cost of $50,000 by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Elastic Starch, and in order to enable their numerous customers to become possessors of these handsome works of art they have had them reproduced by a special process, in all the rich colors and beauty of the original. They are finished on heavy cardboard, pressed and embossed in the shape of a plaque and trimmed with a heavy band of gold. They measure forty inches in circumference and contain no reading matter or advertisement whatever.

Until Oct. 1 Messrs. J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co. propose to distribute these plaques free to their customers. Every purchaser of three ten-cent packages of Elastic Starch, flatiron brand, manufactured by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., is entitled to receive one of these handsome plaques free from their grocer. Old and new customers alike are entitled to the benefits of this offer. These plaques will not be sent through the mail, the only way to obtain them being from your grocer. Every grocery store in the country has Elastic Starch for sale. It is the oldest and best laundry starch on the market and is the most perfect cold process starch ever invented. It is the only starch made by men who thoroughly understand the laundry business, and the only starch that will not injure the finest fabric. It has been the standard for a quarter of a century and as an evidence of how good it is twenty-two million packages were sold last year. Ask your dealer to show you the plaques and tell you about Elastic Starch. Accept no substitute. Bear in mind that this offer holds good a short time only and should be taken advantage of without delay.

Sweet Lavender.

The days of our great-grandmothers are coming back to us, and the dainty housekeeper is not satisfied unless her linen closet is redolent with the sweet, fresh fragrance of lavender, says a Washington paper. Scented beds are a great fad in England, also. While sachets of lavender laid in press and bureau drawers, in oaken chest and linen closet, are the usual means of imparting this fragrance, the solidified perfume made up in the form of "sweet balls" (grandmother's fashion redivivus) will be found more satisfactory and lasting. The rule for this, as given by an expert in the art, is to mix a quarter of a pound of crushed lavender flowers with ten drops of oil of lavender and make it into a dough with a little gum tragacanth. Knead this into balls about the size of a marble, roll in powdered orris root, and put in a tight tin box to dry. A supply of these may be made and be kept on hand in a closely-corked bottle, to replace the old ones when their pungency has vanished.

Inventors are plenty who can make a machine that will rise and float in air, but none has succeeded in making an apparatus that will guide it through the many currents of air. In this respect Hostetter's Stomach Bitters acts as a safe guide by curing stomach, liver and blood diseases, giving a good appetite and a strong constitution.

MANY FEMALE ILLS RESULT FROM NEGLECT.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks May Produce Displacements That Threaten Women's Health.

Apparently trifling incidents in women's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks, may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. MARY BENNETT, 314 Annie St., Bay City, Mich., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can hardly find words with which to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. For nearly four years I suffered with weakness of the generative organs, continual backache, headache, sideache, and all the pains that accompany female weakness. A friend told my husband about your Vegetable Compound and he brought me home two bottles. After taking these I felt much better, but thought that I would write to you in regard to my case, and you do not know how thankful I am to you for your advice and for the benefit I have received from the use of your medicine. I write this letter for the good of my suffering sisters."

The above letter from Mrs. Bennett is the history of many women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Delicate Children

They do not complain of anything in particular. They eat enough, but keep thin and pale. They appear fairly well, but have no strength. You cannot say they are really sick, and so you call them delicate.

What can be done for them? Our answer is the same that the best physicians have been giving for a quarter of a century. Give them

An Abundant Metal.

Aluminium is the most abundant metal in the world. It enters more or less into the formation of almost every kind of soil on the globe, while clay of different kinds contains from 30 per cent to 40 per cent of it. This metal, which, singular to say, was undiscovered seventy years ago, is the lightest known. It is white and does not tarnish on being exposed to the air. When first produced it is soft, but after hammering becomes as hard as the softer kinds of iron. One-third of the total product of the world is American, the rest being divided between France, Switzerland and Great Britain. It has been called the metal of the future, and the principal obstacle to its being the metal of the present is its somewhat high price. This has been greatly reduced of late years, but the great desideratum—a cheap method of obtaining the metal directly from the clay—has not yet been attained. If the metal were to become cheap, the existing age of steel would be succeeded by an age of aluminium.

The Magicians of Trade.

The failure of Ernest Terah Hooley is a break in the line of professional promoters, says the Commercial Advertiser. It is seldom that a promoter fails. It is their victims who fail. The companies they form often fail—when they are safely out of the promoter's hands. The persons who trust promoters and invest in promoted companies more than they can afford to lose are liable to fail. Thus the collapse of a promoter is a healthful sign. It may dampen the business of promoting. The fact has now developed that Hooley has promoted companies with capital stocks aggregating $65,000,000 and that since the companies were floated their stocks have depreciated an average of forty per cent. This warning will not be forgotten by the public. It will never pay $60,000,000, nor the tithe of that sum for any more stocks invented by Mr. Hooley. So his collapse is a national warning and blessing.

Rattan Furniture.

Housekeepers usually send the rattan and willow furniture to the professional cleaner to have them renovated, but they may be successfully treated at home at a trifling expense. Take the chair upon the porch, prepare a warm suds, and wash the article thoroughly, using a brush for all crevices, also cane seats. You will be surprised at the color of the water. Rinse off with clear, warm water, and wipe as dryly as possible, using soft absorbent cloths, and letting the sun finish the drying. When all is clean and dry, varnish with the varnish that comes for this special purpose, setting in a clean place to dry, where no dust can interfere, after which it will look as fresh and new as when it was brought from the furniture dealer's.

Fishing for Anchors.

One of the queer occupations of mankind is that of dragging for lost anchors. In Great Britain it is carried on in bays and rivers, and even in the open sea along the coast. Several sloops and schooners are engaged almost exclusively in this pursuit. The hunters are as familiar with the ground where anchors are to be found as fishermen are with the favorite haunts of the living inhabitants of the sea. The fishing for lost anchors is most simple. A chain is let down in a loop long enough to drag along the bottom, and the vessel goes on her way with all hands on board alert for a bite, and a bite usually ends in a catch. The recovered anchors are generally sold again at a price of about twopence a pound, which is a halfpenny under the market price for new anchors. A big anchor will weigh 6,000 pounds, so that the fishermen make £50 out of it. More often, however, the anchors fished up weigh from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds, and there is a pretty profit in the business even then.

TOO BAD.

That is the verdict as to some of the side shows, and fakir stands. It is too bad from several stand points. It is too bad that these fakirs deceived the Carnival officers and claimed to do a straight and decent business, when they did not. And it was pretty hard on the society to have to pay them back the money they had given for their rights. The facts are, if they deceived the officers as to the character of their business, they should not have received their money back. It would be a valuable lesson to these gentry if they could be made to feel a money loss for their deception. Being without scruples of conscience, honesty or decency, they have no vulnerable point but the pocket book. And there they should be made to suffer. And in another respect it was too bad. It is said that the show of the dancing girls was a regular midway, Coochee Coochee affair. If so, that was too bad, from a moral point of view. We talked with a very reliable man who had been to see them and he insisted it was not immoral or indecent. But there are others who claim he had not been admitted to the "inner temple." At all events complaints were made against them and against several gambling devices run by other parties, and warrants were got out for their arrest. But the officers of the Carnival thought best to pay back their license fees and drive them off the grounds and out of town. This was done, though the society lost $250 cash by the change, an amount of money they greatly needed.

ANGOLA ACCIDENT

Special to the Courier.

ANGOLA, IND. Sept. 9. This morning Chet Patee a young man employed by the Steuben County Telephone Company here, was up thirty feet high on a pole at the public square where he fell, carrying the cross arm with him. His fall was somewhat broken by catching on some obstructsons part way down. But he was seriously injured, though the physicians hope to save him. He was at the Carnival in Auburn yesterday and is a brother of Frank Patee of Co. H, 157th

The Flower Parade.

This exceeded in beauty and attractiveness, anything we have ever had before, and went far ahead of any thing we ever saw. It would be impossible to describe them. They were simply wonderful, wonderful not only for their beauty, but for the showing they made of the skill and patience of our ladies. We cannot say too much for Auburn ladies in regard to the work of getting up floats and flower wagons. Perhaps we can partially repay them for all this trouble, by telling them the many compliments we have heard as they rode by in each days' parade. We heard many strangers say that no town they know of could show as many handsome women. They certainly looked lovely. It is difficult to tell which rig contained the sweetest faces, the loveliest costumes or the prettiest surroundings. It was a vision of Fairyland and we had it right here at home. It looks too bad that we could not keep these displays and have them come out every few days when the weather is pleasant. They will be in the parade again this afternoon, and then we will see them no more. Here is where the only regret comes in.

A Comfortable Corpse.

When Wilson Barrett did his "one-night-only" performance of "Othello" in Melbourne on Wednesday evening of last week, he "passioned" with much frenzy and gave rise to a ludicrous situation. Having stifled Desdemona in a businesslike fashion, he came down the stage, being first supposed to draw the tapestry together, leaving the smothered Miss Jeffries comfortably corpsed on the bed. But in his enthusiasm he did not quite close the arras, and while he was elocuting in the foreground half the audience were tittering at the comic sight of the beauteous corpse in the rear sitting up and arranging her draperies to picturesque advantage. Having seen that they were correctly displayed, Maud Desdemona lay down and went dead again, while Wilson Barrett continued his riot.—Sydney Bulletin.

WITHOUT A DOUBT.

Unquestionable Proof that Effect of LaGrippe is Cured by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The number of physical wrecks resulting from the La Grippe is truly alarming. The peculiarity of the disease asserts itself after the attack, by becoming seated in some of the nerve centers, usually the brain. The many remedies and methods of treatment by physicians have little if any benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has proven to be a specific, it cures every case. A recent instance coming to our notice, is that of Joseph Lee, Entrican, Mich., who writes the following under date of Oct. 31st.

"I was prostrated from the effects of La Grippe; during the first six months I was treated constantly by two physicians without benefit. I then changed and was treated by another during the six months following with same result. I continued to grow worse until I could not sleep day or night; my mind was harassed by evil thoughts—I was frantic. In this condition I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; after taking one bottle I felt much better; I took two more and was restored to health. I heartily endorse Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; for all forms of nervous disease." Signed Joseph Lee. Nerves are alike in all, you can be cured as Mr. Lee was.

If you have not fully recovered from La Grippe use this valuable medicine at once. Your case is the same as thousands of others cured by it. It cures every case.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

There was a vexatious and unfortunate delay in getting the sham battle and fireworks started in the Madden field last night. We give the causes in brief. The fault was all in the bad management of Pain, the Chicago fireworks expert. He came here as agreed and was furnished all the help he asked for, and the officers supposed all the time he was getting things in shape for prompt work. They would gladly have paid for more help for him had he hinted that he needed it. But he carried the idea that he was getting along all right. The officers not being experts in fireworks took his word for it and only when it was too late did they find that he had not help enough to get the pieces ready in time. Then it was too late and the crowd was kept waiting an hour and a half. Half of the people went without seeing any of it, and many had to leave when it was party done to take special trains home. It also turns out that some of the material of the fireworks did not reach Auburn till yesterday noon, and that also caused a delay. But it was no fault whatever of the society. They would gladly have furnished ten times more help rather than have a delay. Another disagreeable feature, was the breaking of several boards of the seating of the grand stand. They were not strong enough to hold the weight on them. Probably if a second board of the same thickness had been put on it would have been all right. But there was no need to fear the supports of the structure. The supports were ample and whoever tears it down will find it so.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Harry Mason of Garrett and his wife were coming back from the fireworks at about 10:30 last night and this side of the bridge the horse took fright and ran. The buggy struck a telegraph pole near Baxter's law office, and was smashed, and the horse got away. Mason was thrown out striking the post and his head was crushed. He was taken home but died before morning. His wife was not much hurt.

MARTIN, JR.'S BRIDE.

She Will Be Miss Daisy Post, One of the Newport Belles.

Newport society gossip has it that the engagement is soon to be announced of Daisy Post to Bradley Martin, Jr., and that their marriage will be solemnized in the fall. Miss Post is the daughter of Mrs. William Post and niece of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt. She is the second of the group of bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Marlborough to become engaged. She made her debut in society at Newport in 1895. At that time Mrs. Vanderbilt gave a series of entertainments in her honor. Though not strictly a beauty, Miss Post is sweet and attractive, and has been quite a belle at the shore for four seasons. Mr. Martin is a rollicking fellow and resembles his mother rather than his father. He is just two years older than his fiancee, and his prospective fortune is understood to be at least $10,000,000. Mr. Martin entered Harvard in 1894 and graduated from there last month. While at Cambridge he had the most extensive suite of apartments on the university campus. But he was popular, an excellent student, and numbered among his chums Frederick Townsend of Albany and Roland Gray, son of Judge Gray of Boston. During his course at the law school young Martin was much chagrined to be defeated in a mock suit. It was a case of murder, but the evidence was merely circumstantial. Martin was counsel for the defense and nearly all the evidence was his way. J. Stewart Bryan of Richmond, Va., was prosecuting attorney, and so ably presented his case that the jury agreed upon a conviction without leaving their seats. Both Miss Post and Mr. Martin are now at Newport and are daily together.—New York Journal.

When Ague Shakes You

you can shake the Ague by using AYER'S AGUE CURE. It is the one certain and infallible cure for that depleting disease. It has been tried in many countries and under various conditions, and has never been known to fail. An old veteran writes:—

"You may be interested to know my experience many years ago with Ayer's Ague Cure. The year before the war I was in Kansas. Some twenty of us were engaged in farming, and suddenly all were taken with fever and ague. We tried almost everything without getting any help, till at last I sent to the city and procured a bottle of Ayer's Ague Cure. I recovered at once. The others followed my example, and they, too, recovered. Every one in camp took the remedy and was cured by it. I went all through the war, have lived in thirteen different states of the Union, and have never had the ague since."

O. B. SMITH, St. Augustine, Fla.

There's only one thing to get for ague:

TRAINING OF CHILDREN.

Nature Seems to Have Done the Best After All.

Theorize as one will about the scientific training of children, the little folks of the slums know more in a minute about human nature than the youngsters who are brought up scientifically learn in ten years. A little girl of 6 whose home is in the slummiest of slums opened the eyes of a fashionable woman recently. The woman had gone to teach in the mission sewing school and this little girl was in her class. She persisted in calling the teacher "Miss," and the teacher didn't like this, as she had married rather late in life. That's just one more of the sex's little idiosyncracies. The teacher corrected the child week after week, telling her every time that she was "mistress" and not "Miss." But all to no purpose. Finally she got exasperated and said to the child, "Why won't you believe I'm married? Why do you insist upon calling me 'Miss?' Now, tell me why you won't believe I'm married." The child hung her head and was silent, but the teacher persisted, and finally the little girl raised her big eyes and said: "Well, teacher, I can't believe you are married because you laugh so much." "From that remark," said the teacher, "I think that all married mankind and womankind might draw a lesson, but they won't." Only the crusty old bachelors will take it to heart."

Facing New Pension Problems.

In view of the fact that about one person out of every seventy of our population now draws a pension from the federal government, speculation is already busy with calculations concerning the probable size of our pension list after the close of the present war. Under existing laws our pension bureau in 1897 cost $143,937,500, of which $139,949,717 was for pensions proper. The pensions of the revolutionary war numbered 16; of the war of 1812, 2,523; of our various Indian wars, 6,262; of the Mexican war, 18,293; and of the civil war, 963,880; in all 990,974. In addition to the civil war pensioners now on the rolls it is officially estimated that there are at least half a million widows and dependent relatives who have, or at least claim, a pensionable status under existing laws. The total strength of the union army and navy in the civil war is estimated at 2,234,911; the number living at the close of the war was about 1,727,353; and the deaths during the war aggregated about 507,558. These figures may aid people of a statistical turn in calculating the pension problem which we will have to solve in the near future.

Congressman Botkin's Statement

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 1, 1898.
Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.

MY DEAR DOCTOR:—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines:

Hon. J. D. BOTKIN,
Congressman-at-Large from Kansas.

Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have been afflicted, more or less, for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation; a residence in Washington has increased these troubles.

A few bottles of your medicines have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of their use will effect a permanent cure.

Pe-ru-na is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections.

J. D. BOTKIN.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Miss Oatsman is the guest of Miss Zora Sommers.

—Miss Ethel Rulner is the guest of her grand parents.

—Mrs. Ware of Bluffton is the guest of Eli Cochran and family.

—John Henderson of Jackson, has thanks for substantial favors at the Carnival.

—Artinus S. Trail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Trail was born June 6, 1898 and died Sept. 2, 1898. Her age was 2 months and 26 days. She was buried in the Waterloo cemetery Sunday morning. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Geo. Engelman, pastor of the Reformed church Auburn, Ind.

—Rev. Geo. Englemann and family have returned home after a five weeks vacation, during which they visited friends and relatives in Iowa and Nebraska, including the Trans-Mississippi Exposition in the city of Omaha, which is very fine and does not cost as much as the World's Fair, since lodging and board is very reasonable with best accommodations. Iowa and Nebraska are fine farming countries with rich rolling lands. The Trans-Mississippi Exposition should be visited by all that possibly can afford it.

Thursday's Daily.

—The band boys have the prettiest suits they ever had, but they won't do for cold weather.

—W. D. Miller, the tile man was in town yesterday. He is in the business extensively this year.

John S. Boots of Jackson brought the editor a big basket of grapes Wednesday. He and his daughter Myrtle were here.

—Lester Till's sister, Addie died at Elkhart this week and was buried at Waterloo on Wednesday. The funeral was at the home of Levi Till in Waterloo.

—Mrs. Dr. Alvia Kimmel and daughter Vesta, of Hudson, are visiting the family of J. W. Smith.

—Mr. and Mrs. Cochran, of Newville, Ind., are attending the Carnival and visiting their daughter Mrs. Ben Smith.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCrory of Angola are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shaffer, as was also Elza Shaffer of Albion.

—Mr. and Mrs. Blankenship of Chicago were guests this week in the family of her brother, Mr. and Mrs. Mart Sheets south of town.

—Soldier boys begin to appear on our streets. Two men of the Fourth Ohio were here yesterdap and today being home on furloughs.

—Chicago, Elkhart, Goshen, Grand Rapids, Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinnati and Ft. Wayne have had representatives at the Carnival.

—The Butler Band makes a splendid showing with their fine uniforms and good music They play this afternoon and evening and everybody should hear them.

—Dr. E. J. McOscar of Ft. Wayne called on us yesterday. His former home was near Summit, but he is now one of the leading physicians in Fort Wayne.

—The COURIER is under obligations to Co.-Altenberg, at Little Rock, for recent favors. He never forgets his old home in Auburn and the friends in DeKalb county.

—Dr. Nusbaum has moved into his former residence on South Main-st, and his patrons will hereafter find him at his home there or at his office as usual. All please note this change of location.

—Miss Zula Fiegel of Edon, Ohio, who was the guest of Miss Phoebe Fretz during the Carnival returned to her post of duty at Pioneer, O. where she is conducting a dress cutting school —Misses Mildred Townsend, Maudy Gross, Edna Cannan, Jula Fiegel, Edna Cameron. Mrs. G. W. Weeks and daughter Emma, Mrs. Kate Meredith and John Kaiser, of Edon, Ohio, were among those noticed in the city yesterday.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. H. B. McCord.

—Among the familiar faces at the Carnival yesterday were those of P. P. Lochner, and L. C. Loveland; Ora Knisely and wife of Butler, Mrs. Less and Mrs. S. B. Jones and daughters, Mary and Clara of the same place, J. R. Burniston of Garrett, Eliza Shaffer of Albion.

—The COURIER editor is under obligations to our printer friend, Jack Dorland, for neighborly assistance on the ground at Madden's field last night. There was a big jam in getting out, and with his strong arm to help, there were several ladies and chidren who were saved from unpleasant overcrowdings to say the least.

Saturday's Daily.

—Miss McGinly of Columbia City was a guest during the Carnival of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Turner of North Main street.

—Mrs. Sarah Rohrabaugh paid up her COURIER ahead again this year as she always does, and has thanks for same.

—S. Henry, of Orland was a caller on the COURIER yesterday. He looks as natural as can be and is evidently prospering.

—F. M. Powers democratic candidate for judge was in town this week. He is making an excellent impression whereever he goes.

—Mrs. Elmer Case of Fairfield fell near 7th-st bridge Thursday night on the way back from the fire works and broke her collar bone.

—Mrs. C. P. Houser of Indianapolis and her daughter Mrs. Reba Davis of Chicago have been here this week taking in the Carnival and seeing the old friends.

—Joe Staudacher, of Columbia City, was in town yesterday. He is now employed in doing fine cabinet work in a factory there. He is a skilled and ingenious workman.

—L. J. Gengler is still up at Petokey catching fish, and such good luck has seldom been recorded, as has fallen to his lot. They do say that all the east side of the lake is out of fish.

—Truth wears well. Peop'e have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. H. B. McCord.

—Dr. J. E. Morr, of Orland called yesterday id company with his brother Samuel of this county. The Docter is doing well in his profession up there, just as DeKalb boys generally do in whatever they undertake.

—Cuban insurgents are coming into camp and laying down their arms. All they now ask is employment till they can get money enough to go to their homes and start once more in the pursuits of peace. They are mostly farmers or laborers.

—Henry Thrush of North Manchester, father of W. E. Thrush of this place was here this week at the Carnival as were also, Mrs. Elmer Spake of Monroeville and son Lloyd and Dr. J. S. Smith of Warsaw and family all guests of Mr. Thrush.

—An experienced army officer states that during the war for the suppression of the rebellion no military camp was occupied or retained for a longer period than 30 days. As a rule troops were kept at the same place about 10 days and then the camp was abandoned. The officer referred to says it was a criminal blunder to keep thousands of soldiers in Camp Thomas, Tampa, etc, for a longer period than a month. Epidemics are certain to result from such a departure from well-established rules in military life.

THE FIREWORKS

The fireworks were grand when they did get started. The display of all sorts was fine, especially the naval battle and the blowing up and burning of the gunboats. But the grandest piece, was the portrait in fire, of Dewey, the nation's hero, which blazed out in living fire and called out the cheers of thousands. Those who had gone away, missed the finest thing they will ever see. The sham battle was not a great success, as there was a hitch somewhere, but we can't explain it. Those who took part did well.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION

Wise Counsels Prevail in the Populist Meeting at Waterloo.

As noted yesterday, the populists held a meeting at Waterloo yesterday to decide on their cousre of action as to congressman. Mr. Dick of Allen county was temporary chairman, and later, W. F. C. Francis of Waterloo was made permanent chairman. An hour or more was spent in discussing the question whether it was better to make a nomination or not. Some, incuding Mr. Gerner of the Silver Dawn, were in favor of nominating a straight populist for congress. Others were in favor of leaving it open and let all vote for the man they preferred. Those who took this view of it, generally were friendly to the democratic candidate, Hon. James M. Robinson. When the discussion closed, a vote by counties was taken. DeKalb county voted 10 for making a populist nomination 13 against a nomination. Lagrange cast its 14 votes against making a nomination. Noble voted one and a third for a nomination, and the rest of the delegation voted against it Allen county went solid against making a nomination. Steuben voted solidly for a nomination. The county of Whitley had no delegates present. As some of the counties did not have full delegations it was difficult to give exact total on the final vote, but it was reported as 57 against making a nomination and 32 for a nomination. This means that about two to one favored leaving the party free to vote for Robinson, as most of them would do under any circumstances.

The party did a wise thing, for had they put up a separate ticket, it may have defeated Robinson and elected a republican. And in his speech against a nomination, Hon. Free Kelley made a good point when he said that all true populists should unite and put out of power the republican members of the legislature who passed the law preventing voters from uniting on a ticket with any party they chose, and also having their party name on the ticket. He claimed it was an attempt to restrict the right of suffrage. On the part of all present, there was a good deal of interest manifested. The irrepressible old editor, Mitchell, of the Fort Wayne Dispatch was present and full as usual, and like his imitator in this county, he swore he would live and die a straight-out populist or nothing. He became such a nuisance that the better element objected to his presence, and he was led out. And this was repeated as often as he would return and make a disturbance. It was a good pattern for other conventions to copy.

The Alaska Gold Fields

(Laporte Argus)

J. T. Foster, of Oakwood, this county, who left this city for the land of nuggets, has returned and has written the following story of what he saw and experienced:

"I started to Alaska last April, going by the way of Chilkoot pass, and the chain of small rivers tributary to the Yukon, traveling the full length of the same river, stopping at all places of importance, namely, Salmon, Delly, Stewart, White, Indian, Klondyke, or "Dawson," Forty-mile, Seventy-mile, Coarse Gold or "Trout Creek," Fourth of July, Charley, Minnook, Tannaw and Kirnkook, long enough to get what information could be had pertaining to the truthfulness of the reports of the country, and my opinion, "based upon actual abservance, and the best authority obtainable along the route," is that the country is fully as rich with placer gold as has been generally estimated, but the fact must not be overlooked by those contemplating a trip to Alaska or the Northwest territory that claims of value in locations named have all been located; and another fact is that all the richer placer country isn't confined to the Klondyke district alone.

'Tis also my opinion, judging from apparent and surface indications and the class of prospectors and miners now in Alaska, that American territory will, within a year, produce as many rich finds, if not richer, than those of the Klondike. On my arrival at Dawson I found the price of provisions and living very high, but owing to the amount of provisions taken in last spring, living is no higher in that country than would naturally be expected so far from market. Further, if no provisions were sent to that country for the next two or three years there would not be a scarcity,

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of Burton Brown deceased to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 24th day of October 1898 and show cause, if any, why my Final settlement accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 17th day of Sept. 1898,
WILLIAM H. BROWN,
Administrator.

Syracuse Fifty Years Ago

The Milford Mail publishes extracts from a letter written by P. M. Henkel in which he speaks of his first visit to the lakes about Syracuse. It was in June 1844 and he says:

Syracuse at that time was but little more than a name. The mill and a few scattered houses composed the village.

Of his hostess, Mrs. Conklin, the writer says: "Why" said she, "I have a sister living in Cincinnati, she is rich, and lives in fine style. She has written to me time and again to come and live with her. Then too there is my brother James, he wants me to come and live with him, but then how could I leave my dear old husband? We promised each other when we were married that we would be faithful to each other while we lived and I think it my christian duty to fulfill my engagement."

"Brother James has written to me frequently to come to him, but then you see I can't leave my husband. You must have heard who my brother James is? Why, he is a man of much note and has filled many high offices in Pennsylvania and think he is a member of congress from that state now, Why, I mean Mr. Buchanan, he is my brother."

The sincerity with which the old lady made this statement convinced me that she really believed herself the sister of Mr. Buchanan, of Pennsylvania. Up to this time I had no suspicion that the old lady was memtally deranged, but her last claim that she was a sister of Mr. Buchanan convinced me that she was entirely off her base. It would have been expressed a doubt of her statement. Thus she lived and died in the firm belief that she was a sister of that distinguished statesman. Conklin Hill at the west end of the big lake, is now the only monument left to the memory of the pioneer family of that name.

DISCOVERED BY A WOMAN.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undertermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's drugstore. Regular size 0c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. 4

Township Caucuses

The democrats of the several townships of DeKalb county and all who will act with them at the coming election are requested to hold caucuses in the usual place in each township, on

SATURDAY, OCT. 1,

At 2 p. m. to nominate candidates for the offices of Justice of the Peace and Constables for the various townships to be voted for at the coming November election. Hour subject to change by the local committee.

C. C. WALTER,
Chairman.

Heard From Camp.

Capt. Lahnum has received a letter from Corporal McDonald at Camp Mount in which he reports the health of the boys good, and that the sick are improving, with one or two exceptions. Charles Hathaway and Wilson H. Gramling are coming home Saturday. Markley, whose home is not far from Gramlings, up by Summit, is reported to be still in bad condition. His letter says nothing of Fred. Miller, from which we infer he is no worse. The boys on duty there are contented as they have an easy time, and get to go to the city often, when not on duty.

THAT TRIAL.

At nine o'clock last evening, the court house bell rang, and the jury came in with a verdict acquitting the man Robbins and his wife of keeping a house of ill fame. It had been up before Squire Walborn once, and then a change of venue was taken to Squire Walter. Monday evening and Tuesday morning, there was a struggle to get a jury. Then came the trial and examination of witnesses. The COURIER generalls reports cases in full, but this case was not fit to report at all. We feel compelled to give the bare results, however. There is probably not a man or woman in Auburn but is satisfied that Robbids kept a house of the worst character. We do not know the name of a person on that jury, nor do we know the evidence given, except by report. Therefore, we cannot say whether there was proof strong enough to convict or not. But in view of the result, we must conclude that he scores of men and boys who slink around and go there under cover of darkness, do so for the purpose of studying the next week's Sunday School Lesson.

Pocket Books.

Next year's crop of pocket books ought to be good in Auburn. They seem to be sowed all over town. Yesterday John Mitchell was doing some work at the rear of Eldridge's saloon, he found three pocket books, lying under the steps to the wood house. One had evidently belonged to a man, and the other two were such as ladies use. None of them contained any money, though one of them had some papers. There was in one, a small check or number tag, with a capital "A" in red and the number "27" on it. One pocket book contained a notice from Treasurer Hine, that a certain county order the owner of the pocket book held, was, now matured and he was ready to pay it. These pocket books had no doubt been taken at various places on the streets and in the crwods, and then the thief would run back there and take out the money and hide the pocket book. This will account for the thief who was captured, having so much loose paper money in his pockets. The money could not be identified, but the pocket books might be. With a plenty of money, he could easily escape when he had sawed out of the jail.

YELLOW JAUNDCE CURED.

Suffering humanity should be supplied with every means possible for its relief. It is with pleasure we publish the following: "This is to certify that I was a terrible sufferer from Yellow Jaundice for over six months, and was treated by some of the best physicians in our city and all to no avail. Dr. Bell our druggist recommended Electric Bitters; and after taking two bottles, I was entirely cured. I now take great pleasure in recommending them to any person suffering from this terrible malady. I am gratefully yours, M. A. Hogarty, Lexington, Ky," Sold by H. B. McCord druggist.

THE SHOOT.

We were one of a small group of spectators who attended the Gun Club shoot yesterday afternoon and witnessed the working of the new trap. It is an ingenious affair, and works to a charm. It is run by electricity and managed from near where the shooters stand, At that point sits a man who presses the button, when the shooter says, "Pull." When the button is pressed, the trap liberates a "bird," which sails off into the air in the usual way. The trap itself is in a box down in the ground, and in this, sits a man who loads the birds onto the trap ready for springing. Several of our people are getting to be expert shots, and it is quite a surprise to see the almost certainty with which they hit and break the clay "pigeons" as they go sailing off on a curve or in a straight line.

BAD ACCIDENT.

Geo. Morr, the drayman who lives at the Junction was yesterday afternoon delivering the big steel supports to be used in the new building added to the Presbyterian church for a room for the organ. He was helping to fix it up some way when it slipped and fell, striking him first on the hand and cutting off a chunk of flesh. Then it struck him above the knee injuring his leg severely. As the beam weighs about 2000 pounds, it will be seen that his injuries must be severe. It will be quite a white before he gets right again. It is fortunate it did not fall square on him.

PE-RU-NA'S VICTORY.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.

DEAR SIR: — I feel like a new woman since using your Pe-ru-na.

Your medicine has helped me so much that I can work and never feel tired out. When I first began to use your medicine I couldn't sweep my own room, run the sewing machine or lift anything, not even a chair. It even hurt me to ride or walk any distance. Now I can do all this, and I believe more, and never feel the effects of it. I feel so proud of the way it has brought me out that I tell it far and near. I can heartily recommend your medicine to any woman suffering from female disease. I know from experience that your medicine will do just what you say it will. I thank you, Doctor, a thousand times for your treatment. I shall recommend your medicine wherever I go. I know what it has done for me and I know it will do the same for others. I feel that there are thousands of other women who would, after using your treatment, as I did, be thankful. I am so glad I got your treatment. This month is the first time in my life that I can remember of having my menses without pain. Why, I can't do anything but recommend Pe-ru-na.—Miss Emma L. Bolden, Wilberforce, O.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail Dr. Hartman's special book for women, free on application, to women only. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS

They Are Our Neighbors And We Should Wake Up And Get Their Trade

We are under obligation to Judge Penfield at Washington for a copy, of the August number of the monthly Bulleton of the Bureau of American Republics: It treats or the productions of the Central and South American states and of our trade relations with them. There are great possibilities for trade with all these countries, and we wonder at the slownass of our people in thinking of it. It will be interesting information to speak of a few points. Feom Brazil we bought last year 8,800 tons of Magnesia Mineral are, the bulk of which had formerly been sold to England. New districts are being opened for the production of India rubber.

COSTA RICA.

A railroad is quietly being constructed that will connect from ocean to ocean. This will shorten travel to the Pacific and build up two new towns, one on each ocean, as well as open up much new country.

PERU.

This country besides its great mineral interests already known has valuable coal deposits now being opened, which will be a great advantage to our ships.

NICARAGUA.

This country now is opening up valuable gold mines, and this alone will give a great impetus to our trade relations.

PARAGUAY.

Besides its great agricultural and lumber interests, is now developing a good deal in the mechanical industries. The manufacture of matches, both of wood and of wax, is growing rapidly.

YUCATAN.

The manufacture of Manlia rope is being developed on a great scale, made from a species of large banana plant. Varieties of hemp are also raised and manufactured.

We give these few items to show how great our interests are in these countries, or should be. So far, Germany and England have had the best of their trade. But now we are waking up the fact that we are near neighbors to them and should have their best trade. We already sell them large amounts of petroleum, paper, cutlery, machinery, etc, etc. We should increase our sales on all these.

RIGHT IN IT.

That's where Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is. The greatest remedy for the stomach that was ever put together. Absolutely vegtable with the exception of the Pepsin. Are you constipated? Then try Syrup Pepsin. Have you indigestion or sick beadache? Then use Syrup Pepsin. Spend 10c for a trial bottle and you will be convinced. Large sizes 50c and $1.00. A true family remedy. At F. E. Davenports.

OBITUARY.

Frances Pairan was the daughter of Lewis and Savilla Eosler, and the wife of Edward Pairan. She was born at the home of her parents two miles north of Corunna, Ind., April 2, 1867, and died at her own home in Corunna Sept. 12, 1898, aged 31 years, 5 months and 10 days.

She is one of seven children, four of whom have preceded her to the other world. Only two daughters are left, one the wife of Mr. Eli Lutman, the other the wife of Chance Hissong, both of Corunna, Ind. Sept. 13, 1890 she was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Pairan. To this union were born six children, three living, and three dead, two of whom lie with her in the casket. She was a good mother, providing as best she could, for the little ones about her. She was very patient during her suffering, and when told by her mother to put her trust in the Lord, replied, "I have done so, and am ready to go," and died happy. She leaves a husband, three children, a father and mother, two sisters and many friends to mourn. By the evidence she gave, she no doubt embraced faith in a crucified and risen Redeemer, and has gone on before to await the arrival of her friends and relatives who do likewise.

The funeral services were conducted in the M. E. church of Corunna, by Rev E. E. Campbell, text Jeremiah 15:9, "Her sun is gone down while it was yet day. Subject, An unexpected occurrence.

BIG CORN.

DeKalb county is full of big corn this year, several instances of which have been noted by the COURIER There are hundreds of cases of monster stalks and ears and we would like to see them in some way made public. One thing we will do. To the person bringing to this office the biggest stalk of corn and its ear, both to be considered we will give a year's subscription to the Weekly. Now here is a good chance to let the outside world know what the best county in Indiana is doing in the way of crops.

Moscow's Costly Cathedral.

Moscow cathedral, next to St. Peter's, at Rome, is the costliest cathedral in the world. On the exterior of the building alone 900 pounds of gold were used. Of its thirteen bells, the largest weighs half as much again as "Great Paul," in London, and the doors of the cathedral, of which the largest weighs thirteen tons, cost $310,000.

Practical Christianity.

During these latter years the church has put the confession of service among the essential articles of the Christian creed. We are witnessing a vast development of practical Christianity.—Rev. Newman Smyth.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

France in Peril.

Each day adds gravity to the political situation in France. It is no longer the Dreyfus affair. It is disease which threatents the life of the so-called republican government of the nation. A vast iniquity wherein the highest military, judiciary and civil authorities of the country have hopelessly debauched themselves is about to be exposed. It is a question if republican institutions, which are republican only in name, can survive the revelations which are imminent and inevitable.

Grave reports are current in official circles regarding Gen. Mercier, who was Minister of War at the time of the Dreyfus court martial, and Gen. Boisdeffre, formerly chief of the general staff.

Limit Is Placed on Deposits.

The statement has been made at the Treasury Department that by reason of excess of applications from banks for deposits of public funds the department finds it necessary for the present to limit the amount which can hereafter be granted to any one depository to twice the amount of its capital, the purpose being to distribute the funds as much as possible among banks in all sections of the country. The amount of money received from the sale of bonds now on deposit with depository banks is about $70,000,000, and during the present week this sum will be increased by about $5,000,000.

Stolen Silver Plate Recovered.

Superintendent of Police H. A. Gorsline of Fort Wayne, Ind., arrested two tramps having in their possession three handsome pieces of silver plate. These goods have been in use, and the supposition is they were stolen from some restaurant or hotel.

The men claim that they worked for Sell Bros.' circus, and were given these goods in payment of their salary. This story has been proven untrue. Any one having had silverware stolen will communicate with the Superintendent giving description of same. Goods will be returned if properly proven.

Ground Under a Car.

Chevalier M. de Proskowetz, acting Consul General of Austria-Hungary at Chicago, was killed in Fort Wayne, Ind., recently. Consul Proskowetz was a passenger on the Pennsylvania limited from Chicago to New York, and while the train was switching in front of the Pennsylvania depot, he walked off from the rear platform of a coach which was being pushed down the track. He fell in front of the moving car and was run over and frightfully mangled.

Sickness of King of Corea Explained

A special from Seoul, Corea, says: It is reported here that a high official of the palace, named Ko, has made a confession that he ordered the cook of the royal household to poison food intended for the King and Crown Prince, both of whom became seriously ill. The official further confessed that the poisoning plot was instigated by a former interpreter attached to the Russian Legation here, who was once a court favorite but is now in disgrace.

Educator Ends His Own Life.

Ann Arbor (Mich.) special: Warren B. Stickney, representing the Nichols Publishing Company of Springfield, Mass., shot himself dead. The cause of the suicide is believed to be loss of his home through financial difficulties. Mr. Stickney was a cultivated and intellectual man and was once Superintendent of Schools of Chicope, Mass. He leaves a widow and two sons.

Victory for Wholesalers.

Put Fish Bars on the Track.

Detective Gorman of the Santa Fe secret service has arrested Albert Phillips, a 12-year-old Emporia, Kan., boy, for attempting to wreck the Santa Fe Denver train near there a few days ago by placing iron fish plates across the rails. The lad will be sent to the State reform school.

Freight Engine Blows Up.

The engine on a freight train out of Emporia, Kan., on the Santa Fe was blown up near Quenemo. Fireman J. J. Murray was killed instantly. Ben Weist, a brakeman, and Engineer Tom Brady were both injured. Brady will get well, but there is not much hope for Weist.

PRICES REACH HIGH LEVEL.

Railway Earnings Continue to Gain and Export Demand Is Heavy.

Bradstreet's says: "Heat and holidays have imparted an irregular appearance to speculative and general distributive trade this week, and therefore to bank clearing returns, more particularly at the East, but with the arrival of cooler temperatures some improvement is reported at those markets. Generally speaking, favorable basic features already noted still continue most in evidence, and the attitude of quiet confidence in future good trade is unabating. Conditions in many leading industries, but particularly in iron and steel and its various products, are of continued and in some cases growing strength. The general level of prices of staples is the highest reached for five years past; railway earnings, favored by the enlarged movement of wheat to market, are showing larger gains than have been recently reported, a good export demand for agricultural and manufactured products is reported, failures remain at a minimum and reports of poor trade are conspicuous by their infrequency. Less favorable crop reports from abroad and good export inquiry are reflected in a rather steadier tone in wheat and in advanced quotations for ocean freights. Corn continues to experience a weather market, but prospects of yield are still regarded as favorable. Unabated activity is reported at Chicago and dry goods shipments cannot be made fast enough. Railroads are reported buying two to three months ahead of time. Business is active at Kansas City, Omaha, Cleveland, Louisville and throughout the entire Northwest."

LARGEST IN UNITED STATES.

Certificate for Federal Steel Company Issued by New Jersey.

The certificate of incorporation of the Federal Steel Company, with a capital of $200,000,000, was filed in Trenton, N. J., in the office of the Secretary of State. The State franchise tax was $40,000, paid by the Corporation Trust Company of New Jersey, and was the largest fee ever paid to the Secretary upon the organization of a corporation. The stock, which is $200,000,000, full paid, is one-half preferred 6 per cent, and one-half common. The company is thus capitalized as one of the largest in the United States. It was originally intended to be incorporated under the laws of Illinois, but by reason of the favorable amendments of the last session of the Legislature of New Jersey it has been incorporated under the New Jersey laws.

WOMAN CRAZED BY WAR.

Anxiety for a Son Who Joins the Army Causes Madness.

Hopelessly insane, Mrs. Margaret Hogan, now at the St. Louis city hospital, will be sent to an insane asylum, probably to remain there for life. She was driven mad by anxiety for her son Harry, her only support, who enlisted with troop M, Third United States cavalry. Mrs. Hogan did not want him to go, but, fired with enthusiasm, he seemed to forget his home duty, and it was too late to change when he came home one day an enlisted soldier to say good-by. She did not hear from him, and, thinking him dead, went crazy. Mrs. Lizzie Simmons, aged 40, is dying at the same hospital through grief for her only son, who ran away and is now fighting the ravages of fever at Jacksonville, Fla., being attached to Company K, Ninth Illinois volunteers. He was her only support.

PERU DRIVES OUT AGITATORS.

Government Finds Alleged Tourists Are Stirring Up Trouble.

At Lima, Peru, it is rumored that the promoters of the present agitations in various quarters of Peru have obtained assistance in money and arms from Argentina and Ecuador. The Peruvian Government has requested the Argentine minister to notify three so-called Argentine tourists that they must leave by a steamer bound for the south at once, as otherwise they would be exposed to arrest without protection from the Argentine Government.

Death in a Train Wreck.

Passenger train No. 4 on the Texas and Pacific Railroad plunged into six feet of water near Buchanan, twelve miles south of Texarkana. It was late and running at high rate of speed when it switched around a curve into a washout on a feeding spur to Sulphur river. The trestle work and several hundred feet of track were gone and the engine, mail, baggage, express and smoking cars went into the water. Prof. Caldwell, a school teacher of Queen City, Tex., was crushed to death in the forward end of the smoker, and J. E. Cotheran of Fort Worth was badly injured by a flying ice tank in the same car. The engine turned completely over and Engineer Nat Gilmour and Fireman Miller were only saved from death by the steel cab, which withstood the crash. Mail Clerks H. Wingfield, C. W. Cramp and W. M. Swift were thrown into the stream and had a narrow escape. Swift's left hand was crushed and the others suffered severe bruises. Expressman Guy Walker was badly bruised about the legs.

Anarchist Disturbance in Italy.

An anarchist manifesto, signed by "The Revolutionary Committee," has been distributed in Milan, Italy, during the past few days. The police arrested an Italian who was engaged in distributing the manifesto. The prisoner, who had just arrived from Switzerland when he was seized, shouted "Long live anarchy!" "Death to the king!" Some of the people in the crowd present at the time of the arrest interfered with the police officers who made the capture and several persons were injured on both sides before the anarchist was lodged in the police depot. The newspapers in Rome remark that the recent riots at Milan commenced in a similar manner.

Soldier Shot by Policeman.

Edward Alexander Callaghan, a private in First United States Volunteers (immunes), was shot to death at Galveston, Texas, and his companion, Jack Elliott, a civilian, was wounded in the abdomen. Harry Owens, a supernumerary policeman, surrendered himself. He says he attempted to arrest the men who had imposed upon a little boy, and they threw him down, kicked him and began knifing him.

Cloudburst in Texarkana.

A veritable cloudburst struck Texarkana, rain descending in solid masses for four hours. The streets were torn up badly in places, many basements and houses were flooded and other damage done. The cotton crop will suffer.

Gov. Ellerbe Re-elected.

Gov. Ellerbe has been re-elected in South Carolina by a safe majority.

Silverware Men Combine.

The Meriden Britannia Company and the Wilcox Silver Plate Company have issued circulars to their stockholders stating that the International Silver Company has been formed under the laws of New Jersey with a capital stock of $15,000,000 preferred and $15,000,000 common stock. Most of the stockholders, it is said, have agreed to accept $50 in cash, $50 in preferred stock and $25 in common stock of the consolidated companies for each share of stock. The Wilcox company directors have voted to accept $37.50 in cash, $35.50 in preferred stock and $18.75 in common stock for each share of the company's stock. It is understood that most of the stock has been offered on these terms. The Britannia company will receive $4,400,000 for its plant and the Wilcox company about $1,375,000. In addition to these concerns C. Rogers & Bro. of Meriden will get $500,000 and the Meriden Silver Plate Company and the Manning & Bowman company will also be sold. It is said that Samuel Dodd, secretary of the Wilcox company, will be the president.

MISTAKE CAUSES DEATH.

Wealthy New York Contractor Is Killed by Falling Over a Banister.

Elijah Brainerd, a contractor, was found dead in the hallway of 402 West Twenty-third street, New York. His neck was broken, apparently by a fall over the banister. Brainerd lived in the house adjoining the one in which he was killed. No one in No. 402 heard a fall or any unusual noise in the house. Mrs. Brainerd says she saw her husband coming up the street, apparently toward his home, at 2 o'clock, and waited for him, but he never reached there. She believes that he entered the wrong house by mistake, and in his confusion stumbled on the stairs.

Just Missed by a Train.

Mrs. A. P. Newkirk and Mrs. A. Gardner of Sedalia, Mo., had a miraculous escape from death. They were riding in a buggy when their horse took fright at a Missouri Pacific freight train. They raced alongside of the locomotive for nearly two blocks and then crossed the track in front of the train. The buggy was overturned in a cattle guard and the ladies thrown to one side of the track and severely injured. The horse was ground to pieces under the wheels of the engine.

Cincinnati Fire Did Not Spread.

A fire in the crowded downtown portion of Cincinnati broke out in the Rush building in the portion occupied by the Kenton Baking Powder Company. Valuable establishments were all around it in close proximity, but the fire department was so prompt in responding that the fire was confined to its original limits. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Cyclone's Damage on St. Vincent.

St. Vincent, 100 miles west of Barbados, has experienced the most violent and destructive cyclone ever known there. Kingston, the capital, is totally destroyed. It is estimated that 300 lives have been lost in that island, and that 20,000 people are homeless. The amount of property destroyed is enormous.

Pelagic Sealing Must Stop.

A United States officer, recently returned from the seal fishing fields, says that the herd is rapidly diminishing in size from year to year. He says that schooners from British Columbia still practice pelagic fishing, and that if the practice does not cease the herd will be exterminated.

Mrs. Yarnell Goes Free.

Mrs. Ardilla Yarnell, who has been in jail at St. Paul for several days under suspicion of causing the death of Arthur Middleton, the tea merchant, was discharged in the municipal court, on motion of County Attorney Anderson, without a preliminary hearing.

Masonic Temple Is in Ruins.

The new $50,000 Masonic Temple at Washington, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. Frank L. Stutzon's department store, occupying the basement and first floors, was ruined. Stutzon's loss of $60,000 on stock is fully insured. The temple will be immediately rebuilt.

Saloonkeepers Forced to Leave.

The citizens of Canton, Kan., who recently combined and drove colored people from the city, have inaugurated a crusade against the saloonkeepers, with the result that every one of them has been compelled to make a hasty escape from the town to avoid violence.

Republicans Carry Maine Election.

The State election in Maine resulted in the success of the full Republican ticket. Speaker Reed's margin over McKinney, who ran on the Democratic ticket, was about 4,000 less than that of 1894.

WILL HOLD TO LUZON

UNITED STATES TO KEEP THE WHOLE ISLAND.

Cabinet Decides Upon Policy Regarding Philippines — Instructions for Peace Commissioners Arranged—Iowa and Oregon to Go to Dewey.

Washington special:

The American peace commission will leave for Paris instructed first, to insist on the retention of the island of Luzon; second, to see that special trading privileges for Americans in the other Philippines are accorded on the same basis as Spanish merchants; third, Spain must promise a government in her Philippine possessions that will free the natives from barbarous oppression. No hard and fast rules will be laid down for the commission. Cuba and Porto Rico will not be subjects of negotiation except incidentally. They were disposed of by the armistice, and the future government of Cuba will be established by the United States without reference to Spanish demands or wishes. The Philippine question will only be open to partial negotiation. Manila bay, with the capital of the island, Cavite, and the Corregidor Islands, must remain absolutely as the property of the United States.

Nearly two weeks will elapse before the date for the meeting of the joint commission in Paris, and it may take two weeks more for the commission to arrange preliminaries and get down to business. In that four weeks the situation may change radically. Intervening events may lead the President to demand all the islands in the Philippine group. American sentiment or foreign intervention may force the issue.

A statement attributed to Gen. Wheeler aroused much excitement in Washington. He is alleged to have said the President expected Spain to refuse to surrender the Philippines and that hostilities might follow. An inquiry developed that the serious condition at the Philippines is appreciated in both army and navy circles and preparations to meet any obstruction to the American policy are being made with alacrity. The Oregon and Iowa, which are to join Dewey's squadron at Manila, would hardly be sent, it is said, to meet insurgent opposition. Their going is plain notice that, while negotiating for peace, the United States will firmly maintain her claims and tolerate no long or tedious delay.

TWO SHIPS TO AID DEWEY.

Iowa and Oregon Are to Be Sent to the Philippines.

The Washington administration is preparing for trouble in the Philippines. The Oregon and Iowa, which are to sail to the Pacific, bound ostensibly for Honolulu, are really going so as to be in position to re-enforce Admiral Dewey should he need help. As it is known that Admiral Dewey's ships can give but little assistance in the suppression of Aguinaldo and his insurgent army, it is evident that the administration fears foreign complications. Germany's intrigues are still being closely watched, with special reference to her seizure of anything in the Philippines that may be unlawfully ceded to her by Spain, such as a coaling station in territory which the peace commission may award in its entirety to America. A Washington correspondent asserts that the inside history of the strengthening of Admiral Dewey's fleet by the dispatch of the Oregon and Iowa to Honolulu is resistance to German interference.

SPANISH COMMISSION TO ARRANGE FOR EVACUATION OF CUBA.

SHAFTER MAKES HIS REPORT.

Entire Contents Will Not Be Given to the Public.

Major General Shafter has handed to the adjutant general of the army at Washington his official report of the military operations leading to the capture of Santiago. He deals with the Santiago campaign in the most exhaustive manner. Having prepared his report after all the reports of brigade and division commanders had been made, Gen. Shafter was able to profit by the statements made by these officers. The result is a valuable composite of the minor reports, although a large amount of original and independent material is contained in the statement of the commanding general.

THE PRESIDENT'S DIFFICULTY.

Hard to Secure Suitable Men for the Inquiry Commission.

President McKinley is having trouble in making up the commission to inquire into the treatment of the American soldier during the war. White House officials refuse to tell which of the nine men have accepted or declined, but from other sources it is learned that ex-Secretaries of War Robert T. Lincoln and Daniel S. Lamont, Gen. John B. Gordon and ex-Senator Charles F. Manderson have declined because of ill health or business engagements. Col. James A. Sexton of Chicago, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., and Daniel C. Gillman of Johns Hopkins University are reported to have accepted.

NO MORE VOLUNTEERS TO QUIT.

War Department Announces the Muster-Out Is Complete.

Tremendous pressure is still being brought to bear on the War Department to have more troops mustered out of the service. Efforts in this direction, however, are of no avail. It is announced with increased emphasis that there will be no more troops mustered out. The purpose when the muster-out began was to muster out 100,000 volunteers. A little over 96,000 have already been mustered out. The retention of the volunteers now in the service and the efforts to improve the morale of the army has in view the Philippine situation more than that of Cuba and Porto Rico.

Wants Names of Heroes.

The War Department has issued an order directing the commanding officers of the military departments, army corps and detached commands to send to the adjutant general as soon as practicable the names of such officers, both in the regular and volunteer service, as may be considered entitled to brevet commissions for "distinguished conduct and public service in the presence of the enemy."

NEWS OF THE TROOPS.

The Second Kentucky and the Second Arkansas left Camp Thomas.

The transport Vigilancia carried the last of Shafter's army from Cuba.

The Twentieth regiment of regulars has gone to Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

At Decatur, Ill., the members of Company H were given an enthusiastic welcome home.

The Third regiment of regulars passed through New York City Tuesday night, bound for Fort Snelling, Minn.

All the troops except a few regulars have left Chickamauga, but quite a large number remain in the hospitals.

Chicago's adopted regiment of regulars, the gallant Fourth, has returned to the snug barracks of Fort Sheridan.

The Fourth Wisconsin volunteer infantry, which has been at Camp Douglas all summer, is to be moved to Anniston, Ala.

The Government transports Roumania, Chester, Berlin, Mohawk and Mississippi, at Montauk, can move 5,000 troops in one day.

The general movement of regulars from Camp Wikoff began Tuesday, under direction of Col. Kimball, deputy quartermaster general.

The army hospital boat Relief left Montauk Point Monday with 250 sick soldiers for Boston, and they will be placed in hospitals in that city.

The first barge load of Spanish prisoners left the Greely cottage landing on Seavey's Island, Monday, to embark on the steamship City of Rome.

The Minnesota hospital train bearing the sick soldiers home from the South arrived in Chicago over the Big Four, and left immediately for the North.

It is the policy of the President to remove the troops from Montauk Point as rapidly as possible. A large number of sick men are in the hospital there.

Company I of the Fifth Illinois volunteers returned home at Jacksonville and they were accorded a greeting which vied with that given their fathers in '65.

Between three and four hundred sick were sent to New York and Brooklyn hospitals from Camp Wikoff on Sunday on the steamer Shinnecock and by rail.

Illinois' Sixth regiment is home from Porto Rico, having arrived at Weehawken, N. J., on the transport Manitoba Tuesday afternoon, after a five days' voyage from Ponce.

The third battalion of the Sixteenth Pennsylvania regiment sailed from New York Wednesday afternoon on the transport Berlin for Porto Rico to join the regiment for garrison duty.

Three regiments of regulars left New York Wednesday. The Thirteenth goes to Fort Porter and Fort Columbus; the Seventeenth to Columbus, Ohio; the Twenty-first to Plattsburg, Vt.

Crack cavalry organizations from New York and Philadelphia comprised the great majority of those who reached New York on board the United States transport Mississippi, from Ponce, Porto Rico.

The Seventh Illinois volunteer regiment, 1,300 strong, and the Illinois Naval reserves, 500 of them, reached home in Chicago and received a welcome that warmed the chill air for both of them and their friends.

The transport Saratoga arrived Tuesday from Santiago. Two hundred and fifty colored laborers and sixty signal corps men were landed at Camp Wikoff. The transports brought about 9,000 Spanish rifles.

The mustering out of the rough riders at Camp Wikoff Tuesday gave an opportunity to Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt and his boys to exchange compliments. The men presented the colonel with a bronze replica, "The Bucking Broncho," purchased by popular subscription.

The 158th Indiana infantry arrived home at Indianapolis Tuesday and was greeted by thousands of people. As the trains drew near the city the whistles, cannons, bells and nearly everything possessing any qualities for noise-making were turned loose, and the din was ear-splitting.

GOMEZ HAS RESIGNED.

General of the Cuban Army Opposed to American Occupation.

A report from an excellent source has reached Gen. Lawton at Santiago de Cuba that Maximo Gomez has tendered his resignation as general-in-chief of the Cuban forces, and that the Cuban Government at Camaguey has accepted it. It is understood that the reason Gomez resigned was that he did not approve the passive submission of the Cuban Government to the exclusive occupation by the Americans of the province of Santiago. The report created a great stir among the Cubans. Gomez's Santiago friends say that he has always favored the absolute independence of Cuba, and is credited with having said that the Cubans should try to expel the Americans by force if they should attempt to hold the island permanently.

MANY SPANIARDS DIE.

Terrible Death Rate Among the Prisoners at Guantanamo.

The condition of the Spanish at Guantanamo prior to their departure for Spain was, Col. Ray says, most distressing. The death rate was over eighty per day and Col. Ray believes that more than half will die on the passage. Seventy died on the wharf the day the San Ignacio was loaded and there is yellow fever among those who remain behind. Col. Ray had two mules killed for fresh meat supplies to the Spaniards. No fresh beef was to be had and the Spaniards were glad to get the mule meat. Indeed, there had been no meat of any kind in Guantanamo for three weeks.

NOT MOVING FAST ENOUGH.

Impression that Spaniards Should Be Hurried Out of Cuba.

The Spaniards are not evacuating Cuba as fast as many people in this country wish them to. It is claimed by those who are urging the Government to take vigorous steps toward accelerating the retirement of the Spaniards from the island that the Government at Madrid is trying to hold on to the Cuban customs duties as long as possible. If this be true it is a reason that all thrifty merchants can understand and appreciate.

HUNDREDS DIE IN A HURRICANE.

Terrific Storm and Tidal Wave Sweeps Over the West Indies.

A summary of the work of the hurricane that swept the West India islands includes the following losses: Persons killed, 531; persons rendered homeless, 60,000; buildings destroyed, 12,000; ships wrecked, 3; small vessels stranded and missing, about 15. The hurricane-swept islands are in the Windward group of the Lesser Antilles.

The storm was accompanied by a tidal wave, and the islands of San Lucia, Barbados and Guadeloupe also suffered loss of life and property from the heavy weather. Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, is totally destroyed. It is estimated that 300 lives were lost on that island, and that the homes of 20,000 people were destroyed. Bodies were buried in trenches. Thousands are starving or being fed at the public expense. Every small house on the Island of St. Vincent is down and many large ones, including churches and public buildings, were razed. Three large ships were blown ashore on the Windward coast, and many smaller vessels are stranded in shoals and on rocks where they were either blown by the hurricane or washed by the tidal wave. An estimate places the number killed on the Island of Barbados at 200. Tremendous rains and the tidal wave caused numerous landslides, in which houses, bridges and cocoa estates were destroyed. The total estimated loss of life on all the islands is 531, and the loss of property aggregates millions.

TO BE MADE A CARDINAL.

This Signal Honor Will Be Conferred on Archbishop Ireland.

The announcement that Archbishop Ireland is to be made a cardinal directs attention anew to the gifted and aggressive churchman. The archbishop is thoroughly American. Born in Ireland in 1838, he early emigrated to this country and settled with his parents in the Northwest. Even as a boy his ability was so great that he was sent to France to be educated, after he had decided to choose the profession of the priesthood. He refused to take orders in France and returned to St. Paul to be confirmed.

The outbreak of the civil war found the young priest filled with patriotic ardor and eager to go to the front. He went as chaplain of the Fifth Minnesota regiment and soon had gained the love of all the soldiers with him. In battle, however, he laid aside the clerical whenever he could help the fighters on the firing line, and did not resume it till the wounded and dying needed his ministrations. Home from the war, he became rector of St. Paul's Cathedral. In 1875 Dr. Ireland was appointed a bishop and assigned to the vicarate of Nebraska, but this assignment was changed and he was made coadjutor bishop of St. Paul. Nine years later he succeeded to the see of St. Paul, and in 1888 he was elevated to the archbishopric.

JOHN IRELAND.

WALKED SIX HUNDRED MILES.

Long Journey of a Veteran Who Attended Cincinnati Encampment.

At the Grand Army of the Republic encampment in Cincinnati one of the most interesting figures was Comrade J. R. Rappe of Marinette, Wis., a veteran of three wars and aged 83, who walked all the way from his Wisconsin home to Cincinnati. Comrade Rappe saw service in the Mexican, Seminole and civil wars, and despite his advanced years reads a newspaper easily without the aid of glasses. He covered the 600 miles in twenty-eight and a half days. He declares that he never felt better than when he reached Cincinnati. Mr. Rappe was a guest of T. A. Wilkinson of Avondale, with whom he served in the Thirty-second Wisconsin infantry throughout the civil war.

GAGS THE CORTES.

Premier Sagasta's Daring Suppresses Spanish Agitators.

By proroguing the Spanish Cortes in the midst of a heated and violent discussion over the war, Premier Sagasta ended a stormy session of the senate and probably saved his queen and country. Gen. Primo de Rivera and Count Almenas were the leaders of the turmoil, and while it lasted the chamber was a wild scene of uproar and disgraceful disorder. Sagasta, with the decree of the suspension of the session of the Cortes, ascended the tribune. He mounted the rostrum and read a decree proroguing the Cortes, and the law forbids any one speaking after the queen's decree has been read. His pluck saved the country and his queen.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Westfield's Principal Business Blocks Burned — Mari Deposits in Lake Maxinkuckee—Electric Railway on Paper—Killed for Theft.

A disastrous fire swept over the business portion of Westfield the other night, beginning about 11:30, and burning steadily until after 2 o'clock in the morning, when it was finally overcome. The conflagration started in the Union block, in which is located the Westfield Bank, G. L. Myers' grocery and F. M. Smith's dry goods store, on the first floor, and various offices and business establishments on the second floor. As soon as possible the fire department went to work, and after three hours' hard work finally got the fire under control, but not until the entire block and the adjoining drug store of W. H. Conklin was a mass of ruins. The origin of the fire is unknown, and the loss is estimated at between $20,000 and $25,000.

Mari Deposit Is Valuable.

Prof. Scovell, who has taken more than 1,000 soundings in Lake Maxinkuckee during the past few weeks, made an investigation of the marl beds at the request of State Geologist Blatchley. He found the deposit at least eighteen feet thick where the water is from eight to fourteen feet deep, but how much thicker he could not tell with the instruments he had at hand. The deposit, so far as could be judged without making a thorough analysis, was of a superior quality, having a large proportion of carbonate of lime, which makes it valuable in the manufacture of cement and as a fertilizer. At greater depths there also was marl, but it contained less carbonate of lime.

Proposed Electric Railway.

Private advices give meager details of a project for the building of an electric railway from Chicago to Goshen via Valparaiso, La Porte, South Bend and Elkhart. Negotiations have been opened by Chicago capitalists for the purchase of the Burns line in Goshen and the franchise for the building of a line between Goshen and Elkhart, which would be a part of the Lake Shore if built.

Killed for Stealing a Watch.

A man supposed to be Thos. Hawthorne of Chicago, who has been following the fairs, was shot and killed near the fair grounds at Shelbyville by Thomas Cuskaden, a young farmer, whose watch, it is said, Hawthorne and his "pals" had jerked from his pocket. Cuskaden is under arrest, while the officers are looking for Hawthorne's companions.

Ends Life by Hanging.

Thomas Hardy, a member of a prominent family in Lexington township, was found dead, hanging in a corn crib, when relatives returned from church. He had for years prospected for and found gold in small quantities in Saluda creek. He was considered weak-minded. No cause is known for the rash act.

Within Our Borders.

Prairie wolves are reported in the southern part of Laporte County.

Despondent over ill health, Henry Kissling, aged 20 years, shot and killed himself at Columbus.

Findlay McGuire of Anderson, private secretary to Consul Gowdy at Paris, France, has resigned.

William Stephenson, a wealthy farmer living one mile east of Elizabethtown, was robbed of $300 while asleep.

Contracts have been let for the building of an independent distillery at Terre Haute. Its capacity will be 5,000 bushels daily.

At South Bend, the Boston store, Chillas, Adler & Coble, proprietors, is closed. Liabilities, $16,000; assets, $25,000 to $30,000.

Andrew Stark of Chicago, president of the Chicago Indurated Fiber Pail Company, located at South Bend, has brought suit for a receiver.

At Terre Haute, Mrs. H. M. Winslow and daughter, Jessie, aged 12, were poisoned by eating watermelon and the daughter will probably die.

Two men boldly robbed the Big Four depot at Carthage in broad daylight, taking all the money and several bunches of tickets. One of the robbers was captured.

At Evansville, John R. Carney, who sued for divorce, has consented to take his wife to his bosom again now that he has been convinced that she had not been knowingly guilty of bigamy.

Isaac Snow, who shot and killed William McCart near Bedford, Aug. 15, was indicted by the special grand jury. The charge is murder in the first degree. Snow is now in jail at New Albany.

One hundred men in the car and machine department of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway shops at Washington have been laid off indefinitely. The officials assigned no reason.

William Reid, a prominent young school teacher of Shelby County, was arrested and thrown in jail, charged with the murder of Samuel Barker, near the fair grounds at Shelbyville during a fight.

At Indianapolis, the 5-year-old daughter of Mrs. Cornelius Driscoll, while trying to amuse her 4-months-old brother, accidentally fired a Flobert rifle, the bullet striking the baby in the forehead, causing instant death.

Judge Piety sustained the motion of the defense to quash the indictment for embezzlement against former City Treasurer Hauck of Terre Haute on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations. The State held that he had concealed the crime, but the defense insisted that, on the contrary, he had openly violated the law and published by the records that he had done so. The amount taken was $14,000.

The dead body of Riley McFadden was found in the woods one mile northeast of Austin. He had been hunting, and it is supposed in getting on his horse it became frightened and in some way one barrel of his gun was discharged, taking effect just under the right arm.

Albert Clifton, colored, of Cincinnati, Harry Wright of Indianapolis and Garfield Innis, colored, of Rushville, three desperate burglars, and David Bright, held for grand larceny, escaped from the Rush County jail during the absence of Sheriff Price. A skeleton key was used on the cell door.

Thirteen white cap notices have been served upon persons that have squatted along the banks of Lost creek, north of Terre Haute. Farmers, headed by President Ijams of the American Trotting Association, will employ mounted policemen for protection against trespassing hunters.

James W. Simmons, sheriff of Randolph County, and his deputy started for Stockton, Cal., armed with a requisition for the return of Charles H. Cadwallader, ex-cashier of the defunct Citizens' Bank of Union City, who is wanted on fourteen different grand jury indictments, each charging him with misappropriating money of that institution.

LOVE PASSED BY.

As in a dream I saw her where she stood,
God's sunlight on her lips and in her face.
Her brown locks rippling thro' a maze of lace,
And in her cheeks the mantling of warm blood.
And all her ways instinct with subtle grace.

I could not tell what skies were bent above,
Nor what sweet incense lingered in her train;
I only felt the burning palms of love
Laid on me, and the moaning of a dove
That fluttered in my face, with sudden pain.

And she had passed, as if no curse were born
Of all the love-light sleeping in her eyes.
The frowning day was ravished of its morn,
And onward crept from burning noon, forlorn,
Westward, enshrouded by the sobbing skies.

—Atlanta Constitution.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

It was a summer night in Cawnpore in the year 1857. Two lovers stood within the convenient shade of a veranda saying a long farewell—till the morrow. The stars were shining with that radiance which makes the peculiar glory of an Indian night, and the air was heavy with the scent of the champak blossom.

"Good night, my darling! I must go, and each moment only makes it harder to leave you."

"Go then! Who is keeping you?"

"You! You witch! How well you know your power. Haven't you kept me ten whole minutes when I ought to have started on my rounds ages ago?"

"I have kept you! How dare you imply such a thing? I have been longing for your departure. I—I am very sleepy," with a carefully simulated yawn and wide open mischievous eyes.

"Well, I am going. Really, this time. By-the-by, you know I cannot come till late to-morrow evening. I wish to goodness I were not adjutant. What's the use of a few extra rupees when it takes up all my time so that I never see you now?"

"Oh! what a story and what a frown! I can see it quite plainly."

"You cannot! I can only just see your white frock and the lines of your hair and that scarlet thing on your head, and—your eyes. I see them wherever I am. When the Colonel gives me an order, I stare straight over his head, till I know he thinks I have gone crazy, and I see, there—in the air—two dark brown eyes, sparkling with wickedness and shining like the stars above us now—and——"

The remainder of the speech was arrested by a little hand which was laid lightly upon his lips, and which naturally met the fate it deserved. There was complete silence in the shadow of the veranda, only broken by her soft and hurried breathing, and a slight stir as she nestled into his arms and was clasped for an instant to his breast. The syce (native groom), who was crouching near beside his master's waiting horse, raised his drowsy head and wondered if they had gone into the house again. But just then the farewell was finally accomplished, and he listened curiously to their parting words.

"Good night, Dick. Be as early as you can."

"Good night. Of course I'll be early. It will be years before I see you again."

"Be sure you recognize me then! You silly! Good night."

Master and servant turned at the gate of the garden and looked back. She had stepped out of the shadow, and it was bright enough for them to see every detail of her white muslin dress, flounced to the waist, and to catch the gleam of her uncovered neck and arms. Dick Manners even imagined that he could distinguish the curve of her dark head outlined against the scarlet bow and see the star-like shining of her eyes. He sighed as he rode away. It was so hard to leave her even for a few hours; and the heavy, clinging scent of the champak blossom oppressed him and seemed to lie as a weight upon his heart.

It was in May, 1887, when a party of English men and women rode through the streets of the native city of Lucknow. They were going to visit the shops of the famous gold and silver workers, and were accompanied by an escort of native police for their guidance, and, though the ladies of the party scoffed at the idea, for their protection as well. The bazaar at Lucknow has too bad a name for any Englishman to care to take his womankind there without a show of force.

The streets are very narrow, and the houses have, in many cases, overhanging balconies to the upper stories, creating a feeling of oppression even in riders, who are raised above the masses of many shaded humanity with which the countless lanes and alleys are filled. The crowd was rather a silent one at that time—7 in the morning. There were cries, indeed, from the unclothed children, who fought each other, and shrill reproofs from their mothers, who, returning from the wells with brass pots balanced on their heads, had no hands with which to punish their mischievous offspring. Besides the lower caste women, whose garments were of the scantiest description, there were women of the higher class, with veiled faces and shrinking forms, who, gliding along in the shadow thrown by the overhanging roofs attracted the attention of the English ladies, and they had to have the whole system of "purdah" explained to them. Mrs. and Miss Villars were ostensibly traveling through India, but excepting for a fortnight in Bombay, and a hurried visit to Cawnpore, they had spent all their time in Lucknow. At first Mrs. Villars used to speak about once a week of the necessity of their seeing "Delhi and Benares and Agra and everything," but lately she had become silent on these points and seemed to be waiting, with the rest of the society in cantonments, for the announcement of an event which would, in all probability, give Miss Villars ample opportunity for visiting these famous cities in turn and without any need for haste!

Edith Villars was typically English in appearance, having soft, fair hair and gray-blue eyes, and with the latter she now gazed as if fascinated at the shrouded figures which passed her in an endless stream. They filled her soul with terror. She felt that each of those veils might cover some awful tragedy, a tragedy whose horror was increased ten-fold by the seal of silence and of secrecy, typified by that shrouding veil.

Suddenly she turned to her companion, a gray-haired man, strong and upright, a man in the prime of life, and whose whole appearance, from the tip of his pointed gray mustache to the tip of his polished riding boot, was as typical of the English officer as hers was of the English girl.

"Did you notice that woman, Col. Manners?" she asked.

"Which?" said he, gazing at the numbers by which they were surrounded with a natually bewildered expression.

"Just on ahead. There—now—look. The one with the pretty blue—sarry, do you call it?"

"Sari," said Col. Manners, instinctively correcting her pronunciation. "I see the woman, or rather the figure you mean; but what is there extraordinary about her?"

"Only her feet. They are white, quite white. Isn't it funny?"

"Oh, no. They often look white with the dust of the road, and, besides, some of them are fair. Perhaps that particular woman is a hillwoman—a Kashmiri, they are sometimes as fair as—no, not you—but many English girls," and he glancer admiringly at her dazzling complexion.

But her remark had evidently impressed him, and for some time he, too, watched the passing women, gazing always at their feet. And it seemed to him that there were many white, horribly white. Strange stories came to his remembrance, stories which were whispered just after the mutiny, that all the missing English women and girls had not been killed. That thought had nearly maddened him once, even now he shuddered and saw with thankfulness that they had arrived at the Chauk, the part of the bazaar where the best goldsmiths' shops are situated, and remarkable for the beautiful carving of the wooden balconies which overhang the porches where the work is carried on. The travellers were loud in their praises and comparisons with every picturesque town in Europe, giving, however, as they felt correct, the preference to this city of "the gorgeous East."

The principal police officer soon ushered them into one of the largest shops, a low-celled room with a mud floor, while he whispered to Col. Manners that the owner was the biggest rascal in the whole bazaar, but also the best worker, and that the English "memsahibs" would see some wonderful things. Col. Manners, who had often performed the duty of showman during his stay in Lucknow, knew exactly what to explain, and waited expectantly for the inevitable exclamations of astonishment over the fire—a few pieces of glowing charcoal in a broken earthenware pot, the very primitive bellows, worked by an almost naked, shining little boy, and the few rough and simple tools.

The proprietor was a stout man, greasy and repulsive looking, and with an air which made Col. Manners look even sterner than his wont. His words were sharp as he bade the man show his goods as quickly as possible. The ladies thought all natives alike and noticed nothing wrong with the man's leer and sly glances or the way in which he directed all his remarks and compliments to the young girl. They watched him make a few silver bangles, and bought some curious ornaments which were lying about the shop, but Mrs. Villars had set her heart upon buying a certain kind of nose ring, and there was not one to be seen. When the silver worker understood her wish he went to the back of the room, where, in the shadow, Col. Manners had seen a crouching figure, and, saying a few words in a low, harsh tone, he returned to his customers with a particularly fine nose ring, encrusted with turquoises, in his hand. Mrs. Villars was delighted, and, while she conducted her bargaining with the aid of the policeman, her daughter wandered to the back of the shop.

She was astonished to find a woman seated there, and more, that she wore the identical sari which had attracted her attention on the road. Instinctively she looked down to see the woman's feet, but the whole form was shrouded in the usual way, nothing was visible but the face, and upon that the girl gazed with a growing horror on her own. It was the face of an old woman; dark hair was parted and brought low over the forehead; there was no color in the sallow cheeks, and the eyes glittered out of bony hollows. They were wonderful eyes, the only remaining trace in that countenance of a long past beauty; but now they were awful, too, for misery and humiliation, rage and despair, glared out of their brown depths as the English girl bent over them, half fascinated, half appalled.

A voice sounded across the room:

"Come, Miss Villars, we must be going. There is more for you to see, and the sun is getting hot. And"—with a tender, half proprietary tone in his voice as he came near her—"I don't half like your being here any longer. Ah, what have you found there?"

Over the miserable eyes into which she was looking there came a sudden change. They positively darkened with an expression of the acutest agony. Was she suffering—ill? Edith bent closer, but a fierce gesture of the hidden arm forbade her kindly touch and she could not speak—the woman would not understand English. She felt relieved to know that Col. Manners was beside her, and silently pointed to the huddled form. For a few brief seconds his clear, blue eyes met those other brown ones—those eyes, awful with the extremity of shamed despair, and filled with such longing as might burn in those of some lost soul who gazed across the impassable gulf into the kingdom of the blest.

With a deep-drawn sigh Col. Manners passed out and looked up, half unconsciously, to the dark blue sky above.

"These hovels are stifling; the charcoal fumes make them unbearable. Fancy living in one! No one but a native could!"

But, even as he spoke, he threw off the depression caused by the charcoal fumes, or that uncomfortable looking old woman in the corner, and turned to look proudly at the tall, beautiful, fair-haired girl who was already, surely, his own.

Miss Villars had not answered him. She stood hesitating on the threshold, shading her eyes from the dazzling glare before her, thinking of the blackness, the wretchedness behind her. She felt it would be long before she forgot that face; those eyes, which, to her excited imagination, seemed to be following her still. Was there not some appeal in them? She half turned as though to go back, but Col. Manners said: "This way, Miss Villars," and she stopped, ashamed of her aimless impulse.

Inside the dark and stifling shop, which Col. Manners had been so glad to leave, the woman still crouched upon the floor. She had thrown back her veil as if she needed air, and the masses of her dark, fine, waving hair were revealed. Not native hair; the very way it grew showed that. When the shade of the sari was gone her features were visible, and every curve of lips, nostrils, eyelids and throat cried out her English blood. Within her breast a torrent of misery was unsealed. It was years since she had thought, consciously thought, as she was thinking now.

But for thirty years she had not heard the voice she had heard to-day, had not seen the face upon which her eyes had hungrily rested only a few moments ago, had not dared for shame and agony to admit the thought of him into her heart, and now— All that she had borne of humiliation, ill-usage and daily, grinding tyranny throughout those weary years, was as nothing to the burning torment of those few seconds when Dick had looked down upon her without a spark of recognition in his eyes, with only a horror, which was, perhaps, the mere reflection of that within her own.

She closed her eyes. It was a summer night; she stood in a starlit garden; the scent of champak blossom was heavy on the air, and a voice was speaking from very far away: "It will be years before I see you again."

But, before the memory of the past could drive her tortured soul to madness, she was recalled suddenly to the present by another voice:

"Am I to keep thee in idleness all thy day? Rise, get thee to the preparation of the meal. Thou hast looked too long upon these white folk. Perhaps they have bewitched thee; but, remember I will have no lazy white memsahibs here!"

It was the voice of her master, and, while the sneer cut her to the heart as it had never failed to do through all the long years, the flash died out of her eyes, and, drawing the sari closely about her once more, she passed obediently to the back of the house with the slow, gliding step of a native woman.—Temple Bar.

The Long Coast of Chile.

My voyage down the coast of Chile gave me some idea of the enormous length of that country. I spent five days in coming by steamer from the nitrate fields to Valparaiso, and the German ship on which I shall sail within a few weeks for Tierra del Fuego will require nine days to reach Punta Arenas, on the Straits of Magellan. Chile is more like a long-drawn-out sausage or a worm than any other country of the world. The only land that compares with it is Egypt, which drags its weary length for more than a thousand miles between deserts along the valley of the Nile. Chile begins in a desert and continues in it for more than a thousand miles. Later on it bursts out into a green valley between high mountains and ends in the grassy islands of the southernmost part of this hemisphere. It is nowhere over 200 miles wide, and in some places it is not more than fifty, but it is so long that if it were laid upon the face of the United States, beginning at New York, it would make a wide track across it to far beyond Salt Lake, and if it could be stretched from south to north with Tierra del Fuego at the lowermost edge of Florida, its upper provinces would be found in Hudson Bay almost even with the top of Labrador. Chile is 2,600 miles long. It embraces all of the land between the tops of the Andes and the Pacific ocean south of the river Sama, which divides it from Peru, and it has, in addition, most of the islands of the Magellan.—Frank G. Carpenter in Atlanta Constitution.

"Over to Port."

To the visitor from the shore who sees its working (on an English ship) for the first time, the rule of the starboard side—to give it a name—has an odd appearance. One does not know why everybody swarms over to port when a certain cap with gold on the peak emerges through a hatchway. It may even be unpleasantly enforced. Thus it chanced once to me to be a guest in the gunroom mess of a ship which came out for target practice.

I was walking with the paymaster, both of us void of any intention of offense, on the sacred starboard side, when a midshipman came up with a message from the Captain, who was on deck, though not on the quarter deck, that we must confine ourselves to the port. There was a plentiful lack of humor on the part of that officer, and no sufficiency of politeness; but mules there must be, or else a man-of war would speedily become a regular built privateer.—Blackwood's Magazine.

CAPT. DREYFUS' CASE

TERRIBLE PUNISHMENT OF A POSSIBLY INNOCENT MAN.

A Scene at Once Pathetic and Tragic—While He Proclaimed His Innocence the Mob Shouted "Traitor!" "Judas!" "Wretch!"

Now that the Dreyfus case is once more prominently before the world—a world by the way, which in the main has always considered the French captain innocent, a brief glance at the awful scene attending his degradation may be interesting.

Dreyfus was a captain in the French army and, in secret court, was convicted in 1894 of selling plans of the minister of war to the German government. Among them were plans for the mobilization of the French army on the eastern frontier in the event of war. He was sentenced to every conceivable degradation that military men could inflict on a soldier, and to life imprisonment on the terrible Devil's Island.

Surrounded by a guard of four artillerymen, accompanied by a lieutenant of the Republican Guard, Alfred Dreyfus was brought out from the small building in which he had been confined. Gen. Darras lifted his sword and uttered the command "Carry arms!" which was repeated from company to company. The troops executed the movement. Hearts almost ceased to beat, and all eyes were directed toward the disgraced soldier. Between the forms of the artillerymen could be seen clearly the gilt stripes and glittering sword of the captain, distinguished at a distance by the black sword knot at the hilt of the sword. Dreyfus walked with a firm step. The group started toward Gen. Darras and a clamor went up from the crowd. The group stopped. Again there was silence, this time tragic.

The cannoneers accompanying Dreyfus stepped back a little; the condemned man appeared detached from the group. The clerk saluted the general in military fashion and, turning to Dreyfus, read in a distinct voice the sentence condemning him to exile and imprisonment in a fortified spot and to military degradation. Then the clerk turned to the general again and made the military salute. Dreyfus listened in silence. Then, in distinct voice, but with a touch of emotion, Gen. Darras said: "Dreyfus, you are unworthy to bear arms. In the name of the French people, we degrade you."

MRS. DREYFUS.

Dreyfus raised both his arms and holding his head high cried in a loud voice, in which there was not the slightest tremor: "I am innocent. I swear I am innocent. Long live France!"

Meanwhile the adjutant had swiftly torn the bands from his cap, the stripes from his sleeves, the buttons from his dolman, the numbers from his collar, and from his trousers the red band which he had worn since he entered the polytechnic school. The sword remained. The adjutant drew it and broke it across his knee. A snapping sound and the two pieces fell with the rest to the ground. The sword belt was next detached and the scabbard fell in its turn.

It was finished. The seconds seemed a century. Never was there an impression of acute anguish. Again, without sign of emotion, the voice of the condemned man rose:

"You degrade an innocent man!"

Next he had to pass before his former comrades and subordinates. He strides over what were the insignia of his office, which two gendarmes will presently pick up, and places himself before the four cannoneers who lead him before Gen. Darras. The little group, with the two officers of the Republican Guard at the head, start toward the band placed before the prison vehicle and begins to march along the line of troops, at a distance of about a yard. Still Dreyfus walked with head erect. The crowd shouts: "Death to him!"

Dreyfus is handed over to two gendarmes who put him in the prison vehicle. The coachman whips up his horses, and the wagon starts off, surrounded by a detachment of the Republican Guards, preceded by two with drawn revolvers.

CAPTAIN DREYFUS UNDER GUARD ON DEVIL'S ISLAND.

The condemned man was rich, cultivated, a favorite with many officers, and the head of a charming household. From this position he fell in the eyes of Frenchmen lower than the vilest criminal that ever went to the jail or to the guillotine.

Other Trials.

But the case did not end with the conviction of the Hebrew soldier. Doubts existed as to his guilt and finally his brother Mathieu accused Count Esterhazy of being the author of the memorandum. A court martial acquitted Esterhazy. Then came the sensational charges preferred by M. Zola against the officers of the French army, in which he claimed that Dreyfus was innocent and that the officers had conspired to injury him. Zola was prosecuted by the government and sentenced to a year's imprisonment and a fine of 3,000 francs after one of the most remarkable, unjust and scandalous trials ever held in any country. He appealed, was again tried and again convicted. Then he fled to Switzerland to escape the penalty.

Meantime the matter had been discussed in the French Chamber of Deputies. It seemed as though the affair would excite the mercurial Frenchman to civil war and the situation was critical when M. Cavaignac, minister of war, pledged his honor as a soldier that Dreyfus was guilty and that there was unquestionable documentary evidence to that effect. This acted as quietus on the public mind.

MILITARY DEGRADATION OF CAPTAIN DREYFUS.

Cavaignac then began an investigation on his own part of the documents in the case. One of them was unsigned and he called Lieut. Col. Henry, who was one of the main witnesses against Dreyfus, for an explanation. Henry then confessed that the document was a forgery, and afterward he committed suicide. It transpires that the forged document was the chief reason why the court martial found Dreyfus guilty.

LIEUT. COL. HENRY.

Up to the time of Henry's confession the people in the main were opposed to the opening of the Dreyfus case, believing that there could be no wrong in their beloved army. But after that there was a revision of public sentiment.

LI HUNG CHANG'S DISGRACE.

Stripped of His Robes of Office for Intriguing with Russia.

Li Hung Chang, whom the Emperor of China has stripped of his robes of office and dismissed from his post as foreign minister owing to his intriguing with Russia, is no stranger to the vicissitudes of fortune. This is the second time that his yellow jacket and peacock feather have been taken from him, and it is by no means improbable that he will get them back some day. Li is now 75 years old, and if he ever expects to get into power again he would better hurry. He has been in public life from time out of mind. In 1860 we find him working with General Gordon ("Chinese") to suppress the Taiping rebellion. At that time he was governor of Thiang-Sin, and in 1865 he was created viceroy of Hong-Kuang, and in 1868 a grand chancellor. In 1870 Li was degraded for the first time and left without a shred of title or insignia. In 1872 the emperor restored him his titles and made him grand chancellor. Since then Li has been the grand old man of China and has been the direct cause of every improvement made in that backward country. He was the founder of the Chinese navy and has been a whole cabinet in himself. During the late Japan-China war the emperor once more degraded him, but was forced to restore him to power. There is no public man living of his age that has the vitality and strength of this fine old oriental.

LI HUNG CHANG.

He Declined Without Thanks.

Charles Mathews, the celebrated English comedian, was the unhappy possessor of a morbid sensibility to things which most people would consider too insignificant to notice, says the Detroit Free Press. Having an appointment with a friend, Mathews arrived at the inn where they were to meet some time in advance. Upon entering the dining room he found its sole occupant, a commercial gentleman, earnestly enjoying a round of boiled beef. Mathews sat down by the fire and took up a newspaper, meaning to wile away the time until his friend should appear. Occasionally he glanced from the paper to the beef and from the beef to the man until he began to fidget. Pretending to stop reading, he addressed the gentleman in a tone of indignation, ill-disguised, and with a forced smile, he said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but I don't think you are aware that you have no mustard."

The person addressed looked up in surprise, mentally resenting this gratuitous interference with his tastes, and bowed coldly. Mathews again resumed his paper, but curious to see if his well-meant hint had been acted upon, furtively looked over his paper, and finding the plate still void of mustard concluded that the man was deaf. So raising his voice to a tone of sarcastic acerbity, he said, with syllabic precision, "Are—you—aware—sir—that—you—are—eating—boiled — beef — without—mustard?"

Again a stiff bow and no reply. Once more Mathews affected to read, though in reality he was nursing his wrath. At last, seeing the man's obstinate violation of conventionality and good taste he jumped up and in a most arbitrary and defiant manner snatched the mustard pot, banged it down under the defaulter's eyes and shouted:

"Confound it, sir, you shall take mustard!" after which shot he abruptly left the room.

Caller—I sent you a poem about three weeks ago. What have you done with it?

Editor—I'm holding it. Every little while lately I get to thinking that we are not getting out as good a paper as we ought to, and then I take that poem and see how much worse the sheet might be, and that makes me cheerful again. Say, how much'll you take for it?

"Mr. Johnsin, does you know whar de sailors got dot name of 'tars' applied to them?" "Sure; in some pitched battle, of course, suh."—Princeton Tiger.

"You are my sun," he breathed, passionately. "Have you noticed that lately the sun has a ring?" she inquired, with a delicate blush.—Town Topics.

"Does Aunt Rebecca take an interest in the war?" "Yes; she says she hopes the guns won't be near enough to disturb her sitting hens."—Chicago News.

Hardluk—My life reminds me of the career of a golf ball. Feltz—Why? Hardluk—Because I am helped out of one hole only to get into another—Bazar.

"So your wife went without a new gown to buy a silk flag—what touching patriotism." "Well—partly that and partly because she wanted to out-shine her neighbors."

One War Correspondent—There is one religious rite I could delight in. Another One—And what is that? One War Correspondent—Swinging a censor.—Minneapolis Journal.

"When I proposed to her she asked me if I was a new recruit." "What did she mean?" "She wanted to know if I had ever participated in an engagement before."—Chicago Record.

"They tell me your wife is a particularly fine housekeeper." "Excruciatingly so. I've seen that woman sprinkle the clock with insect-powder to get rid of the ticks."—Detroit Free Press.

Patriotic Customer—I'd like to buy that flag you just showed me, but the price is too high. Can't you come down a couple of dollars? Dealer—What! Lower Old Glory! Never.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Where on earth could she have picked up so insignificant a man for a husband?" "I haven't any exact information, but he looks as if he might have gone with a pound of tea."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"So Kallseum has got the part of walking gentleman in the new play. I wonder how he will acquit himself." "First rate, I should think. It's been his way of getting from one town to another these many years."

"What is your honest opinion concerning Americans?" inquired the interviewer. "Let me understand," returned the eminent Frenchman. "Are we speaking with reference to the Cuban affair, or the exposition in 1900?"

Uncle John—They tell me that your friend is a terribly awkward fellow; that he doesn't know enough to eat with his fork. Theodore—Shouldn't be surprised. He has always eaten with his mouth when I have been with him.

Counsel (to witness, the father of a family)—Why are you so certain, Mr. Smith, that the event occurred on such a date? May you not be mistaken? "Impossible, sir. It was the day I didn't have to buy any of my children a pair of shoes."

Servant—No one, ma'am, exceptin' a tramp. He wanted somethin' to eat, but I told him there was nothin' ready, an' he'd have to wait till the leddy of the house got back from the cookin' school, an' mebbe she'd make him somethin'. Mistress—Of all things! Did he wait? Servant—No, ma'am. He runned.—New York Weekly.

An old Scotch minister was often obliged to avail himself of the aid of probationers. One day a young man, vain of his oratorical powers, officiated and on descending from the desk was met by the elder with extended hands, and, expecting high praise, he said: "No compliments, I pray." "Na, na na," said the minister, "noosdays I'm glad o 'onybody."

"Mistuh Pinkley," said Miss Miami Brown, "what is dis here diplomacy?" "Well, I dunno whethuh I kin transparify de question so's you'll see froo it. But ef de lan'lord comes 'roun' foh de rent an' I says I ain' gwinter pay, why, I gits put out. But ef I tells 'im ter come 'roun' nex' week, an' nex' week tells 'im ter come 'roun' ag'in, an' so on, dats diplomacy."—Washington Star.

Materfamilias (to candidate for the post of cook)—Your general character is excellent; but before engaging you I must find out something more from your last mistress about your cooking of fancy dishes. Candidate—Oh, you may make your mind easy on that point, mum. The last family I lived with was just gettin' into society through their table.

Educating Farmers.

The Danish Government, aided by local agricultural societies, has begun organizing excursions among the "housemen," or farmers of moderate means, to model farms and creameries in different parts of the country. It is believed that this form of education will tend to elevate the standard of small farms and be a welcome aid to many who can not afford to travel for educational, or, in fact, for any other purpose. Money spent in the interest of agriculture and of the farmer's education is wisely appropriated.

Capt. Capron, Sr. Dead

Capt. Allyn Capron of the first regular artillery is dead. He was a noted artillery officer, and did great work before Santiago where his son Allyn K. Capron of the Rough Riders was killed in the first fighting. This preyed on his mind, and the hardships of the campaign brought on typhoid fever. He fought with his battery till peace came, but died at his home on the Potomac below Washington.

FATAL RUNAWAY.

David Lawrence A Well Known Farmer, The Victim

This morning at about nine o'clock, David Lawrence who had been to town started for his home in Richland township. He drove a spirited team, as usual, and we are told it had recently run away. Going along North Street, they took fright at something, possibly at the piles of new dirt thrown out of the trenches along there. The people along the west end of that street say the team was running when they first noticed it. They went full tilt over the railroad track and turned north on the road, with a whirl. The ground there, slopes down on the west side of the road, making it all the more dangerous. There he was thrown out striking the ground with full force, and evidently falling with his left side on a small boulder stone that was covered by the long leaves of the grass. The team ran on north, went against a telephone pole and hitching post near Wagner's blacksmith shop, broke both off at the ground and broke the telephone pole twice in two higher up. Just past that, they got loose from the wagon and ran up the west road toward home. Dr. Phillips, of Corunna, was driving out of town a little distance behind Mr. Lawrence, and seeing him thrown out, hurried up and helped to get him into a comfortable position, but having no medicines with him, he gave him in care of Mrs. Wagner, who is a sister of Mr. Lawrence, and had come running down to see what was the trouble, and he hurried to bring up Dr. Sebring. Some boys and Mrs. I. B. Brandon also had come up and made him as comfortable as possible. And when the two doctors returned they carried the injured man to Mr. Wagner's house. An examination showed that he was bruised up some, but his hurts were chiefly internal One rib at least, on his left side, was broken and crushed in, probably crushing into his lung. The doctors tried to get this rib and place, or at least relieve him some, and did all possible to help him. But there was little that could be done. Soon, it was apparent that his lung was probably filling up. He suffered greatly but at first seemed to be conscious of everything, and could speak a little. After a time, however, he gave little sign of any consciousness, except of the intense pain he suffered. Alvin Baker, had come up about the time of the accident and drove rapidly out northwest to Mr. Lawrence's home, and brought in Mrs. Lawrence. She was convulsed with grief, to see her aged husband in his agony, and apparently dying. But she could do nothing but sit by him and try to comfort him, and to bear up under her own burden of grief as best she might. It was a sad sight. Quite a number of neighbors and relatives had gathered in but could do no more than to offer sympathy.

The horses had disappeared up the road toward home, and Alvin Baker, on his return with Mrs. Lawrence, reported that one of them had been found.

LATER:—Though his death has been looked for at any moment since 11 a. m., he still breaths, but is getting so weak, that the doctors say he can live but a short time.

B. & O. SOLD OUT

The B. & O. road, the oldest line in the United States has changed hands at last. It has been purchased, at least enough stock to control it has been purchased by a syndicate composed of P. D. Armour and Norman B. Ream of Chicago, and James J. Hill of St. Paul. It is believed it will now be operated in connection with the Northern Pacific, now called the Great Northern, which runs from Minneapolis to Seattle, on the Pacific coast. It this is done, the management will no doubt either buy one of the lines from Chicago to Minneapolis, or build a new one This would give the road a continuous line across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a thing no other road can claim.

Our Great Country

We were informed the other day, by a man who has a chance to know, that Dr. Holloway the republican candidate for coroner, came to Butler three or four years ago, as a sort of tramp. He laid around, did a few odd jobs and got meals wherever they wanted to give them to him. Then he suddenly remembered that he was a graduate of a medical college. So, he hung out his sign and began to practice medicine. Now he is a candidate for a county office. Verily this is a great and glorious country.

THREATENING LETTERS.

[Angola Republican]

At the meeting of the court yesterday morning, Judge Roby, on taking the bench, made in open court the following statement which he had reduced to writing:

On last Thursday morning, a letter was mailed at the depot in Angola, directed to the present judge of this court and containing an irregularly torn scrap of paper, written in pencil, as follows:

"I Herd a man Say your days would be Short keep on the look out when in Angola."

The writing was disguised, but it has been my fortune to become well acquainted with it. Its gifted author, at an ealier date sent to me by the same method another letter of the following tenor:

"F. Roby you wer the cause of R Lutz loosing a part of the money he paid out on the road in this township you must get that back for him at once or his house that is morgaged for Same will be sold to pay mortgage and turn him with his family into the Street if you allow this to be don done or do not tend to it at once and get the township to Pay the balance for him or pay it yoursel Your buildings will all go to ASHES or be BLOWN TO HELL and YOU WITH THEM. This is opsional with you but you must act at ONCE or I will. do not take this as a joke it will be a Serious one. Your Kerear is about run and the next jump you will land in hell This means justice to all men.

Red Caps."

At a more recent date I had the pleasure of receiving from my anonymous friend another epistle in the same courtly scrawl, and of this tenor, capitals and orthography preserved:

"F. Roby a Seckond Warning the bondsmen of R. Lutz will be likely to close their mortgage on his Home in the coming term of court if they do the mortgage of justice will be closed on your buildings and life. we are waiting to see whether you advise Dodge and insist on his Paying lutz the Ballance the town owes him if you do not cause him to do this it would be wel for you to prepare for justice it wil Come."

It is not necessary for me to say that the ealier letters were disregarded. If the bondsmen of any defaulting officials have been paid money it was not out of the public treasury nor upon my advice. The last letter will be equally disregarded. It may as well be understood that the most powerful malignant criminal who comes into this court will have a fair trial and no favors. The scales shall hang evenly and the balance will be kept. My correspondent who fails to send his address, had as well save postage.

I deem it proper to call the attention of the members of the bar to this matter at this time, since the interest is so largely theirs. If such methods are to be tolerated in Angola your usefulness is ended. If your lawyers and judges are thus to be menaced and intimidated, court proceedings would indeed be a farce.

I have recently examined a series of three letters written by the same person to a non-resident attorney who has presided in this court with dignity. They are more vile than the ones I have read, and not connected with them. The conditions are now public, gentlemen.

Fine Peaches

We have received two large Elberta peaches from a sister, Mrs. B. A. Davis, of LaPorte county, the finest specimens we ever saw. She writes they were from trees two years planted and now about twelve feet high. This is their first crop and though few in number they were large, measuring from 6½ to 8½ inches around some weighing over seven ounces. The variety is new to us, but we presume our farmer readers know of this new and promising kind though in this county not much attention is paid to peaches. Her husband Hon. E. W. Davis is authority on fruit culture, he being the one from whose interview we took a clipping on plum culture, etc, lately from the Laporte Argus. They are situated in a favorable location for fruit just outside the south end of the great Michigan fruit belt, and about eight miles in a straight line from Lake Michigan.

THE TARIFF

Democrats Would Reduce Taxation to the Lowest Point Practicable.

They Recognize the Necessity of Levying Taxation For the Simple Purpose of Raising Revenue For the Economical Support of the Government.

In the grand march of our much vaunted civilization, a class of men, not numerically large, but profound thinkers upon subjects involving national prosperity, have come to the front as the advocates of free trade between the nations of the earth.

The men who exploit their free trade theory would do away with custom-houses, the frowning Moro castles equipped to levy tribute upon the commerce of the world, to be paid, not by the nation exporting and selling the exported merchandise, but upon the citizens or subjects of the country who purchase it.

The law under which this tax is levied and collected is called a tariff, or the tariff under which schedules are prepared and the amounts of money to be paid on each specified article, which necessarily, and inevitably is paid by the purchaser or consumer. The free trade advocates contend that if there were no tariff taxes levied the benefits that would accrue to the people, the great mass of the people in all of the commercial nations of the earth, would exceed the imagination of philanthropists. Free trade between nations, it is held, would be a potent factor in ushering in the millennial era. It would introduce harmony and good will in the counsels of nations and do away with the friction, envies and jealousies now existing, indeed, it might be said since "God hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," it might be well enough to recognize the "fatherhood of God" to the extent of permitting his civilized children to trade together free and untaxed.

But the most sublimated of the nations of the earth, except, possibly, England, have not reached that free trade state of perfection where tariffs and schedules, direct and ad valorem taxation can be dispensed with, and the United States, under the corrupt Dingley law, is in the swim up to its neck—a law never designed so much to put money in the treasury to sustain the government, as to tax the great body of American consumers for the benefit of a comparative small class of corporation patriots, who subscribed liberally to Mark Hanna's corruption fund, which debauched the nation and elected Major McKinley.

The Democratic party is not a free trade party. It recognizes the necessity of levying impost taxation for the simple purpose of raising revenue for the support of the government economically administered, believing that such taxation is all that any just interpretation of the constitution warrants, and that beyond that limit, tariff taxation is spoliation, direct robbery protected by law, which adds to its infamy, and which no amount of word jugglery can obscure.

The high prerogatives of government in their relation to citizens or subjects are: (1.) To deprive men of their lives. (2.) To deprive them of their liberty. (3.) To deprive them of their property. The latter deprivation often involving conditions as lamentable as the former. In the language of Shylock: "You take my life, when you take the means whereby I live," and a tariff law such as the Dingley abortion, is enacted for the purpose of taking the means whereby poor men live and handing the booty over to grasping shylocks, who, in the language of the play, "are wolfish, bloody, starved and ravenous."

It is one of the evils inherent in tariff taxations, that it is practically impossible to construct a tariff law, under the operations of which selfishness, greed, rapacity and spoliation do not find coverts under the protection of which these curses thrive, but when such monstrosities as the "McKinley law" and the "Dingley law" are warmed into life in the womb of Republicanism, as prolific of infamies as the ovum of snapping turtles, their number and enormity tasks investigation and defies the capabilities of statisticians.

The Democratic idea of tariffs is to reduce taxation under their operation to the lowest point practicable to meet the requirements of government economically administered. But, unavoidably, such tariffs are more or less protective in their operations, since, as a rule, the tax on the imported article advances its price, and if it comes in competition with a home manufactured article, that, as certainly as the imported article, costs the consumer more than otherwise would be charged. Democrats do not deny this postulate. They admit it in all its force, and to the extent practicable would shape tariff laws in the interest of the great body of consumers, because statesmanship worthy of the name seeks to promote the general welfare of the people, which cannot be done if legislation is so shaped as to benefit the few at the expense of the many.

As has been intimated it is difficult to levy tariff taxation in a way to do even and exact justice to all who pay it. With the lowest tariff the country has ever had there was incidental and unavoidably protection, but when the Democratic party has shaped tariff legislation there has been no purpose to create a favored class and enrich it at the expense of the rank and file of consumers, while the Republican party pursues a diametrically opposite policy as is shown by all the tariff laws for which it stands responsible, the McKinley and the Dingley laws being the two colossal infamies which stand to its credit, distinctively and vividly indicate the purpose of the party to create monopolies for the sake of monopolies and to compel the people to pay tribute money to fill their coffers.

In so far as the Dingley law has contributed to the revenues of the government in a time when war demanded funds to meet expenditures, it has been a dismal failure; but not so when the favorites of the party are considered, for whose special benefit the law was enacted, under the spacious plea of restoring prosperity to the country.

From these pampered pets of the government no complaints are ever heard. Corruption in legislation for their benefit inspires them to eulogize it, and prompts them to contribute liberally of spoils wrung from labor to perpetuate in power a party which has systematically utilized its opportunities and powers to increase spoliation in the interest of those who, regardless of the poverty the piratical policy entails, with the insatiable thirst of the horse-leech, forever calls for more victims and more blood.

To defeat this party of McKinley and Dingley tariffs, and expose its nonesmes of rapine is the purpose of the Democratic party of Indiana in this campaign, and as the days go by, facts will be piled upon facts until the people, amazed at Republican perfidy, will rally to the standard of Democracy and again give it control of state and national affairs.

WHO GOT THE $200?

When the COURIER wrote up the recent rotten escape from the jail, the writer was well aware that offers of money had been made in an indirect manner, looking to the release of the prisoner pickpocket. At first $100 was the sum alluded to, and later $200. On Saturday Stroh went home to stay till Monday, Deputy Platter was conveniently absent as many believe, though not all. On Monday the prisoner had escaped. Who left the lower lock of the door between the cell and the corridor unlocked? Who has ever explained this? Why were both officers gone? Who got that money? How came two pieces of broomhandle fitted to hold saws, lying under the window outside? Where was Platter, when this escape was made? He is a candidate for sheriff. Let him answer to the people, some of these questions. There are more to be answered. Why is it that republicans have nominated the man, who most of all, would keep up the corrupt and careless way of managing the sheriff's office? Who but Platter managed the accounts of that office at the time Stroh was about $200 behind with the county? Are the people going to back a party that stands by its officers no matter how incompetent or corrupt? We have waited a week or two to see if some republican paper or politician would not rise up and condemn these things, and having waited in vain, the COURIER proposes to refresh their memories. They are either for or against these things, Which is it to be? The COURIER columns are open for a reply.

THE OREGON AGAIN

The Oregon, which made the other famous trip, coming from California around South America, and reaching Cuba in time to take a valuable part in destroying Cervera's fleet, is now expected to make the same trip back again. She and the Iowa, another first class battleship, are to start in a few days for the south, go around South America, into the Pacific, then across that Ocean to Manila. It goes to strengthen Dewey's fleet which has never been a strong one, in spite of the wonderful record it made. With the Oregon and Iowa he need not fear the big German ships or any other. In fact, he gave them to understand they must keep a safe distance and behave themselves or he would sink them as he did the Spaniards. The trip these two heavy vessels have to make from here to Manila, will be not less than 20,000 miles, the nearest way, and will be greater if they go to San Francisco. It takes an enormous amount of coal for such ships, and four large coaling ships, or possibly six, will go along to supply them with coal. Two have already gone on ahead to wait their coming at some point in the Pacific. Two will start with the warships and keep with them, till they reach the coal ships that are ahead. Then, having used up their own coal they will return home and the other coal ships will go the rest of the voyage. A ship with supplies of all kinds and one refregerator will go along, and also a ship with immense apparatus to distill fresh water from the salt water of the ocean. So it will be seen that the expedition will be likely to be well cared for, and will no doubt make the long journey in safety.

OBITUARY.

Ann (Seidel) Martin was born in York County Pennsylvania, Jan. 2, 1892, and died at her home in Fairfield Center, Sept. 15, 1898, aged 69 years, 8 month, and 13 days. On Oct. 4, she was united in marriage to Cyrus Martin, to this union were born eleven children, five sons and six daughters three of the daughters have preceded her to the spirit world. The remainder of the children together with the husband are left to mourn their loss. At the age of 16 years, she united with the Lutheran church in Pennsylvania, and later united with the same church by letter at Fairfield Center, Ind. She has been a faithful member of that church and gave full assurance of faith in her redeemer. The funeral was held at this place in the Lutheran church. Rev Campbell assisted by Rev. Elson conducted the services. Interment in Fairfield cemetery.

Saturday's Daily.

September 20th to 23d inclusive, is the Butler Fair.

—The soldier boys who have been sick, are all improving.

—A. Provines, jr., of Jackson township made the COURIER a busines call today.

—Attorney Wickwire of Ashley, came down on the forenoon train, on some legal business, we suppose.

—The Kendallville fair will be remembered on account of its green trees and the great show for the money.

—W. H. Palmer is a cash man who pays ahead on his paper. He attended to that matter today and has thanks.

—Lloyd Obenchain, of the COURIER force, went to Kendallville yesterday to help the News office through a rush of work.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, Lesh, Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—A man has been arrested at Muncie og suspicion that he had been one of the parties who murdered Wm. Stoll, a brother of John B. Stoll of the South Bend Times.

—The Grain Drill for a farmer to buy is the Superior Single Disc Drill. It will work in trashy ground where Hoe Drills will not work. Call and see us before you buy. Culbertson & Boland.

—Burglars entered a house in Wabash this week and got $400 in cash. So sound were the people in slumber, that the thieves got the paper money out of a sack hung around one lady's neck.

—New forces are being sent to Porto Rico to take the places of those sent home. It seems to be considered a wise plan, not to let any troops remain there very long, on account of their health.

—All our exchanges are full of the grand receptions given the soldiers when they came home. A big reception was given to Col. Studebaker, but he was so ill he could only be present a short time.

—Maine had her state election Tuesday. The republicans carried the state as usual, but by a reduced majority. Their vote shows a falling off of 17 per cent, and the democratic vote a gain of 2 per cent.

—Miss Stella Hague is teaching in Kendallville having now had her first three weeks service there. We hope she may be abundantly successful and find many friends among the good people of that city.

—When you buy a wagon why not buy the best. The Turnbull wagon runs easier and will wear longer than any other wagon made. Call and examinine them before you buy. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—You invite disappointment when you experiment, DeWitt's Little Early Risers are pleasant, easy, thorough little pills. They cure constipation and headache just as sure as you take them. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Estella Tarney started yesterday for Terre Haute where she will take another year of study at the state Normal school. Her brother Joseph Tarney took the same train, but goes to the State University at Bloomington.

—Aaron Geisinger of Butler and his boy came over this morning on their wheels, looking fresh after the ten-mile trip. Mr Geisinger is employed in the bicycle factory there, and says the season has been a good one for them.

—A. H. Provines was here today and reports his son, H. G. Provines as having begun work in the graded schools of St. Joe, of which he is principal. H. G. comes of a race of teadhers and that alone will help him to success.

—Baby photographs a specialty at Lybarger's Gallery North Main, Auburn.

—Capt. Gilbert of Angola, went south on the forenoon train, on his way to Indianapolis. He says there are a few members of company H., his company, still at the hospital there and he thought he would go down and see them.

—Lydia Teeters was home today, having finished her first week of school at Garrett. She is pleased with her school and with the superintendent, Mr. Hough who has proved an able educator. Garrett people will find Miss Teeters an estimable lady and good teacher.

—The state fair at Indianapolis this week, though well attended was not a financial success. They will be about $10,000 behind. The presence of two regiments in camp was an advantage, as it brought in many people to see the boys, who would not have come otherwise.

—So far, Cal. Husselman is ahead on the corn question. He brought in some stalks today that measured 15 feet 3 inches, and one of the ears had 26 rows. It is a new kind that he got in the central part of the state. It is called Dungan's White Prolific, and he got it of Dungan, the originator.

—The Paris, Ky. Reporter, speaks of a man pretty well known and well liked in Auburn, when it says: Col. Geo. W. Bain, Kentucky's most famous orator, will speak at Carlisle on September 28 in the interest of the Blue Lick monument. There is an effort being made to erect the monument at an early date.

—Stories of neglect of sick soldiers at Montank Point are still coming to light. We cannot understand why this camp which has been occupied a month or two, should not now be supplied with surgeons and medical supplies as well as everything needed in a hospital. There is a screw loose somewhere.

—The photos of the Carnival at Hoffman's gallery are splendid. The groups and carriages in the flower parade show off with a lovely effect. They remind one of the pictures of the flower parades of California that we find in Magazines. No one should fail to call and see them. And we wish to suggest that those in the pictures give their names and the name of their Club to Mr. Hoffman so he can label all of them.

—There is a new and taking attraction at the big show window of G. H. Yesbera. It is the model locomotive engine, made by Justus Winslow, son Henry A. Winslow who lives northeast of town. It is quite a good sized engine, and as far as we can see, every part of it is correct and true to life. It is quite a surprising thing that he could make one that looks so natural People stand around it by the hour to see how perfect it is.

—Goshen Times: B. F. Hentzell, of Syracuse, has a record as a soldier that any man could be proud of. He enlisted under the three months' call at the beginning of the rebellion and then in the three year service. He served from March 2, 1861, to December, 1865. He was in 31 battles and was wounded in the neck and one elbow at the battle of Chickamauga. He was one of 17 left in the orignal regiment. He draws the modest sum of $8 a month from the government because of his wounds. There are those who deserve less but are drawing larger pensions. Mr. Hentzell keeps the Mineral Park Hotel at the east end of Lake Wawasee.

Monday's Daily.

—Mrs. Ann Culbertson continues to improve, we are greatly pleased to hear —Mrs. Dell Purdy came home last evening from a visit with people at Lagrange.

—Miss Kate Clapp has returned to her home at South Whitley, after a visit with Mrs. Will Schaab.

—LOST:—A sealskin boa on public square. Finder will confer a favor by leaving at Trentman Sisters'.

—Elmer Lane was able to get out of doors this morning for the first time since his return from Florida.

—S. C. Snyder and W. H. McIntyre went to St. Louis last evening to attend the national meeting of carriage makers being held in that city.

—Sept. 24, the Lake Shore Railroad has a very low rate excursion to Chicago. Particulars in another column.

—Cheap excursion to Chicago over Lake Shore Railroad Sept. 24 See bills or another column for particulars —Quite a number of people came in from the country Saturday evening to attend the entertainment at the Opera House.

—Don't forget the sale of personal property at Adam Liens' near Corunna Oct. 6. There are many useful things noted on the bills.

—The regular army is to be increased and a chance will be given to all the men in the volunteer regiments to enlist if they desire. It is likely that many boys have grown to like army life and may take a turn with the regulars.

—Mrs. Rebecca Stonestreet and daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Shank, of Cedar Creek made the COURIER a pleasant business call today.

—Alex. Forsythe, who resided southeast of town died yesterday morning after an illness of several weeks. We believe he had typhoid fever.

—A 40-acre, 60-acre and 200-acre farm for sale cheap. Will take good Auburn property in exchange.

WALTER C HARTMAN.

—Matt Zerwis yesterday reported Will Clark as no worse at least, and she hoped he was improving. He is pretty weak however, and is kept quiet as possible.

—Sale Bills done at this office on short notice, at reasonable prices and in a neat manner. Give us a call when you have a sale. A notice will be given in the paper free.

—Eb. Kern is sporting a hand badly swollen with two boils, and as the other hand has just fairly recovered from a felon, it will be seen he is having his hands full. No pun intended.

—D. A. Shull, on the old Jacob Grogg place northwest of town, will have a sale of his personal property on Saturday, Oct. 1, at 10 a. m. There will be quite a lot of property offered.

—Quite a number of people living several miles in the country, attend Sunday church services in town. Among them are John Sheffer, Amos Walsworth and Fremont Smith.

—D.N. Myers will keep his fine imported Cleveland Bay Stallion at his feed barn in Auburn every day in the week this season. All interested in good horses, are invited to call. tf

—Before you buy a Buggy or Surrey, call on us and examine our line of Eckharts, they are the finest and best made and our prices are right. Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind.

—Mrs. Martha Dawson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rush is back from Denver, reaching here las evening. We understand she will stay here for some time, as her mother has been in poor health.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—It is now likely that a large army will be gathered at various points in the southern states, and kept in camp over winter to be ready if needed. It is well enough not to be caught napping by the crafty Spaniards.

—FOR RENT:—The rear room on 1st floor Kiblinger block, and the office and rear rooms in second story. Very reasonable prices.

WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—Garrett Herald:—O. C. Himes tells us that he found a man's hat under his grape arbor last Monday morning and that the owner can have it by calling for it and explaining how it came to be there.

—A boy over in Elkhart county slipped from a mow of wheat into the cylinder of a threshing machine, last week. It was running slow to clean up the scattered wheat, but he was so badly injured that he died.

—Truth wears well. People have learned that DeWitt's Little Early Risers are reliable little pills for regulating the bowels, curing constipation and sick headache. They don't gripe. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Chester Hodge got home Saturday evening on the Wabash. He brought home two members of the 157th, Hathaway of Garrett and Gramling of Summit, who had been in the hospital but were now well enough to come back.

—Hon. Geo. Curzon, lately appointed governor general of India, married an American girl, a sister of Joe Letter the hero of the big wheat deal of Chicago. She will help her husband to rule several hundred millions of people.

—Rev. J. D. Brosy and wife went today noon to visit his people in Williams County, Ohio. He will come home Saturday and preach Sunday evening only and then returns for the rest of the week. He will be home before Sunday, Oct. 1, and will hold services that day.

—Up to date no general officer has been mustered out of the service. They are having a good time living at hotels, at the land knows what per month as wages. It would be a good idea to put them to earning their pay, by seeing to it that the sick are better cared for.

—Geo. Stealy, came down from Angola Sunday forenoon on his wheel, and though a little flushed by the heat was as fresh as a daisy after a half hour's rest. His home is Woodlawn, Chicago, and he is in business for himself in the work of enameling bicycles. He came home Thursday for a visit with his father at Angola.

—Frank Rush is able to go to work again now, though under some difficulties. His left hand, the one burned the deepest is still so tender that he has to protect it with a glove. The inside especially, is all new flesh, as the skin had burned there the deepest. It will bother him for a long time. But we are glad he has saved them both.

—Madden Brothers are placing the monument for Judge McClellan in the cemetery at Waterloo. It is one of the largest they have erected and is very handsome and appropriate. It is of granite, broad and solid but not high. It has two bases, a main shaft and cap, the four pieces together, weighing about 20,000 pounds. It took four loads of boulder stones to make the foundation. The bases are being placed in position now.

—Dr. Baxter has begun the improvements on his residence across west from the M. E. church. Workmen are beginning to put in the stone foundation and he will put on a roof, new paper and have it repainted. He intends to put it in good shape to occupy a few years till he can build to suit him. The location is one of the most desirable in town.

—W. H. Wilkins the popular young gentleman that posed in the Bishop & Lackey window the week of the Carnival, spent Sunday in the city the guest of friends. He went to Butler at noon today where he poses for one of the firms during the street fair. Mr. Wilkins is well known over the U. S. as a successful artist in his work. He has accepted a position with a Milwaukee firm, and will travel through the south this coming winter.

—Chaplain G. A. Carstensen of the 158th regiment, in commenting on the abuses in the volunteer army, says, that the chief surgeon of the First Army Corps in camp at Chichamauga, had never practiced medicine, but was a horse doctor. He had taken a course of study at a medical college and afterwards became a teacher at a veterinary school. But his political pull was all right and McKinly appointed him to the place. He had charge over many surgeons, and nearly 35,000 men. His name is Huidenkoper.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Henry Winslow was in town on Monday.

—For reliable insurance at lowest rates, See J. N. Wilson, Successor to B. M. Hastings.

—Capt. Gilbert who had been at Camp Mount returned to Angola today on the noon train.

—John Benninghoff and wife, and her mother Mrs. Wm. Whetsell, all of New Era, were in town Monday.

—Angola's 23d fair begins Oct. 4, and ends Oct. 7. They always have good fairs there, and we look to see many go from this place.

—The funeral of Alex. Forsythe was at the home in Jackson township today. Services by Mr. Meese, and interment in Woodlawn.

—MARRIED:—At the residence of H. H. Boozer in Waterloo by Rev. W. O. Butler, Sept. 18th 1898, Mr. Albert C. Brown to Miss Edith F. Hoffman.

Indiana's war claims against the general government amounts to nearly $100,000. It is for the putting the volunteer troops in the field and supporting them till sworn into the general service.

—A boy in Grant county, was riding a horse Saturday, that drew a corn cutting machine. In some way the lad fell off and the machine went over him He was badly hacked and cut, but may recover.

—J. M. Carmer and C Gill have purchased the feed and seed store belonging to Francis Kosht, south of jail, where they will continue in the same business. Mr. Carmer will still continue to buy hay also.

—It is a pity to see the large, handsome shade trees that S. C. Snyder had planted last fall, turn yellow and die. The trees were needed both for shade and beauty and besides must have cost him a handsome sum of money.

—The Chicago Times-Herald of this morning reports from Plainwell, Mich., that quite a number of persons were poisoned at that place last Friday evening at a church social. They had canned beef and that is supposed to have caused the tronble. Among those named as being dangerously ill are Mrs. John Bishop. But the relatives here have not heard of it, although Arthur Olds and his wife are up there visiting his brother Will, and Mr. Bishop's folks.

For Mothers!

THE discomforts and dangers of child-birth can be almost entirely avoided. Wine of Cardui relieves expectant mothers. It gives tone to the genital organs, and puts them in condition to do their work perfectly. That makes pregnancy less painful, shortens labor and hastens recovery after child-birth. It helps a woman bear strong healthy children.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

has also brought happiness to thousands of homes barren for years. A few doses often brings joy to loving hearts that long for a darling baby. No woman should neglect to try it for this trouble. It cures nine cases out of ten. All druggists sell Wine of Cardui. $1.00 per bottle.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. LOUISA HALE, of Jefferson, Ga., says: "When I first took Wine of Cardui we had been married three years, but could not have any children. Nine months later I had a fine girl baby."

WALKING AS EXERCISE.

THE lack of proper outdoor exercise, walking briskly and inhaling plenty of fresh air, is the cause of fully one-half the ills that feminine flesh is heir to. Walking, which also means standing erect, with shoulders thrown back, lungs expanded, and head well poised, is the best tonic that can be prescribed for exhausted brains, weakened muscles and threadbare nerves. Business women in Chicago are forming walking clubs, which, as the members grow in grace and muscle, shall expand into running clubs. This is certainly a step in the right direction, and one which business women the world over will do well to take. Two miles a day is the shortest sprint which the Chicago walking club woman may permit herself, and this must be enthusiastically and energetically entered into and accomplished with the untiring regularity of clockwork. Appropriate dressing is an important item, in order to secure the fullest possible benefit. To walk in tight shoes, a snug-fitting corset, and trailing skirts is disastrous rather than beneficial to womankind. Club women, who have studied the situation, prepare for their walks by donning short bicycle skirts, short, light jackets, low-heeled, square-toed shoes and light hats. The corset is wholly discarded. The fact of whether a walk is stylish or lady-like is not given much consideration by Chicago club women. The important matter is how to walk in such a fashion as to derive the greatest amount of healthful exercise with the least bodily fatigue; hence, the popular walk is similar to the long stride taught athletes at Yale college. It consists in walking from the hips, using the whole leg in each step, instead of the leg below the knee only, as most women do.—Demorest's Magazine.

Taking Her Husband's Place.

When J. Sloan Snidow of Mexico, Mo., received the Democratic nomination for county clerk he at once began an active canvass, in the course of which he over-exerted himself. As a result he was taken ill and died. He was at that time filling the office for which he was renominated. Another primary was held and Mrs. Clara D. Snidow, his widow, was a candidate, receiving 1,214 votes, her nearest competitor getting 851. Mrs. Snidow was born in Lincoln County, Missouri, in 1856, and moved with her father to St. Clair County at the age of 14. She was married to Mr. Snidow April 11, 1878, and moved to Audrain County, where the family has since resided. Mrs. Snidow in her younger days was a school teacher.

MRS. SNIDOW.

A Pansy Party.

A delightful party is one at which pansies are used for decoration and for adornment of hostess and guests. Among the features of entertainment is a white canvas, upon which is painted a large pansy. Each guest is given a strip of green tissue paper, with a pin in the end, and each in turn being blindfolded, seeks to pin this stem in the right place. The most successful one is given a pot of blooming pansies.

For a pansy party a pleasing literary program can be provided by appropriate selections from that charming writer, "Pansy." Tableaux can also be easily arranged representing familiar scenes from her works, and a sketch of the authoress would prove an interesting feature.

Good Dressmaking.

No hard and fast rule can now be laid down as to the cutting out of this or that article, fashions are too varied and as there are so many changes, it is always well to pin up your paper pattern and try it on, so that you may see if a certain style really suits your figure. Good dressing does not mean always wearing the latest fashion, it means, rather, the wearing of what actually suits each individual form. If flounces are in fashion, even the short woman can wear these if she modifies their depth; then again the apron skirt, the short or tall woman can adopt by regulating the depth of the flounce to suit each figure.

Royal Boarders.

When members of Queen Victoria's family or any wandering German relatives of high degree visit London and occupy apartments in Buckingham Palace, "by invitation," they pay their board just like common folk in a first-class hotel. This prevents the sovereign lady from having too much company and makes things very pleasant for the palace servants. It is a very expensive piece of pleasure, being a guest of royalty, and even the Queen's own children must pay their way out of their allowances when not directly under her roof.

An Acquired Art.

Leave-taking is an acquired art. I remember an old gentleman saying: "Mrs. G. is a woman after my own heart. She knows when and how to go. When she is ready she gets up, says goodby, and leaves. Other callers say 'they must go,' and after repeating it several times, with episodes in between, get as far as the hall. Another gossip, interlarded with 'must go's,' then the front door is opened, more dilly-dallying on the stoop, another confab at the gate, and when after several returns the final goodby is over, the departure has been longer than the call. Why cannot a woman in making social calls follow the advice of Artemus Ward, and 'get up and get' when ready to go home?"—Ladies' World.

A Word with the Girls.

Just a word of advice, girls, about the gentle art of returning thanks. That the writing of a brief word of thanks is an art we dare not deny. It is one, moreover, that every girl should cultivate, and it may in the long run be of far more service to you than pen-painting or piano-playing. Don't be dilatory in sending such notes. If you are the recipient of a pretty gift it goes without saying that you write a cordial note of appreciation, but if some little favor is done how often is this little note of thanks forgotten. You go out of town and stay overnight with a friend. You have a pleasant memory of your visit, and if you desire your friend to have the same write a line repeating your spoken thanks, even supposing you get up in the middle of the night to do it. You will find that it pays to be prompt in the matter of returning thanks, as people are ever readier to do a kindness to a person from whom the gracious word of thanks comes quickly and spontaneously. Cultivate, dear girls, the habit of returning thanks, and be assured you will not regret it.

Well-Groomed Girl.

There is an exquisite charm about a neatly dressed woman. She does not wear her hair twisted up carelessly. Her gloves are not ripped at the seams, nor any buttons missing from her boots. Her veil does not reveal a hole over her chin, nor does the binding of her skirt show ragged in places. Not many women show their tidiness in all these little details, but it is a pleasure to meet the girl or woman who is "well-groomed." The cloth gown of such a woman fits her without a crease, and there is neither speck nor spot on it. Her linen collar and cuffs are snowy white. Her gloves do not wrinkle. Her shoes are kept clean and polished. Her bonnet or hat is pinned on straight, and her hair is neatness itself. She is the picture of delicate finish and wholesome order.

Do not feed a baby at any age oftener than twice during the night.

Do not feed a baby under three years of age oftener than once in two hours.

Do not feed a baby between one and two years of age oftener than once in four hours.

Do not feed a baby between three and twelve months of age oftener than once in three hours.

Scald and thoroughly cleanse nursing bottles and nipples immediately before and after use.

A baby should be bathed at least twice a day in lukewarm water, for much depends upon cleanliness.

Milk should not be allowed to stand uncovered even for a short time, and it should always be kept in a perfectly clean and cool place.

Give the baby plenty of fresh air in the cool of the morning and evening. During the middle of the day keep it within doors and in a cool room.

The Feminine Observer.

Love digs a grave for itself as soon as it thinks it can get along without perfect trust.

A road traveled for the first time seems so much longer than after we grow accustomed to it.

Dirty white is about as warm and ugly looking as can be imagined. White, to be attractive, must be immaculate.

The tinkle of ice in the pitcher has a more attractive sound than the finest band in the world—if you are thirsty.

The truest form of loneliness comes when we are left to ourselves after having been used to a congenial companion.

The air of studied bohemianism cultivated by some young men may please themselves, but it doesn't impress outsiders one whit.

The visitor who is continually telling you of improvements you could make in your house is not apt to be invited to come again.

Some people dare to be disagreeable over the telephone who would be meek as a dove if they were face to face with the persons to whom they are talking.

Shooting Costume.

So few women acknowledge that their gray hair comes from age instead of fright, worry or something else that turned it prematurely.

CHAT OF THE CHURCH

WHAT IS GOING ON IN THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

News Notes from All Lands Regarding Their Religious Thought and Movement—What the Great Denominations Are Doing.

Their Favorite Denominations.

A CORRESPONDENT asks for the religious status of the members of the cabinet and leading officers of the army and navy. The President, as everybody knows, is a Methodist, and a regular attendant at the Metropolitan church in Washington, at which the Rev. Frank Bristol, formerly of Chicago, is pastor. He seldom allows anything to interfere with his attendance. Secretary Day was brought up a Methodist, but has belonged to the Lutheran church since his marriage. He attends the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Washington, because of its convenience. Secretary Gage is a member of the Independent Presbyterian congregation which worships at Central Music Hall in Chicago, being one of the founders of that organization with Prof. Swing. In Washington he also attends the Church of the Covenant. Attorney General Griggs is an Episcopalian. Secretary Long is a Unitarian, and both are regularly seen at the churches of those denominations in Washington. Secretary Bliss is a Congregationalist and one of the pillars of Broadway tabernacle, New York. He usually spends Sunday with his family in that city, but when he remains over in Washington worships at the Church of the Covenant. Secretary Alger is a Presbyterian and attends the New York Avenue church in Washington. Dr. Radcliff, who now occupies that pulpit, was for several years Secretary Alger's pastor in Detroit. Postmaster General Smith, like Mr. Bliss, spends Sunday with his family in Philadelphia. He, too, is a Presbyterian. Secretary Wilson is an old-fashioned Scotch Presbyterian and attends the Church of the Covenant. Ex-Postmaster General Gary did the same and occupied the pew of Col. John Hay, our ambassador to England. Vice President Hobart is also a regular attendant at that church. Admiral Sampson is a Presbyterian, a member of the Church of the Covenant, and while in Washington a regular attendant at the Sunday and week-day services. Capt. Philip of the Texas is a Congregationalist and belongs to a little church near the navy yard, Boston. Admiral Dewey and Commodore Schley are Episcopalians. Capt. Clark of the Oregon is a Presbyterian. Gen. Miles is a frequent attendant of St. John's Episcopal Church. Gen. Corbin is a Methodist. Admiral Sicard is a Presbyterian and attends the Church of the Covenant. Capt. Mahan and Capt. Crowinshield are Episcopalians.—Wm. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record.

Living Water.

"I was once stopping," says a lady, "at a village on the Welsh coast, where the people had to bring all their water from a well.

"'Is this well ever dry?' I inquired of a young girl who came to draw water.

"'Dry? Yes, ma'am; very often in hot weather.'

"'And where do you go for water then?'

"'To the spring, a little way out of town.'

"'And if the spring dries up?'

"'Why, then we go to the stream higher up—the best water of all.'

"'But if the stream higher up fails?'

"'Why, ma'am, that stream never dries up—never. It is always the same, winter and summer.'

"I went to see this precious brook which 'never dries up.' It was a clear, sparkling rivulet, coming down from the high hill, not with torrent leap and roar, but with soft murmur of fullness and freedom. It flowed down to the highway side. It was within reach of every child's little pitcher. It was enough for every empty vessel. The small birds came down thither to drink. The sheep and lambs had trodden down a little path to its brink. The thirsty beasts of burden, along the dusty road, knew the way to the stream that 'never dries up.'

"It reminded me of the waters of life and salvation flowing from the 'Rock of Ages,' that brought within the reach of all men the gospel of Jesus Christ. Every other brook may go dry in the days of drouth and adversity, but this heavenly spring never never ceases to flow!"

How We Know God.

Many people say they know God is nature. They see Him in the lofty trees or in the beauty of the flowers. Others find God in His word. Every gracious invitation is His voice of love, and in the thunders of His law they feel His majesty. But we believe there is another and more certain way by which we may know God. There come times in most lives when nothing but God will do. I do not mean by this times of great affliction or trouble; but times when, as it were, the scales fall from our eyes; when these things that we see, handle, and love so well, look to us as they really are, only transitory, constantly passing away, and we say, as did Solomon, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." Then our hearts cry out for the living God, we want our feet on the Rock of Ages. God hears our cry, and comes so close that a great awe and hush falls upon us. It is Immanuel, God with us, and we think of Abraham, when God talked with him beside the tent door. And for a short time, at least, we live the life eternal. Nothing in such hours could shake our faith in a living, personal God. But alas, we come down from the mount and are soon absorbed again in the busy cares and pleasures of this life. Yet the memory of such hours abides with us, and is a safeguard in times of doubt or temptation. And so we believe God in this way gives to His children the truest revelation of himself. "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him."

The Finger of God.

A writer in the Sunday School Times tells how, during a season of revival, a friend was praying one evening for a certain unconverted neighbor. After this manner he prayed:

"O, Lord, touch that man with Thy finger; touch him with Thy finger, Lord!"

The petition was repeated with great earnestness, when something said to him:

"Thou art the finger of God! Hast thou ever touched this thy neighbor? Hast thou ever spoken a single word to him on the question of salvation? Go thou, and touch that man, and thy prayer shall be answered."

It was a voice from the throne. God's servant arose from his knees self-converted. He had known the man as an impenitent for a quarter of a century, yet he had uttered not a word of warning. Hundreds of opportunities had come and gone, but the supreme question of life had been set aside for such topics as "the weather," "the latest news," "politics," "trade," etc. His first duty as a Christian had been left undone.

Only.

Only a word for the Master,
Lovingly, quietly said,
Only a word,
Yet the Master heard,
And some fainting hearts were fed.

Only a look of remonstrance,
Sorrowful, gentle and deep.
Only a look!
Yet the strong man shook,
And he went alone to weep.

Only some act of devotion,
Willingly, joyfully done.
"Surely 'twas naught!"
So the proud world thought,
But yet souls for Christ were won.

Only an hour with the children,
Pleasantly, cheerfully given.
Yet seed was sown
In that hour alone
Which would bring forth fruit for heaven!

"Only"—but Jesus is looking,
Constantly, tenderly down
To earth, and sees
Those who strive to please;
And their love He loves to crown.
—Charlotte Murray.

Old Church in Virginia.

One of the very few old churches still standing and practically unchanged is St. Luke's, at Smithville, Isle of Wight County, Virginia. It was built in 1632, as attested by the date on some of the bricks, under the superintendence of Joseph Bridger, whose descendants still live in the county and worship in the church. The records of the family, which are unbroken for a period of 150 years, establish the date of the building of the church, and are full of interesting details of early colonial history. It appears that St. Luke's was originally so well built and of such excellent material that no repairs were made to it until 1737, 105 years after its completion. At that time it was ordered "that Peter Woodward do the shingling of the church with good cypress shingles of good substance, and well nailed, for 700 pounds of tobacco, 300 pounds being now levied." It was again reshingled in 1821, eighty-four years later.

Subjects of Thought.

Strong thoughts are iron nails driven in the mind that nothing can draw out.

The injuries we do and those we suffer are seldom weighed in the same balance.

A poor man with a sunny spirit will get more out of life than a wealthy grumbler.

We know accurately only when we know little; with knowledge doubt increases.

Friendship improves happiness and abates misery, by doubling our joy and dividing our grief.

Nothing is so fierce but love will soften—nothing so sharp-sighted but love will throw a mist before its eyes.

Faith alone can interpret life, and the heart that aches and bleeds with the stigma of pain alone bears the likeness of Christ and can comprehend its dark enigma.

God is love, and love is a thing that can only be felt by great souls. It cannot be explained by great intellects. We cannot reason, or be reasoned into believing, that some one loves us; we must feel it.

Let us ever remember that he who lives for self and self alone is a failure, while he who renders honest, loving service to his fellows, though he be poor and an outcast, unhonored and unsung, is to all eternity a noble success.

Suffering is an accident. It does not matter whether you and I suffer. "Not enjoyment and not sorrow" is our life, not sorrow any more than enjoyment, but obedience and duty. If duty brings sorrow let it bring sorrow.

If people would only remember that what they really work with is not their hands, but their brains, they would not imagine that time spent in cultivating the brain, and giving it power and flexibility is time thrown away, but would see that it is time most usefully devoted.

A Disappearing Coin.

One of the oldest coins of Europe will shortly disappear. The Austrian "kreuzer" was withdrawn from commercial circulation on June 30, in accordance with the convention establishing a copper currency of equal value for all parts of the empire. It will be received at public banks in payment or in exchange for new money until December 31, 1899, but from the first day of the coming century it will no longer be legal tender. The "kreuzer" has been in existence since the fifteenth century, taking its name, of course, from the cross which it bore in common with many other coins. It circulated freely in North as well as South Germany at one time, but for some twenty-five years has not been current beyond the Austrian frontier.—London Chronicle.

Britain's Whisky Product.

Great Britain and Ireland turned out 54,622,706 gallons of whisky in 1897, over 5,000,000 gallons more than in the previous year. Of this 32,126,238 gallons were consumed in the United Kingdom and 4,790,181 gallons exported. There are 193 distilleries at work in Scotland, 29 in Ireland, 9 in England and 1 in Wales.

WAR-TIME FASHIONS REVIVED.

Great Similarity in the Modes of the Early '60s and Those of To-day.

Fashion swings about in a wide orbit and if our mothers had preserved the gowns they wore during the time of the civil war they would now come in very handy for the adornment of their daughters. The belle of the earlier '60s loved the same cut of gowns, the same jaunty hats and curly coiffure that is now delighting the girl of 1898.

The great similarity in the modes of the two periods is best illustrated by the comparison of the portraits of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln and Mrs. William McKinley in ball costume. The beautiful rose-colored satin gown of Mrs. Lincoln would not attract attention in a ballroom of to-day if it were not distended by the hoops, which fortunately have not yet come in with the other war fashions.

This gown was one of the most beautiful ever worn in Washington by Mrs. Lincoln, who was renowned for her extravagance and love of dress. It was made of a pale rose-satin. The flounce of black Brussels lace was made to order, and it is said that the pattern was selected by the Empress Eugenie. The waist was extremely decollete and was cut in very much the same fashion as is now worn and trimmed in the same ruffles of lace. The hoopskirt, five yards in circumference, that held out the skirt of this dress, really marks the only great difference between this costume and that in which Mrs. McKinley is pictured and which she wore at several state functions of the late spring.

Even the drooping shoulders that were deemed most lovely in those other war days are again in vogue. The girl who has prided herself on the square set shoulders that equaled her brothers' in width must now cultivate a pensive droop that always goes with little curls on the neck. The coiffure of the years 1864 and 1898 are strikingly similar, with little curls, a wavy pompadour and the net that is just returning to favor.

A glance at the picture of the hats that topped the curls of our mothers and the traveling hat of to-day shows how much alike they are in shape and adornment. The flat trimmings and the long floating ostrich feathers mark both times.

Even the bright and vivid colors that delighted the eyes of our mothers are now our favorites, after a long reign of pale and dingy shades. The royal blues that show a block away, the emerald greens and brilliant purple and orange that made the streets gay during the later years of the civil war are again to the front. In fact, every mode that was then in favor save the hoop skirt, is again the fashion, and who knows but that is now creeping upon us in the insidious fashion of stiffened petticoats and may declare itself when peace is made with Spain.

Puzzle—Find Spanish Sharpshooter.

Inhuman.

"Ah, yes," she sighed; "I was robbed of a lover by the cruel war."

"Which one," her dearest friend asked; "the Mexican, the civil or the Yanko-Spanko?"

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

Where He Made a Mistake.

He seems to think, since at the fair
He took the highest prize,
There is no further call for him
His goods to advertise.
But this is where to make mistakes
The fellow has begun,
For since he doesn't advertise,
Why no one knows he won.

Some merchants say that because they sell staple goods—things the public must have, and sell on a low margin—advertising would not help them. Others say they have been in business so long they are known to everyone and have an established trade. There never were two more erroneous notions. Some energetic business man will open up a store alongside of the non-advertising merchant and by a liberal use of the newspaper columns will take away that "established trade." Those patrons who knew you so well will get to know the other fellow just as well in a surprisingly short time, and they will buy goods of him just as readily as they will of you. It is not enough to be known. You must keep yourself and your business constantly before the people or they'll forget you. Advertising will increase any legitimate business. It puts people in mind of buying certain things and leads them to the point of investigating what you have to offer. Anyone who has anything to sell and does not use his local paper is neglecting one of the most powerful aids that he can find in his efforts to attain success.

Proverbs for Advertisers.

The firm is dead that does not advertise.

Let your goods be known among all men.

An effective advertisement is a fair estate.

A good advertisement keeps off wrinkles.

A little advertisement may save a deal of idleness.

A world of wealth lies in that one word—advertise.

Measure your space before you write your advertisement.

Know how sublime a thing it is to advertise and be famous.

Advertising is a constant want, and should be a constant study.

Let thy advertisement be short, comprehending much in few words.

An advertisement should be intense expression of condensed ideas—one pithy line more pregnant than a windy column.

A UNIQUE WOMAN'S CLUB.

Detroit Boasts of One of the Most Peculiar Organizations in Existence.

Perhaps the most unique organization among women in any quarter of the world is the Woman's Historical Club of Detroit, Mich., the president of which is Mrs. John Walker, a prominent society leader. The club was founded in 1877 and interest in it on the part of its members has never for a moment flagged.

The meetings are held every Monday and though history is discussed no papers are read. The members familiarize themselves with the important current events of the day—science, politics, music, art, etc., and these subjects are discussed for an hour, each member contributing to the elucidation of the topics.

For the second hour's discussion topics are carefully arranged beforehand. Each member conducts investigations and tells the results to the others, particular branches of the topic being assigned to different persons in order to prevent any duplication. When there are five Mondays in the month the extra meeting day is devoted to the drama, and often a play typical of the drama of the age they are studying is presented by the members.

An Exception.

"No, sir," said the man who takes things philosophically; "it is impossible to begin at the top, no matter what the business happens to be. The whole course of human experience teaches that this is so."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the scoffer; "our baseball team was as near the top as any of them at the beginning of the season."

Success That Fails.

"No," said Higgins," I always consider it unlucky to win on the first race."

"What makes you look at it in that light?"

"Well, I never bet much as a starter, and if I lose I quit; but if I win I keep on till I haven't a cent left."

Some Dogs Are Not Taxed.

Dogs kept exclusively for guiding blind persons, or for tending sheep or cattle on a farm, or by shepherds, are exempt from taxation in Great Britain.

Deluded Relic Hunters.

The stupidity of the relic-hunter has seldom been better shown than by the successful sale of lumps of coal by a sailor on Peary's ship for chips from the big meteorite. The thrifty salt found that the people were anxious for the chips, and he let them have the coal for 25 cents a lump, and they went away satisfied. There was one man, however, who knew the difference between coal and meteoric iron, and he got a genuine bit of the rock. There are probably stored away in drawers throughout the country thousands of relics which are of just as much value as the coal that was palmed off on the faddists who visited the "Hope" at the foot of Dock street. The people who have collected the things have not sufficient knowledge to know whether what they have is genuine or not. Because some one with knowledge is interested in a given subject, they think that it is the right thing to be interested also, and they make fools of themselves. But if they are amused, we suppose no one should complain.—Everywhere.

Hypnotizing a Hen.

"Did you ever hypnotize a chicken?" asked Police Commissioner Kind the other night. "It's dead easy. Just catch your hen, place it on the floor in front of you, with its tail toward you. Take a piece of chalk and draw a straight line, beginning at a point just under the hen's head and extending a foot and a half or more.

"The bird will fasten its eyes on the chalk, and in a twinkling she is unconscious of anything but that line. You can cuff and kick her about as much as you please, but her gaze will immediately return to the chalk line. When I was sailing before a mast it was not an unusual thing on a calm day, when there was no work in sight, to see a dozen or more sailors, each with a hen in his hands, drawing chalk marks. It is the most perfect case of complete hypnotism I ever saw. Just try it some time if you don't believe it."—Toledo Blade.

Instinct Possessed by an Ant.

The president of the Agassiz association, H. H. Ballard, recently caught an ant near its hill, shut it up in a box, carried it 150 feet away and set it free in the middle of a sandy road. What followed he thus describes: "It seemed at first bewildered. Then it climbed to the top of a ridge of sand, erected its body as high as possible, waved its antennae for several seconds, and then started in a straight line for home."

Champion Talking Parrots.

Jacob, a talking parrot, owned by Grant Ridley, of Holloway Road, London, England, brings in to his master £300 every year. Mr. Ridley has been offered £1,500 for him, but he is worth more than that.

This wonderful bird has perfect command over 4,000 words, and never puts a sentence together incorrectly; he can also talk three languages and ten dialects. Whatever language or dialect you address him in he will reply to in the same tongue. Eighty pounds was paid by the Archduchess Stephanie, widow of the Austrian Crown Prince, for a parrot which could recite the Paternoster in six different languages. When the Archduchess got the wonderful bird home it could not utter a word, and the merchant who sold it was arrested for fraud. It turned out that he was a ventriloquist, and he had taught the bird to open his mouth and appear to be talking while his ventriloquism lasted. The Sultan of Turkey paid £50 for a gray parrot that could speak 250 words.

Maximilian's Widow.

The ex-Empress of Mexico, widow of Maximilian who was shot by the Mexicans, still survives; but in the sad, white-haired woman of fifty-seven it is impossible to see any trace of the fair young bride who accompanied her husband so many years ago to his kingdom. The strain of the terrible time when Maximilian was deserted and ruthlessly murdered destroyed the young Empress' reason, and in this pitiable condition she has remained ever since. She still imagines that she is an Empress, and her medical attendants propose, as she is now a little stronger, to take her to Mexico, in the hope that the sight of her old surroundings may have a beneficial effect on her brain.

Vegetarian Colony.

At Oranienburg, near Berlin, a colony of vegetarians was started some years ago, and is growing slowly but steadily. Founded in 1893 by seven enthusiasts on the subject, there are at present forty-seven homesteads, the abodes of thirty-seven families and ten single men. In addition to the vegetables necessary for their own food they have planted 35,000 fruit trees and 15,000 berry bushes, and fenced in the entire property with a hedge of hazel nuts.

The Growth of Socialism.

The growth of socialism is due to the standing armies of the world in which men are often made to enlist, and thus become discontented. The growth of a stronger race is due to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is the best medicine for costiveness, dyspepsia, fever, ague and all nervous troubles. Try one bottle.

In Japan.

The Japanese are truly devotees of cleanliness. Public baths abound, and the poorest citizen bathes usually twice a day. In Tokio there are more than eight hundred public baths, which are said to be patronized by over three hundred thousand persons daily, at a cost which can be said to be merely nominal.

Celebrating a Rich Find.

Coughs Leads to Consumption.

The Coward.

The word "Poltroon," a term of contempt applied to cowards, is derived from the Latin "pollex truncatus," from the fact that it used to be common for men who were anxious to avoid being sent into the army to cut off their thumbs.

I never used so quick a cure as Piso's Cure for Consumption.—J. B. Palmer, Box 1171, Seattle, Wash., Nov. 25, 1895.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women a year."

THE FARM AND HOME

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO FARMER AND HOUSEWIFE.

Value and Cost of Fodder as Feed Depends Upon Its Management—Amateur Surgery for Animals—When Weeds May Be Killed.

Managing the Fodder.

The value and cost of fodder as a feed for stock during the winter depends largely upon the stage at which it is cut, the curing and the manner of storing. If allowed to get too ripe and then is put in rather small shocks and allowed to stand out in all kinds of weather until wanted for feed, it is questionable if the value of the feed secured will pay the cost of cutting and hauling. But if cut in good season, properly handled during the curing out, and is properly stored away, it makes a cheap, wholesome feed for all kinds of stock.

The cutting should begin as soon as the grains begin to harden well. Where any considerable acreage is to be harvested it will be economical to use a corn harvester. When it can be done, the best plan of management is to cut and put up in reasonably small shocks, as the fodder will cure out more rapidly and the corn will be ready to shock out and crib easier than if put up in large shocks, and if saved with the least loss it is best to get the corn cribbed and the fodder stored away as early as possible. But where the fodder is to be left standing in the field until wanted to feed to the stock, it will be better to put up in good sized shocks, as in this way there will be a less per cent exposed to wind, sun and storms. As soon as well cured, husk out the corn, throwing directly into the wagon, tie the fodder into convenient bundles, and store as much as possible under shelter. What can not be stored under shelter should be stacked up convenient to the feed lots. Fodder will keep in a better condition with a much better per cent of loss if managed in this way than if in shocks in the field.

Another very good way of managing, and especially so if the corn is to be ground before feeding, is to run the corn fodder through a threshing machine, loosing the concave some in order to feed through faster, and rick up the fodder. The stock will eat more of the stalk if put up in this way than if kept whole. Good fodder kept in a good condition is almost equal in feeding value to good hay, but this may be greatly lessened by careless management.—Globe-Democrat.

Fracture of Bones.

When a sheep breaks a leg, the usual recourse is the butcher's knife, but with valuable breeding stock this is often unnecessary economy, for treatment is possible as with other small animals. Most shepherds say kill when it is any bone other than those below the knee and back, no matter how valuable the animal may be, but here again we say don't kill, but endeavor to procure union of the bone.

Where the fracture is low down, and the bone comparatively straight, the work of the amateur surgeon is simple. Have an attendant secure the other legs, then cast the patient, bring the broken leg into perfectly natural position, which, with a little further manipulation will bring the broken bones into apposition. If everything is now in readiness, the splints and other dressings may be applied. For a fore leg broken below the knee, use but one splint and wrap it well with cotton batting. Place it behind the leg instead of at one side or in front, and hold it in place by a few turns of cheese cloth bandage. See that the ends of the splint are well covered with batting, then take a two-inch wide plaster of paris bandage, which may be bought in any drug store, soak it well in water and at once bind it around the leg and splint neatly, commencing at the bottom and working up, then down again, and so on until all is in place, when the operation is completed by a cheese cloth bandage applied immediately while the plaster is wet.

The ready-prepared bandage is much nicer to handle and more satisfactory in every way than plaster of paris in bulk prepared at time of use, and another advantage is that it is put up in a tin box and may be kept at hand for an emergency any length of time without losing its virtue, which cannot be said of plaster, which is apt to be found useless just when most required. In adjusting splints to a leg broken just above the knee it is necessary to make the whole leg rigid, hence the splint should extend from the ground up, and all hollows between it and the leg should be well filled with batting before applying the plaster bandage.—American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

The Preservation of Wood.

Never apply paint or any other coating to green or unseasoned timber. If the wood is not well dried, the coat will hasten decay. Oil paints are used to increase the durability by protecting the wood against moisture. An exposed unpainted board becomes gray and fuzzy, warps and checks, the nails rust out, and even if it is not exposed to rain, damp air, steam, etc., occasion similar mischief.

For coating, coal tar, with or without sand or plaster, and pitch, especially if mixed with oil of turpentine and applied hot, thus penetrating more deeply, answers best. A mixture of three parts coal tar and one part unsalted grease, to prevent the tar from drying until it has time to fill the minute pores, is recommended. One barrel of coal tar, costing $3 or $4, will cover 300 posts. Both tar and oil paint have the disadvantage that they act as mere covers. If the wood has any chance to get moist before painting, they are harmful instead of useful.

Heavy tar oils, freed of their volatile as well as their thick tarry constituents, such as are now offered in the market under the name of carbolineum, are preferable to paints and tars. (B. E. Fernow, circular 20, Division of Forestry, United States Department of Agriculture.) These oils penetrate and act as antiseptics, usually killing the fungi or at least retarding their action and development. They are applied with brush or else as baths, usually and preferably hot. They can not replace paints where the looks of the materials are to be improved. Charring assists merely as an insulator, separating the wood from the ground, and as fungi can not eat their way through charcoal they are prevented from entering. Generally, however, the process develops large cracks, and thus exposes the interior to the attacks of the fungi.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Dipping Sheep for Ticks.

The injury inflicted by the sheep tick upon the flocks can only be roughly estimated. Ticks do not cause death directly nor injure the wool, but cause untold torment by their biting and wandering about over the body. This saps the vigor of the old sheep, retards the growth of the lambs, and makes both susceptible to disease. The tick is a wingless fly about a quarter of an inch long, having a large, strong, reddish-gray body, and six legs. The most opportune time for killing ticks is just after shearing, as the ease of handling and the cost of dip is reduced to the minimum. Nearly all the ticks will leave the sheep for the lambs, so that the work will be very effective if only the lambs are dipped. It is better, however, to dip both old and young. The sheep should be examined carefully about three weeks after dipping and if any eggs escape destruction the sheep should be redipped. The apparatus necessary may consist of only a box or barrel, into which the animal may be submerged, and a table upon which they may be allowed to drain. On the whole it is more economical and satisfactory to use some of the good sheep dips offered upon the market. These dips usually contain arsenic, extract of tobacco, or products obtained from cresote or tar as the destroying agent. As the latter dips are effective and less dangerous in the hands of most people they are to be preferred. The following is highly recommended and may be prepared by any one: Tobacco leaves, 50 pounds; sulphur, 10 pounds; water, 100 gallons. The tobacco is steeped for an hour and a half, the leaves are strained off and the sulphur again boiled for an hour. Keep well stirred and use while warm.—Indiana Experiment Station.

Work the Soil.

The object of tillage is to secure the proper arrangement of soil particles with relation to each other. The stirring of the soil is very beneficial in the destruction of weeds, but any system that will keep the soil in the best physical condition will also keep down the weeds. Soil temperature can be considerably influenced by physical conditions. The water-holding capacity or facility with which water can move through the soil and consequently the supply of plant food which may be carried to the roots of the crop, the amount of water taken to the surface and evaporated, are governed largely by the arrangement of the particles. The free access of air can be secured in sufficient quantities, supplying the necessary amount of oxygen, and the soil can be placed in such a condition of fineness as to allow the perfect root development. The importance of these points makes it necessary to give a great deal of attention to the preparation of the seed bed.—South Dakota Experimental Station.

Loss of New Swarms.

Every bee keeper who relies on gathering his swarms of bees after they have escaped from the hive knows that, despite his best efforts, some of the largest and earliest of his swarms take to the woods, and become the common property, by law, of whoever can find them. But if the bee keeper be active, he can, after finding which direction the swarm is going, follow as fast as he can and locate its new residence. In such case the swarm is no longer a wild one, but belongs to the owner of the bees from which it came. It is usual in the fall to stupefy these bees with smoke, taking the honey out of the tree. We h[illegible] known bee keepers to take up all o[illegible] the stupefied bees they can find, being [illegible]re to secure the queen, put all together in a hive with some honey for winter feed, and have a new swarm in their apiary next spring. But usually these wild bees are not very successful. Probably those of them which remember their previous life made the mistake when going out to secure honey of trying to find their old home in the wood.—American Cultivator.

Propagating Mountain Ash.

The mountain ash can be propagated by seeds, but they are very slow to start. The berries should be gathered and mixed with soil and left out exposed to the weather for about a year before planting. If mixed with soil and placed in a box with cracks in it, so that water can pass through, the box can be sunk to its edge or a little below in the ground and left out during winter and until the ensuing fall. Then the soil containing the berries can be taken out and spread on the floor to partially dry, so that it can be rubbed through a sieve that will separate it from the seeds. The separation of the seeds is not absolutely necessary, and soil and seeds together may be sown in a drill, covering about an inch deep. The young plants will appear in the spring and can be taken up and tops and roots shortened and transplanted into nursery rows to be grown on until ready for final removal.—Vick's Magazine.

Celery Following Potatoes.

Where potatoes are of early variety and can be gotten off the land in time, they are much the best crop to precede celery. The thorough cultivation which the potato crop needs develops a great amount of plant food in the soil just as the potato vines are ready to die down. The cultivation, we believe, makes the soil just as rich as would a crop of peas, and it certainly leaves the soil in better condition for moisture than a pea crop would do. It is moisture as well as fertility that celery needs to make rapid growth, and thus be made tender and crisp, as celery ought always to be.

Lice on Horses.

First, remove the hens some distance from the stable, then remove all straw and other stuff, and whitewash all parts with hot lime. Boil one pint of stavesacre seeds in twenty pints of water for one hour, let it simmer for one hour longer, strain and add water to make it up to the twenty pints, then wash the horse all over, repeat in a week if the lice are not all destroyed. If you cannot get the stavesacre seeds, use one pound of tobacco instead, made up in the same way.

GREEK CITY UNEARTHED.

Priene Discovered in a Remarkable State of Preservation.

Private letters bring news of most important discoveries made by German archaeologists excavating on the site of the ancient Priene, in Asia Minor, opposite the island of Samos. Years ago an English expedition excavated and studied the Temple of Athena, the chief sanctuary of the city, built at the order of Alexander the Great. The work was then abandoned and meanwhile the ruins have been so thoroughly exploited and wasted by the neighboring population that nothing is left but a confused heap of stones. In 1895 the work of exploring the ruins of the city was resumed, this time by Germans, under the direction of the Berlin museum and at the expense of the Prussian government. The architectural work has been placed in the hands of the young architect Wilhelm Wilberg, a former student and assistant of Dr. Dorfeld.

The work has now proceeded far enough to determine its extraordinary importance. A buried city preserved in the completeness of Pompeii is coming to light. Up to this time no Greek city has been excavated that gives any clew to the arrangement of streets, public squares, monuments, and public buildings, or to the architecture of any considerable number of private houses. Here we find a city, to be sure of the Hellenistic period, laid out with great regularity, with streets crossing at right angles, with shops, colonnades, market places, theaters, a council-house and a great number of private houses preserved in such completeness as to display their general architecture, distribution of space, use, decoration and equipment.

South of the great square of the temple alluded to above, and closely adjoining it, has been found the great market place or agora of the city, which was surrounded on all four sides by broad colonnades, of which that on the north side was peculiarly noble and stately. Adjoining this at one end, and opening a small square building constructed somewhat like a theater, which was evidently the council-house of the city. It is marvelously well preserved. Sixteen rows of seats are still in place. The walls, doors, windows, platform, etc., are all preserved. One of the side walls ends in a massive arch, which, as being demonstrably a work of the fourth century B. C., must rank as the earliest, or at least one of the few earliest, specimens of the arch in Greek construction. The whole building represents something entirely unique in the relics of Greek architecture.

There has also been found a small theater in which the stage structure, the skene, is still standing entire. Three doors open from it upon the orchestra, and the proscenium, with its row of columns, and the architrave above them, remains intact. No Greek theater as yet discovered is so perfectly preserved as this, and in the future discussions of the "stage question" this structure is likely to assume a leading place.—Benjamin Ide Wheeler in New York Tribune.

THE RUSH FOR GOLD.

From the Times, Bluffs, Ill.

The rush of gold seekers to the Klondike brings thrilling memories to the "forty-niners" still alive, of the time when they girdled the continent or faced the terrors of the great American desert on the journey to the land of gold. These pioneers tell some experiences which should be heeded by gold seekers of today. Constant exposure and faulty diet killed large numbers, while nearly all the survivors were afflicted with disease, many of them with rheumatism. Such a sufferer was Adam Vangundy, who now resides at Bluffs, Ill., where he has been justice of the peace and was the first president of the board of trustees. In a recent interview he said:

"A Forty-niner."

"I had been a sufferer of rheumatism for a number of years and the pain at times was very intense. I tried all the proprietary medicines I could think or hear of, but received no relief.

"I finally placed my case with several physicians and doctored with them for some time, but they failed to do me any good. Finally, with my hopes of relief nearly exhausted I read an article regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which induced me to try them. I was anxious to get rid of the terrible disease and bought two boxes of the pills. I began using them about March, 1897. After I had taken two boxes I was completely cured, and the pain has never returned. I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken, and am willing at any time to sign my name to any testimony setting forth its great merit."

DECORATE YOUR HOMES.

Beautiful Representations of Wild Ducks, Pheasants, Quail and Snipe.

Probably at no time in the world's history has as much attention been paid to the interior decoration of homes as at present. No home, no matter how humble, is without its handiwork that helps to beautify the apartments and make the surroundings more cheerful. The taste of the American people has kept pace with the age, and almost every day brings forth something new in the way of a picture, a draping, a piece of furniture or other form of mural decoration. One of the latest of these has been given to the world by the celebrated artist, Muville, in a series of four handsome porcelain game plaques. Not for years has anything as handsome in this line been seen. The subjects represented by these plaques are American wild ducks, American pheasants, American quail and English snipe. They are handsome paintings and are especially designed for hanging on dining room walls, though their richness and beauty entitles them to a place in the parlor of any home. These original plaques have been purchased at a cost of $50,000 by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Elastic Starch, and in order to enable their numerous customers to become possessors of these handsome works of art they have had them reproduced by a special process, in all the rich colors and beauty of the original. They are finished on heavy cardboard, pressed and embossed in the shape of a plaque and trimmed with a heavy band of gold. They measure forty inches in circumference and contain no reading matter or advertisement whatever.

Until Oct. 1 Messrs. J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co. propose to distribute these plaques free to their customers. Every purchaser of three ten-cent packages of Elastic Starch, flatiron brand, manufactured by J. C. Hubinger Bros. Co., is entitled to receive one of these handsome plaques free from their grocer. Old and new customers alike are entitled to the benefits of this offer. These plaques will not be sent through the mail, the only way to obtain them being from your grocer. Every grocery store in the country has Elastic Starch for sale. It is the oldest and best laundry starch on the market and is the most perfect cold process starch ever invented. It is the only starch made by men who thoroughly understand the laundry business, and the only starch that will not injure the finest fabric. It has been the standard for a quarter of a century and as an evidence of how good it is twenty-two million packages were sold last year. Ask your dealer to show you the plaques and tell you about Elastic Starch. Accept no substitute. Bear in mind that this offer holds good a short time only and should be taken advantage of without delay.

TO COMPANY K.

We clip the following spicy little piece from the South Bend Times, in which we find it dedicated ro Company F. But it will do as well for Company K.

Company K,
We're glad you're back.
Glad to see you home,
Here's the hearty hand!
Four and a half months
Is a whole long time
To feast on hard tack
And eat beans
And march
And never touch a feather bed,
And run against no pie
Like mother makes.
Must seem good
To get home,
Get cleaned up,
Dried out,
And have a decent chance
To change complexions
As well as clothes.
"Have we missed you?"
You've guessed it right
And don't try farther.
Some have missed you more than others.
There've been heart aches
And tears
And lots of wondering
Whether you'd come marching home
Or stay in Cuban soil,
Or get lost
In Tampa's palmetto swamps
Or Fernandina's grubs.
It's all right
To fight for one's country
And get shot a time or two
And come home
And get the glad hand
And have the band out
And the Light Artillery
And the old yets;
But the grubbing roots
Was not the fun
It's cracked up to be.
No siree!
Don't blame you for being glad
At home coming,
We'd feel that way ourselves.
You're sunburned some
Since away you went,
That bright April day;
And you've learned full well
That war's h--ll
Even if you only got to answer sick call
Or drank water too hot to bathe in
Or ate mouldy hard tack
Or wormy canned beans.
War ain't no fun
From sentry's rounds
To hospital ward,
It ain't fun
Even in the guard house
Or out on police duty
Digging trenches
Or hauling sand
You're shrunk some
Since you went away;
But you'll have to loosen belts
Before thirty days
Or it won't be the folks' fault.
Bring out the fatted calf!
Put on the yellow legs to fry!
Put more fillin' in the pie
And pass it twice
And other old things
That the boys may want
And don't see,
For Company K is home
"Home," did I say?
Not all home,
Not all are here or there,
From Hoosier homes they left in April last,
The last roll call
Has come to some
Who never more will hear
A welcome home on earth.
Our "Tigers" bold
Who sleep in fourteen graves
On Hoosier soil,
And one lone form
In southern grave,
Brings thoughts this day
That mix our joy with tears
For bloodless victories
Of Destroyer Death,
But, "Tiger" lads,
Closed up the thinned ranks!
Be glad you're back
In God's country
On Hoosier soil.
Let's all be glad
And give three times three
For Company K.
Here goes!

HOW CHILDREN SHOULD SLEEP

Hints Concerning Requirements of the Young for Their Upbuilding.

Frequent naps are as much a necessity for young children as food. Young mothers are apt to overlook this salient feature in the care of their babies. In fact, the little ones require much more sleep than is necessary for adults, as the child's nervous, impressionable system is not able to withstand the strain of long waking hours and the accompanying waste. Mainly, however, children require more sleep because while sleeping all the vital powers are concentrated on building them up, instead of being diverted to muscular movements and other influences which would interfere with this concentration. If children are wakeful and restless it is an indication that something is wrong; this wrong the mother should endeavor to put right rather than stupefy the child for a time in order to gain rest for herself. The "something wrong" will often be found to be improper or excessive feeding, too tight or too warm clothing or confined and impure air.

FIRST ENGLISH PAPER.

Santiago Had One Right After The Surrender.

The Thirty-fourth Michigan volunteers contained several printers and other newspaper men, and as soon as the city had surrendered they asked permission of Gen. Shafter to go into the town, get possession of a newspaper office, and start an English paper to circulate among the soldiers. The men were mostly from Port Huron. An account published at the time is interesting. They were given three days' leave of absence from camp, which is located at Cardenas, on the ocean, between Siboney and Aguadores. Gen. Shafter granted permission to the printers of company F to publish the paper, and the business manager, editor-in-chief, city editor, compositors, idterpreter and devil packed up three days' rations, slung their blanket rolls over their shoulders, filled their canteens, stuck their copy in their pockets and boarded a commissary train headed for Santiago. There arrangements were made with the publishers of La Republican, and the boys "got busy."

PORT HURON WELL ADVERTISED.

Most of the advertisements are of Port Huron firms, and the editors explain this as follows:

"The discerning public may be curious to know why so much of our advertising space is given over to Port Huron, Mich. While our business relations with our advertisers is a matter that cannot interest our general readers, we will step down from our tripod a moment and talk to you confidentially. Our entire staff, from editor-in-chief to office devil, live in Port Huron. We expect to return there when the war is over. We will send advertising bills to our Port Huron advertisers, and we will be able to camp on their trails until they pay. We couldn't conveniently do this with foreign advertisers. Do you catch on?"

How their paper came into existence is thus explained:

"We are the first real-thing English newspaper to be printed in Santiago. Ay, by the holy smoke, we are the first real thing in the island of Cuba. Our old historical friend, Chrissopher Columbus, landed, we believe, somewhere in this neighborhood four centuries or so ago. We were in a contemplative mood the other night when the idea struck us that four centuries of white man's rule in Cuba was altogether too long without an English prper. We saw the opening in a twinkling and jumped into it. That's why we are here. (P. S.—We didn't jump in until we got a pass to enter the town.)

"We crave the pardon of our critical readers if this, our first number, has some weak spots. We know our business all right, and could have done a lot better but for reasons which we can explain in a word. For so many weeks that we have lost track of the number we have been living on sow belly, hardtack and coffee for breakfast; coffee, sow belly and hardtack for dinner, and hardtack, coffee and sow belly for supper. Now, whether our intellectual readers realize the fact or not, sow belly and hardtack and coffee aren't any better than hay to keep an editor's brain in working trim."

Following are other extracts from the "Company F Enterprise:"

DESCRIPTION OF SANTIAGO.

"From the present appearance of Santiago one would not think the city had undergone a siege and had been captured, as the residents are consuming their daily vocations and the business places are open the same as if nothing out of ordinary had occurred. Very few cases of actual hunger are to be seen, still many are ready to feign hunger upon sight of an American and in this manner obtain food from the soldiers. The prices of articles are not as exorbitant as one would expect, except in the food line. Bread sells for 20 cents a small loaf, a can of roast beef brings $1, and other food at corresponding prices. The soldiers are abie to exchange a portion of their rations for almost any article that they wish.

"The city itself presents a very quaint appearance to an American; the streets are very narrow, being from thirty to forty feet wide, with a few of the principal streets paved with cobble stones, the gutter in the middle. At this time of the year the streets are clean, as they are washed nearly every day by heavy rains. The houses are constructed of brick and a combination of sticks and mortar, and blue the prevailing color. The roofs are made of a brown colored tile, and the combination of colors is pleasing to the eye.

The palace, at present the American headquarters, is located in the center of the city, and at one time must have been a magnificent building but the vicissitudes of time have somewhat marred its beauty. Across a paved square from the palace is the cathedral. This is an ancient edifice, bearing the date of 1700. The building has a dilapidated appearance from the outside, but once inside all this is changed. The floor is made of colored tile and the walls are a pure white and hung with costly oil paintings. The alter trimmings are of gold and silver. Fresh flowers fill every niche in the entire cathedral. In the vicinity of the palace are located a number of cafes that are furnished largely upon the American plan, with marble-top tables, plate-glass mirrors, silver trays and goblets, etc., and are stocked with all kinds of drinks and confections. From the palace the streets radiate to the limits of the city. The printing office in which this paper is printed is located about six blocks from the palace. It is a one story building, and consists of an editorial room, composing room and pressroom. Everything is somewhat on the plan of an American office, although the cases are laid differently. Senor Lopez, the proprietor of the office, is a very courteous gentleman, and has done everything in his power to assist us in printing this paper. One peculiar sight here is the barred windows. All windows are furnished with iron bars in place of glass, and at night are closed with heavy iron or wooden shutters. On the whole, there is the making of a great city here, as the location and natural advantages of Santiago are magnificent. The mountain ranges close by are filled with iron, copper and coal, and it is but twenty miles distant from the rich farming country of San Luis."

The Dipper or the Dropper?

There are cough medicines that are taken as freely as a drink of water from a dipper. They are cheap medicines. Quantity does not make up for quality. It's the quality that cures. There's one medicine that's dropped, not dipped—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. There's more power in drops of this remedy than in dippersful of cheap cough syrups and elixirs. It cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Colds, Coughs, and affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is now HALF PRICE for the half-size bottles—50 cents.

AN OLD ENGINEER.

Run an Engine on the New York Central Forty-Three Years Ago—Cured by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

GREENVILLE, MICH.—E. A. Smith, engineer for F. N. Wright & Co., this city, ran a locomotive on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Ry., 43 years ago. He can tell many amusing incidents of the rail in the early days; but prefers to speak of his recent experience with rheumatism, and relief secured from use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Mr. Smith is well advanced in years and his trouble had been so serious and of long standing that it became constitutional. He doctored and took all the different kinds of medicine suggested for the trouble, without any benefit. Recently he was advised to take Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; a nerve preparation which has been received with much favor in Montcalm County, and which has performed many remarkable cures. The effect of its use was highly satisfactory, not only in relieving his rheumatic pains, but also in correcting symptoms of kidney trouble which existed. It certainly is to be hoped that a knowledge of Mr. Smith's experience may lead other sufferers to use this valuable preparation.

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has many virtues not possessed by any other form of treatment. It is entirely free from morphine, opium, cocaine, and the stimulating drug, kola, which is so persistently advertised. Such drugs are ruinous and should be avoided as pernicious.

OBITUARY

Grace, daughter of Jay and Mary Richmond was born in Auburn, Ind., Dec. 9, 1897, and departed this life at the tender age of 1 year 9 months and 6 days. One by one these precious jewels are taken from our homes to that blessed abode on high. May we comfort our hearts with the thought that we shall meet them again if we are faithful to Jesus, into death. Little Grace leaves to mourn her death a mother and father, two sisiters and one brother. The funeral services were conducted from the house today at 1 o'clock. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Lew Willis and wife went home this forenoon. He is foreman of the trimming department in the great Parry Carriage factory at Indianapolis.

—Miss Lizzie Johnson returned Saturday to her home at Fort Wayne, after several days at the Carnival and visiting Mrs. C. C. Shaffer and other friends.

—Gen. Blair brought down some monster ears of corn yesterday. They had 22 and 23 rows, while ordinary corn has about 16 to 18. This seems to be a year of large vegetation.

—J. D. Davis of Chicago, came down here yesterday and joined his wife, formerly Reba Houser. Today they went over to Hicksville to visit his father, Samuel Davis.

—Irvin Pommert is lame in both hands, as he says "I took a header." He thinks that in some way the header so injured him that a sort of boil breaks out in different places.

—Will Clark has been quite sick, but seems a little better today. He has evidently had a pretty thorough soaking of malaria, but we hope with good treatment and nursing, he will soon be out.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Dr. Willard Swartz and wife went home to Williamsport today. They visited here first and then he was called back home on a sick call. Later he joined his wife at Edon, Ohio, where her people live and from there they came here for a brief stop on their way home.

—Miss Ella Gregg returned to Chicago Monday morning going over the Lake Shore instead of the B. & O, as we supposed. She went north on the freight and made good connections at Waterloo. Many of our people do not seem to understand that the trip can be made in that way with scarcely a stop.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—The thieves and pickpockets had a harvest here last week. The latest we heard, was the loss for Mr. Beard who lives in the south west part of town near H. C. Shull's. They entered his house and stole a good suit of clothes, a good silk handkerchief etc, all amounting to at least $15. He is a hard working man, who gets his living by day's works, and it is quite a loss.

—Misses Margaret and Mayme Buckley entertained in honor of Miss Nina Miller of Hicksville, Ohio, and Miss Merman of Lagrange Monday. The evening was spent at dancing and card playing. At a late hour dainty refreshments were served. Those present were: Misses Maud Richmond, Cora Weaver, Blanche Penfield, Maud VanAuken and Miss Miller. Mr. Weiman, Chas. Schaab, Walter Penfield, Claude Benedict and Jud Merman.

Thursday's Daily.

—For Fertilizers, see Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind. 31—tf

—Dr. Baxter reports a baby born to Mr. and Mrs. James McCosh, at the Junction, last night.

—A little child of Mr. and Mrs. Richmond who live across from Frank Zimmerman, on North Railroad street, died this morning of membraneous croup.

—H. F. Clark out northeart of town has brought in the first specimen of big corn. It will take a good one to beat it. He says he has ten acres of that sort of corn.

—Lieut. Brown Ruffner took the south bound train for Indianapolis, this forenoon. He goes to relieve the officer on duty there so far in guarding the property at the camp.

—Frank Rush is able to use one hand a little now and hopes to have the bandages taken off the other in a few days. But they will bother him for a long time as they are quite tender.

—The peace arch was taken down yesterday and is now a thing of the past. The electric fountain has been stripped, and so the glories of the Carnival disappear and will soon be no more.

—P. J. Lockwood came up from Washington, reaching here today. While his trip was mainly one of business, he may stay long enough to join his family, who have for a time been up at Petoskey.

—Will Clark is about the same today. He is weak, but can set up a little. It will take him some time to recover. He says great numbers in his regiment were worse off than he. He is glad his regiment has been ordered back home, as that will give them a chance to recover from the effects of that terrible campaign.

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Mrs. Hodge received a letter from Chester Hodge this morning. He did not come home with his battery, the Zollinger, to Fort Wayne, yesterday, but remained at the hospital at Indianapolis, where two sick boys of Company K, Hathaway and Miller are. He does not say how Miller is, but Hathaway, whose home is at Garrett, is getting better, and Chester staid to bring him home. They will reach home Saturday.

—Miss Dellah Magginis, of Jackson township, left this morning for Terre Haute where she expects to spend a year at the Indiana State Normal School. We are pleased to hear this for Miss Magginis is a bright young lady and the plan she is taking opens up the possibilities of a bright future, Jackson and Fairfield township have had a prominent place at the Normal, and we are free to say it is one of the very best institutions of learning in the country.

Friday's Daily.

—Mrs. H. H. Slaghbaugh of Fairfield, visited Mr. and Mrs. Trover and Mr. and Mrs. Henry a few days.

—Sandy Luse, of Waterloo, was here today. He is one of the twenty-six men recruited by Mr. Everett on the last call.

—Mr. and Mrs. Deetz, Mr. and Mrs. Hilkert, and Mr. and Mrs. Klingon, all of Hicksvilli, were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. Trover.

—Bonds of all officers or employes, also administrators, guardians etc issued in the original Baltimore Bonding Company at lowest rates, by —Mrs. Fremont Smith is running a race with the COURIER editor on fine grapes, and we frankly admit she is a little ahead. The basket she brought us the other day ha dNiagara grapes, the largest we have seen. We thought our own were fine.

WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—Geo. Metcalf a well known engineer of the B. & O. road died yesterday at his home in Garrett. He is a broth-in-law of Hon. J. D. Leighty and a brother of County Clerk Metcalf, of Fort Wayne. The funeral will be at his home in Garrett tomorrow

—The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Mottinger will be interested to hear of their location. They are now at Hub, Columbus Co. North Carolina. All DeKalb folks get a location as near the hub of the universe as possible. We are glad to hear they are all in good health.

—The Waterloo Press is publishing likenesses of their county candidates. One well acquainted with the men might recognize them in their Sunday make up, but there is on their faces a look of pain and discomfort that does not argue well for the November election.

—More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Will Clark is about the same, or rather better today. As his trouble is of a typhoid nature, it will take time. His application for an extension of furlough for sixty days has been sent in, and will no doubt be granted, as it will be about that long before he is able to go back.

—St. Joe News:—Geo Walter, one of the jolly volunteers from Concord township, was in town bright and early Monday morning, buying a qottle of Simmons Liver Regulator. George claimed that he was shot all to pieces and that he had to get something to pull himself together again.

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—On the 25th of Sept. The Right Rev. Joseph Rademacher Bishop of Ft. Wayne will give confirmation in the forenoon and in the afternoon will bless the new cemetery in Garrett, Ind. Dinner will be served on the school grounds. Everybody is cordially invited; by request of Rev. A. Young the pastor.

—The Waterloo Press gives the Auburn Carnival a very friendly write-up. About 300 tickets were sold from that place, and of course many drove over. They make a very just criticism of the delay in getting the fireworks started, but must remember Auburn people were in no way responsible for that. The same man, Palh, gave the same exhibition at the state fair at Indianapolis, this week, and we are waiting to see if he got started on time.

—Father Boccard is going to move to a new pastorate, one in the south part of Marshall county, we did not learn the name. He has made many friends while in Auburn and we hope his future may be pleasant. Father Dandurand, of Fort Wayne, takes his place here for two or three weeks at least, but whether he will be the permanent pastor, we have not learned. We have met him briefly, and he is a man of pleasing address. We hope he may do well.

AN UNLUCKY YEAR

St. Joe News.

Engineer Scatterfield, of Garrett, who was in charge of the engine which caused the death of Mrs. Bungard at Hicksville last week, feels that he has had a hard run of luck in the year of 1898. Since the first of last March four deaths have resulted from trains while he held the throttle. In reporting the matter to the Hicksville Independent, Mr. Scatterfield said:

"I have been on this road now for thirty-five years, and in the first twenty of that not a single death occurred on my train. My first accident was in 1888, when Joe Bowser, a switch man at Chicago Junction was killed. He had a heavy cap over his ears, it being in the winter. From that time until last March no deaths were caused by my train. In March this year a man drove in front of the train and met his death at Suman, Ind. The same month a woman at Burnside, Ill., walked right in front of the engine. She was ground to pieces. At Attica, Ohio, in June, a man named Johnson jumped off the train while it was going at a high rate of speed, and was killed.

"Yesterday when that old lady walked in front of the track and was crushed to death by my engine, I came as near losing my nerve as at any time in my life. When I came back and looked at her face, one side of which had been bruised, and ground against the earth I grew sick and faint. That good old face, though grey and ashen in death, looked like the face of my mother—and the shock of it all and the thought that but a few moments before she was walking along, looking so neat and good and motherly, was too much for me. It will be a long time before I get over the horror of that sight."

THE STATE MILITIA

The Indianapolis Sentinel Tuesday had an article on the status of the state militia, which so far coincides with what we have all along held, that we allude to it again. It speaks more particularly of Battery A that went from that city, but is now home again. It believes that when the battery is mustered out of the service of the general government, it again takes place as a part of the state national guard So, we believe will company K of Auburn and the rest. We believe that all the original members of Company K will then be as they were before, and that the arms and equipments the state furnished them, will be retained. Their armory will be theirs and they will once more be a part of the Third Regiment I. N. G. They had taken the oath to serve the state, and have never been absolved from it. They simply added to it, an oath to serve the general government for a certain number of years. When they are mustered out of service of the general government, they are no longer a part of the 157th U. S. Volunteers. They become, as before stated, a part of the 3d, Indiana State Militia for the oath they took in the state service has not been revoked. But the recruits who joined the company after it was sworn into the service of the United States have never been members of the state militia and are not now. They can become members of Company K 3d Ind., by joining it as the original members did If these views are not sound, we are willing to hear argument against them.

Met His Brother:

[Goshen Democrat]

When the train bearing the 3rd Regiment United States Regular Infantry passed through LaPorte at 1:50 o'clock yesterday morning J. Sheridan Dunn, an Argus reporter, boarded one of the coaches and instantly from the darkness there came a demand to halt. Dunn, realizing that he could not give the countersign nor retreat, simply yelled "Argus reporter" and no sooner had he said so than the guard grasped his hand and held it tightly. It took some time for an explanation as the two men could not see each other, but the reporter finally learned that he had in this strange manner met his brother whom he had not seen since 1885, when they were both in Canada.

New Industry.

Michigan counties pay a bounty per head for English sparrows that are destroyed, so killing these birds has become quite an industry, and as they became scarce over there, the bird catchers worked over into this state and have caught thousands in several Indiana towns, put them in barrels, took them back to Michigan and got the bounty. Lately the authorities became suspicious and began to hunt up the matter, and the result is several men there have been arrested. They used poisoned wheat in the early morning to kill the birds.

AN ENTERPRISING DRUGGIST.

There are few men more wide awake and enterprising than H.B McCord who spare no pains to secure the best of everythng in their line for their many customers. They now have the valuable agency for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. This is the wonderful remedy that is producing such a furor all over the country by its many stlartling cures. It absolutely cures Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs. Call at above drug store and get a trial bottle free or a regular size for 50 cents and $1.00. Guaranteed to cure or price refunded.

Plant Apple Trees

DeKalb county has no apples this year, or at least but very few, and we are sending our money to distant points to get what we consume. This looks like a poor business method. Fifteen or twenty years ago, DeKalb county led in the production of apples. We remember one year when we were the only county in several states that had apples to sell. We shipped them in every direction for dealers came here and got them or had local dealers send a supply to them. That year, our apple crop brought into the county more money than did the wheat crop. Now, we sell none, but buy what we have to use. Something is wrong. Farmers give reasons, first, that this is an off season for apples, and second, that the main reason is, our orchards are old. The trees have reached that age when they are more or less affected by various diseases. Some think these affected trees should be cut down and dug out. All admit that new trees would do better, and it seems to be the sentiment that new orchards should be planted at once. We are told that new trees are now very cheap. One dealer, I. M. Johnson, largely engaged in selling trees, says he is now selling the choicest of apple trees at 10 cent each, making the price of trees for an orchard, within the reace of all. For a small orchard, well cared for is the one that will pay. And we have reached that point where all fruit trees must be cared for, if we get a crop. We look to see our practical farmers study up this question. No doubt the most of them have already. P. J. Lockwood who has spent some time in California says we have as good or better country for all the fruits of the temperate zone, than California has, if we would take the same care of our trees.

Sea-Going Cruisers.

The voyage of the Monterey from San Francisco to Manila bay was, in its way, as remarkable a performance as that of the Oregon from San Francisco to the Florida coast. The Monterey is classed among the second-rates, and by type is a barbette turret, low freeboard monitor, the only vessel of her kind in the navy. She has a displacement of a little more than 4000 tons, is propelled by twin screws, and carries four guns in her main battery. The marked peculiarity of the Monterey is her low freeboard. She sits so low in the water that her deck is frequently wholly submerged in a half to three-quarter sea, leaving only her upper works exposed. Built solely for a coast defense vessel, it was not expected that she would ever be called to do extended sea service. When, therefore, she was ordered to join Admiral Dewey's squadron, fears for her safety were entertained by some high authorities; but she proved fully equal to the emergency. The letter from F. O. Wells in today's paper, shows how surprised the old sailors were to see the old fashioned but formidable ship come plowing into Manila harbor, 7000 miles from home.

After Forty Years

John Johnson returned this morning to Auburn after an absence of forty years. He went from here to Salt Lake City, and has been a resident of that place ever since. Of course his experience in that far off part of our country, during all of these years, is one full of the growth and incident of that place. He is a stock dealer and apparently a successful one. Mr. Johnson is a double cousin of I. M. and Nathan Johnson of this place, and of course related to the other families of that name in the south part of the county. After his visit with the relatives here, he will spend the winter in Chicago, with a son who is a Presbyterian minister there.

Pension Circular.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, BUREAU OF PENSIONS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SIR:

Recent investigation had by this Bureau to ascertain the methods employed by public officials in executing pension vouchers, has demonstrated an almost total disregard of the laws and regulations governing the subject.

It is clearly evidenced that the illegal, lax, indifferent and perfunctory procedure now extant has become a menace to the proper and safe conduct of the affairs of this Bureau, so far as it relates to the payment of pensions, and special efforts are contemplated to correct the existing abuses.

While it is believed that many officials who assist in the execution of pension vouchers have no conception of their criminal liability in the premises, it is equally certain that many others to secure an advantage in the numerical number of their clientage, knowingly and wilfully resort to violations of the law.

To the end that the former class may profit by this notice, this circular is issued.

There can be no justification in the prevalent haste and laxity existing in many offices, by which post-dating, false certification, false claim and "stock" witnesses have become a factor in the administration and acknowledgment of pension vouchers.

It is the intention of this Bureau, where the facts warrant such action, to institute criminal proceedings against the parties who indulge in these illegal and irregular practices and they are warned accordingly.

By following strictly the instructions printed on each voucher, the matters complained of may be entirely remedied.

Very respectfully,
H. CLAY EVANS,
Commissioner.

HOW TO LOOK GOOD

Good looks are really more than skin deep, depending entirely on a healthy condition of all the vital organs If the liver is inactive, you have a bilious look; if your stomach is disordered, you have a dyspeptic look; if your kidneys are affected, you have a pinched look. Secure good health, and you will surely have good looks. "Electric Bitters" is a good Alterative and Tonic. Acts directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys, purifies the blood, cures pimples, blotches and boils, and gives a good complexion. Every bottle guaranteed. Sold a H. B. McCords Drug Store. 50 cents per bottle.

BUTLER FAIR

There was a pretty fair crowd at the Butler fair yesterday but the frequent showers kept them feeling uncomfortable and gloomy. Everybody looked as if they wished they were at home. The tents leaked some, and a number of fakirs who had small tents to live in found them several inches deep in water. Most kinds of business came to a standstill and all efforts were directed to making themselves as comfortable as possible. It was "democratic day" and Hon. J. M. Robinson and Cyrus Jackman made speeches, which those who heard said were good. Today is republican day and Hon. C, B. Stemen and perhaps others will speak. The candidates on both county tickets were nearly all there and took a great interest in seeing the voters. There was some drunkedness of course as there always is at such gaterings but there was very little of disorder. Today closes it.

Gov. MacCorkle's Endorsement.

Hon. W. A. MacCorkle, Ex-Gov. of West Virginia, adds his name to the long list of Statesmen benefited by Pe-ru-na—He heartily recommends Pe-ru-na as a catarrh remedy and tonic.

HON. W. A. MACCORKLE,
Ex-Gov. of West Virginia.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 9, 1898.
Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Pe-ru-na, as a tonic, is certainly unexcelled, and in a number of cases that have come under my observation where it has been used for catarrh, or any disease which has its origin in that malady, it has been of great benefit. Pe-ru-na has my hearty recommendation, both as a tonic and catarrh remedy.

W. A. MACCORKLE

Pe-ru-na is a permanent and scientific cure for catarrh. It is purely vegetable and works in harmony with nature. All druggists sell it.

FROM MANILA.

We copy from the Garrett Herald of last week, the following letter from a young soldier now at Manila. The Herald says it was written to his mother, Mrs. Wells, of that place.

Manila, Aug. 5.

DEAR MOTHER:—

We arrived here yesterday morning and Admiral Dewey was the happiest man in the world. He stood on the Quarter Deck of the Olympia and as we circled around him he danced a jig, swung his hat in the air and shouted for all he was worth.

We were just 58 days making the trip. We left Honolulu on July 1. We intended to leave June 27, but the Brutus, the ship that came with us, broke down. A machinist, Whalen by name and myself had to do two days' repairing on her safety valves. We then left, and arrived at the island of Guam in the Ladrones on July 23. We sighted it early in the morning and, as there were a couple of forts there, we were ready for action. Lieutenant Fectleau was to go in with a boat and demand an unconditional surrender, and our navigator with another boat was to take soundings in the harbor, as it wasn't very well surveyed. After they had been in there a couple of hours they returned to the ship and reported that the Charleston had been there before us, fired two shots at the forts and taken the governor and 50 soldiers prisoners. Then we steamed right in and found that the people welcomed us with open arms. We immediately commenced coaling the ship. This was Saturday afternoon. Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock we left for Manila, 1,500 miles away.

While we laid at Guam the natives brought us fruit. For a plug of tobacco worth 33c we got two baskets of lemons. The basket consists of a long-leaved tree branch with the leaves tied together so it would resemble a sachel. The two together make a bushel. Besides that we got a bunch of bananas and 50 cigars, the "rottenest" I ever smoked. You could get same for a bar of soap. We traded soap with them more than tobacco, as it is 11c a bar. You may think that sounds fishy but it is straight goods. One of the boys traded an old pair of shears to them and got a boat-load of fruit.

After we left there the weather was pretty stormy. Little squalls were coming up all the time, so we wouldn't have a o[illegible]ce on the entire ship.

Monday afternoon, Aug. 1, we sighted the Phillipine Islands and Tuesday morning we entered the Straights of San Bernardino and Thursday morning we entered Manila bay. As soon as Dewey saw us coming he sent a note to the German Admiral to get his Marines off shore within 24 hours or stand the consequences. He also notified the consuls in Manila that he would bombard the town Monday morning at 8:00 o'clock, but owing fo the Germans being so treacherous and the Spaniards having mounted two modern guns that we think the Germans smuggled in, we may do so sooner, as the Admiral signaled to us to be ready for action in 24 hours. The Petrel and Monterey are to bombard the forts and the remainder of the fleet is to stand by.

Well, we did a fine piece of work when we came in here. We were going at full speed and came so close to the Olympia that you could spit from one ship to the other, then right around the stem of her without losing an inch and then along her port side. You could see the fellows with their eyes sticking out like balls. When they saw what we had done they gave us another cheer and a fellow on her forecastle shouted so everybody could hear him: "Jesus H. Christ, how did that thing get out here?" I guess everybody was of the same opinion, but they were all glad to see us.

Within a stone-throw of us lays the Castile, her masts and stacks above water; a little farther is the Marie Christina with her masts out of water; a little farther and right under the guns of Cavite is another sunken one, and on the beach is a torpedo boat that the Spaniards run ashore to keep Dewey from getting it. There are seven sunk that we can see from here.

Well, that is all until after the battle. With love to all, I remain

Your Loving Son,
F. O. WELLS.

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EARTH.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

The Business World.

Bradstreet's commercial report says: Favorable trade developments manifest themselves chiefly along lines previously noted. The importance of the large export demand to the country's domestic interests is illustrated by the improved tone in the prices of wheat and flour, growing out of the better condition of foreign buying induced by less favorable Russian crop reports, smaller shipments from that country, and apparently a continual careful selling by American producers. Raw cotton, on the other hand, reflects the probabilities of continued plentiful supplies, a rather slow demand in quotations, lower than the lowest point reached in the year of depression, 1894. From the West and Northwest advices continue largely in the former cheerful strain. Some relation in the activity is perceptible in some lines at the large markets, but the volume of trade as a whole is evidently equal to any previous record.

Mine Explosion.

A terrible explosion occurred in the Snowden Mine, near Brownsville, Pa. Fifty-eight men were at work at the mine when the explosion occurred A great wave of fire-damp immediately followed, filling the mine and entries. This also exploded, spreading death and havoc on every hand. At this writing eight bodies have been taken out. A man who was working near the entrance and escaped, doesn't think it possible that any of the fifty-eight imprisoned miners could escape alive. Rescuing parties are endeavoring to enter the mine at different points.

All Against Anarchy.

A Lisbon dispatch to the London Daily Mail says elaborate measures have been taken to protect the royal residences at Cintra and Cascaes. Authorities have been warned of an anarchist plot against King Carlos. A Vienna correspondent says all the powers have assented to Italy's proposals looking to a common action against anarchists. It is understood the measures to be adopted will be extremely severe. A mere avowal of anarchistic views will constitute a criminal offense.

Killed While Bound.

Fort Worth (Texas) special: News of a terrible double tragedy near Center, I. T., has just reached here. In a moment of passion A. B. Harding killed his wife. He was captured by citizens and put in a wagon and bound with ropes. J. A. Page, the murdered woman's father, learned of the deed and at once went in search of the murderer and shot him to death as he lay, utterly helpless, in the wagon. Page was arrested and is now in the United States Jail at Paul's Valley.

Situation Grave.

Paris special: The situation here is generally admitted to be grave by both press and people. The conflict between the civil and military authorities is becoming acute. The sudden and unexpected action of Gen. Zurlinden, the Military Governor of Paris, in prosecuting Col. Picquart on the charge of forgery and using forged documents assumes a grave aspect on account of the circumstances attending this intervention of the military authorities in a civil court.

It Will Rival Krupp.

McKeesport (Pa.) special: The Carnegie Steel Company is preparing plans for a gun factory to rival Krupp's Company. It will also build ships. It is now constructing a railroad which will give them a deep water outlet at Norfork or Newport News. The plant will be located at Homestead, and will employ 2,000 men. The company is said to have a secret in gun construction that will revolutionize naval and coast armament.

His Life in Danger.

According to special dispatches from Pekin, members of the European community there believe the life of the Emperor of China is in danger. It is added that the Dowager Empress desires to place Prince Kung's grandson on the throne. The Emperor, it is added, realizes the strength of the conspiracy against him and has ordered the guards at the palace to be strengthened.

Fire Works Explosion.

Capt. George J. Adams, aged 33 years, and Capt. Charles Miller, aged 22 years, were instantly killed by the accidental discharge of explosives, while conducting a fire works display and reproduction of the Manila battle, on the Allegheny River, in front of the Exposition Building at Pittsburgh.

Hundreds Are Drowned.

Disastrous floods have visited Japan and China. Many hundred lives are lost. Over 100,000 are homeless. Hundreds of miles of land are inundated by the Yellow River.

Can't Fight in Kentucky.

Gov. Bradley has received information that Cincinnati sports will try to pull off the Corbett-McCoy fight in Kentucky. The Governor immediately issued a proclamation calling all officers to uphold the law against prize fights. He has telegraphed to the sheriffs of all counties adjacent to Cincinnati.

They Will Arbitrate.

An agreement between Chili and Argentina to submit the boundary dispute between the two countries to arbitration, has been signed.

Child Burglar's Big Haul.

The San Francisco police have learned that a number of children entered the residence of Julius Kruttschnitt, general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, during the absence of the family and stole articles valued at over $1,000. The burglars were from 9 to 13 years old.

Burns to Water's Edge.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes, while lying in the harbor at South Manitou Island, Lake Huron, for shelter, caught fire and burned to the water's edge. Nothing was left but the iron hull, which is still afloat. No lives were lost, but the crew could not save their effects.

KILLS TWO CONSTABLES.

Bloody Work Done by a Young Man to Obtain Property.

At Garrett, Pa., F. P. Myers took possession of a house left to him by his mother, who died five months ago. The deed was not signed by his father, Christley Myers, who had a life tenure in the property. When Christley Myers arrived he found the house barricaded, his son refusing him entrance. He at once went to Somerset, swore out a warrant for forcible entry and detainer and on his return secured service for the writ. Young Myers fired at the approaching constable, killing Michael Kearney. Then he fled to his boarding house immediately adjoining, where Constable Nelson Lenhart and his brother, John Lenhart, followed him. He fired again, killing John Lenhart instantly. Sheriff Martin Hartzell of Somerset in a short time arrived with a posse. A crowd of infuriated citizens was guarding the boarding house, in the cellar of which young Myers was hiding. After an hour's waiting a raid was made. A dozen shots were exchanged. Myers was finally overpowered and while being taken down the steps of the house was struck by a gun in the hands of somebody in the crowd. He was knocked unconscious, but later recovered and was removed to Somerset.

MURDER OVER A LINE FENCE.

Iowa Farmers Near Yale Quarrel—Isaac Fitz Kills James McClellan.

A murder which nearly ended in a lynching occurred near Yale, Iowa. Isaac Fitz and James McClellan, prosperous farmers, quarreled over a partition fence. Finally McClellan mounted his horse and started home, when Fitz went into the house, got his shotgun and, returning, fired both barrels point blank at McClellan, riddling him with shot and killing him instantly. Fitz then took a load of hogs to town, drew his pay and leisurely returned home. The body of McClellan was still lying where it had fallen and Fitz loaded it into the wagon and took it to the McClellan home. He dumped the body in the yard and returned to his home, where he was arrested a few hours later. The officers quietly spirited the prisoner away to escape lynching, as the farmers were aroused to a high pitch by the news of Fitz's brutality. The men were brothers-in-law, McClellan's wife being Fitz's sister.

WHEAT FAMINE IN RUSSIA.

Crop in the Volga District Is Completely Ruined.

John W. Bookwalter of Springfield, O., writing from Russia, tells in a private letter of the immense destruction of wheat in the famous Volga district, which he says was completely burned out. This district is the finest cereal section of Russia. As it contains from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 of people, he says it will require the importation of great quantities of grain to make up the deficiency and prevent suffering. A Russian official connected with the railway ministry told him that they expected to have to import into the unfortunate provinces not less than 80,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

Bravely Resisted a Hold-Up.

Louis B. La Franchere of Chicago died from a bullet wound received while he was struggling with two men who were attempting to rob him. The robbery took place at Momence, Ill., on the tracks of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad. After the thugs had secured La Franchere's watch and a considerable sum of money they ran away, leaving him lying at the side of the rails. La Franchere was a railroad engineer, and until recently had been employed by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois. For a month he had been seeking work. While waiting for a freight to move out of the Momence yards he made the acquaintance of two strange men. While the men were waiting the strangers proposed that they walk down the tracks a short distance. La Franchere accompanied his new-found acquaintances to a lonely spot at the outskirts of Momence, and was surprised to feel the arms of one of his companions suddenly lock around his neck. At the same time the robber exclaimed: "You remain quiet now or I'll blow the top of your head off." La Franchere had the build and strength of an athlete, and he grappled with the man who had his arms around his neck. The other robber stood near, but offered to take no part in the struggle. The man with the drawn revolver was being worsted when the fellow placed the weapon against La Franchere's abdomen and fired. Both men then fled after robbing La Franchere. An hour later one of the yard switchmen found La Franchere.

Most Favorable Business Outlook.

Bradstreet's commercial report says: "Reports of still further enlarged distribution at most Western markets and of slight improvement at Eastern centers, where demand has been slower to materialize; enlarged foreign demand for breadstuffs; increased railway earnings, not entirely due to the swelling movement of grain to market, which, indeed, is still behind last year's record; bank clearings increased over last week and over all corresponding weeks except one year ago, when speculation was very active; rather better than expected Government crop reports and enlarging exports of American manufactures are all features tending to make the trade situation at present a notable one. Crop impairment in August, not unusual nor unexpected, proves to have been less than feared, and average conditions of leading crops—notably wheat, corn, cotton and potatoes—are better than one year ago. Operative in inducing the improved foreign demand for our wheat and flour, perhaps, has been a tendency to shade early estimates of the world's wheat crop this year, some figures being as low as 2,500,000,000 bushels, which, while larger than last year, is still below that of 1894. This, with the low state of the world's wheat supplies and the slower than expected movement from American farmers' hands to leading markets, has increased the premium on cash wheat, and nervous short sellers of September delivery have covered, with the result of advancing prices. The continued rise in ocean freight rates is taken to confirm reports of recent large export sales."

Laymen to Have Equal Rights.

The Michigan conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church adopted without debate a resolution declaring for a constitutional amendment providing equal lay and ministerial representation in the general conference. The vote was 199 to 9.

Cleveland Y. M. C. A. Building Burned.

The Alabama street branch of the Y. M. C. A. at Cleveland was set afire by Robert W. Doon and burned to the ground. Doon claims he was serving the Lord in making the fire, as the association would get lots of insurance money.

Alaskan Gold Stolen.

A telegram from Lillooet, Alaska, states that 800 ounces of gold amalgam has been stolen from the Golden Cache mine. It was the result of a three weeks' clean-up and was worth about $10,000. There is no clew to the robbers.

United States Warships Sail.

The U. S. S. Bennington sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu, and the transport Condor, with supplies for the United States forces, sailed for Manila.

Falling Crane Injures Five.

Five men were injured at the new Government dam at Neville Island, near Cornopolis, Pa., by the breaking of a large traveling crane. The names of the injured are: M. Evans, Montour Junction; Noah Stanley, Evansville, Ind.; Martin Beck, Wellsburg, W. Va.; John Young, Evansville, Ind.; William White, Pittsburg. Evans and Stanley are injured internally and are not expected to recover. The accident was caused by the breaking of a steel guy line of the crane, which precipitated a large derrick, sixty feet above the crane, to the ground. In its descent the derrick tore away the supports of the crane, which crashed down upon the workmen. A huge block of stone which was being raised when the guy line broke, fell a distance of forty-five feet among a group of workmen, but fortunately the men ran for their lives, and all but five escaped injury.

ELOPING PREACHER IS SHOT.

Rev. C. W. Broadus Wounded by a Young Woman's Father.

James Heenan filled Rev. C. W. Broadus, a Methodist preacher, with shot because Broadus was eloping with Heenan's 17-year-old daughter Tillie. Broadus has been holding meetings near Heenan's farm at Augusta, O. T., and the young preacher become infatuated with the young woman. Heenan objected to the preacher visiting his daughter. The couple eloped and Heenan followed with a gun. When the preacher saw the irate father coming he jumped from a buggy and fled. Heenan discharged both barrels of the gun, the shot inflicting wounds which will probably prove fatal.

PRISONER ESCAPES IN A BOX.

Convict Gets Away from the Ohio Penitentiary, but Is Recaptured.

Francis Emerson escaped from the penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, by getting in a box and being shipped out. As soon as the wagon carrying the box was well away from the gates Emerson emerged and fled down a back street. He then secured a suit of clothes and went to the residence of a former employe of the penitentiary for assistance. The man's sister-in-law telephoned the officers and he was recaptured. Emerson's right name is Thomas McKeon and his father lives in New York.

Sells Land to Englishmen.

A deal was closed at Irvine, Ky., by which 25,000 acres of valuable timber land, a large part of which is virgin forest in Knott and Perry counties, were transferred to an English syndicate. Included in the deal was the Ingles sawmill at Irvine, one of the largest along the Kentucky river, which will be utilized in turning timber into lumber to supply the mammoth furniture factories which the syndicate will erect in Cincinnati.

Tacoma Suffers from Flames.

The Exposition building at Tacoma, Wash., the largest structure of its kind in the Northwest, was completely destroyed by fire. Fifteen minutes after the flames were discovered breaking out in the building the vast structure was a mass of fire. The building was owned by the Tacoma Land Company. There was no insurance. The total loss will aggregate $100,000.

Tobacco Company Is Absorbed.

A deal was consummated in St. Louis, Mo., whereby the Brown tobacco plant becomes the property of the American Tobacco Company. The price paid was $1,250,000. Paul Brown, president of the Brown Tobacco Company, will become manager of the business there for the American Tobacco Company.

Strangled by Thieves.

Andrew Cassagne was strangled to death by three men in the tenement house in Williamsburg, Brooklyn, which he occupied with his wife. Two of the burglars choked Mrs. Cassagne nearly to insensibility, while the third man searched the room, finding $500 under the mattress of the bed.

Fatal Fire at Elmwood, N. Y.

Seven buildings in Elmwood, N. Y., were burned to the ground and two men, Frank Harvey and George Straus, were burned to death. The men were guests of the Sheppard Hotel. The loss will amount to $20,000, with $10,000 insurance.

Negro Shoots a Woman.

Miss Effie McKibbon was probably fatally wounded by a pistol shot from a negro while riding home from a negro camp meeting near Birmingham, Ala., with George Noble. The negro was caught and lynched.

American Student Honored.

Perry A. Symonds, a Stanford University student, has been selected by the British Museum to make a thorough zoological collection tour of South America, from Ecuador to the Straits of Magellan.

Shoe Operators Go Out.

Nearly 1,500 lasters in the big shoe factories of Brocton, Rockland, Whitman, Stoughton, East Weymouth, Middleboro and Randolph, Mass., were ordered out on strike. A protracted fight is expected.

Earthquake in Maine.

Two earthquake shocks occurred in Deering, Me. The first was felt at 10:45 a. m., lasting seven seconds, followed after an interval of eleven seconds by a second shock.

English Street Car Fatality.

An electric street car was derailed while descending a hill at Bradford, England. Fifty persons were seriously injured.

EMPEROR OF CHINA AND HIS MOTHER.

EMPEROR KUANG HSU.

TUEN-TSON-HSI, Empress Dowager.

CHINESE EMPEROR ABDICATES.

Dowager Empress Supreme and Proposed Reforms Are Impossible.

An imperial edict issued at Pekin announces that the Emperor has abdicated in favor of the dowager empress. The latter has ordered that henceforth the ministers shall deliver their official reports to her. The edict says the Emperor three times requested the Empress to reassume the government, and that she yielded at the third request. It is difficult to learn accurately what is happening in the palace. There is little doubt that the reform edicts led to the deposition of the Emperor. The Dowager Empress was content to let the Emperor alone so long as he was merely a figurehead, but when he initiated or sanctioned a policy that was opposed to her views she compelled him to abdicate.

Numerous rumors are in circulation, some of which are alarming. One report has it that the Dowager Empress is actuated by the determination to baffle Marquis Ito, the Japanese statesman, who, it was understood, visited Pekin for the purpose of arranging an offensive and defensive alliance between China and Japan. When the Emperor received Marquis Ito in audience the other day he showed him great honor, and expressed the hope that he would give advice respecting the proposed reforms. Another report says that violent scenes occurred between the Dowager Empress and the Emperor in the Tsung-li-Yamen. The Empress is believed to be greatly incensed by Russia's passivity and by the degradation of Li Hung Chang, and is now courting Russia with all her might.

FROM THE GOLD FIELDS.

Large Party Reaches Seattle with About $100,000 in Dust.

The steamer Humboldt arrived at Seattle, twelve days from St. Michael's, Alaska, with 230 passengers from Dawson City. The majority of them were glad to get back to civilization. There were only a few who had any gold dust. David Bellenberg had the largest sack. He told Purser Twiggs that he was bringing out $60,000 spending money. Purser Twiggs estimates the total amount of treasure brought down on the steamer at $100,000. The troops taken up from San Francisco on the Humboldt left St. Michael's for Rampart City on the steamer Arnold. Among the Humboldt's passengers were A. E. Gardiner, who is interested with some Chicago people in the proposed construction of a railroad from Rampart City to the coast, and Robert Moran of Seattle, who took up a fleet of river steamers this summer.

G. A. R. MEMORIAL ARCH.

Dedicated at Junction City, Kan., During the Recent Soldiers' Reunion.

A feature of the Fifth district G. A. R. reunion at Junction City, Kan., was the unveiling and dedication of the fine memorial arch that has just been completed.

THE MEMORIAL ARCH.

The monument is thirty-five feet high, made of native stone and surmounted by a bronze figure, eight feet high, and cannon and stack of arms.

THE TEMPLE DOESN'T PAY.

Mrs. Stevens of the W. C. T. U. Speaks of the Chicago Enterprise.

Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, acting national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of America, and State president of the Maine organization, delivered an address at the State convention in Bangor, Me. The important portion of her remarks related to the situation of the union relative to the Woman's Temple in Chicago. She said: "The building has never brought revenue to the society; on the contrary, more than $200,000, mostly from white-ribboners, has been spent in floating the enterprise, while the National W. C. T. U. has paid and is paying to-day regular rent for its offices in the Temple. Hence, in giving up the Temple the W. C. T. U. has nothing to lose, but much to gain."

W. R. C. PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Flo Jamison-Miller Is Youngest the Organization Has Ever Had.

Mrs. Flo Jamison Miller, the new president of the Woman's Relief Corps, is a native of Monticello, Ill., and one of the most popular women in that part of the State. She is the youngest president the relief corps has ever had. Col. W. H. Jamison, Mrs. Miller's father, was a member of the Twenty-first Illinois (Grant's old regiment) in the civil war, and was mustered out as its colonel. Mrs. Miller was very active in the work of the corps and in 1894 she was elected to succeed Mrs. Emma R. Wallace as president of the Illinois department. Her husband is W. Scott Miller, a contractor.

SHIPS MEET DISASTER.

List of Losses Received in Chicago from Lake Points.

The following lake disasters were reported in Chicago in one day recently: Schooner Senator, coal laden for Harbor Springs, stranded in the thick smoke on Skillagalee reef, Lake Michigan; schooners J. H. Mead and Mediator, Duluth to Chicago with lumber, went ashore on Keweenaw point, Lake Superior, near Portage Lake canal, total losses; steamer Colorado, Duluth to Port Huron, 1,500 tons flour, stranded on a reef at Eagle harbor, Keweenaw peninsula, total loss; steamer Keystone went ashore on Big Summer Island, Lake Michigan, and later caught fire and was destroyed, with 1,000 tons of coal; schooner Keepsake, with a cargo of coal for Marine City, foundered in Lake Erie; schooner Southwest, without cargo, sunk on Huron Island, Lake Superior.

ITALY THREATENS COLOMBIA.

Complains to the United States of Colombia's Bad Faith.

The Italian Government has called the attention of the Government of the United States to the incorrect attitude of the Government of Colombia and demanded that the latter respect its treaties; otherwise Italy reserves to herself the right to adopt the energetic measures toward Colombia which were recently abandoned in deference to the United States. Advices received at Colon from Bogota, the capital of Colombia, say that all relations between Colombia and Italy have been severed owing to the action of the Italian Government in the Cerruti affair, which the Colombian officials considered arbitrary and in violation of the treaty of 1892, which was thereby annulled.

MEMORIAL DAY AT QUEBEC.

English and American Sailors March Together in Canada.

Wednesday was a memorable day in Quebec's history. Representatives of three great nations—the United States, Great Britain and France—united to honor the memory of Samuel Champlain, the intrepid explorer who founded that city in 1608 and died there twenty-seven years later. The United States protected cruiser Marblehead, Capt. McCalla, was sent there specially by the American Government. The spectacle was witnessed of American and British bluejackets marching in procession through the streets of Canada's ancient capital and standing shoulder to shoulder in the square round Champlain's monument. All the American commissioners were present.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS.

The hay crop of the United States is larger than last year by several million tons.

Orange production of the Pacific coast this season has been the greatest in California's history.

The reports indicate that the acreage of winter wheat sown in Nebraska this fall will be larger than ever.

The cotton crop in Texas alone will be equal to a pound of cotton for every man, woman and child on earth.

The hills and rolling prairies of Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas are said to be well adapted to apple orchards.

In southern Iowa the recent rains were so heavy as to inundate many corn fields. The hail also did some damage.

Much new wheat and oats from northern Iowa is being rushed to market before the roads get bad in the interior of the State.

Throughout Iowa corn is bringing 25 cents per bushel. This is for the old crop, but the new crop is expected to be a few cents less.

Minneapolis commission men are shipping car loads of eggs to the Pacific coast States, farmers out there having devoted so much time to grain that there is a shortage of produce.

The apple crop of Missouri this year will not be over 15 per cent of the normal crop. Experts place the value this year at $1,000,000. Last year it was $12,000,000 and still not a full crop.

The United States Department of Agriculture has received notice of an International Horticultural exposition to take place in St. Petersburg, Russia, in May, 1899. The United States is invited to take part.

NO PLACE FOR TROOPS

HAWAII OFFERS NO GOOD CAMPING GROUNDS.

So Asserts Major General Merriam on His Return—Americans Should Be Withdrawn as Quickly as Possible—Vitality Sapped by Heat.

Maj. Gen. H. C. Merriam returned from Honolulu on the steamer Australia. He said there was no suitable camping ground in any of the Hawaiian Islands. "It is hard to believe," he continued, "that good camping grounds cannot be found in the islands. Had anybody made that declaration to me before the trip I would have thought him prejudiced. There is absolutely no place whereon it would be safe to place American troops. Level ground is very unsanitary, and it is impossible to locate a camp on the upper ground. That practically covers my investigations in a sentence. The First New York regiment is encamped four miles from Honolulu proper, at a point called Diamond Head. The camp is worse than any we have had here. Although lumber is at hand to begin the erection of barracks, there has not been any work done, for the reason that a good location has not been secured. The engineers and New Yorkers are in tents, and that, too, at a most disagreeable season of the year. The rainy season is just commencing, and will certainly cause hardships for the unseasoned troops.

"The weather on the islands was very depressing, and I was compelled to lie down each afternoon to rest because of the terrible heat. I think the troops should be kept on the islands as short a time as possible, as the weather draws the vitality from the men. The suggestion offered some time ago about sending all the troops to the islands and making them a base of supplies for the Philippines is preposterous. There would be a larger mortality than in all the camps in the United States put together. I believe that only a short stop, if any, will be made by the troops of the next expedition to the Philippines."

GERMANY AND PHILIPPINES.

Representatives of Kaiser Say Relations with America Are Friendly.

The foreign office at Berlin has been interviewed regarding the Washington cablegram saying that the five regiments to be sent to Manila were needed to watch German manipulations there. The answer was emphatic. Such manipulations, it is declared, exist only in the imagination of Admiral Dewey. As officially reported, the conduct of Vice-Admiral Diederichs throughout has been loyal to both belligerents. Since that report was received nothing his happened to disturb harmonious relations between Americans and Germans in the Philippines. Assuredly, it is further declared, the German Government plans no trickery and intends no disloyalty there, and of that the Washington Government doubtless is fully aware, else Dr. von Helleben, the German ambassador at Washington, would not have been granted leave of absence.

OLD GLORY FLOATS IN HAVANA.

American Flag Hoisted by the Commission Meeting There.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning the first American flag in Havana was hoisted on the flagstaff of the Trocha Hotel, the headquarters of the American evacuation commission. A guard of marines was posted at the entrance to the grounds. Col. Claus and Capt. Payne stood on the roof of the hotel at either side of the flagstaff. At 10 o'clock sharp a quartermaster of the steamer Resolute hoisted the flag, which unfurled and fluttered proudly in the breeze. All the members of the commission raised their hats and cheered the Stars and Stripes. The approaches to the grounds at either end of the street were patrolled by squads of the Guardia Civile in order that the commissioners might not be molested.

TROOPS LEAVING FOR SPAIN.

Evacuation of Porto Rico Is Now in Progress.

The embarkation of the Spanish troops for Spain began Tuesday, when 200 sick soldiers and 200 engineers boarded the steamer from Havana at San Juan, Porto Rico, en route for Spain. The palace officials report that two or three transports have sailed from Spain for San Juan. There is a great feeling of relief on both sides at the receipt of this news. The evacuation of Lares, Aquadilla and San Sebastian occurred Monday, our troops taking possession and raising the American flag and the Spaniards retiring to Arecibo. Wednesday morning the Spanish evacuated Vieques island, off the east coast, and the garrison will remain temporarily at Humacao. One company of our troops is already at Vieques island and another at Humacao.

POWDER USED BY THE NAVY.

Sampson Consumed $100,000 Worth at Santiago.

Sampson used more than twice the powder consumed by Dewey. The former exploded about $100,000 worth in knocking out Cervera, while Dewey blew up about $45,000 worth in destroying Montejo's fleet. Admiral Dewey has reported that he used during the engagement 157 eight-inch, 635 six-inch and 1,987 six-pounders, 648 three-pounders and 1,632 one-pound projectiles. The ships which participated in the battle with Cervera's fleet fired 67 thirteen-inch shells, 8 twelve-inch shells, 280 eight-inch, 138 six-inch, 473 five-inch, 258 four-inch, 4,806 six-pounders, 783 three-pound and 772 one-pound projectiles.

SPAIN'S COMMISSION.

The Castilian Peace Body Represents Classes of Government.

The personnel of the Spanish peace commission has been officially sent by the Madrid Government to the French ambassador at Washington. Chairman of the commission, Senor Montero Rios, is the presiding officer in the Spanish Senate. Gen. Cerrero has had long experience in colonial affairs, while Senor Garnica is counselor of the Court of Cassation, or Supreme Court. The commission is made up of representatives of the political elements, the navy and the diplomatic fraternity, and is, therefore, considered strong.

Spanish Ships Turned Over.

Twelve Spanish steamers and eight sailing vessels have been transferred to the American flag at Manila, and a majority have started on coasting voyages. Uncertainty is felt concerning the conduct of the native crews, especially in view of reports that Filipino vessels are seizing Spanish coast towns and property. The United States cruisers Boston and Raleigh have sailed from Manila to protect commerce.

Employment for Cuban Troops.

Gen. Lawton has made a recommendation to the War Department for the utilization of such Cuban troops as may relinquish all connection with the Cuban army by employing them upon various works of the United States at Santiago.

GOMEZ DEFINES HIS ATTITUDE.

Informs His Soldiers that They Must Submit to the Americans.

In a general order regarding the attitude of the Cuban army in the evacuation proceedings, Gen. Gomez says to his soldiers:

"The flag of the republic of Cuba will always be respected, but it must be understood that the American forces will be in authority and have the enforcement of all laws and orders, which the army of liberation will be called upon to obey. The alliance of our forces with those of the Americans has placed a new phase upon the conduct of negotiations which will lead to the evacuation of all Spanish forces from all towns, cities and villages in Cuba, and in all instances the Americans will have authority over the Cubans. At the same time it is understood that this superiority is not for the purpose of subjecting the Cuban forces to any other orders than those governed by the rules of war and in accordance with our alliance. Our army is in no way humiliated, but is rather honored by such an alliance, and will co-operate in every way with the American forces to expedite the evacuation of the forces of the enemy, to the end that Cuba may be quickly rid of her erstwhile enemy."

CALLS ON THE PRESIDENT.

Clara Barton Outlines Course Pursued by the Red Cross Society.

Miss Clara Barton the other afternoon presented to President McKinley a verbal report of the work done by the Red Cross Society at Santiago since the surrender of the city, and an account of her treatment by the Spanish officials at Havana. Miss Barton described the condition of the poor at Santiago, and said that not only the poor but people in ordinary circumstances had been badly in need of help and she had relieved the necessities as best she could. Miss Barton then took up the subject of Havana. She told of the enormous duties which the Spanish officials there sought to levy on the supplies she was bringing the suffering Cubans, and of withdrawing her vessel to await a more favorable opportunity to enter Havana. President McKinley assured her that her action in the matter met with his heartiest approval.

ADMIRAL CERVERA AT MADRID.

No Excitement Attends His Arrival at the Spanish Capital.

Admiral Cervera has arrived at Madrid. The news of his expected arrival had spread, and police and people, in about equal numbers, were present at the station. The populace displayed no excitement at the sight of Admiral Cervera, though the presence of the police in such large numbers was evidence that the Government anticipated a demonstration. Admiral Cervera was accompanied by Captains Eulate, Moreau and other officers.

In an interview the admiral said he had a clear conscience regarding Santiago. Nations, he said, grew great by their victories and not by their defeats, however glorious they might be. Spain had lived in a dream and she now had to face a reality. The admiral added that his warships were not destroyed in battle, but by fire. Gen. Pando, the Spanish commander who surrendered his forces at Santiago de Cuba, has not arrived. He did so without attracting any attention.

ONLY WILLING MEN WANTED.

About 40,000 More Volunteers Will Be Mustered Out.

Gen. Miles confirms the statement that there is to be a further reduction of the volunteer army. Gen. Miles would not state the exact number of troops to be mustered out, but it is learned that the plan calls for the dismissal of not less than 40,000 men. High army officials are all in favor of the reduction. They want the army to contain only willing men, and to be a good representation of the American soldier, so that when called upon to do garrison and camp duty there will be no more complaints.

Yellow Fever in Havana.

The annual harvest of victims of yellow fever, which has begun in Havana, should warn the American Government against sending troops there before Nov. 1. The increase in the number of cases of fever since Captain Brown, master of the American ship Maryland, died of it and four other sailors were stricken, has been enough to alarm the foreign and timid residents, and a number tried to leave for Tampa.

Reward Of Their Bravery.

General order No. 497, issued from the Navy Department at Washington, tells the story of the terrible fight of the little torpedo boat Winslow with the forts at Cardenas last May, in the shape of an official recommendation from Lieut. John Bernadou, the commander of the craft, looking to the advancement of Brady, Cooney and Johnson of his crew to warrant officers, which Secretary Long did.

Cubans Grow Insolent.

Disturbances in public places between Cubans and Spaniards are becoming frequent in Havana. The Cubans are assuming an insolent and abusive manner in their treatment of the Spaniards, whom they lose no opportunity of openly referring to as vanquished. Many of them wear miniature Cuban flags, the lone star of which acts upon the Spanish officers as does a red rag upon a bull.

Thinks She Stopped the War.

Miss Jessie Schley, daughter of Charles Schley of Milwaukee, who went to Madrid to see the Queen on a peace errand, has reached this country. Miss Schley says the Spaniards gave their first evidence of a desire for a cessation of hostilities because of her efforts.

Aguinaldo Appeals to the Powers.

Emilio Aguinaldo, the Philippine insurgent leader, has issued an appeal to the powers, asking for recognition of belligerency and independence.

News of Minor Note.

Spanish troops from Cuba and Porto Rico are to be landed at different ports in Spain.

More than 4,000 Jews joined the volunteer regiments in the United States to fight against Spain.

Roosevelt's rough riders will give a tournament in New York, the proceeds to be given to sick soldiers.

Maj. Gen. Wheeler will have command of the cavalry which is to form a part of the army of occupation of Cuba and Porto Rico.

The hospital ship City of Lewiston, with 137 invalid soldiers aboard, went ashore off Point Judith, N. J. All the men were saved, but some of them may die from exposure.

The "meat ring" in Havana continues keeping the price of meat at from 50c to 60c a pound, in spite of the protests and offers of large and responsible firms to import and sell it at 25c a pound.

The Emperor of Austria has founded the Order of St. Elizabeth in memory of the late Empress. Medals will be conferred on women and girls meriting distinction in the various vocations of life, or for special religious, humanitarian and philanthropic work.

THE CALM THAT COMES AT EVENING.

There's a calm that comes at evening,
ing,
When the weary day is o'er,
That was soothing as the lullaby
Our mothers sang of yore;
And though the day be dreary,
I can just forget it all,
In the calm that comes at evening,
When the twilight shado-s fall.

I can see my sweetheart's signal
From her waving window blinds;
I can feel her perfumed presence
Wafted to me on the winds;
When I hush my heart to hear her,
I can almost understand
Her sweet welcome in the wimple
Of the wind-wave from her hand.

When she laughs it's like the music
Of the ripples on the rills,
And her breath is like the fragrance
Of the flowers that deck the hills.
And though the day be dreary,
I can just forget it all
In the calm that comes at evening,
When the twilight shadows fall.

A Man of Mystery.

By Dan O'Connell.

One moist and windy morning in January, when passing a frame building on Ellis street, where a large force of carpenters were at work swinging on giddy scaffolds many feet from the ground, I observed a tall and unusually thin man seated on a pile of lumber, watching with the utmost intentness the workmen. With the instinct of the newspaper reporter, ever seeking information, I asked him to whom the building belonged and what it was intended for, believing that he was the architect, or possibly the contractor.

"I do not know, sir. I am a stranger in the city," he replied, in a voice of singular harshness.

"I beg your pardon, I thought you might be the architect," I said; "you seem to take an interest in the work."

"Not in the work, but in the workmen," he rejoined, with a grin, which made his small, mean face, with its little red eyes absolutely diabolical.

"Then possibly you are yourself a carpenter," I continued; "a fine trade—the carpenter and mason are, to my mind, the noblest orders of mechanics; they are the creators, or rather the instruments that carry out the inspiration of the architect."

"They do not interest me in that way," said the stranger, shuffling off the lumber pile and moving off, a palpable hint that he required no more of my conversation.

This incident left no impression on my memory, for, although I frequently passed the new building on my way to my office, I saw no more of the red-eyed man.

One fine Sunday, attracted by the announcement of a balloon ascension at Baker's Beach, I strolled out to that picturesque curve in the harbor's entrance. As the aeronaut took hold of the parachute and gave the word to let go, I saw the stranger. The expression on his face was one of intense, and, I might say, malignant concentration. His eyes were fixed on the bespangled figure of the athlete with a ferocity which not alone astonished me, but gave me such a decidedly uncomfortable feeling, that I involuntarily stepped from beside him.

"I am all right, and away we go!" cried the aeronaut, and the crowd cheered as the graceful sphere sailed skyward. Under and over the bar the aeronaut tumbled, now holding on with one arm, now clinging with his toes, still leaving the dull earth farther behind him every moment.

"By Heavens! he'll get down safely. He's not nervous, unless—unless the parachute should collapse. Then we'll be all right, and there won't be a whole bone in his body."

This peculiar speech was uttered by the mysterious stranger who, in the forward movement of the crowd, was again at my elbow. Determined to discover the source of this ordinary display of malignity, I said,—

"It seems, sir, you do not feel well disposed toward our friend who is now tumbling in mid-air. Is he an enemy of yours or a rival professional?"

"He is neither. I come here, as every one else, yourself included, young man, hoping that he will fall. I am candid enough to say so, and I presume you are hypocrite enough to declare that you hope he will descend in safety."

"I certainly do hope so, with all my heart," I replied warmly; "why, no one but a fiend incarnate would wish that yonder daring fellow might come to grief."

The stranger smiled, but the smile was sardonic enough to come under the head of a grimace.

"I have met you before," he said; "one morning on Ellis street. I remember your face now. Come, I feel rather companionable this evening. Dine with me. I am almost a perfect stranger in this city, and you will be doing a lonesome man a favor if you accept my invitation."

I consented, overcoming the repugnance I felt for the sake of knowing more about this person, who was evidently a man of mystery. He named an address on Pine street, the hour seven, and lifting his hat, with an agreeable, almost amiable air, of which I could not believe his hard, grim features capable, we parted until that hour.

While dressing for dinner I was full of conjecture about my strange acquaintance. His name he had not given me, nor had he mentioned whether he was a married man or a bachelor. As he had not appointed a restaurant for our dining place, I concluded that No. —— Pine street must be a boarding house. However, at ten minutes to the hour of dining, I rung the bell of a large, old-fashioned house, dingy and neglected-looking to a degree. A Japanese servant admitted me, and I found my host seated in a handsomely furnished parlor. He was in evening dress, so I at once decided that we were not to be without ladies' society.

"You must pardon me," he said courteously, "for my neglect to give you my name. I am such a hermit that I have almost forgotten the conventionalities. I am Albert le Mour, an American, born of French parents, a traveler, a citizen of the world—here to-day and away to-morrow—with but one desire in life, which I fear may never be fulfilled."

I handed him my card, and the Japanese announced dinner. The dining-room into which Le Mour ushered me was even more luxuriously furnished than the other apartment. I perceived that the table, on which was an abundance of rich plate and crystal, was set but for two.

The dinner was a most elaborate one, and the wines of rare excellence. My host displayed a fund of information that astonished me. He ceased to be the saturnine individual I had accosted at the balloon ascension in the morning. He was genial, witty, full of anecdote and comment upon the great people of this country and Europe—personal experiences indicating an extensive and exclusive association.

When after the cloth was removed, following the English fashion, and a bottle of very choice Burgundy was set on the table, I ventured to say,—

"Pray, Mr. Le Mour, do not think me impertinent if I inquire if you really meant your remarks at Baker's Beach this morning. Surely you could not wish that the aeronaut should meet with a violent and horrible death?"

In a moment the light, genial expression of Le Mour's face changed. A dark frown, tightly set lips, and an evil glitter in his small, forbidding eyes, replaced the pleasant, friendly air he had worn since my arrival.

"My friend," he said, and his voice was harsh and guttural, "for years my quest in life has been to see men die violent deaths. I suppose I am a moral monster, a morbid beast, thirsting for the blood of his kind. Granted I am all these. Then on nature the blame. But that passion in my breast is greater and more dominant than the love of woman in the sensualist; the roue who sees in woman only an instrument of lust; or the thirst for liquor in the inebriate, who will sacrifice everything to his appetite for drink. It has supplanted every other desire. It has uprooted and taken the place of every other ambition. I have seen men die on the scaffold by the rope. I have stood on the platform of the guillotine so close to the victim that my clothes have been spattered with his blood. I have seen in Spain the garrote crush the spinal cord, and in Russia the knout flay the skin, until the quivering heart was exposed. These things to me are the sources of the keenest and most intense pleasure. Why, I do not presume to tell you. Because I do not know. But I do know that they are, and that the appetite increases every year. I have now in my body a bullet received on the field of Gravelotte, where I went, not to fight for France or Germany, but to see men die. But I have never yet seen a man fall from a great height, though I have spent days watching buildings go up, and the workmen creep like flies from plank to plank. It has been my misfortune to be absent when those accidents occurred, and I have gnashed my teeth with disappointment when I read how narrowly I have missed this crowning quest of my life."

He ceased, and I confess I felt decidedly uncomfortable. I realized that, however sane Le Mour might be on other matters, on this business he was a raving maniac. I made an inward resolve that he could not tempt me to see the upper apartments of his house, whatever the inducements he offered. The working of his savage face, the foam upon his compressed lips, the clenching of his muscular hands, and the atmosphere of blood with which he seemed surrounded, destroyed the bouquet of the Burgundy and urged me to get away from this morbid lunatic as quickly as possible.

"I sincerely hope he has seen some one stabbed to death," I thought, "else he may experiment on me before I leave."

"You will pardon me," he said, with an attempt to recover his former manner, "if I have startled and shocked you. But I am done now. Won't you step up-stairs and have some coffee? I have some curios from many lands I would like to show you."

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure," I replied hurriedly; "but you must excuse me this evening. A journalist has his night obligations, you know. So now I must regretfully bid you good evening."

We parted pleasantly enough, but when the door clanged behind me I felt like a man who had escaped from a tiger's den.

Ten days afterward I read the following in a morning paper:—

Unprovoked Attempt at Murder.—Violent and Shocking Death of the Would-Be Assassin.—Shortly before noon yesterday, a strange man asked and obtained permission from the contractor of the new building, now in process of erection on Post street, to inspect the upper floor. He ascended the ladders, and walking out on one of the main stringers, spoke pleasantly to a carpenter employed on the building. Suddenly and without any possible reason he flung himself upon the workman, and endeavored to hurl him from the beam. The man, though taken unawares, fought desperately for his life, calling loudly for assistance the meanwhile. Foiled in his bloodthirsty attempt, the stranger, with a loud yell and clasping his hands above his head, sprang from the timbers, and his head striking a beam in his descent, was lifeless before he reached the ground. The body was taken to the morgue, and in the pocket was a card, Albert Le Mour, No. — Pine street. An attack of murderous mania is the only reasonable explanation of this tragic occurrence.—Waverly

His Mind Still Clear.

Mr. Pneer had been run into by a streetcar. He was taken to the nearest drug store and a surgeon was hastily summoned.

"The thigh bone is dislocated," announced the surgeon, after a brief examination.

"Here, you!" he continued, turning to a muscular bystander and grasping the sufferer firmly around the body. "Pull his leg!"

"What! Already?" groaned Mr. Pneer, opening his eyes and placing his hand on his pocketbook.—Chicago Tribune.

END OF AN EMPIRE.

OMDURMAN'S FALL MEANS THE MAHDI'S ANNIHILATION.

The Victory of Gen. Kitchener in the Soudan Marks the Beginning of the End of the Strangest Empire Since the Day of Mohammed.

After a terrific battle, characterized by the weird features and daredevil charges that have always abounded in wars with the fanatics of the Soudan, the British army of invasion in the Mahdi's territory swept the barbarians off the field Sept. 2 and victoriously entered the city of Omdurman on the Nile—the capital of the Mahdi. It stands opposite ruined Khartoum, the city of bitter memory, where Chinese Gordon was butchered thirteen years ago, and its occupation in a measure avenges that crime of the Soudanese barbarians.

The battle of Sept. 2 will rank in history as one of the fiercest of any Egyptian campaign. Gen. Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the British expedition, had a combined force of British regulars, Hindu troops and Egyptians, numbering in all 25,000 men. The 10,000 British regulars were under the immediate command of Gen. Gatacre, while Gen. Hunter commanded the 15,000 Hindus and Egyptians. Staten Pasha, an Austrian, who was a prisoner of the Mahdi for twelve years, accompanied the expedition as a guide. Opposed to the Anglo-Egyptian army were the fanatical hordes under Abdullah, formerly a khalifa, who has been recognized as the Mahdi since the death of the original Mahdi.

In the battle outside Omdurman, the dervishes made the assault, marching to the fray, singing their weird songs and beating brass and copper drums. They were scantily clad and over them waved the black flag of their leader. They presented an unbroken front for three miles. Met by a storm of British bullets they did not waver. Their ranks were broken, but with the same enthusiasm that carried the Moslems of old to victory they continued to advance. The battle waged several hours, and when the barbarians were finally driven from the field, 2,000 men of Kitchener's command lay dead and wounded,

GENERAL KITCHENER.

KHARTOUM, THE DERVISH CAPITAL.

while the dervishes lost five times that number.

"The bravery of the dervishes cannot be comprehended," writes a correspondent who witnessed the battle. "Those who carried the flags struggled to within a few hundred yards of our fighting line, while the wounded emirs absolutely threw their lives away in bold charges. When the flower of the Khalifa's army was finally caught in a depression and within a zone of withering cross fire from three brigades, the devoted Mahdists strove heroically to make headway, but every rush was stopped, while their main body was literally mown down by a sustained cross fire. Defiantly the dervishes planted their standards and died beside them. Time after time their dispersed and broken forces reformed and hurled themselves upon the Anglo-Egyptians, their emirs conspicuously leading, and spurning death. Even when wounded and in death agonies they raised themselves to fire a last shot."

Like Mohammed's Rise.

The story of Great Britain's wars in the Soudan during the past fifteen years reads like a chapter from the life of Mohammed and his immediate successors. The rise of the Mahdi, the growth of his horde of adherents, his conquests throughout southern Egypt, his slaughter of the enemy, the luxury of his declining years, together with the tyrannical sway of his successor, who has now met defeat, form a parallel to the careers of the prophet of Arabia and his death-defying successors. It was in 1882 that the British and Egyptian Governments learned that a certain dervish named Mohammed Ahmed was wandering in the Soudan, drawing all natives to him and preparing to found a mighty empire among the slave-dealing Arabs of Africa. It was said that he could turn bullets into water. He assumed the title of Mahdi, "successor of the Prophet," organized his followers into an army and laid siege to various villages, conquering all and enriching himself by plundering the inhabitants. Then, with an army of 30,000 men, he marched to El Obeid, slaughtered its defenders and established there his capital. His success caused enormous additions to his ranks, and soon all that section of Egypt was inflamed.

By this time the British and Egyptians were alarmed and sent a force under Hicks Pasha, an English officer, down to meet him. The result was horrible. Hicks and his men fell into a trap in the desert and the Mahdi slew the whole 10,000.

Advancing toward the rich and beautiful city of Khartoum, he stopped at Darfur, captured it and took prisoner its Austrian commander, Staten Pasha. For twelve years this man remained a prisoner of the dervishes and was treated with all manner of cruelty.

Terrified by the Mahdi's success, Gen. Gordon, the bravest man of the English army, was sent to defend Khartoum. He was given an inadequate force. This was at the beginning of 1884. He offered the Mahdi all the western Soudan as his own territory, with the recognized rank of Sultan. In bitter reply the Mahdi sent him back a complete set of dervish garments. Then the victorious fanatic and pious Arab set out for Khartoum, where the hapless people, deceived by the hope of English help, had lingered to welcome Gordon. No notice was taken of that hero's proclamations to the Soudanese. His communications were cut with the north, and very soon a horde numbering 200,000 swarmed at the heels of the Mahdi into Omdurman and the outskirts of Khartoum. This was in October, 1884. The low Nile left a part of the ramparts broken and indefensible. The vast mass of assailing dervishes made thereby their rush, in two bands, just before the British relieving force came in sight of the white walls and green palm groves of the city.

Cruel Death of Gordon.

How Gordon died at his hopeless post is thus related:

"One party dashed along the parapet, breaking down all resistance and slaughtering the soldiers in all directions; the other party made for the town. The inhabitants, roused from their sleep by the shouts of the Arabs and the din of rifle shots, hurried out. Like a pent-up stream suddenly released more than 50,000 wild dervishes, with hideous yells, rushed upon the 40,000 inhabitants of Khartoum, besides the 5,000 soldiers—all that were left of the 9,000 at the commencement of the siege. The surging mass threw itself on the palace, overflowed into the lovely garden, and burst through the doors in wild search for their prey, but Gordon went alone to meet them. As they rushed up the stairs he came toward them and tried to speak to them; but they could not or would not listen, and the first Arab plunged his huge spear into his body. He fell forward on his face and was dragged down the stairs, many stabbing him with their spears, and his head was cut off and sent to the Mahdi. On Gordon's head being brought to the Mahdi he appeared to have been much displeased at his death—not because he felt pity for him, but believed that Gordon might join his army. Gordon's head was hung on a tree in Omdurman, and the wild multitude rejoiced in heaping curses on it and insulting it."

This undoubted triumph intoxicated his followers with faith, but demoralized the Mahdi. He took to unbridled luxury and died of its consequences on June 22, 1885. The desert ascetic, whose bed had been a mat of straw, expired upon Persian carpets in all the splendor and state of a great Eastern prince, having founded in his brief career an empire built on the basis of slavery and reckless bloodshed. Before death he had himself nominated Abdullah as his successor, who thus inherited a dominion stretching from Bahr-el-Ghazal to Egypt, and from Darfur to the Red Sea.

The new tyrant began with very great ideas. He proclaimed that he would conquer all Egypt, as well as Abyssinia. Putting all laws on one side, he made himself absolute master over life and death in the Soudan, and even the valor of King John and his Abyssinians could not stand against the ardor of the dervishes.

With the death of the original Mahdi there befell a split in the ranks, but they were united enough, nevertheless, to go down the Nile as far as Korosko and to send insulting letters to Queen Victoria, to the Sultan of Turkey and to the Khedive. At this time it was Gen. Grenfell who, in the cause of Egypt, stopped the invasion of that country. The battle of Toski, on Aug. 3, 1889, avenged the cruel fate of Hicks Pasha; but England had lost her best chances,

This map of the Nile region shows the several stages of the British advance on the dervish position at Omdurman and for seven years Osman Digna harassed and besieged Suakim, while El Teb and Tamai were fought in vain, and all that fair and fertile region south of Berber was abandoned to the tyranny of the Baggaras, under a second Mahdi.

With the adhesion of the numerous and warlike tribes of the Baggara, the Khalifa Abdullah has kept down all other local races under his own fierce will, as well as keeping alive the spell of the name of the first Mahdi, within whose tomb he was often wont to lock himself up, spending the darkness in pretended communion with his Master. In some districts half the people are dead, in others the loss of life is even greater. Whole tribes have been completely blotted out, and in their places roam the wild beasts, spreading and increasing in fierceness and in numbers until they bid fair to finish the destruction of the human race; for they enter huts, and women and children are no longer safe.

It is some three years since Kitchener set out to redeem the lost territory and to avenge Gordon's death. The fall of Omdurman and the defeat of Abdullah's forces means the downfall of the fanatic's empire.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

Just Try It.

Blest be the ties that bind
Business to the public mind;
Blest be the type that strike the eye
And make the reader promptly buy.

Just try this type—fill readers' eyes
And prove it pays to advertise;
Then you'll say with emphasis—
There's no investment pays like this.

Good Results.

Until last January Fischel Bros. & Wise, dry goods merchants of Denver, Colo., did not advertise. They decided to spend $250 a month, but their bills were a little less than that. So far, the percentage of increase over the business for the first six months of 1897 has been: January, 112 per cent; February, 144 per cent; March, 103 per cent; April, 109 per cent; May, 100 per cent; June, 116 per cent. Last month the firm did the largest business in its history—2 per cent larger than during March and June of 1897 combined. The increase in business for the six months of this year over the first six months of 1897 was 123 per cent, and over the first six months of 1896, 148 per cent.—Press and Printer.

Withering Sarcasm.

"We are glad to learn that Ringling Bros.' circus is likely to visit Boone again this season," says the Boone, Ia., Republican. "When it was here last August we noted that some of our merchants had their names printed on the elephants. As they have not advertised since we are anxious to know whether they are still in business."

Pointers.

Advertisements, like jokes, should be timely.

You needn't chase a lying ad. It'll run itself to death in a short time.

It is not always desirable that a large amount of space should be filled with a large number of words.

People will talk. If you advertise your good points they will talk well of you. If you do not, look out.

All men who advertise are not successful; but, with rare exceptions, all successful men have been advertisers.

Truth is the prime essential in advertising. The best written ads will soon cease to sell goods if you are always "just out" of a leader when a customer calls.

Doing business without advertising is a good deal like filling a barrel through a half-inch bung without a funnel.

In most cases the merchant who has no money to spend in advertising eventually has no money to meet other expenses.

A store full of goods unsold represents so much money lying idle. The cost of selling the goods by advertising them would, in some cases, be less than the interest which would otherwise accrue on the unsold stock.

Wonderfully Good Sight.

The Duchess of X—— once went to Greenwich to see the marvels of the observatory. It was a lovely night and for the fair duchess' benefit the great telescope was duly leveled at the dazzling field of stars.

"What is that star?" she said, pointing to a very dear one.

"Oh, that's Aldebaran, a star of the first magnitude!"

"Is it very far off?" asked her grace.

"About six or seven light years, your grace."

"What is a light year?"

"Merely an expression which one uses to convey an idea of the distance which light travels in a year. Roughly speaking, light travels at the rate of 190,000 miles a second, and there are about 31,000,536 seconds in a year. In one year, therefore, light travels above five billion, nine hundred and ninety-one thousand, eight hundred and forty millions of miles. The expression 'light year' includes these figures."

"And is that star all those millions of miles away."

"Yes, your grace, as nearly as we can calculate."

"Then, all I can say," remarked the Duchess, "is that you must have wonderfully good eyes to make out that star's name at that distance, even with this big telescope. It's really most marvelous."—London Tit-Bits.

Singing Soldiers.

A French general has inaugurated a plan of permitting soldiers to sing when on the march, a privilege which has been strictly denied until recently. It has also been arranged that any soldier who can play on any of the smaller musical instruments shall be provided with such instrument at the expense of the state.—Boston Traveler.

Mixed as to Geography.

Senator Mason was presented with a fine team of horses by his constituents in Illinois not long ago. When Mrs. Mason saw the docked tails she expressed pity for them, but her little daughter exclaimed, "Oh, mamma, but you must never look a gift horse in the mouth."—Philadelphia Press.

HE HAS CAUSE

The drunken editor of the Fort Wayne Dispatch is amusing himself in an unusually harmless way, when he writes letters containing silly slang, against the editor of this paper. He may have some cause for his dislike, for though we do not remember any special thing we have said about him, we assure him of an unfeigned disgust we have in a general way for men, especially newspaper men who get drunk on public occasions and make fools of themselves. And we never saw Mitchell in any other condition,

The State Fair

We agree with the Waterloo Press, that the bankrupt State Fair should not be turned over to the state. The state has already spent large sums of the people's money to sustain the fair and it has been sunk by bad management on the part of the officers. People who knew nothing about agriculture or stock, got on the managing boards by political pulls or similar means, and it is a wonder the fair had not gone under before now. Sell the property, and if anything is left after paying the debts, give it back to the state where it came from.

St. Joe High School.

H. G. Provines, principal of the St. Joe Schools was here Saturday, and gives a good account of the condition of the school. He has now organized a regular high school with a complete course of studies and will at the close of of this school year, graduate the first high school class at that place, there being now fifty in the class. This is an important advance step and we hope the people will not be slow to take advantage of it. The high school department is in Mr. Provines' charge of course. The other teachers are: M. J. Hadsell, Grammar Department; Bertha Hollabaugh, Intermediate; Addie Widney, Primary. School began Sept. 12 and continues seven months. At the close of the public school year Mr. Provines will begin a term of normal school.

BENEFITS OF FUSION.

We have since our last article on this subject found another democrat who is opposed to fusion, although like the other mentioned, he says he will vote straight.

For the benefit of all who feel like our friend, if there should be any others, we wish to say a few words on the value that fusion of the democratic and populist parties has brought to the taxpayers of DeKalb county.

In 1894, the democrats voted one ticket, the populists another and the republicans a third. It turned out that there were 261 more republicans than either populists or democrats, and the republican county officers were elected except auditor. The bad work done during the next two years in the various county offices is now well known. But how was it discovered? The discovery was made as a result of fusion between the democrats and populists in 1896. Fair the republican treasurer was not re-elected, because the fusion deal put an honest and capable man in his place. Fair had to account for the money in his hands. In trying to do this, the bondsmen found two orders for over $100 each, drawn in favor of jurymen for serving on the jury. The sum was so large that an examination was made of the auditor's books and it was found these two orders had each been raised $100. The secret was out and one discovery followed another till all was unearthed. The county was saved an enormous sum of money, and future stealing was stopped. And all this was made possible only by the fusion of the two parties, which resulted in the defeat of the republican ticket. Had there been no fusion. Fair would have been re-elected and would not have been called on to account for the money, and the stealing would now be going on. Does any democrat regret that this rascality was exposed? If he does, he is consistent in objecting to fusion. We do not believe any democrat who stops to think of the benefits the taxpayers have received will hesitate to stand up for the fusion that secured those benefits. The fact that only democrats were punished and republicans were not, should cut no figure with a democratic voter. But in view of the wholesale whitewashing of officials' misconduct by the late republican convention, it looks as if the democrats, populists and right minded republicans must now unite and save the county from further losses. Shall we do it or shall we refuse? The question is now with the taxpayers and voters.

THE NEWEST SWINDLE

A new scheme of swindling was successfully nipped in the bud at Hicksville Saturday. A young man giving the name of Johnson, of Maysville called at the home of Chas Kyle, and asked his mother for Charles' coat and vest, saying that he wanted to go away on the noon train. Mrs. Kyle hesitated about letting him have them. The fellow said, "Oh, it doesn't make any difference to me, I just thought it would accommodate Charlie as he is repairing my watch." He got the coat and vest. At noon Mrs. Kyle was very much surprised to see Charles come in for dinner, as she thought he was out of the city. She told him about the boy getting the articles, and he immediately returned to town and informed the marshal of the matter. In the afternoon the marshal saw a boy carrying two suspicious looking budles. He stopped him, and in a short time the boy had confessed all. He was taken before the mayor, and is now boarding at the county hotel at Defiance. Mr. Kyle was delighted at the safe return of his clothing, the more so, as it was so near the close of the week, when every popular young man needs his "Sunday best."

BUTLER.

The Street Fair last week proved a success in point of numbers, in spite of continuous rainy weather Thursday and Friday. Had the weather been propitious the town would have been taxed to its utmost to have cared for its visitors.

Sarah Warner, the aged mother of Mrs. Alonzo Gaff, died last week. She had been confined to her bed for many weeks and had been cared for much of the time by the lady members of the Masonic Eastern Star lodge.

Our M. E. friends are completing their improvements on the parsonage, and when completed it will compare very favorably with the church.

The writer with a few other Butler people took advantage of the cheap excursion to Chicago, Saturday. The trip was a very pleasant one, not overcrowded, with the exception of passing through one of the hardest thunder storms of the season. The down-town district makes no improvements in the way of noise and confusson and now since the elevated roads are completed and running along some of the busiest streets, the din and clatter is almost deafening.

Uncle John Champions had a family reunion, last week, and his son, William, of Peru, and daughters, Mary, of Detroit, and Minnie, of Chicago, and Mrs. G. T. Johns, of Duluth, and Mrs Chilcote, of Butler, were all present. Saturday morning they scattered for their distant homes and will hardly all ever meet again.

Charley Phillips who recently retired from Lane's drug store, is about to start a small store of his own in the Haskin block, near the postoffice.

It is said that the saloon keepers were the only people who made any money out of the fair. A certain other "yellow" element were not far behind them.

The recent session of the U. B. conference in Butler, was a very successful gathering of these pushing people. We met many former Butler workers, and they all seemed enthusiastic over the prospects for the coming year. Their venerable bishop has nearly reached the limit of his earthly labor, and will soon have to retire from his field. Brother Dan Keller, a former presiding elder was conspicuous by his absence.

Young Queen of the Netherlands

On August 31, 1898, a young girl in Holland celebrated her eighteenth birthday. Six days later, in royal robes, seated on a throne erected in the "Nieuwe Kerk," in Amsterdam, she took the oath which made her Queen of the Netherlands. Not since the coronation of Queen Victoria of England, sixty years ago, has a young girl come to a throne; and as Victoria was, so is Wilhelmina: a charming, brilliant, and thoroughly feminine woman, and with great possibilities in prospect, although her kingdom is so much smaller. Her full name is Wilhelmina Helena Paulina Maria. The hereditary name, Wilhelmina, was given to her, as she comes of a long line of Williams, or Wilhelms, in direct descent from William of Nassau. She is the daughter of William III, King of the Netherlands, who died

November 23, 1890, and Emma, Princess of Waldeck and Pyrmont.

In appearance, according to Edith Lawrence, who describes the installation in Harper's Bazar for September 10, the young Queen is most pleasing. She has fair hair—a light brown—blue eyes, and a sweet, laughing expression. She is neither tall nor slender, as has been said, but is petite, with a well-rounded shapely figure. Her complexion is beautiful. She loves to be well dressed, although up to the present time she has had little opportunity of indulging herself in fine clothes and costly rainment. To wish to look her best is any woman's privilege, may she be queen or peasant maid.

STOLE A COAT

This morning a suspicious looking fellow came into the clothing store of Schaab & Murphy and after looking about a little began to talk of buying some underwear. While Geo. Schaab was showing him the goods, he was also sizing him up, and felt sure the man had a longing towards the money drawer. The fellow, however, did not buy any underwear, but concluded he wanted a pair of overalls. So Mr. Schaab took him to the back end of the store, and showed him the overalls. He picked out a pair that suited him, and said he would take them. He asked to have them done up and laid aside, while he went out to get the money. Mr. Schaab had no faith in him and did not do the goods up, but simply laid them back. The man walked out of the store and in going out probably slipped a coat off one of the piles near the door. The piles are pretty high and he could have done this easily, as it would not be likely Mr. Schaab could see him. He sold the the coat to Lon Proctor at the south end barber shop for 75 cents, and this coming to the ears of Marshal Potter who was down that way, he saw something must be wrong, so he telephoned up town and asked Mr. Schaab if any goods had been lost. This gave Mr. Schaab the first knowledge he had that the coat had been taken. Marshal Potter followed the man to the Junction and arrested him, and he is now in Sheriff Stroh's popular hotel on the public square. It was a quick job from stealing to prison and we give marshal Potter credit for a good part of a quick job. The fellow gives his name as Joe Brennan,

THIEVES IN TOWN

Someone seems to be making an effort to live without work. Saturday night, Mrs Miller who lives on North VanBuren-st, had six chickens stolen and found one dead in the coop. Matches were also found in the coop, showing the thieves had struck a light to pick out good ones. Mrs. Hayes who lives near there, has lost about fifty cans of fruit that was taken from her cellar, Visitor—I saw a statement in the paper a day or two ago that the railroads of the world would carry 40,000,000 people annually. Real Estate Boomer— That's a fact, and the majority of them get off at this station.—Boston Courier.

Berne's Famous Clock-Tower.

There is a celebrated clock-tower at Berne, in Switzerland. The approach of the hour is announced by the crowing of a cock. At the same time may be seen at the very top of the tower a man clad in a coat of mail striking the hours with his sword on a large bell. As the hours are striking a troupe of bears make their appearance and parade around the tower, then make their exit. Long strings of carriages draw up every hour for the occupants to witness this interesting spectacle.

A BIG ENTERPRISE

The Climax Fence Machine Co., of Lincoln, Neb, who have been represented here by Mr. J. M. Barber, Manager; Lewis Hammond, W. A. Rhinehart and J. W. Elliott, Salesmen, have certainly done a big business. They shipped over 500 machines here about two months ago, have sold every one of them and will have to ship more here to fill their orders. They have also sold over 1000 machines at wholesale in adjoining counties, and their agents are meeting with big success, which speaks well of their machines and the firm that builds it Auburn never had a set of men here, on any business, that made a better impression. They have treated everybody with perfect fairness—played no sharp tricks. But are honest and straightforward in all their dealings, as everyone who have had dealings with them can testify Read what some of our most prominent farmers say about the machines and the fence:

In regard to the Fence Machine purchased of you some time ago. Will say that I have given it a thorough test, and it has proven eminently satisfactory in every particular. I have built an arch top lawn fence with your machine; also a four-foot crimped picket fence, which I believe is the best and most substantial of any fence I ever saw. I visited two fence factories where woven wire fence was made a few weeks ago, and have examined every fence that I have seen in our county and am satisfied the Climax builds the best fence of any machine I ever saw.

I was out with your agent, Mr. Elliott, a few days and we sold 21 machines, and a good many of the parties who have bought machines have built fence and are well pleased. S. J. TARNEY.

I have purchased a Climax Fence Machine and have given it a thorough trial on both yard and field fence and find it does just what you claim for it. Am well pleased with the simplicity and practical working of your machine and heartily recommend it to any farmer who has fence to build. By owning this machine we can buy wire at wholesale prices from your wire factory which reduces the cost of the fence nearly one-half. A. M. FURNISH.

AUBURN, IND.

I bought a Climax Fence Machine and have tested it thoroughly in building both yard and field fence and can heartily recommend both machine, fence and men who sell it, to my friends and neighbors, as I am well pleased with the machine and with the fence it builds. Also your plan of furnishing the material at wholesale prices is a good thing as it puts the best and most substantial fencing on the market within the reach of all. J. G. LAWHEAD.

I bought one of your Climax Fence Machines and have built 24 rods of four foot crimped picket fence at a cost of 34 cents per rod. This is sufficient to test your machine and the fence and I feel it a privilege and a pleasure to add my testimony. I have a lot of Diamond Mesh wire fence on my farm, but believe the Climax fence is far superior to it or any other wire fence I ever saw. I also wish to state in justice to Mr. Elliott, your agent, that he is honest and makes no statements about the fence or machine but what he can more than fill. A. S. FREEMAN.

AUBURN, IND.

Climax Fence Machine Co.,

GENTLEMEN:—I have used your fence machine that is being sold in this vicinity and find it just as represented Have bought one and built some fence with it and find for simplicity of adjustment, ease of operation and all around use in building fence, this machine is unequaled. I would advise anyone interested in fence building to examine this machine before buying any other as it will save you money. AMOS HILKEY.

SUMMITT, IND.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—I purchased a Climax Fence Machine and have built 37 rods crimped picket fence with it, and am well pleased with the work it does as you can build a great many kinds of fence with it. We must have some different system of fencing from the old way, and this is the best I ever saw in this or any other locality.
I. J. SALANDER.

AUBURN, IND.

We the undersigned farmers have each bought a Climax Fence Machine and have built fence with it on our farms and are well pleased with the machine, the fence and the honest and business like way which the company have done business with us as regard to machine, wire, etc., and would heartily recommend them and their agents to any community.

AUBURN, IND.

I have built on my farm eight miles north-west of Auburn, Ind., 20 rods of alternate crimped picket fence, four feet high, with the Climax Fence Machine and am so well pleased with it that I will build 100 rods more just as soon as I can get the posts set. I heartily recommend the Climax Machine and the fence it builds, as I believe it is the best ever sold in our county. I would invite those who are interested in fence building to examine my fence.

The 88th Reunion.

The meeting at St. Joe yesterday was a grand success, and in point of members was the largest the regiment ever held. There were present of their men, 142, while the largest number at any previous reunion was the 132 that met at Columbia City when the meeting was there. There were, moreover, two of their old boys who attended their reunions for the first time. They were Milt. Horn, of New Mexico and Ed. Smith of Illinois. Sol. Barney made the address of welcome, and the other speeches etc., were as laid down in the program already published. The speeches by Stemen and Robinson, are highly complimented as able and patriotic and utterly devoid of partisan politics, just as should be at such a meeting. A unique badge was used on the occasion, being in the usual form except that it contained the portrait of Gen. L. J. Blair, who was a member of the regiment. It might be noted, Company H, the one recruited in DeKalb county had present, 30 of the old boys, and Company D was the next in point of members, having 28 present. The smallest number for any company, was for I, which had only two members in attendance. The COURIER thanks D. D. Diehl, one of the members for interesting reports of the meeting.

The Future Of The G. A. R.

In the course of nature, it is certain that in a few years, every member of the G. A. R. will have answered the last roll call and have passed to the other shore. And under the conditions of their organization there have heretofore been none to take their places. The lodge room will soon be vacant, or occupied by strangers, The places that knew these patriotic men, will know them no more forever. The same is true of the sister body, the W. R. C. Under the conditions of their organization, there have been none who could take their places. Not that the material for heroes or patriots has ever been lacking, but the conditions of soldier experience did not exist in any but those who had participated in the dangers, suffering and triumphs of the great rebellion. Now, however, a new generation has arison, and from it came a body of soldiers, thus supplying the element so long lacking for the perpetuity of these orders. We refer to the soldiers of today, the "boys of 1898," the men of the Spanish war. They possess all the elements needed, as far as we can see, for the adding of new names and the infusion of new blood so vital to the perpetuity of the G. A. R. The writer is not a member, but makes these suggestions in a spirit of friendship for both the old and the new soldiers. We hope to see the G. A. R. take such action as will enable the young soldiers at least those above a certain age, to become members, and thus perpetuate the glories of the of past and add to the guarantees for the future of our glorious flag and country.

FOR COMPANY K.

The committee appointed to make arrangements for the reception and entertainment of Company K and other soldiers living in and about Auburn met at G. A. R. hall last evening. Most all the members of the committee were present and entered heartily upon the work assigned them. G. H. Yesbera and Wm Elson were appointed to secure a hall for the entertainment. Mesdames. Weamer, Nusbaum and Silver were appointed to secure a suitable place for the supper. The matter of soliciting for provisions, etc, for the supper was left the ladies of the committee. The committee on speakers and entertainment are Mr. Gordon, Mr. Long, Mr. Boland and Mrs. A. J. Ralston. Mr. Wm. Elson was appointed to solicit the business men for $15 or $20 more to defray the expense of supper and entertainment. The committee on music are, Dr. Nusbaum, J. H. Rose and Henry Wolfe It was also decided that all members of this committee be appointed as a reception committee. The supper will be given before the entertainment, the ladies to name the hour later on. Each soldier of 1898, in the city that evening is cordially invited to participate and will allowed to invite one guest.

Committee then adjourned to meet next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. ROZENA LEWIS, of Greenville, Texas, says: "I was troubled at monthly intervals with terrible pains in my head and back, but have been entirely relieved by Wine of Cardui."

Jumped The Ditch.

Dr. Hines and Dell Purdy had a lively experience Friday evening. They were in a buggy and on the way to the Junction, and after turning into the Avenue came to the open water works trench. They did not notice the red light hung there, and the horse went plump into it, got over and jerked the buggy after it. When the fore wheels went down, Dr. Hines was thrown out, and Purdy partly over the dash board. When the hind wheels dropped into the ditch, Purdy was thrown back into the buggy. Then he got the doctor in, and they went on. They were bruised but not seriously. The buggy had the fore axle bent some.

The Reunion Of The 44th.

M. B. Willis came back from Goshen Frdiay afternoon, where he attended the reunion of his old regiment, the 44th. He says they had a good meeting, but the attendance was smaller than usual, only a little over eighty being present. It has been a good while since the rebellion closed and the old boys came marching home, and we must face the sad fact, that the number present at their reunions will be getting smaller as the years go by.

Our Six-Year-Old Daughter.

Our little six-year-old daughter had a very sore throat, badly ulceratad, and coughed almost incessantly. Gave the White Wine of Tar Syrup according to directions and she began to improve immediately and soon got well. Mrs Groves and I recommended it to others and we consider it the very best medicine in use. REV. D. H. GROVES, Pastor M. E. Church, Clarksville, Mo. For sale by Davenport, the Druggist

"The Republican party will win in 1900 on the successful conduct of the war."

—George Campbell's house is being put up now by Fred Kring, James Pearce and John Keeran. J. H. Conrad is doing the tin work. It is going to be a nice residence and is built high enough to be above the street and the sidewalk. We predict that other lots along there will soon have dwellings on them and that long gap will be filled. But George will be the pioneer.

—The picture we give todoy of Theodore Roosevelt is from a photo. His liking for cowboys, came from several years spent among them, for he has a big ranch in Colorado. Many of his soldiers came from there and New Mexico, but many were wealthy men or sons of such. Some were noted in foot ball, base ball, or other athletic games. Some were regular army officers or soldiers, some were leaders in high society, and some college graduater and professors. But all proved good fighters.

—Mrs. George Grogg north of town entertained at a dinner Saturday, Mrs. A. J. Ralston, Mrs. Priscilla Barclay, Mrs. Mary McDowell, Mrs. Eliza George and Mrs. Miles Baxter. She entertained the ladies in honor of her mother Mrs. Milliner who soon leaves for Colorado.

—The men had to go to work an hour or two Saturday in the rain, to fill the trench under the the Wabash railroad so as to make it safe for trains to run. Had there been no rain, there would been no danger. In fact the work down there would have all been finished before night.

—We were gratified at brief call this morning from Maj. Kuhlman and Capt Lahnum. Both are in good health now and in good spirits and waiting to see what disposition is to be made of the 157th. Both have made themselves popular with their men and useful in the service.

—T. C. Ford started this morning over the B. & O. for the West. His first stop off, after leaving Chicago will be Atlantic City, where he hopes to find Whip Straight, from there he will go to Omaha to visit the Exposition for a few days, he will then go to Sioux City, Iowa, to visit his uncle and family, Stephen Ford.

—Rev. J. N. Wilson has purchased the barn on A'. Franks' lot on West 6th street and is tearing it down, and will put it up again on his own lot West 4th street. It looks odd to see the big timbers in it, as it is a pioneer and made strong. But the timbers are as strong today as they were forty or fifty years ago when first built.

—At the coming Peace Jubilee in Chicago, arrangements have been made to slaughter several hundred beeves, sheep, etc, for a great barbecue for the people But now come objections from several quarters, against shedding so much blood in the cause of peace. It does look a little out of place It is proposed to have vegetables for at least a part of the feast.

—Clarence Shoemaker is improving right along now. His fever was got under control Saturday and this puts him in a fair way of recovery. He is a member of company L of Ligonier, and several of the Ligonier boys have been up to see him. He has been sick a good deal of the time since he left and being still under seventeen it is a pretty severe experience for a lad.

—Jacob Shull is in the business of selling structural iron and steel, and expects to make that his work hereafter He furnished the big steel beams that are being placed in the Presbyterian church addition just now He will make a speciality of bridge still and iron, and we would like to see our DeKalb people patronize him. He is in a situation to give unusually good bargains.

—Senator Mason of Illinois tells the truth about his party when in a recent speech he said that he had been in favor of war with Spain from the first, and "though opposed in this view by a majority of my party, I am just as good a republican as ever." We commend this frank utterance to the republican editors who are now trying to take all credit for the war, and to make political capital out of it.

—We have received from W. B. Campbell of the Anderson Herald, a copy of the five-minute paper he read at the National Editorial Meeting at Denver, Colo., Sept. 8. The subject handled is, "The Editorial" and he deals with this important subject with clearness and ability. And we are free to say the views he sets forth are such as we know to be honestly his.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Ezra Hartman of Ashley was here today on business.

—Mr. Kimmel, piano tuner of Fort Wayne, is in the city this week. Parties wishing their piano tuned will please leave word at the Swineford House.

—Dr. Vesta M. Swarts reports the good news that Lydia Hogue is so far improved that the rides out a little each day. She has had a serious and long continued illness.

—Charlie Comesky was here today and reports a big hailstorm in South Jackson at the time we had the hard rain Saturday. He says some of the hailstone were as large as walnuts.

—John Kruger having sold out his fruit store goes on the road. It will be remembered that he and Harvey Moss have a cigar factory at Angola, and this will take a part of his time.

—Special train to Fort Wayne on Oct. 6, the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad will run a special train to Fort Wayne, leaving Auburn at 9:18 a. m. One fare for the round trip.

—Gen. Blair and wife, of Waterloo, came here this morning on their way St. Joe, where his old regiment, the 88th has its reunion. F. N. Beidler and wife of the same place, also drove over there.

—The new crossing at the National Bank is a fine one, and made high enough so that excited horsemen will not be speeding their nags over it. And if they do, there will be a job for the repair shops.

—Miss Jennie Ryerson, who has been a guest in the COURIER family for a time started on her return to the west today. She stops at Larwill and then goes to Chicago to stay awhile. Her home is at Los Angeles.

—Half rates to Fort Wayne on Oct. 4, 5, 6 and 7 the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad will sell excursion tickets to Fort Wayne and return at one fair for the round trip. Good for return until Oct. 8, incusive.

—About twenty of the young soldiers met with the G. A. R. veterans in their hall last evening, and all had a good time in a social way. A similar meeting will be held there next Monday evening, which is to be conducted by Company K.

—Chicago women can vote for four candidates for state offices this year—the superintendent of public instruction, three trustees of state university and also for a candidate for county superintendent of schools. A special ballot will be furnished for this purpose.

—The Nappanee News says that "at Onionville, John Hurst is just completing a cold storage building 70x26 feet that will hold about 10,000 bushels of onions. He will fill it in a short time from his immense crop which he has himself grown and which has been grown for him on the shares."

—It is expected that Fort Wayne will have a union station at least for the main lines of the south side. It is to be where the Pennsylvania station now is. As the Wabash is just across the tracks, it will be easy for those two roads to unite. But it looks like a difficult thing to get the roads on the north side to change over.

—Rev. Geo. Engelman has gone to attend the National Synod of the Reformed church at Sheboygan, Wis., and will be gone about ten days. He will be here, however, Sunday, Oct. 9. His brother, who has been here several times while he was in charge of a church at Findlay, goes with him, and from there to a new location in Iowa.

—FOR SALE:—A large dark brown mare, seven years old, weight 1,400, kind and gentle disposition, will work anywhere, a fine family horse. She is a beauty. Also your last chance to buy thorough-bred Scotch Collie puppies from the best strains. At home after school hours. South high school building, Auburn, Ind.

39 40 W. H. ZIGLER.

—O. W. Binder, the skilled plumber who has started business in the Sheets building on the corner of Ninth and Cedar streets, is from Fort Wayne, and a master of his business. He will soon have his room fitted up to show his goods. Plumbing of all kinds, furnish and putting in sinks, bath tubs, etc., will be done on short notice. Call over there and see him.

EAST UNION.

Miss Ollie Crooks, of near Waterloo, was the gues of Miss Bertha Metcalf over Sunday.

Mrs. George Deer, and daughter Grace, of Fremont, Ohio, reached here last Saturday, on a visit with relatives and friends, the former is a sister of Mrs. J. W. Metcalf of this place.

Miss Bertha Metcalf has been suffering with a slight cold for the past week.

Sam Pomeroy, of this place drove to Butler on Thursday of the fair he reports a fair crowd for the weather.

John Bunge while working at Mort Wilson's new granary had the misfortune to cut his limb with the broad-ax. It is nothing very dangerous we are glad to hear.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Metcalf spent Sunday with Emmet Kosht and wife.

When Mark Twain Felt Embarrassed.

When Mark Twain was first introduced to General Grant the latte shook hands in a perfunctory manner and immediately relapsed into his customary attitude of reticence. There was an awkward pause; it grew longer and as the humorist tried to think of something bright to say. Finally, as if in sheer desperation, Twain looked up with an assumed air of great timidity, and said: "Mr. President, I—I feel a little bit embarrassed. Do you?" The President could not help smiling, and Mark took advantage of the chance the incident presented to give place to others.

Ten years later, when statesman and humorist met again, General Grant, with a twinkle in his eye, said, before Twain had the chance to utter a word: "Mr. Clemens, I don't feel at all embarrassed. Do yon?"—October Ladies' Home Journal.

C. J. Coats.

C. J. Coats was brought here last evening and remained at the Swineford house over night and was this forenoon taken to Longcliff asylum at Logansport. J. H. Rose and Mr. Coats' brother in-law, Mr. Shepard of Hicksville, had gone to Oxford, Ohio, where Mr. Coats had been taken for treatment soon after his health failed. They found him still in bad shape, and he was in such a mental condition that it was necessary to take him to an insane asylum, where the care and treatment are such that it is hoped his health may be restored in time. So the two gentlemen named went with him on the west bound fast train over the Wabash. He is at times almost unmanageable. It appear that his condition is not due to softening of the brain, but to a vitiated condition of the blood, due to imperfect digestion, or some such cause. Mr. Coats has many friends all over the county, who will sympathize with him in his unfortunate condition and hope for his full recovery.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

'TIS A DEMOCRATIC YEAR.

This is a Democratic year. Republicans fear it; Democrats know it. Republicans who are not apathetic are demoralized, Vermont and Maine have caused thrills of apprehension among the leaders of the grand old party.

"Slain in the house of a friend" is the verdict on the mortality caused by the action of the voters in the two great citadels of Republican politics. Alger is too heavy a load. Hanna weighs on the party like an incubus. McKinley is blown about by every wind of doctrine and panic threatens to ensue.

Democrats will undoubtedly control the next House of Representatives. The probable status of affairs may be tabulated as follows:

PRESENT HOUSE.

Democrats	130
Republicans	202
Populists	21
Fusionists	1
Silver party	3
Republican majority	47

PROBABLE NEXT HOUSE.

Democrats	167
Republicans	129
Fusion	26
Doubtful	32

Should the Republicans manage to elect every one in the doubtful list they would still have eighteen less than a majority in the House.

Reports from many districts now represented by Republicans give the most flattering indications of Democratic success. Indeed, the members of the national Democratic Congressional Committee at Washington are highly pleased with the outlook and find that their most liberal estimate gives the Republicans but 134 members in the next House, thirty-five less than a majority.

Truly, this is a Democratic year. But that should not cause Democrats to slacken in their labors. It should encourage them to renewed efforts and stir them to the most vigorous action.

"Honest Money."

The fundamental objection to free coinage in this country has been and is that it is "dishonest." The "market price" of silver is less than 60 cents an ounce, and the coinage rate at 16 to 1 is $1.29.

It is claimed that the dishonesty of coining 60 cents' worth of silver into twice as much money is too clear to require any argument.

The same contention has been made right along whether silver was worth 60, 70, 80, 90 or 100 cents per ounce.

It has always been dishonest, according to gold standard reasoning, to coin it at any higher rate than the market price.

This, of course, excludes the coinage use of the metal as an element in its value, and assumes that silver will be worth no more with the American mint open, thus creating an enormous demand for it, than it is now with the mint closed and silver deprived of that demand.

Laying aside this palpable absurdity, there are a few simple questions we would like to propound:

First, if to lower the value of money below the gold level, or to coin silver at a rate above its market value in gold, is dishonest in America, it is not equally dishonest everywhere?

What, then, has the gold advocate to say of the action of Japan in reducing the weight of the gold yen one-half and establishing the gold standard on the basis of what has been called in this country a "50-cent" silver dollar? Have we heard any outcry from that source about the "dishonesty" of Japan?

Russia has acted in a similar way. She has reduced the weight of her gold coins so that the quantity of gold which formerly made ten rubles will now make fifteen. Have the gold men indulged in any denunciation of the "dishonesty" of such action on the part of Russia?—National Bimetallist.

Alger's Belief in Himself.

Secretary Alger may see nothing wrong in the management of the war department—men of his small caliber are always satisfied with their own doings—but President McKinley, who is responsible for him, ought not to add another blunder to that of his selection for the cabinet by accepting as correct his own estimate of himself.

Alger needs investigation and if the President's friendship for him is so great that he cannot order it and see that it is thorough and impartial, then he should call Congress in extra session at once and let that body appoint a committee in whom the country will have confidence.

There are ugly stories afloat, not only about political "pulls" having secured the appointment of incompetent men to positions of responsibility in the war department, but about influences being at work of a much more serious and disgraceful character. These should be searched into, and if there is any truth in them somebody should surely go to jail.

Alger is conceited enough to think that his perfunctory strutting around the camp at Montauk Point for a few hours and talking loudly about what "I" have done and about what "I" will do is going to be accepted by the public as a thorough vindication of himself, and as a spectacle before which the hundreds of needless dead and the thousands of needlessly ill are bound to be forgotten. If President McKinley agrees with him then there are breakers ahead for him and his party such as were not dreamed of when the war with Spain began.—New York Times.

Too Much Hanna.

There is going to be a popular revolt against Hanna. Too much Hanna has resulted in too much Alger, and too much Alger has caused disease, starvation and death among the soldiers who went forth brave and strong to fight the Spaniards and to defend the stars and stripes. Public patience has been tried to its very limit. Corrupt political bosses have ruled the Republican administration. The most shameful appointments have been made to official position both in civil and military circles. Such a conduct of affairs must inevitably bring about but one result—popular revolt.

Hanna has flaunted his gross commercialism in the face of patriotism. He has "conciliated with an ax" and has forgotten there is no truer saying than this: "He who lives by the sword shall perish by the sword." Mark Hanna has not yet been overthrown. He still retains power to force the Republican administration into acts which will end in its destruction. But the reign of Hanna is nearly ended, and when he falls the Republican party will fall with him.

The Silver Issue.

It is now so certain that the Democratic party at the election of 1900 will stand by the Chicago platform of 1896, and reaffirm it, that a refusal on the part of any local or State organizations of the party to distinctly approve of that platform would be worse than folly. Any one who advocates such a course—who prates of ignoring national questions and conciliating unfaithful leaders—must be desirous of Democratic defeat. He must wish to introduce discrepancy and confusion into our councils. He must desire to divide the party upon issues concerning which a national convention, and also our regular State convention of 1896, have announced their deliberate declarations, and which declarations are as certain to be reaffirmed for future political contests as such political contests are to occur. He may utter such pretenses as he chooses of a desire to strengthen the party, but he must be aware that his policy would fatally weaken it.

Behind the Democratic organization in every State stands a vast body of voters who will abandon it if it abandons its principles. If the Democratic party fails to stand for the free and unlimited coinage of silver, they will find one that will. If the Democratic party fails to sustain the gold and silver coin of the Constitution—the silver dollar of the days of George Washington—another party will adopt the war-cry and welcome them. By advocating silver coinage the Democrats lost a very few thousands votes two years ago, and by ceasing to advocate it now it would lose millions and go into a minority for a generation.

History is full of examples of disappointed and selfish leaders who have proved unfaithful to their friends and followers. The only thing for the rank and file to do in such case is to let them go. We have waited for two years for the men who bolted from us, and helped elect McKinley, to return to duty. Patience is exhausted, and those who are not with us must be reckoned to be against us.—New York News.

Wheat at 64 Cents.

How do our Republican brethren think the price of wheat and the price of silver coincide nowadays, say since Leiter's wheat corner collapsed? We dislike very much to refer to this painful subject, but our anxiety to print the truth as it is compels us to make a suggestion along that line occasionally.

Last winter when wheat was selling at $1.40 a Democrat hardly dared say wheat and silver. The Republicans laughed lustily and loudly. They still laugh, but it is out of the other end of their mouths. Wheat at 64 cents is not nearly as funny as at $1.50. Wheat and silver do not travel together, according to the Republican theory, but you can't tell a thing about a Republican. They are all such jokers.

Last spring they had all the elections carried on the $1.50 wheat deal. Democrats were despondent, but only temporarily, because anybody that knew enough to come in when it rained knew that wheat was high because of the unusual foreign demand and because Joe Leiter had it cornered. Free silver had nothing to do with wheat last year. How is it now?

We are willing to concede that the price of wheat is regulated by supply and demand. Probably free silver or a single gold standard has nothing to do with it. We don't know and don't care. Wheat was high last winter because Europe had none, and it is cheap now because it is plenty everywhere. Granting that proposition also proves the other, viz., that silver is cheap when not used and high when given an equal chance with gold. Wheat has not been kind to the Republican party. It has come down ker-plunk when for political purposes it ought really to have been sky high.—Washington (In.) Democrat.

Vermont and Silver.

There are other things besides the failure of the war department which the Republicans will have to investigate. One of these things is the slump in the Republican vote in Vermont. In that state the contest was between silver and gold. The Republicans advocated the gold standard, while the Democrats stood solidly on the Chicago platform and spoke and voted for free silver. There was a spirited contest, and the returns show that the Republicans suffered great losses, while the Democrats made substantial and surprising gains. At the election which preceded the one under discussion the Democrats secured but eleven representatives; now they have thirty-three. It is needless to say that the Republicans of Vermont are demoralized.

Sham Investigation.

No wonder that a large per cent. of the investigating commission appointed by President McKinley would not consent to serve. When it is understood that the commissioners will have to pay their own salaries and bear their own expenses, and that they will have no authority to summon, swear or examine witnesses, the disinclination of these appointed to serve is fully explained.

Of what use would an investigation prove when all of its witnesses must come forward of their own accord and volunteer their testimony in the case? What would that testimony prove when it would be given without the sanction of an oath? Army officers would not testify before such a commission. They might desire to have the truth known concerning the incompetence, carelessness and cruelty of the commissary department, for instance, but they would not put themselves in the position of tale-bearers. McKinley's commission appears to be a very inadequate method of securing the facts desired. The administration is facing a crisis and it is meeting the emergency in a shuffling, ineffective and cowardly manner.

If the President desires to save his party from utter defeat and ruin he will take hold of this investigation with sincerity and force. The people are in no mood to accept excuses, nor will they be satisfied with a sham commission, bereft of all power to do effective work.

Gov. Tanner's $2 Shave.

When Governor Tanner went down to Golconda and sought to divert attention from himself and the issues with which his name is associated by crying "Thief!" at the Altgeld administration he pursued the tactics best calculated to bring his own record into public review. That speech has had the effect of rousing ex-Governor Altgeld, who promises to give the Tanner administration a very thorough reviewing before the public in due time. Just as a beginning he told how Tanner gets himself shaved at the expense of the state. He says one Herman Gaa, a barber in the Leland Hotel barber shop, was put on the state house rolls as a janitor at $2 a day, and that his sole duties in that capacity consisted in shaving the governor, thus making the chief executive's shaves cost the state $2 apiece. Governor Tanner asserts that he paid Gaa extra for the service rendered in shaving him. Altgeld says Gaa performed no service but to shave the governor, and if that service was paid for extra what did Gaa do to entitle him to draw money from the state treasury? It will strike some people as queer that the governor of Illinois should employ a janitor to shave him, but perhaps that is due to Tanner's simple, unaffected ways.

The number of men whose names are on the pay rolls as janitors is so large that there cannot possibly be anything for all of them to do at the state house. This is a scandal, and the Tanner-Altgeld controversy will be productive of good if it leads to the abatement of the evil.—Chicago Record.

Iowa Democracy.

The Populists and Silver Republicans of Iowa indorsed the Democratic State ticket, and the probability of a triumph over the Administration party in the November election is very great. The platform of the National Democratic convention adopted at Chicago in 1896 was unequivocally reaffirmed, and the policy of free silver coinage, without awaiting the consent of the government of Great Britain, was declared. The platform also indorses W. J. Bryan for leader in 1900, upholds the commencement of the war with Spain, but scores Secretary Alger and the national administration for the conduct of hospital and camps. The election in Iowa in 1896 went heavily for the McKinley electors, the Populists having declined to support the Democratic ticket. Last year, however, they united with the Democrats, and the Republican majority consequently fell to less than half. With the aid of the large contingent of Silver Republicans who have since joined them, our friends expect still better fortune this year.—New York News.

Maine Republicans.

Maine has returned Speaker Reed to Congress with a marked falling off in the Republican vote. Lewellyn Powers was re-elected governor by a plurality of about 27,000, whereas two years ago he went into office with a plurality of 42,000. The decrease in the Republican vote is discouraging to the party in power and explanations and excuses are now in order. Reed's constituents showed a lack of interest in their candidate and the result was a decrease of 4,000 votes in his usual majority.

Analyzing the vote, it becomes apparent that the Republicans have lost 21 per cent., which is much more than the normal loss shown in an "off year." Such a thing as a Democratic victory in Maine is not to be expected, but Democrats can find encouragement in the showing of the polls because it demonstrates that many thoughtful Republicans have become disgusted with the administration and have refused to give it the seal of their approval.

Horrors After the War.

If there was only a lull in the painful proceedings and if there was only a promise of better management and results to come we would be patient, but there are no such signs descernible—the horizon is still as black as night. Still come into port the transports from the South, each with its addition to the court of criminal culpability on the part of someone in authority, each with the same indictment of bad water, decayed and unsuitable rations and insufficient medical attendance.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Democratic Policy.

Whatever the reason, the growth of public opinion in favor of municipal ownership generally has for the last half dozen years been steady and rapid—and in spite of the general opposition of the newspapers, not a few of which have been retained as special advocates of the private corporation. And this, in itself, is strongly suggestive that this change in public opinion is based on solid grounds.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Commissions Badly Distributed.

If the government had made the officers of the regular army the arbiters of the distribution of commissions, as they did in the case of the navy, the glaring incompetence which is now throwing shame on our entire military establishment would never have had power to work evil. The officers of the regular army would have seen to it that only men properly qualified had commissions.—New York Times.

New Salutation in Ohio.

The situation among the Ohio Republican politicians now is: "Good morning; is John Sherman hot enough for you?"—Dallas (Tex.) News.

One Such Experience Enough.

The present administration would not be able to raise another volunteer army so easily.—Wheeling Register.

HOW A SHELL DOES ITS WORK.

Murderous Effect of Modern Shrapnel—No More Round Solid Shot.

Not one man in a thousand who talks and hears about "shelling" the enemy has any but the vaguest idea of how shelling is done, either with reference to the gun or the shell. Old soldiers can tell something about the operation, but their knowledge is confined to the round shot of the civil war, a projectile which is not used at all now, having been displaced by the conical projectile. Indeed, the man who had a fair knowledge of artillery ten years ago and has not kept place with the advance in the art of war cannot have a clear idea of the modern gun and projectile.

The deadliest shell known is the shrapnel, which was used with such frightful efficacy in Cuba, and which was named from its inventor, Colonel Shrapnel of the British army, who devised it in 1803. In brief, it is a hollow projectile filled with lead balls, which are scattered by an explosion caused either by a time fuse or by a percussion fuse, or by both, in a combination fuse. The head and base of the shell are of cast iron. The fuse is placed in either end, and in the larger shells it is inserted usually in the base. A five-inch shrapnel contains 280 half-inch balls and altogether 344 separate pieces. The shell itself, with all it contains, furnishes over 550 implements of death. It is effective at a range of two miles, and its area of effectiveness is about thirty by forty feet. The missiles have enough penetrative power to use up any man or men within that area. They travel in a straight line and at the rate of a half mile in a second.

In the civil war a soldier under fire could actually see the shells in the air, and could often dodge them successfully; but one could no more dodge the shell of to-day than he could get out of the way of a stroke of lightning. On striking armor, the shell and the armor become red hot, and a sheet of flame bursts forth. A shell bursting near a man tears his clothes off, merely from the windage. If it comes very near, but doesn't touch him, it will kill him from the shock.

MODERN SHRAPNEL.

A MILLIONAIRE NURSE.

How Margaret Astor Chanler Devoted Herself to Our Soldier Sick.

Miss Margaret Astor Chanler furnishes in herself but another splendid example of the patriotism of our much-derided millionaires. From the beginning of the war her wealth and her services have been devoted to the cause of the United States. She is a great-great-granddaughter of the original John Jacob Astor and has an income of over $30,000 a year, besides possessing a splendid mansion in New York city. She volunteered as a Red Cross nurse and established a hospital in Porto Rico. This she accomplished by renting a commodious house from a widow, who did not know the use to which her dwelling would be put. When she saw the ambulances rolling up, however, the widow remonstrated and tried to dispossess Miss Chanler. She was placated by an increase in rent, which the founder of the hospital cheerfully paid.

MARGARET ASTOR CHANLER.

When the hospital filled up with fever patients Miss Chandler went to work and nursed them, sometimes without help, until they were out of danger.

THE NEW PRINCE BISMARCK.

Herbert Has His Father's Gruffness, but Lacks His Ability.

Herbert Von Bismarck, who succeeds his father in the title of prince and owner of Friedrichsruhe, is not an agreeable man. It is said of him "that he rather likes to make enemies." Still, if Herbert were not the son of his great father, he might be better appreciated. The old prince had a very high opinion of his son Herbert, who, it must be granted, had the very best chances for becoming a great man; but neither the three emperors nor any one of the dozens of ministers under whom and with whom Count Herbert served agreed with the Iron Chancellor's estimate.

As a matter of fact, only some of the disagreable traits in the late Prince Bismarck's character seem to live in his oldest son. Prince Herbert, for instance, is as formidable a hater as Prince Otto was.

Herbert's friendship for the Kaiser changed to bitter hatred when William II. requested the chancellor's resignation; and, despite all the Kaiser has done since to atone for his action, Herbert is still sulking. When William came to Friedrichsruhe on the day of the funeral the new prince allowed himself to be kissed and fondled by his majesty, but at the same time refused to indorse William's grandiloquent plans for honoring the illustrious dead. Otto Bismarck had decided to brand Kaiser Wilhelm an ingrate, and Herbert Bismarck perpetuates his sire's anger beyond the grave.

DIED FOR HIS COUNTRY.

William Tiffany, of Roosevelt's Regiment and His Sad Demise.

William Tiffany, first lieutenant in Roosevelt's regiment of rough riders, who died in Boston, of exhaustion and want of nourishment while at Santiago, was one of the best known of the young men in New York. He was the son of George Tiffany, the jeweler, and a grandson of Commodore Perry, who won the famous battle of Lake Erie during the war of 1812. When the rough riders were organized young Tiffany was one of those who enlisted. He began as a private, then rose by pure merit to corporal, and later was a sergeant when the bloody charges of the rough riders were made near Santiago. His bravery in these fights won him his commission as second lieutenant, and afterward as first lieutenant when the vacancies caused by death of other heroes had to be filled. Tiffany came home with the rough riders and was landed at Montauk Point, but in view of his enfeebled health, due to the privations incident to his military life, it was thought he could receive better treatment at the hotel in Boston. There he was nursed by his mother, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Perry Belmont, and his affianced, Miss Maud Livingston of New York, but the best of care was not sufficient to bring back his health.

An Emperor's Job.

The Emperor of Austria rises at 4:30 in the morning, shaves himself and gets to work at 5:30 o'clock. At midday he eats a plain luncheon. Dinner is the only substantial meal during the day, which consists of six courses, and when he is alone he takes it at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Robust Shelbyville Woman Attempts to Abduct a Man—Soldiers' Widow Loses $375 Pension Money—Acquitted of Murder Charge.

At Shelbyville, Mrs. Walter Nading instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, naming Miss Ruby Clark as co-respondent, and asking $10,000 alimony. Nading, it is said, continued visiting Miss Clark until one morning, when he took a train for Flat Rock, where his wife is staying with her parents. Miss Clark, learning of his action, secured a livery rig and started for Flat Rock. On reaching there she entered the house where Nading was attempting a reconciliation with his wife, and, he being small of stature and she very large and robust, she deliberately picked him up, placed him in the buggy and was starting away with him when interrupted by friends of Mrs. Nading, whose husband was torn away from the attempted abductress and returned to her. Mrs. Nading will withdraw her suit.

Robbers Get Pension Money.

Some time ago Mary Nugent, residing ten miles north of Shelbyville, was allowed back pension by the Government, and the other night her home was visited by robbers. Her 18-year-old son John was called to the yard and tied to a tree, while two men entered the house with revolvers, making the mother reveal the hiding place of $375 in gold, her only possession. The son had attended the State fair at Indianapolis and talked of his mother's wealth.

Acquitted of Murder Charge.

At Michigan City, after seven days of evidence in the Superior Court the jury in the case of the State against Barney Dolan, an ex-policeman, who on April 4, in attempting to arrest Harry Wilson, hit him with a mace, causing his death, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Verdict for $40,000.

A $40,000 verdict was given in the Circuit Court at Peru to Dennis Uhl and James McNitt against the State National Bank of Logansport. The money had been loaned to President John F. Johnson, who wrecked the bank and is now in the Columbus, Ohio, penitentiary.

Within Our Borders.

William Newberry, shot at a dance a few months ago, is dead at Osgood.

At Jeffersonville, Eli Clarkson, colored, stabbed Samuel Phillips, who will die, and escaped.

Samuel Swarner of Jay County died from being kicked by a horse at Gettysburg, Ohio.

James G. Blythe, ex-cashier of the Citizens' National Bank, Delphi, took his life by hanging.

David Hill of Frankfort has been appointed a deputy collector of internal revenue by Collector Henry.

Charles Roach, a ticket seller at the Terre Haute race track, fell dead from heart disease while selling a ticket.

a corn cutter, when he fell directly in front of the machine. He was badly mangled by the knives, but may recover.

The old settlers of Wayne, Fayette and Henry counties held a reunion in the grove of Elias Simmons, near Dublin.

Robbers blew open the safe in the Big Four passenger station at New Paris while the agent was at dinner, securing $100.

It is now a certainty that no saloon will be located in the town of Dublin. William E. Beal has withdrawn his application for a license.

The Eastern Star Chapter of Elwood gave a tri-county social affair, the chapters of Alexandria, Tipton, Kokomo, Frankton and Anderson being present.

The Christian Church at Griffin was dedicated by Rev. L. L. Carpenter of Wabash. Rev. Carpenter raised considerably more than was necessary to pay all debts.

Samuel Phillips, colored, a well-known colored man of Jeffersonville, was fatally stabbed by Eli Clarkson. The trouble occurred at Cementville. The dagger penetrated the lung.

At Marion, Englehart C. Lauer sued Alice Pittman, a charming young woman, for $2,500 because she promised to marry him and then later changed her mind and married Jacob Fox, another young man.

Miss Anna Swiney, a woman dentist at Greenville, was fined $25 and costs for whipping Columbus Skelton, a very aged man, in front of the village postoffice. It is alleged that Skelton circulated letters concerning her character.

Wheeler's saloon at Anderson was demolished inside and out by a mob which assailed it at 2 o'clock the other morning. The assault is said to have been made by temperance women. The suburb is without police protection. It is claimed that Wheeler has been running the place on Sundays and after hours.

A year ago the Peru City Council reduced the rates of natural gas for fuel one-third. The company, which is a branch of the great Diedrich syndicate of New York, applied for an injunction against the enforcement of the ordinance. Action has since been pending and a decision in favor of the city has recently been announced.

The residence of William Payne at Martinsville was burglarized the other night. His watch was taken and his chain left hanging to his vest. John W. Lewis, a well-to-do trader, who drew $1,100 from bank, also had a visit from burglars. He had fortunately paid out his money. His suspenders, tobacco and a small amount of change were taken by the robbers. Conductor H. S. Turner's residence was also visited by the "grafters."

At Laporte, Robert Buck & Son's furniture factory wareroom and a large quantity of lumber were destroyed by fire. Loss $25,000, insurance $7,500.

Work has just begun in Madison County on fifty new wells for the Indianapolis Gas Trust Company. Most of them are located in the north part of the county. The Indiana-Ohio Natural Gas Company, which supplies fourteen Ohio cities with natural gas, has begun work on forty new wells. The Fort Wayne, Frankfort, Lebanon, Connersville, Lafayette and many other pipe line companies will all drill from five to twenty-five wells this fall.

Clifford, the 6-year-old son of Felix Blackman, living nine miles northwest of Marion, was riding the horse hitched to C. F. Springer, representing the United States Steel Casting Company, has been in Marion for the purpose of locating a steel plant which will cost $100,000 and will employ 600 men.

Millions of False Teeth.

According to statistics from New York about 4,000,000 false teeth are manufactured annually in the United States, which use one ton of gold and three tons of silver and platinum, to the value of $100,000, used in stopping teeth.

FELL FROM A SCAFFOLD.

From the Herald, Watertown, N. Y.

John Young, of Le Roy, N. Y., is 72 years old, and is well known in that and neighboring towns. While putting some weather boards on a barn, standing on a scaffold twenty-two feet from the ground, he felt dizzy, lost his balance and fell to the ground. The side of his face, arm and one entire side of his body, on which he struck, were badly bruised. Picked up and carried to the house, he was under a doctor's care for several weeks. The doctor finally came to the conclusion that his patient had received a stroke of paralysis and was beyond medical aid. He could not use one arm, or turn over in bed.

Paralyzed by the Fall.

One day, while lying on the bed, he read of a case something like his having been cured with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He coaxed his granddaughter to get him a box of the pills. After that box had been used he secured another. In three weeks he began to feel a little life in his arm; at the end of four he could move his fingers; at the end of two months he could walk, and in three months he could shave himself with the injured hand.

As he told his story in the Herald office, he looked the perfect picture of health. He carries a box of the pills in his pocket, and whenever he does not feel just right he takes them. They cured him after doctors had given him up, and his death was daily expected.

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female.

HOW IT ALL HAPPENED.

Willing Girl Helped Him Through a Roundabout Proposal.

He was in doubt.

There was no particular reason why he should be in doubt, but, of course, that has nothing to do with the case. Up to a certain point in the courtship it is the privilege of every lover to be in doubt, and if he were not we would be tempted to believe that something was wrong.

On this particular evening he made up his mind that he would reach the point where doubt ends or know the reason why.

Thus it happened that he got a little closer to her than usual when he found that they were sitting side by side on the sofa.

"Do you ever think about marriage?" he asked.

"No," she replied.

Of course that was a lie. Of course he knew that it was a lie and she knew that he knew it. Consequently she wished that she hadn't answered so hastily; but that is so customary in a woman that it should attract no attention.

"If I were a woman like you," he said, reproachfully, "I would think of it."

"Would you?" she inquired carelessly.

"Yes, I would," he asserted, aggressively.

"Perhaps," she suggested, tantalizingly, "you wouldn't mind telling me just what course your thoughts would take—if you were a woman like me."

"I don't know that I can give the exact course of reasoning," he answered, fearful that he might be getting beyond his depth, "but if I were a woman like you I feel pretty reasonably sure that I would marry a man like—er—like me."

"You do?" she said, coloring a little, but still speaking in the same tantalizing tone.

"Yes, I do," he returned, doggedly.

"Well, if I were a man like you," she asserted, "I wouldn't expect a woman like me to do anything of the sort until a man like you had asked her to."

Skull Painting.

A strange custom, dating back to the dark ages, has survived in some of the mountain districts in Austria—the painting of skulls. The small size of most cemeteries in those regions makes it necessary to regularly remove the skeletons of the buried who have lain there eight or ten years, to make room for newcomers. The relatives of the dead thus exhumed are generally notified before the removal, so that they can attend to the cleaning of the skeleton and be present at its deposit in the so-called "bonehouse" or "charnel-house." On such occasions the skull is often ornamented with paintings, or it is marked with the name of the dead person.

THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS

is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. Bloodthirsty Colored Gentlemen Who Failed to Get Together.

Two flashy colored boys stood in the hot sun in front of the railway eating house and looked at each other with their eyes rolled sideways. "Look hyah, you piece o' dahk meat, I got some bone-handled trouble in my pocket waitin' faw you if you eveh come 'round that baby tryin' to undamine me!"

"Slow up, boy! You's on a slippery road, an' if you don't drive calkful you going to fall right in dat ditch, fus thing you knows."

"Don't get me stahted, coon! Don't 'rouse me! I wouldn't like to do it, but I could jus' lay hold of you' dahk body and cut it up into rubbah balls. I ain't used that razah faw whole week now, an' it's gettin' uneasy. I can feel it movin' in my pocket an' sayin', 'Mistah, let me get out an' do someping.'"

"Look heah, you bettah sing dat razah to sleep, 'kase you evah reach faw it you jes' see whole atmosphere full o' niggah wool, striped shirt, and blue cloze. Yes, seh, you'd have to be geth'd up in a basket. I got a piece o' shiny hardwaih in my pocket, an' it sings sweet an' low, and ev'y time it speaks to you it han's you a pound o' lead. Look out faw me, boy!"

"Hush, coon, I really love trouble."

"Don't staht nothin' 'less you want to lose money faw yo' folks. Costs money to plant a coon, yes, seh. You don't get dem silvah-handled boxes faw nothin', no, seh. Got any of dem papah cigahs, Henry?"

Henry reached for his package of cigarettes, and the traveler, who had been waiting to see murder done, gave an exclamation of disgust and walked into the railway station.—Haberdasher.

PRACTICAL KINDNESS.

One Hundred Thousand Grateful Soldiers.

These war times have tried men's souls in many unexpected ways, but like a shaft of sunshine and good cheer out of the cloud of privation and endurance has been the work that The American Tobacco Co. has done among the U. S. soldiers and sailors ever since the war began—for when they discovered that the camps and hospitals were not supplied with tobacco they decided to provide them, free of cost, with enough for every man, and have already given outright to our soldiers and sailors over one hundred thousand pounds of "Battle Ax Plug" and "Duke's Mixture" Smoking Tobacco, and have bought and distributed fifty thousand briar wood pipes, at a total cost of between fifty and sixty thousand dollars.

This work has been done quietly and thoroughly, by establishing headquarters in each camp so that every camp and every hospital of the United States army has been supplied with enough tobacco for every man and the sailors on thirty United States ships in Cuban waters have shared with the soldiers this most welcome of all "rations."

Perhaps it will be only fair to remember when we hear the remark again that "corporations have no souls," that there is one American corporation whose soul has been tried and has not been found wanting in "practical kindness."

The World's Largest Libraries.

The largest library in the world is the National Library in Paris, containing more than 2,000,000 printed volumes and about 200,000 manuscripts. The British Museum has a collection of about 1,500,000 volumes, and exceeds the St. Petersburg Imperial Library only by 12,000 volumes. The Royal Library at Munich contains about 900,000 printed works, and it is exceptionally rich in pamphlets, while the Berlin Royal Library has 800,000 volumes, that of Copenhagen 510,000, that of Dresden and the University Library at Gottingen each have 500,000. The Imperial Library at Vienna has 400,000, while the University Library in the same metropolis has 370,000.

Suburban Sociability.

"Our cook is gone again."

"What was the matter?"

"She said she got lonesome while my wife was taking her afternoon nap."

Largest Safe in the World.

The highest, if not actually the largest, safe in the world has been constructed in Liverpool by a well-known safe manufacturing firm for a bank in Scotland. It is a steel structure, quite as big as many a cottage, or even a house. It is built in two stories, and is in height rather more than seventeen feet. Its other measurements are: Depth, fifteen feet; width, thirteen feet. The whole is divided off into rooms or chambers of a fair size. This enormous safe is to stand in a large room, its bottom resting on steel girders. It is believed that this kind of a safe is immensely superior to chambers or vaults built of stone, having fireproof and burglar-proof doors, because all such vaults can be undermined, as has actually happened in more than one instance. As this safe stands free of the ground, it is, of course, quite impossible that it can be entered by any process of undermining without detection.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Grading and paving a street results in as much bitterness as a church quarrel.

DRIVEN MAD BY TORTURE.

Frightful Practices in Saghalien, Russia's Penal Settlement.

The presence of a batch of convicts in Odessa, Russia, for deportation to Saghalien has occasioned the publication of various accounts of the treatment received by the prisoners in that island, and if the numerous stories are true Saghalien must be a veritable inferno. Eye-witnesses relate that a common sight is that of shackled human beings yoked to a huge cart whose weight tries the strength of their undersfed bodies to the uttermost.

These men are demoralized by the brutality of their surroundings and the cruelty of the officials, who are ever ready to have recourse to the knout to enforce submission. An attempt to escape is punished with ten years' extra imprisonment, and it needs only one or two failures to break away to bring about an unfortunate prisoner's residence in this "slough of despond." One form of treatment is the coupling of the shackles which ensheath a prisoner's ankles to a wheelbarrow. This the victim must drag night and day for months perhaps till the iron inflames the flesh and the legs mortify. His comrades may mercifully soak the feet and forcibly pull off the bands—a process which is attended with the most excruciating agony, but which is eagerly borne.

The knouting of a man is a scene of incredible barbarity. The victim is mounted on a specially constructed wooden horse, and his back is bared. The scourge is applied with such violence that at each stroke pieces of flesh are torn away and the blood from the wounds bespatters the face of the executioner.

Such is the horror of Saghalien that men and women go mad and lunatics are to be found hiding in quiet places. All the women are more or less demented. Their lot is peculiarly unhappy. They are given to the bachelor convicts—men whom for the most part they have never seen before. Even those who are not convicts lose their reason, as witness the story of Mlle. Naumofa. This lady had devoted her life to the rescue of children in this unhappy spot, and for years had spread a light and comfort around her, but in a paroxysm of madness induced by the soul-torturing surroundings, shot herself. Her work was taken up by three older ladies; one of these shot herself, the second went raving mad and the third married a warder.—London News.

Dahlia a Popular Flower.

The dahlia, named after the famous Swedish botanist Dahl, appeared early in this century, and was as popular in the flower garden as were the camellias and fuchsias in the greenhouses, and still holds its own. This plant, which is a native of Mexico, was practically introduced into England by Lady Holland in 1804, as it had been lost since its first appearance some fifteen years previously, when Lady Bute imported it from Spain. During the first forty years of its popularity double dahlias were all the fashion, and since then the single varieties have had their day, while at the present time the new cactus kinds hold the foremost place. A florist writing about 1830 compared the fashion for dahlias, which was then at its height, to the tulip mania two centuries earlier, and, although the comparison is hardly correct, it shows the dahlia craze must have been very marked to have even suggested it.—Longman's Magazine.

How Denmark Treats Her Poor.

Denmark makes a clear distinction between the thriftless and the respectable poor. The former are treated like English paupers. The latter never cross a workhouse threshold. If destitute, they receive a pension ranging from $14 to $84 a year; or, if too feeble to look after themselves, they are placed in an old-age home.

Improved Twenty-five Per Cent.

The Wall Street Journal, published by Dow, Jones & Co., New York, has the following to say regarding recent improvements on the WABASH:

"It is a conservative estimate to place the improvements of the physical condition of the WABASH at twenty-five per cent. during the past year. This statement is based on two trips which your correspondent has made over the road. The condition of the road-bed of the WABASH is equal at present to any road in the West, if not superior."

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS TO THE FUTURE WOMAN.

Will the New Generation of Women be More Beautiful or Less So? Miss Jessie Ebner's Experience.

A pleasing face and graceful figure! These are acquirements that widen the sphere of woman's usefulness. How can a woman have grace of movement when she is suffering from some disorder that gives her those awful bearing-down sensations? How can she retain her beautiful face when she is nervous and racked with pain?

Young women, think of your future and provide against ill health. Mothers, think of your growing daughter, and prevent in her as well as in yourself irregularity or suspension of nature's duties.

If puzzled, don't trust your own judgment. Mrs. Pinkham will charge you nothing for her advice; write to her at Lynn, Mass., and she will tell you how to make yourself healthy and strong.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound strengthens the female organs and regulates the menses as nothing else will. Following is a letter from Miss JESSIE EBNER, 1712 West Jefferson St., Sandusky, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit your remedies have been to me. I suffered for over a year with inflammation of the ovaries. I had doctored, but no medicine did me any good. Was at a sanatarium for two weeks. The doctor thought an operation necessary, but I made up my mind to give your medicine a trial before submitting to that. I was also troubled with leucorrhœa, painful menstruation, dizziness, nervousness, and was so weak that I was [illegible] to stand or walk. [illegible] taken in all several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now in good health. I will always give your medicine the highest praise."

Milch Goats.

The goat ought to do a great deal to relieve the scare which has been produced by the reports that we have been habitually drinking milk infected with the tubercle-bacillus, as it is said that very few cows are free from tubercle. In Sicily, Naples, Leghorn, Hyeres, Avignon, goat men go about from door to door and sell milk freshly drawn from the goats—a flock of ten or twelve goats. At Leghorn and at Avignon I myself have bought fresh goat's milk at the door. No doubt in many other continental towns a similar goat's milk trade is carried on. The English, however, are slow in quitting their usual groove, however advantageous and wholesome the quitting may be. Many years ago I suggested to the British Goat Society the advisability of importing some milch goats from Malta. I have nowhere seen finer milch goats than those of Veletta, taken round the streets, and the goats milked at the door of each house. The finest are white, with small ears, and pink udders, reaching almost to the ground. Comparatively speaking, they give a larger quantity of milk than cows, and the goats are much more economically fed than cows. In Calcutta there is a pretty small goat—a sort of toy goat—which gives good milk. The inhabitants prefer goat's milk with their tea to cow's milk, and those who have tried it think so also. Then on the highlands of Naples and Rome they have a milch sheep, from the milk of which the famous "Ricotta" (cream curds) is made.—London Spectator.

THREE HAPPY WOMEN.

Each Relieved of Periodic Pain and Backache. A Trio of Fervent Letters.

Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health was gradually being undermined. I suffered untold agony from painful menstruation, backache, pain on top of my head and ovarian trouble. I concluded to try Mrs. Pinkham's Compound, and found that it was all any woman needs who suffers with painful monthly periods. It entirely cured me.—Mrs. GEORGE WASS, 923 Bank St., Cincinnati, O.

For years I had suffered with painful menstruation every month. At the beginning of menstruation it was impossible for me to stand up for more than little book five minutes, I felt so miserable. One day a house, and some of Mrs. Pinkham's was thrown into my Lydia Liver Pills. I sat right down and read it. I then got a new woman; E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and past. I shall can heartily say that to-day I feel like for what it has my monthly suffering is a thing of the 363 Lisbon St. always praise the Vegetable Compound done for me.—Mrs. MARGARET ANDERSON, Lewiston, Me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of painful menstruation and backache. The pain in my back was dreadful, and the agony I suffered during menstruation nearly drove me wild.

Now this is all over, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine and advice.—Mrs. CARRIE V. WILLIAMS, South Mills, N. C.

The great volume of testimony proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safe, sure and almost infallible remedy in cases of irregularity, suppressed, excessive or painful monthly periods.

"The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year."

The Rough Riders.

Perhaps nothing has shown the wonderful adaptability of the average American more than the way in which the men of the greatest differences in training, birth, and condition, drawn with an impartial estimate of fitness from all over the country, and now composing the already historic "Rough Riders," have been able to sink every consideration of personal preference or habit to join heartily in the spirit of discipline and daring which has brought the troop to its present condition of effectiveness. From the cowboy, whose feats in the saddle have been the admiration of a border people who have known the Apaches, to the college man who has been cheered from the "bleachers" for his track athletics, we believe a large span may be fetched; but the unanimity of spirit and high patriotism prevailing throughout the troop has brought them together shoulder to shoulder, man to man. This is rarely fine, and preaches a whole religion for the success of what is best in our republic. When one inquires what centralizing force has been able to bring this singleness of aim about, the answer is unavoidably that it has been the convincing personality and charm of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Since Theodore Roosevelt graduated from Harvard in 1880 he has played many parts. In political life he has been a New York State Assemblyman, United States Civil Service Commissioner, Police Commissioner of New York City, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In literature he is well known as the author of several historical works, and descriptions and stories of Western frontier life.

When Roosevelt organized his troop the President offered to make him colonel, but he declined the commission. "I am not fitted to command a regiment," he said, "for I haxe had no military training. Later, after I have gained some experience, perhaps that may come." It has come now, and also recommendation for the medal of honor for gallant conduct in action.

Pictures of the Rough Riders and the other forces that took part in the siege of Santiago, from photographs taken during the engagement, will be found in the Santiago (July 30) Number of Harper's Weekly.

The Butler Fair

A hasty inspection yesterday showed the usual number of attractions to be found at a street fair. There was a fair sized crowd, for as is the case everywhere, people wait for Thursday, and because all do that, Thursday is a big day. The displays generally were good though not as numerous as on some previous occasions. In the Floral tent were fine specimens of needle work and articles made by the ladies, as well as many miscellaneous articles, all going to show, that the women of Butler and vicinity did much to make the fair. The stock exhibit was small but there was room under the big cover for twice as much. We saw some fine sheep and hogs, however. About the most complete display is in agricultural crops including fruit and vegetables. This is in charge of John Baxter, a farmer who seems to be posted on everything in that line. It was something of a surprise to see the fruit, especially, the fine peaches. Apples were scarce, but all other fruit was excellent and abundant. But the pumpkins and squashes took the palm. There was a squash that weighs 61½ pounds, a pumpkin weighing 62½ and another of 55 pounds. And right by the side of these monsters were some of the little pumpkins, called the "Hoosier." There were grains of all the common kinds, as well as millet, etc. On the streets there were displays of various lines of goods, hardware, dry goods, including the bicycles made thrre, etc. etc. Overhead was an arch, and a big gun boat, and all along both sides of the street were scores of stands for sale of peanuts, popcorn, peaches, lunch, etc., as well as many games and devices for catching nickels and dimes. Billy Stewart, the irrepressible and good natured, had a show, and at one side was the never failing merry-go-round, with a big dancing tent near by. There was a big shoot at the race track in which Romeo Tarney and Art Steele of Auburn were interested, and today was to have been the leading event of that line which would have drawn a big attendance of experts and friends of the game, had the weather been better. But the most of the fair depends for shelter on tents made of muslin, and no doubt this drizzly weather will interfere. It closes tomorrow, Friday evening.

Good Goods, Well Advertised.

Going the rounds of the press is an item stating that the Royal Baking Powder Company is the largest advertiser in America. Of course, the business itself must be an enormous one to justify so great an expenditure in publicity. There is no fallacy more dangerous than that success can be gained by advertising an article of indifferent merit. But, given an article of the highest quality like Royal Baking Powder, which when the housekeeper has once used she finds if she desires the best food she cannot do without, then the greatest measure of success is attained by keeping it continuously before the public. Great merit and good advertising are both essential to make a product a great success. The Royal Baking Powder possessing the first, its proprietors have wisely used the second, and the result is apparent throughout the land. The Royal company believe that there is no medium for advertising like the newspapers, since in these enlightened days everybody reads them.

TRIED THEM ALL.

The List Exhausted, a Specific for the Nerves at Last is Found in

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

We are apt to condemn all articles because similar ones prove worthless. Persons often reason; I have nervous prostration, St. Vitus' dance, spasms, rheumatism, can't sleep and am in a debilitating condition; have tried best physicians and most widely advertised remedies, but there is no cure for my case. No matter what your past experience may have been Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer will positively cure every case of nervous trouble—no failures. Here is expert evidence of that fact, Mr. J. H. Hutchings, Bancroft, Mich., for 20 years a successful druggist, tried every preparation he could hear of without benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured him. The following are his words, read them:

"I had a spinal trouble for years causing serious nervousness, sleeplessness and headache. Our night watchman can tell you how, many and many a night I have walked the streets for hours, hoping to tire myself to a condition of sleep. During these years I have tried nearly every remedy coming to my notice, with only a stupefying effect like morphine. The use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was an exception, its beneficial effects were prompt and lasting; I secured refreshing sleep, my nerves were strengthened and through them my health was restored. From observation and experience I believe Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer to be the best remedy for all nerve troubles, including general debility." Mr. Hutchings is certainly a competent judge and his testimony is significant.

TO AID THE SOLDIERS.

North-Western Road Issues a Humane Order as to Them

Volunteers on Trains Must Be Treated With All Consideration.

ROAD KIND TO SOLDIERS.

NORTHWESTERN ISSUES ORDER.

The Chicago Chronicle

A humane order has been issued by the Chicago & Northwestern R'y.

Impressed with the pitiable condition of a majority of the returning soldiers, General Manager Whitman of this road has determined that none of the boys in blue who may come into contact with his company shall suffer for lack of attention. The North-Western system covers five or six states which furnished a large proportion of the volunteers, and in order that the boys may be treated kindly on their way home, whether discharged or on furlough, Mr. Whitman has issued special instructions to every agent and conductor on the entire system to give special care and attention to returning soldiers enroute from camps to their homes while upon the trains or at the stations of the North-Western. The employes are instructed to be diligent to ascertain if any of the soldiers are in need of food, and more particularly, if they are sick and require medical attention, and if any such are found he is to be attended to at the expense of the company, if necessary. It will not be necessary for the soldier to be in uniform to get the advantage of the road's hospitality, for if he can show the proper papers of discharge or furlough, he will receive the same consideration.

"We cannot do enough for the returning soldiers," said General Superintendent Sanborn, in speaking of the order. "The boys went down there and faced death in a hundred different ways, and those who escaped are returning home debilitated and worn out They did this for what? Not for money; it is not in any sane man to resign himself to death for a money consideration. They did it for the love of country."

Other roads probably may follow the North-Western's humane move.

Catarrh is a local and constitutional disease. Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure (a tonic and blood purifier, price, 75 cents.) and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm (price 50 cts.) contains no mercury or cocaine, used in connection are constitutional and local remedies. The above amount is offered if they fail to cure.

Columbus, Ohio, March 24, 1898.

LINCOLN MEDICINE CO., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger. I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

Lucky As Well As Successful.

"Shafter's luck" is of spoken of in army circles. He was a farmer boy when he enlisted for the Civil war and had risen to first lieutenant at the close of hostilities. Then he applied for transfer to the regular army. His request was granted, but the clerk in the adjutant general's office wrote "Lieutenant Colonel" instead of "Lieutenant" and the commission was signed by Lincoln with a big batch of others. Protest was made by men over whose heads Shafter had been promoted, but in the turmoil incident to the assassination the matter was dropped.

The Kidneys

are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from kidney trouble, and have tried a number of largely advertised kidney cures without benefit. At last a friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of eight bottles of this remedy entirely cured my malady."—MARY MILLER, 1238 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE BIG FOUR.

That is what the new well at the waterworks makes it. Four big flowing wells and everyone of them a hummer. Water in the new well began rising faster and faster yesterday, and when they thought it good enough, they stopped The COURIER was there soon after and feasted his delighted eyes on the grandest supply of water often seen from one well. There was the usual steady, strong flow that characterizes all these wells though this one exceeded any of the others. The flow out over the end of the big pipe was an inch and a half deep all around, and so strong that course gravel was all the time flowing up and being deposited outside. Except for these small stones, the water was the purest and coldest and fairly sparkled with life as it kept pouring over the brim. It is a lovely sight and all our people should see it. Mr. Harmon has proved himself a success, too, as a workman, and has done honorable jobs as far as he can control it. But Auburn's wonderful supply of water gave him abundant opportunity to display his skill. The well is 238½ feet deep. No. 3 is 224 It might be of interest to our people, to note that all these strong flowing wells are furnished with an arrangement fitted onto the lower end of the pipe to keep the stones at that point from getting clogged and interfering with the flow of the water. So we may always be assured of a steady and reliable flow. We wish the people of other towns, when in Auburn would go down there and see these wonderful living wells.

A Great Harvest.

(LaPorte Argus.)

Bremen, Plymouth, Lapaz, Walkerton and LaPorte are the great pickle salting centers for the leading pickling firms of the United States, says a dispatch to the Indianapolis News. Many farmers contract to supply cucumbers at 15 cents a bushel for large ones, and 50 cents for small, which they deliver while the season is on. They can contract during the previous winter, however, at so much an acre. This has been an unprecedent cucumber-raising year, the late rains and warm weather being particularly favorable. The result is that from 2,000 to 3,500 bushels of cucumbers have been delivered at each of the points named daily for weeks and the farmers are realizing handsomely. Nearly all of the great vats are filled. It has proven a great harvest for Northern Indiana, the product realizing many hundreds of thousands of bushels.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA FROM THE RESIDENCE OF THE BRITISH CONSUL

Harper's Weekly has been publishing the best series of illustrations of war scenes found in any magazine. They have several artists along with each of our armies. This picture of Santiago shows the city on the low grounds in the center and beyond the trees. To the right, and partly concealed, are the hills, up the slopes of which our men had to fight their way against the Spanish lines. The greater part of the bay lies to the left. The picture is from a photograph. The city had before the war about 30,000 inhabitants, and contains the largest cathedral on the island. It has foundries, tanneries, sugar refineries and cigar factories, and exports these as well as coffee, honey, wax, mahogany and copper ore. The town was founded by Columbus and is the oldest on the island.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Will Clark is a trifle better, but gains very slowly.

—Walter Penfield returned to his studies at Ann Arbor today.

—Yellow fever is taking a start in the Gulf states. We will not need to go to Cuba to get it.

—Miss Blanche Penfield went to Ft. Wayne today where she resumes her studies in Westminster Seminary.

—One of the Philippine islands has fine coal mines. Why not let Uncle Sam have this island and let the rest go?

—Five more regiments of troop are starting for Manila. It is plain that we must have a good force there, to keep things in proper shape.

—The Mary and Isaac Cool property on Main-st was sold yesterday by Walter Hartman. With a 90 foot front this is large enough for two lots and is a very desirable location. Mrs. Cool expects to live in Waterloo.

Hillsdalle fair is Sept. 26 to to30. It is their 48th and they always have excellent ones. Among the attractions this year, will be the presence on Thursday, Sept. 28, of Co. K 33d Michigan Volunteers, that helped in the hard fighting before Santiago.

—More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Henry Funk has bought the old Mott property on South VanBuren-st, and is repairing it and adding a wing. It will be a good sized and comfortable residence when completed and will make him a splendid home. We are glad to see these young men taking pains to have good homes of their own. Fred Funk is putting in the stone foundations, assisted by Henry Mossey. Boren & Son are doing the carpenter work.

—It is laughable to see the desperate efforts republican papers are making, to make people believe that democrats are or were opposed to the war. The facts are fresh enough, so people can all remember what hard work the democratic party, especially in congress, had to drag the republicans in a position to show Spain she could not destroy any more of our warships without a fuss. The Fort Wayne Gazette is an example of a paper with a longing to find an unpatriotic democrat. It is just dying to find some one it can fight.

Thursday's Daily.

—Bert Baker is able to be around again after a pretty hard pull of sickness, which he had contracted in camp.

—Walter Penfield goes to Ann Arbor tonight. He went yesterday to Fort Wayne with his sister Blanche, who is at Westminister.

—Ben Heist who had been left at Camp Mount for guard duty, has been home a day or two, another man having taken his place.

—Several boys of Company K went to Butler yesterday and last evening. They had a chance to visit a number of their comrades while there.

—King Malietoa of the Samoan, Islands is dead. There are about a dozen candidates for the throne, and we may look for a considerable trouble there.

—W. H. McIntosh's big round bed of lilies of the valley always shows up nicely, but is this year, even more attractive than usual. Give it a look as you go by.

—Dr. Casebeer and Dr. Matheny had the Home telephones put into their residences yesterday, and connected with their office opposite the Swineford House.

—Col. Gunder of the 160th has asked to have his men furloughed, but is told no more furloughs will be granted. It is supposed more men are to be sent to Manila and to Porto Rico.

—The Spanish troops already being taken out of Porto Rico and we may expect to get full possession of that island in a few weeks. It will be slower work in Cuba.

—Bonds of all officers or employes, also administrators, guardians etc issued in the original Baltimore Bonding Company at lowest rates by

WALTER C. HARTMAN.

—No one in DeKalb county, in our opinion, ever saw at one time, in one lot, as many quinces as are to be seen in W. H. McIntosh's garden. And they are so large and perfect this year.

—Misses Jennie and Lou Patterson, of Waterloo were here yesterday calling on their many friends, among these being Mrs. A. B. Richards and the COURIER folks, who were former neighbors, —Our friend Peter Loutzenheiser remembered the COURIER force yesterday with a big lot of fine grapes of his own raising. They were very large one for this has been a great year for this favorite fruit.

—When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

For Colds

and coughs and all lung troubles

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is the standard remedy. It is now put up in half-size bottles.

HALF SIZE—HALF PRICE.

—The sparring between Alger and the various commanders in all branches of the service, is keeping right on. And still they don't seem to agree as to who is responsible for the bad management of supplies for the sick soldiers.

—Alfred Moudy is sending the old Reliable COURIER to his brother Will, who is now with Henry St. Clair at Hawley Kansas. We belive Mr. St. Clair is the postmaster at that place, unless he has been "removed" by the present administration.

—One Minute Cough Cure surprises people by its quick cures and children may take it in large quantities without the least danger. It has won for itself the best reputation of any preparation used today for colds, croup, tickling in the throat or obstinate coughs. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—In our paper yesterday, there was an error in the date in Mrs. Martin's obituary. It probably came from having the two figures at the end knocked over, and when put back, they read 1892 when it should have read 1829. Accidents like this are annoying but cannot always be avoided.

—Gov. Pingree, has been renominated by the republicans for governor of Michigan. While he has many queer ways and ideas, he has been a good sort of governor. He may not agree with the machine politicians but the people seem to like him. He will no doubt be elected.

—For broken surfaces, sores, insect bites, burns, skin diseases and especially piles there is one reliable remedy, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. When you call for DeWitt's don't accept counterfeits or frauds. You will not be disappointed with DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Spain is in danger of an uprising of the people. The more the people hear about the war, and the mismanagement of their government, more dissatisfied they are. They feel that their rulers have betrayed them, or at least proved incapable. And ever ytime a ship load of the sick and half-starved Spanish soldiers from Cuba is landed, they get more and more excited.

Friday's Daily.

—For Fertilizers, see Culbertson & Boland, Auburn, Ind. 31—tf

—J. W. Osbun has placed the COURIER under obligations this week.

—Admiral Cervera has arrived home in Spain. He is very popular with the people.

—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blazek have a little boy baby, that was born to them last Saturday.

—Wheat appears to be nearly all sowed now and coming up. These late rains are making it grow in fine shape.

—Mr. and Mrs. L. J Jourdon and son, Barton, of Mansfield, Ohio, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. W. McClellan.

—Wilkins the "wax statoot" man was at Butler and a big crowd was always standing around to watch him. He is indeed a wonder.

—We call attention to our illustration copied from Harpers Weekly We expect to reproduce a number of these, as we have opportunity.

—Dr. Nusbaum reports Will Clark still improving. Today for the first time he was without fever, but he is still weak and will need time for a full recovery.

—The Fort Wayne Carnival furnishes band to go from one stand to another and give free concerts, provided the owner of the stand will build it large enough.

—A car load of ducks was shipped east over the Wabash yesterday. It took a good many of them to fill a car, and there were several times as many quacks as ducks.

—This is a regular old equinoctial storm and for a wonder came right on time. For many years its coming has been very uncertain and generally a week or two late.

—Henry Deetz, of Fairfield, was a caller today. He says this rain is just what was needed by farmers. It will surely liven up the newly sown wheat and help to cure the corn fodder.

—A private in the 161st, wrote a letter to friends complaining that the men were not given food enough, and his colonel, W. T. Durbin, has had him arrested and he will be tried by court martial.

—Fred Korff one of our enterprising young farmers was in town yesterday and paid the COURIER up again ahead thought it was not quite due. He is starting his business life in the right way to succeed.

—The marriage rate in Ontario, Canada, is reported to be lower than in any other country. The cause given is that so many young men leave the country to seek places in cities or in the United States, while great numbers of the women get employment in stores, factories, etc.

—DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to decieve you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—John Johnson is the name of the colored boy who came back with Company K. Many have been asking who he is. When the regiment went south from Chickamauga Park, he got on the train at Atlanta, and went to Tampa, and, later to Fernandina, with them. He made himself so useful that they kept him along. We suppose he will go back when the rest go.

A TRUE CABALLERO

Well in the middle of the grounds stands General Anderson's headquarters. As we went up the steps a tall man rather shabbily dressed preceded us. We noticed his military bearing, and were told that he was the captain of one of the Spanish men-of-war which lies with projecting spars at the bottom of Cavite Harbor. Following his footsteps, we of necessity overheard what he said to the general's aide:

"Senor, I borrowed, sometime ago, two hundred dollars from Admiral Dewey to pay off my men. I have come to repay the debt."

He turned his profile towards us, and we noticed how thin he looked. He must have starved himself to collect the money. With a very straight back, he counted out the Spanish bills, and turned to go.

"Will you not take a receipt?" asked the aide of General Anderson.

"Never from an officer," answered the gray-haired old gentleman, with a courtly old-fashioned bow.

Here at least is a true Spanis caballero.—Harper's Weekly.

EVAN KUTZNER HURT

Last evening between six and seven there occurred what may possibly prove a fatal accident. Evan Kutzner and Geo. Weaver, who haul logs together to the DeWitt sawmill at the Wabash station were unloading there, and Kutzner went to get off his top log. He put the handspike up under it and pried over the other log so as to lift the top one up, when it slid down the handspike he was using jerking him forward in such a way as to double him up with his head down and the log on his neck and shoulders. One end of the log did not come clear down, but stopped on the hub of the wheel, and Weaver sprang to catch it and stop it from falling farther, and other men rushed in and got the log off Kutzner and took him home. He was so badly crushed as to be unconscious from the time they picked him up, and all night long Mr. Weaver and other friends watched by him all night, but no favorable sign had been shown. It is pretty certain that his injuries internally are such as to make his condition extremely uncertain. He is a young married man, very industrious and worthy and the community regret his misfortune greatly. This afternoon he is reported better.

Sets Them Right.

[South Bend Times]

Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois, was for many years the greatest and most popular Democratic leader in the United States. His name was a household word; his fame as a statesman and orator was not confined to this country alone. And yet, today, a great many papers misspell this great man's name by adding an "s" to the last letter It was Fred Douglass, the famous colored orator, who spelled his name with two s'. It may not be a matter of much importance, but why not be a little more exact in writing and printing the name of the "Little Giant"—the greatest Democrat of his time.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts per bottle at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. 6

JUSTICE'S COURT

It is a poor week when the justice's court cannot show up a new sensation. This afternoon, before Squire Walter, was set the case of McDonald vs Kosht. It appears that Frank Kosht and Charles McDonald live on opposite sides of the hall in the second story of the block south of the jail, and the two families have not got along well together. To make matters worse, Mr. Kosht has recently been sick and he claims that the doctor ordered him to disinfect his rooms by sprinkling with carbolic acid. This he did, and McDonald's family claim he sprinkled the hallway also, the passage through which his family would be compelled to go, and that this was done to annoy them with the extra smell. So he brings suit against Kosht for maintaining a nuisance. We know nothing as to which was most to blame, but humbly suggest that matters like this should be settled without a lawsuit if possible. Later the case was dismissed.

BAD RUNAWAY

This forenoon, as Mrs. Hendershot who lives in the south part of town, was driving south on Main street, in a covered buggy, with her daughter. As she went to turn west into the Avenue, her team took fright at the puffing of an engine that was switching cars and ran away. She kept them under control as much as she could, but as they turned north into Jackson-st the buggy went over and both were thrown out. They were picked up and taken to L. Spitler's where both still are this afternoon. At last reports Mrs. Hendershot was not able to sit up, and is bruised badly about the face, and possibly otherwise hurt. The daughter has her right hand and arm, and her face about the left eye bruised and scraped, but her hurts do not seem to be so serious. Mr. Hendershot is with them now. The buggy was nearly ruined and one of the horses got loose from the rig and got away. Mr. Hendershot is an uncle of Miss Tillie Hendershot who used to teach school in various parts of the county.

A Weeks War Items

Gen. Garcia denies the legality of the present Cuban government and says he does not recognize any governmeht in Cuba save that of the United States.

The president has extended the jurisdiction of Military Gov. Wood and it now embraces the whole province of Santiago de Cuba.

Capt. Evans, late of the Iowa, has been ordered to duty at the navy department as a member of the board of inspection and survey.

In Havana the American commission received from the Spanish government a note claiming that Spain is still absolute in Cuba, despite the protocol.

In Washington the military investigating commission organized and began its work.

Col. W. J. Bryan, of the Third Nebraska regiment, was unable to leave Washington on account of illness.

American and Spanish peace commissioners arrived at Paris.

France has promised, so is said, to recognize the Filipino republic in the Philippines.

Santiago is cleaner and healthier now than ever before in the history as a city, and no cases of yellow fever are recorded.

Spain will demand that she retain her sovereignty in the Philippines and have Manila restored to her before she ratifies the treaty of peace.

An appeal comes from Gen. Gomez to the United States to help the Cubans in Santa Clara province, where dozens are reported dying daily of starvation.

Americans now hold four-fifths of the island of Puerto Rico.

The British, French and German warships have all left Manila.

Orders were given the battleships Oregon, Capt A. S. Barker, and Iowa, Capt. Silas Terry, to sail for Manila.

The headquarters of the several American commands in Cuba will be at Havana, Puerto Principe and Santiago.

It has been decided by the government not to furnish food to Cuban insurgents who are under arms.

Under instructions from Washington the schools in Santiago will be opened on the firs Monday in October.

This Weeks Fairs.

Daniel Searfoss, a resident of North Webster, who about six months ago suddenly and completely lost his voice, is again happy over the fact that he has found it, his voice coming back to him one day recently as suddenly as it left him.

Democratic Caucus.

The township caucus of the democrats met in the old COURIER rooms this afternoon, and was called to order by committeeman Ed. Freygang at 2:45. On motion J. A. Barns was made president and Ed. Freygang secretary. The chairman stated that the meeting was called to nominate two candidates for justice and two for constable of Union township. Nominations being declared in order. D. M. Link named Jacob Walborn and Mr. Freygang named C. C. Walter. Both were then nominated by acclamation. For constables, Al. Umber named L. Stoner. Several others were named, but declined. Then Ed. Ross were named as the other candidate and both were made by acclamation. The meeting then adjourned.

Moderwell's Funeral

George Everett of the COURIER office was in Fort Wayne this forenoon and witnessed the procession at the funeral of Mike Moderwell a member of Battery A of that place. He said it was a large procession, there being in the parade, the battery, Company B and Company G of the 157th and Hibernian Rifles, as well as the band and some 200 carriages. The city was all out to bid the young soldier a last farewell. Several of Company K boys were seen in the procession also.

Mrs. Brewer's Humane Work.

A well-to-do Rhode Island lady, who looks after the sick of her city, writes to Dr. Hartman of her practical experience with Pe-ru-na.

HUMANITY is blessed with some good samaritans. Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer, of 196 High St., Westerly, R. I., is a noble woman who devotes a great deal of time and money to caring for the sick of Westerly. She has been for several years one of Pe-ru-na's strongest friends, and under date of March 17, 1898, she writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., the originator of Pe-ru-na:

MRS. LIZZIE M. BREWER.

"Your welcome advice is at hand, and my gratitude is unbounded for the privilege I enjoy of consulting so renowned a physician as yourself, always receiving such prompt and satisfactory replies to my questions. And what amazes me most is that this can be done year after year, with unfailing certainty, free of charge. I have learned that you have become to thousands and thousands of households the same beneficent guide and adviser that you are to my household.

"As for your free books, I read them everyone, and treasure their contents as the choicest wisdom. I have used Pe-ru-na in my family for over four years. I find it a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once; there is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na; as for la grippe there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na. I notice in medical journals and from the testimony of my neighbors that the doctors seem quite unsuccessful in treating la grippe, especially in removing the after effects of la grippe. From personal observation in many cases I know that Pe-ru-na is a sure specific for these cases. I am among the sick a great deal in our city, and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In cases of weaknesses peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and misery, which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by your excellent Pe-ru-na. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book 'Health and Beauty.' Any one wishing to inquire of me further can do so by enclosing a stamp for reply."

That Matter Again.

The Press last week, alluding to our article on the escape of the prisoners, says,

If the insinuations made by the Auburn COURIER last week, are not susceptible of proof, Mr. Platter, candidate for sheriff on the republican tickek, should commence a libel suit without delay. It is a serious matter to charge an officer of accepting a bribe of $200 to allow prisoners to escape from jail.

Now if the Press will just read that article over again, he will find that Platter was not charged with taking that money but was asked several pointed questions about that and many other matters. No one knows who got that money, and we asked Platter if he knew, and gave him the use of our columns to make any sort of explanation he cared to. It was common report over town that money had been offered. There is a suspicious look about the whole transaction. And whether the officers knew of this offer of money or not, the taxpayers are beginning to see that a change must be made in the way the sheriff's office is run, and they also kick on the management of Prosecutor Rhoads.

Barns Burned In Wolcotville

[Kendallville Daily Sun]

During the severe storm of last Saturday one of the barns on J. C. Sheffer's farm southwest of Wolcotville, was struck by lightning and the barn and contents and also a barn adjoining were destroyed. About thirty tons of hay, a wagon and harness belonging to Mr. Sheffer and Alvin Stenbarger were in the barn which was struck Mr. Sheffer carried insurance. On Monday night a barn owned by J. F. Holsinger and rented by John Raber, also near Wolcottville, was burned with all its contents. The contents consisted of twenty-five tons of hay, seventy-five bushels of wheat and many farming implements some of which were owned by Mr. Holsinger and some by Mr. Raber. One colt was so badly burned it will probably die and some small pigs were burned. The origin of the fire is unknown. The barn and contents were insured.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Bloody Tragedy Tennessee.

A special from Murfreesboro, Tenn., says: An awful tragedy occurred in the northern portion of Cannon County, abou thirty miles east of this city, in which five men were savagely assassinated. John Hollinsworth killed a man named Higgins a year ago. Suit was brought against Hollinsworth and judgment taken against him by Higgins' family for $5,000. There was to be an auction sale of the property to satisfy this judgment. Hollinsworth concealed himself and several of his friends in a large barn where the sale was to be. When a party of men came to carry out the proceedings and gathered in the barn, Hollingsworth and his friends fired into them with double-barreled shotguns, killing four men and wounding another so badly that he can hardly recover.

Excitement is running very high. Those killed were most prominent people. A Sheriff and posse are in pursuit of Hollingsworth and his party.

Stolen Silverware Recovered.

The latter part of July, at a point between Fort Wayne, Ind., and Crestline, Ohio, a lot of silverware was found where it had been thrown from a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad by some thief. The silverware is all new, and nearly every piece is marked with the name of the firm. It consists of the following: Twenty-four teaspoons, 6 teaspoons sterling silver, 12 tablespoons, 27 forks, 6 paring knives, engraved handles, 1 fruit spoon, 1 steak fork, gold plate, 2 tablespoons marked name of firm and engraved handles, 1 fork, engraved handle. All of the above goods, if properly identified, can be recovered by addressing Homer A. Gorsline, Superintendent of Police, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Gen. Lee Talks.

The Atlanta Constitution printed an interview with Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, in which he denies the reports that his corps is to be sent to Havana to distribute supplies to the reconcentrados. He says his understanding is that if any supplies are distributed the Government Commissary Department or the Red Cross Society will have charge. He says the insurgent government will be set up and taught how to govern the island, and that as long as any probability of trouble is imminent the United States will exercise its rights and m aintain control of the island.

Emperor Suicided.

A special dispatch from Shanghai, published in London, says telegrams furnished by the Taotai, or local Governor, to a Chinese paper there, alleges that the Emperor of China committed suicide on September 21, after signing the decrees which placed the Dowager Empress at the head of affairs in China. This, it is added, is understood to mean that the Emperor was assassinated. All the English speaking secretaries and the principal members of the Chinese Foreign Office, it is further announced, have been seized and banished.

Double-Headers Crush Together.

A serious freight wreck occurred near the north end of Dingess Tunnel, on the Norkfolk and Western Railroad at Huntington, W. Va. Two trains, both being double-headers, came together head on, and three engines and two box cars were almost completely demolished. Thomas Rowan, A. R. Wilson and Peter Newman, engineers, were seriously scalded. Samuel Fry and Jay Kelly, firemen, were injured, but not fatally. Traffic was delayed almost twelve hours. This is the second bad wreck near that place in the past week.

Murder and Suicide.

At Indianapolis, Ind., Robert Lash, a desperate character, went where his wife was stopping, and, calling her into the hallway, shot her, the woman dying instantly. Lash then went into the back yard and fired a bullet into his own brain. He died also. This is the culmination of many quar rels.

Unwind Red Tape.

A bill is being prepared to be introduced in the coming session of Congress, outlining the duties and privileges of the Commanding General of the army. It will be a step toward unwinding the red tape, believed to be responsible for much of the suffering of enlisted men during the war.

Killed in a Wreck.

In a wreck between two freight trains near Dillsboro, Ind., the following were killed: John Lee, brakeman; Fred Nichols and his brother, two tramps, and an unknown negro. Steve Righthouse and several others were injured, including an unknown man from Milan, Ind., who died.

Skeletons Unearthed.

While at work in a gravel pit east of Muncie, Ind., workmen unearthed twenty skeletons. They are supposed to be the remains of mound builders, as a number of specimens of ancient earthenware were found with the bodies.

Nancy Guilford Arrested.

London special: Dr. Nancy Guilford, the midwife of Bridgeport, Conn., who is wanted by the American police on the charge of having been connected with the death of Emma Gill, has been arrested.

Shoe Lasters on Strike.

Shoe lasters all over southeastern Massachusetts are out on strike on account of the refusal of the lasting machine companies to withdraw agents they had put into the factories. The strike is the largest known in that section in years. It started in Brocton.

Train Falls with a Trestle.

A sleeper and a chair car in a train on the Houston and Texas Central plunged through a fifteen-foot trestle over Chambers creek, forty-seven miles from Dallas, Texas. Twenty people were injured and Judge G. W. Davis of Oak Cliff was killed.

SEEK "WOMAN IN BLACK."

St. Louis Police Anxious to Find a Clever Female Thief.

St. Louis police are anxious to find the "woman in black." She is as famous there as the "long and short" men are in Chicago. The "woman in black" has robbed a score of people, and has done it so cleverly that the police are confident that she is a professional. On a street car a few days ago she robbed two women; she has robbed a half dozen women in the street, and more recently she robbed another woman. Mrs. Kate Cambridge was in a Broadway millinery store. She noticed a woman dressed in black, standing near, but thought nothing of it until she felt for her purse and found it gone. Then she thought of the "woman in black." Employes of all the big stores have been furnished with a description of her.

LAKE SHORE TRAIN HELD UP.

Bandits Rob Conductor Null and Loot the Caboose.

Four men held up freight train No. 75 on the Lake Shore Railroad at Elyria, Ohio, early the other morning. They attacked Conductor Burt Null, stole his watch and $21, and then drove him toward the engine firing at him as they went. The bandits cut the train in two, and then looted the caboose. The rear brakeman had locked himself in the caboose, but the door was forced. He jumped and saved himself. When the engineer found the train was cut in two he reversed his locomotive and started back. The robbers saw his movement, and escaped through the woods. They carried away less than $100 worth of valuables.

WRECKS NARROWLY AVERTED.

St. Louis Boys Nearly Cause Disastrous Railroad Accidents.

Just as the north-bound through passenger train on the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad as running into St. Louis the other night the engine struck a spike that had been wedged in between the rail ends and plunged across the double tracks, stopping on the brink of a 15-foot embankment. A moment later a freight train running on special time crashed into the rear end of the passenger train, but no one was severely injured. After the freight train crash a baggageman ran back and flagged the Oak Hill accommodation within 500 feet of the collided trains. It is thought that boys placed the spike between the rails.

FIRES SWEEP OVER COLORADO.

Many Villages Threatened with Destruction—Flames in Dakota.

A prairie fire, probably started by a spark from a locomotive, has burned over thousands of acres of grazing lands between Kiowa and Bijou creeks in Morgan County, Colo., and destroyed thousands of tons of hay. Ranchman W. C. Miller and his wife and child had a narrow escape from being burned to death. One large bunch of about 5,000 head of cattle was entirely surrounded by fire and every chance for them to escape was cut off. Red Cliff the fires advanced to within ten miles of the town and citizens organized to fight their advance.

Trouble for Western Bicyclists.

The Puyallup Indians are making war upon bicycle riders in Washington State. President John M. Bell of the Tacoma Wheelmen's Association has appealed to the County Commissioners for protection. The principal bicycle path of the Northwest, connecting Tacoma and Seattle, passes through the Puyallup reservation, and some of the more intelligent young Indians at the Government school have abandoned the cayuse for the bicycle. In the present difficulty these young men are working with the Wheelmen's Association to punish the enemies of the bicycle. At first the Indians obstructed the path with brush and stones, following this move by felling trees across the path. This aroused the white wheelmen to a high pitch of indignation. At this point the Indians began threatening the younger members of the association. Recently the Indians became bolder and chased several bicycle riders off the reservation.

One Soldier Shoots Another.

A charge of manslaughter has been entered against Blacksmith Lindsey P. Holt of the Tenth cavalry at Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point. Holt is responsible for the death of Private James P. Twisby of troop F. Twisby died in the regimental hospital from a wound in the small of the back inflicted by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of the blacksmith. The men had quarreled. Holt displayed a gold coin to a party of comrades on the company street and Twisby immediately accused him of having stolen the piece. Twisby said he got it in Santiago and that it was worth $4 or $5. An altercation followed and Holt retreated to an officer's tent and procured a rifle. He fired point blank at the trooper, three shots taking effect. One entered the small of the back and the other the left hip and jaw. Twisby was carried to the hospital unconscious and Holt was immediately placed under arrest.

Peacemaker's Usual Fate.

At Hoisington, Kan., Lew Kelley and L. E. Baker had an altercation brought about by an alleged insult to Mrs. Kelley by Baker. The result was a running fight, in which Kelley pounded Baker on the head with a revolver. B. F. Ruggles, an old man, interfered and tried to stop the fight. The revolver in the hands of Kelley was discharged and Ruggles was shot and instantly killed.

Robbers Shoot a Cashier.

At Flora, Ind., the safe of the Farmers' Bank was blown open by robbers, who secured nearly $12,000 and made good their escape. Cashier William Lenon, who was aroused by the noise of the explosion, appeared on the scene while the robbers were still at work. He was shot and it is believed he will die. There were two terrific explosions and the bank building was almost wrecked.

Loses Speech in Oath.

Patrick Kelly, a boilermaker of Atlanta, Ga., took a total abstinence oath, praying to be struck dumb if he broke it. The other night, surrounded by friends, he drank a glass of liquor and speech instantly deserted him. Physicians do not know what to make of the case, as Kelly was in fine physical condition and no apparent reason for vocal paralysis existed.

Wealth Won Her Back.

A romance of the Klondike is revealed at Macon, Mo., in the office of the County Clerk. About a year ago M. Ayers, a prosperous stockman, sold out his holding there and went to the gold fields despite the protests of his wife. Mrs. Ayers, who is young and good looking, became convinced that she would never see her helpmeet again and at once applied for a divorce. In March last a decree was granted on her plea of abandonment. When Mr. Ayers returned from the gold fields a few days ago he brought $20,000 in gold dust, his profits in a deal in a mining claim near Dawson City. But instead of finding a yearning wife awaiting him he was confronted by her decree of divorce. The Klondiker would not be put off, however. He sought out his ex-wife, showed her the color of his gold dust, insisted that his intentions had always been right, and as an outcome a license has been issued for the remarriage of the divorced couple.

BUILDINGS BLOWN TO PIECES.

Three Killed by Explosion in a Washington Construction Camp.

Half a ton of powder exploded at Lind's road building camp, seventeen miles north of New Whatcom, Wash., and killed three people. Three horses were killed. The cook house stable and shops were blown to pieces. The report was heard twenty miles away. The powder was stored in the blacksmith shop and was a mixture of black and giant powder. The black powder caught fire from a spark through carelessness. There were a dozen men close around the shop. The explosion deafened them and flung all of them far away. The camp belonged to a road contractor, who had twenty-five men at work, and it is a mystery how anyone escaped, as the buildings are all demolished and the ground torn up in all directions.

TOMB FOR THE ROCKEFELLERS.

Great Monument Will Be Erected in Lakeview Cemetery, Cleveland.

A contract has been let for a monument 65 feet tall to be erected in the Rockefeller lot in Lakeview cemetery, Cleveland, O. The shaft, which is fifty-five feet high, is one piece from the Barre, Vt., quarries. It is inferior in size only to the Egyptian obelisk in Central Park, New York. The base will be ten feet high and will have receptacles for caskets. The one word, "Rockefeller" in raised letters will be the only ornamentation the monument will have.

Indianian Robbed in St. Louis.

Edward Pfeister, a well-known politician of Poseyville, Ind., was sandbagged and robbed in front of the Fifth Ward Republican Club headquarters in St. Louis. Pfeister was about to enter the club headquarters when he was accosted by two well-dressed young men. Suddenly they seized him. Pfeister threw his assailants off, when three other men ran across the street, one of whom struck him with a sandbag. He sank unconscious, and the highwaymen rifled his pockets and fled. A gold watch and $50 were taken.

Canada Votes for Prohibition.

By popular vote the Dominion of Canada has declared for prohibition. Quebec is the only province enrolled on the side of liquor. She has given an estimated majority of 35,000 against the proposed law. Prohibition received a net majority ranging between 12,000 and 18,000.

BIG FORCE FOR CUBA.

PREPARING FOR OCCUPATION OF THE ISLAND.

Three Thousand Troops Are to Sail October 20, and Other Detachments Will Follow from Time to Time—Reenforcements for Dewey.

The War and Navy departments are perfecting plans for a demonstration in force at Havana and the powerful re-enforcements of Admiral Dewey. In Cuba a strong military demonstration is to be made to check any disturbances that may follow the evacuation of the island, and the re-enforcements for Admiral Dewey are made as a precaution against any trouble in the Philippines with Germany.

Three brigades are under orders to be ready Oct. 20 to sail for Cuba. The intention of Gen. Miles is to make the first detachment 3,000. His plans are that the three brigades shall compose the First division of the army of occupation. The brigades designated are made up as follows: The Seventh and Eighth United States cavalry, to be commanded by Brig. Gen. L. H. Carpenter; the Fifteenth United States infantry and the Fourth United States volunteer infantry, to be commanded by Brig. Gen. Snyder; the First United States infantry, by Brig. Gen. E. B. Williston. These will be followed from time to time by detachments to fill out the 50,000 intended for the garrison of the island.

This early announcement of the destination of troops for Cuba is due to the fact, not heretofore stated, that the President has sent the Spanish commission an ultimatum that the authorities in Washington would not tolerate a delay in evacuating the island to Feb. 28, as had been contemplated by the Spaniards. The President considers Oct. 20 a reasonable time and will begin the peaceable occupation then, and will occupy it by force if he is resisted.

COMMISSION BEGINS WORK.

Men Who Will Investigate the Conduct of the War.

The commission that is to investigate the conduct of the war has organized, received its instructions and started upon its work. As finally made up the commission is composed of the following men:

Gen. Granville M. Dodge of New York, president, one of the major generals of the Union army in the civil war.

Col. James A. Sexton, business man of Chicago and the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Charles Denby of Indiana, appointed minister to China in 1885, for thirteen years served the country in that capacity.

Capt. Evan P. Howell of Atlanta, Ga., a Confederate soldier in the civil war and one of the leading Democrats of the South since the war. His connection with the Atlanta Constitution has given him a reputation throughout the country.

Gen. John M. Wilson, chief of engineers of the United States army.

Gen. Alexander McDowell McCook of New York, one of the famous "fighting McCooks" of the civil war, and a New York business man.

James A. Beaver of Pennsylvania, the one-legged veteran who was Governor of the Keystone State at the time of the Johnstown flood and investigated the complaints in reference to the distribution of the relief fund contributed by the whole world.

Ex-Gov. Urban A. Woodbury of Vermont, Yankee business man.

Dr. Phineas S. Cromer of Cincinnati, prominent physician of the Buckeye State.

CLEARING MANILA HARBOR.

United States Officers Removing the Wrecks of Spanish Ships.

The work of setting the wheels of business in the harbor of Manila in motion has been intrusted to Capt. Henry Glass of the United States cruiser Charleston. One of his first duties was that of taking an inventory of all the shipping that fell into Admiral Dewey's hands at the time of the surrender. This includes everything afloat, either on the bay or river, which means a radius of forty miles, and its value is about $1,500,000. To aid Capt. Glass and Lieut. Braunersreuther in the work, five officers were detailed from Admiral Dewey's fleet. Ensign Moffet has been busy with gun cotton and dynamite blowing up the wrecks that were sunk in the Pasig river and the outer harbor, and of the twenty or thirty wrecks in the river nearly all have been destroyed, so that ships drawing fifteen feet of water may now enter and go to the wharves.

MUST HOLD THE PHILIPPINES.

Spain Instructs Commissioners to Resist Any Severe Demands.

Duke Almodovar De Rio, the Spanish minister of foreign affairs, states that the Spanish peace commissioners have been instructed to contend strongly for the integrity of Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines, on the ground that the protocol between Spain and the United States was signed before Manila capitulated, and also to make a firm stand regarding the Cuban debt and the Philippine loan of 1896, if Luzon is ceded to America. They are instructed to resist to the utmost any attempt of the United States to claim the right of preference over other powers should Spain desire to sell or cede the remainder of the islands.

Columbus' Dust Exhumed.

Gen. Blanco's order for the disinterment of the ashes of Columbus has been carried out at Havana. The captain general's almost invariable military escort, band and flag were conspicuously absent, but there were many guards in the approaches to the cathedral. The work was done with the doors closed.

Refuse to Live Under American Flag.

It is announced in Madrid that 10,000 Spaniards, residing in the Island of Porto Rico, have refused to live in the island under the American flag.

WAR NEWS IN BRIEF.

Admiral Schley has notified the Navy Department that all the Spanish war vessels have left Porto Rico.

After being repaired at Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco, the gunboat Mohican will be sent to Samoa.

The Spanish authorities in Cuba have given orders to collect their troops preparatory to their embarkation for Spain.

Spain, it is reported, agrees to the hoisting of the American flag at San Juan, the evacuation to follow as rapidly as possible.

The Queen Regent of Spain visits daily the sick soldiers who have returned from Cuba, and attends personally to their needs.

Cubans have been holding nightly meetings in Havana, demanding absolute independence and nominating officials for the republic.

In a speech at Saratoga Minister Woodford declared that liberty and humanity must abide wherever the American flag is hoisted.

MINERS IN A RIOT.

Negroes and Strikers in Conflict at Pana, Ill.

Imported negro miners and strikers met in deadly conflict in the streets of Pana, Ill., the other night. Two hundred shots were fired and a wild riot ensued, in which several persons were wounded. The affray occurred in the business section of the town, where many of the negro miners had congregated, most of them being armed.

The union miners were in session in their hall, being addressed by a Chicago labor leader. A negro appeared at the stairway leading to the hall and engaged in a quarrel with the doorkeeper. Policeman Smith arrested the negro and was taking him to jail when the crowd of colored men on the street closed in and threatened to shoot if the prisoner was not released. Smith continued on his way to the jail, and miners and others went to his assistance and took the negro to Operator Penwell's store. There David McGavic, leader of the union miners, forced the negroes to retreat, and a few scattering shots were fired.

Retreating to the stockades around the mines, the negroes armed themselves with rifles and returned to the scene, lining up against the striking miners. With the first volley fired all business houses were closed and the non-combatants fled to their homes. The firing continued for five minutes, the blacks firing first, but at the end they were compelled to retreat. Twenty minutes later a second encounter occurred near the Penwell stockade. None of the strikers was injured, but William Baldwin, chief deputy sheriff, and H. E. Bishop, a special deputy, received bad bullet wounds. Several of the negroes were hit, and one is reported to have died.

THOMAS F. BAYARD DIES.

Statesman and Diplomat Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Thomas F. Bayard, former Secretary of State and ambassador to England, died at Karlstein, the home of his son-in-law, S. D. Warren, two miles from Dedham, Mass. The cause of death was arterial sclerosis, which affected the kidneys, heart and brain. Death came to the noted statesman peacefully after a host of relatives had assembled at his bedside to await the end. The illness to which he succumbed was the result of a general breaking down, incident to old age. Mr. Bayard suffered no pain to any noticeable degree, and his chief tendency was to sleep.

During the first few weeks of his illness Mr. Bayard was able to sit up, but as the days passed he became gradually weaker, and three weeks ago he laid himself on his bed and never again rose from it. At times he would rally to some extent, but the relapse carried him always nearer the end. His wonderful constitution resisted the ravages of disease for a surprising period. Much of the time he was in a semi-conscious condition, seldom recognizing any member of the family, and at intervals having sinking spells, accompanied by choking. It was after one of these spells that he passed away.

In October, 1856, Senator Bayard was married to Louisa, daughter of Joseph Lee, a Baltimore banker. Twelve children were the result of the union. Mr. Bayard's first wife died during the first year of his term as Secretary of State. Four years later he was married to Mary W. Clymer of Washington, who survives him. Seven of the children are living.

BRITAIN SEIZES FASHODA.

General Kitchener Reports He Found the French in Possession.

Gen. Kitchener found the French at Fashoda. He notified Major Marchand that he had express instructions that the territory was British and that the French must retire, and offered them passage to Cairo. Major Marchand absolutely declined to retire unless ordered to do so by his Government. No fighting occurred. Major Marchand was given clearly to understand that the British insisted upon their claims, and the rest has been left to be settled by diplomacy between the respective Governments. Gen. Kitchener sent a long official dispatch to London, hoisted the union jack and the Egyptian ensign, and left as a garrison the Eleventh and Thirteenth Sudanese battalions and the Cameron Highlanders to protect the British flag.

The only organized remnant of the khalifa's army was defeated and its last stronghold, Gedarif, captured after three hours' hard fighting, when an Egyptian force numbering 1,300 under command of Col. Parsons routed 3,000 dervishes, of whom 500 were killed.

BIG PRODUCTION OF LEAD.

Output for Six Months of 1898 Is 156,113 Tons.

The geological survey at Washington has received returns showing that the total production of lead in the United States from al sources, during the last six months of 1898 was 156,113 net tons, as compared with 289,598 tons during the year 1897, and 264,994 tons in 1896. This includes soft lead, hard lead, and the metal obtained by smelting foreign base bullion and ores in bond. The estimate of consumption for the first half of 1898 is 118,767 short tons. The figure spresented indicate an increased production.

DEATH IN THE STORM

ONTARIO AND NEW YORK TOWNS WRECKED.

Fierce Wind Sweeps a Wide Path of Destruction—Four Persons Killed Outright—Mills, Dwellings and Public Buildings Demolished.

Many parts of the province of Ontario were visited by a tornado which in destructiveness to property and life has not been equaled in the Dominion of Canada for many years. The full force of the unwelcome visitor seemed to be reserved for the twin towns of Merritton and St. Catherines, and Merritton particularly is marked by long lanes of debris. The tornado struck St. Catherines about 3:45 in the afternoon, passing over the town rapidly and demolishing the roofs of a number of public and private buildings. Gathering in force and speed, it struck Merritton five minutes later, with appalling results. The armory, collegiate institute, First Presbyterian Church, St. Paul's Church, Lower End school and the acetylene power house were completely destroyed. The roof of the Lincoln Paper Company mills was swept away, with part of the walls. Four persons were killed and four employes of the paper company were fatally injured.

Mrs. John Bickley was killed by the falling of a house. Miss Ida Smith, a teacher in the Lower End school, with great bravery stuck to her post and did her utmost to get the scholars out of danger, but Frank Moffatt, a 7-year-old pupil, was killed and forty of the youngsters besides Miss Smith were injured. After passing through the town the tornado traveled southeast with much diminished velocity. Damage was done in smaller towns, but no further fatalities have been reported.

A terrible windstorm struck Tonawanda, N. Y., between 4 and 5 o'clock the same afternoon. Houses and barns were smashed to kindling wood, trees uprooted and many persons injured. Samuel Monsett, a milk wagon driver, was caught in the storm and is believed to be fatally injured. Mrs. Charles Peters and Mrs. Henry Peters, the latter carrying an infant, were picked up and hurled violently against a building. Both women were found unconscious. It is estimated that the damage to property will reach $100,000.

GENERAL ZURLINDEN.

French War Minister Who Has Resigned Because of Dreyfus Scandal.

Gen. Zurlinden, who only recently accepted the war ministry in the French cabinet, and who resigned afterward in a most unexpected manner, formerly held the same portfolio under the Government of Ribot. The new war minister is an Alsatian and has just completed his sixtieth year. When Gen. Saussier retired from the double office of governor of Paris and commander-in-chief of the French army the Government divided the work into two posts, making Gen. Zurlinden governor of Paris and Gen. Jamont commander-in-chief of the army. The former is regarded as one of the most efficient officers in the service. He entered the army in 1856 and was a captain during the Franco-Prussian war. With Marshal Bazaine he was taken prisoner at Metz and afterward made a romantic escape from the fortress of Spando.

GENERAL ZURLINDEN.

FANNY DAVENPORT DEAD.

Great Emotional Actress Falls a Victim to Heart Disease.

Fanny Davenport, the great emotional actress, died at her summer home, Melbourne hall, at Duxbury, Mass., of enlargement of the heart. Miss Davenport became seriously ill while filling an engagement in Chicago last spring and the nervous prostration which followed aggravated an existing heart affection of long standing. She had been sinking steadily since last July. Fanny Davenport came from good old theatrical stock. Her father was Edward Loomis Davenport, who began his career on the stage in Boston. Her mother was the daughter of Frederick Vining, manager of the Haymarket Theater, London, and herself a favorite actress in both England and America. Fanny was born in London April 10, 1850. She early showed signs of talent, which later charmed two continents. At the age of 6 she spoke her first lines on the stage in the Chambers Street Theater in New York. She first attained prominence as the leading lady of Daly's Fifth Avenue Theater, and in 1873 she began her career as a star, which was constantly marked with triumphs.

Many Dying of Typhoid.

Private advices from Dawson, Alaska, say that the filthy condition of the arctic town has resulted in an epidemic of typhoid fever. It was estimated a few days ago that there were 3,000 cases of typhoid in Dawson, with many deaths daily. There was only a feeble effort to clean up the place, and most of the people seemed content to take their chances until winter should freeze up the filth.

PEACE AT A HIGH PRICE.

It Will Cost More than $250,000 to Negotiate a Treaty.

It cost less than $150,000 to destroy the fleets of Cervera and Montejo. It will cost more than $250,000 to make a treaty of peace. The peace commissioners, secretaries and attaches at Paris will not lack pocket money. They will have everything to adequately maintain their official position, and even the messengers are to be given liberal allowances for their personal expenses. Funds to the amount of $250,000, it is understood, have been deposited to the credit of Judge Day in one of the Paris banks.

Despite the fact that to some extent at least the peace commissioners will be the guests of the French Government, it is expected that it will cost the United States a quarter of a million of dollars to negotiate the treaty of peace with Spain. The French Government has placed the celebrated Salon des Ambassadeurs at the disposal of the commission as a place in which to hold their meetings. This courtesy has relieved the commission of one item of expense. Despite this, however, it is said that the expenses of the commissioners and their staff will amount to something over $1,000 a day.

From a reliable source it is learned that a daily allowance has been made to the various members of the commission as follows:

To each of the commissioners, $150 a day; to Secretary Moore, $75; to Assistant Secretary MacArthur, $50; to Disbursing Officer Brannigan and Chief Translator Rodriguez, $25; to each of the nine interpreters, attaches, stenographers, etc., $10, and to the two messengers, $5 per day, making a total of $1,025 per day, or for the ninety days that they are expected to be away, a grand total of $92,250. This is for the personal expenses alone of the various members, and does not include any salaries.

Because most of the members of the commission are already in the Government service, they will get no additional salaries for their work with the peace commission. Thus Commissioners Davis, Frye and Gray, who are drawing salaries as United States Senators, will not receive any additional compensation beyond the payment of their daily expenses. The same is true of all the minor attaches, each of whom is employed in one of the departments in Washington, and whose regular salaries are continued during their absence on this mission. The only men attached to the commission who will receive salaries for their services are Judge Day, the president of the commission; Whitelaw Reid and Mr. Moore, who resigned his place as assistant Secretary of State to accompany the commission as its secretary and counselor. It is expected that Commissioners Day and Reid will be given a fee of $25,000 each for their work on the commission, and that Secretary Moore, upon whom much of the work of preparing the documents in the American case has devolved, will receive a fee of $20,000.

The American Government is paying the expense of the ladies who are members of the party, and it is calculated that the item of transportation alone for the thirty-five persons in the party by sea and rail will amount to at least $25,000. The special expenses of the commission in Paris for entertainments, etc., will probably be not less than $15,000 or $20,000.

FIRES IN THE FORESTS.

Lumber Districts of the North Are Threatened with Destruction.

Rain has come to the rescue of the timber districts and lumber towns in Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota, and the forest fires that threatened great destruction to cities and forests have been partially quenched. Reports received in St. Paul indicate that the worst is over, but precautions will not be relaxed. It is impossible to estimate the loss. Telegraphic communication with some of the stricken towns is still interrupted. Clayton, Clear Lake, Alamena and Poskin were almost wiped out, but many of the residents managed to save a goodly portion of their household goods. Latest reports from Barron said that place was still in danger, but it is probable that the greatest danger is passed.

The loss to standing pine in Chippewa County, Wisconsin, is enormous. Glenwood, Wis., passed the danger point, but a twelve hours' fight with the flames was necessary to avert entire destruction. Cedar Lake Dam suffered severely, many buildings being burned at and near that place. The dam was also destroyed. Among the heaviest losers at Cedar Lake Dam are Knapp, Stout & Co., whose large lumber barns and other buildings were burned. Rice Lake, Wis., narrowly escaped being wiped out, sixteen farm houses on the outskirts being destroyed. Hundreds are homeless, and thousands of feet of hardwood lumber are lost. The fate of many settlers in the forests can only be conjectured. Fire departments in the big cities have been appealed to for assistance, and are ready to go if they are needed. Some estimates of the loss are $3,000,000.

Many lives are supposed to have been lost in the forest fires around Idaho Springs. The fires cover most of the northwestern part of the State, and the loss to woodlands is greater than money could replace. Counties most affected are Routt, Rio Blanco, Grand Lorimer, Garfield, Eagle, Pitkin and Summit.

CANADA IS FOR PROHIBITION.

Majority in Favor of the "Dry" People Will Be About 10,000.

Canada has voted for prohibition, and when the returns are all in it is likely a majority of about 10,000 will be found in favor of the total prohibition of the liquor traffic in the entire province. The cities all voted strong for the saloons, but were outvoted by the country districts. The French province of Quebec gave a majority of 35,000 against prohibition. Ontario cities gave majorities of 8,000 against. Toronto, the headquarters of the prohibitionists, voted 4,000 majority against prohibition.

SLEEP SONG.

Good-night, my care and sorrow!
Good-night, if not good-bye;
Till the breaking of the morrow,
At my feet, your fardels lie.

Good-night, my care and sorrow!
I am launching on the deep;
And, till the dawning morrow,
Shall sail the sea of sleep.

Good-night, my care and sorrow!
Good-night—perhaps good-bye!
For I may wake to-morrow
Beneath another sky.

Good-night, all cares and sorrows!
Welcome, my boatlike bed!
None or many my to-morrows,
This one night is overhead!

MY INDIANA GUEST.

I had spent the autumn in a little log hut which I had built on the head waters of the Abittibi, in northern Ontario. I had lived chiefly upon the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, with a little of civilization's pork and tea.

November's first snows warned me to return to the city, but the charm of the forest life was too powerful and I stayed on, laying up treasures of health with every day that passed.

Early in December I was returning late from a day's still hunt, with the edible portion of a doe's carcass on an extemporized toboggan of birch-bark, when, on approaching my cabin, I observed human tracks, not snow-shoe tracks, but apparently those of a man wading laboriously through the four-feet-deep snow. They led in the direction of my shanty, and as I had seen no human face since last September, when a party of mining prospectors passed through, I hurried forward, reached my house, opened the rude door and went in.

A bright fire was blazing in the big dreplace, and directly before the hearth sat a motionless man. He was evidently an Indian, for a striped blanket lay loosely around his shoulders, and his long black hair hung tangled on his neck. A double-barrelled gun was leaning against the wall near him, and on the floor lay a pair of wet snow-shoes.

He did not even turn to look when I entered, and I, according to northland etiquette, paid no attention to him, but set about cutting up and cooking some of my recently killed venison. When the meal was ready I handed my guest a heaping plate and a steaming bumper of tea, and sat myself down on the other side of the hearth with a similar regale.

During the progress of the meal, which necessitated frequent refilling of the plates, I had a good opportunity to observe the Indian closely. He was dark-colored, very dirty, and about thirty years old. His face wore the average Indian's impenetrable look of stupidity, but it seemed to me that there was a more than average amount of viciousness and brutality in his countenance, as he silently and voraciously devoured the venison and "damper" until the supply was exhausted.

When no more food was offered, he lighted his pipe and condescended to give me an explanation of his presence in a mixture of English, Anglicized French and Chippewayan.

"Me come far; yes, from there. Heap snow; ver' froid; Injun heap cold. No deer, no caribou, no mooin (bear). Enfin, my racket he's broke out hees cross-bar,—and me got for to wade in snow so high, an' I most cold to death, —die for sure if no reach cabin. Voila!" and he produced the snowshoe in question, of which the forward cross-bar had snapped, slackening the network so that it was impossible to keep the foot in the thongs.

However little I liked the appearance of my guest, I felt that I had been the means of saving his life, and threw down half a dozen hides and a blanket in one corner for his bed. Being very tired, I lay down on my couch shortly after, but my last waking remembrance was of seeing the Indian sitting motionless before the fire, smoking his short pipe and gazing solemnly into the glowing coals.

When I awoke in the morning he occupied the same position, but his pipe was gone and the kettle was boiling over the fire, which led me to infer that he had not sat there all night. I got up, and after a wash in an ice-bound, dugout wooden basin outside, with the temperature at ten degrees below zero, I proceeded to get breakfast ready.

I had supposed that my fed man would leave shortly after this meal, but his snow-shoe remained unrepaired, and he showed no inclination for departure. He continued to smoke, while I spent the forenoon in storing away my meat and in cutting firewood, and whenever I re-entered the cabin I found him sitting precisely as I had left him.

He stayed for dinner, and it was not until well on in the afternoon that he began to mend his snow-shoe. He finished it before dark, but of course I did not expect him to start that evening, and I went to sleep, leaving him smoking before the fire, just as on the night before.

Now hospitality in the Northern wilderness means something. It requires the sharing of your last crust, if need be, with the stranger, for the next time you may be the stranger yourself. At the end of three days, however, I began to think that it was but just that my visitor should help to replenish the larder which he continued voraciously to deplete.

So, on arising early the fifth morning after his advent and finding the day suitable, I proposed that he should take his gun and accompany me on a moose-hunt. He was still in his blankets, and he only rolled them more comfortably around his body, and grunted contemptuously.

"You go hunt," he said. "Me mind camp."

This reply, coming from his greasy, dirty indolence, made me boil with sudden indignation. I made for him as he lay, and seizing his collar, pulled him out upon the floor and jerked him to his feet.

"Then you'll get out of this shanty!" I exclaimed. "Va-t-en! Understand? Git!"

He made one jump for his gun, but I was expecting that, and my double-barrel instantly covered him. I turned him out of the shanty, and threw after him his gun, his snow-shoes and all his belongings, with a big lump of cold roast venison ribs. He gathered up all these articles sullenly, and tying on his snow-shoes, tramped off up the hillside among the pines.

Now that it was too ate, I began a little to regret my act, for I rather feared that he might hang around and shoot me from behind a tree. I kept pretty close within my cabin that day and did not go out unarmed, but although I watched from my window, I saw no more of my late guest. Next day I followed his trail for several miles through the woods, and as it led unswervingly north-westward, I thought that he had finally left the district.

Four days after, when I was returning about noon from an inspection of some marten traps, I noticed tracks on the snow once more—snow-shoe tracks. A two-days' storm had just blown over, and the wilderness was covered with a fresh layer of wholly unbroken white, beaten hard in open places by the force of the gale. There was also upon the snow-shoe trail a track as of a narrow toboggan, and the sight caused me a certain vague uneasiness.

My heart misgave me still more when I came in sight of the cabin and saw the door standing wide open. I hurried forward, and in another instant had learned the truth. The shanty was sacked and completely dismantled.

My scanty stock of flour, of tea, of sugar; the large canister of gunpowder, the little bags of shot, the loaded shells and the reloading tools—all were gone. The blankets and furs had disappeared, with the cache of meat and the ax, and my few books lay half consumed at the edge of a living fire on the hearth, showing that a desire for revenge as well as the wish to rob me had inspired the deed.

A clean sweep had been made of everything, and I stood possessed of little more than my gun, my small hatchet and the couple of dozen loaded shells in my belt.

I at once set myself to examine the trail of the robber, and as I expected, I found the distinct mark of the patched cross-bar in the snow-shoe. It was the sign pedal of my Indian friend. Had he appeared before me at that moment, I might have shot him down in my anger. He had committed a fearful crime. Better kill a man outright in the North than deprive him of his suppplies against cold and hunger! However, the culprit was doubtless miles away, and I set out briskly upon his track.

It appeared that he had passed along about three hours before, probably as soon as he had seen me disappear down the valley. I walked in the track of the toboggan, which, heavy with the spoils of my cabin, had beaten a hard pathway, enabling me to make a good pace. I knew that the Indian, encumbered as he was by the fresh snow and the toboggan, would be able to travel but slowly, and I hoped to overhaul him before dark.

At any rate, I expected that he would camp for an hour or two at nightfall for a cup of tea and a nap, and I felt sure of coming upon him before he could start again. Anyhow, I was determined to keep up the chase until I dropped or overtook my man.

The December afternoon soon grew dark, and the woods speedily took on that inexpressibly wierd, forbidding look of desolation and loneliness that no one can picture unless he has walked in a Northern forest at nightfall. A moon already hung over the tree-tops, and as the light waned in the west the snow grew silvery with her rays, so that I had no difficulty in following the trail.

About an hour later I came upon the smoldering ashes of a fire, and a heap of sapin where a blanket had been laid. The Indian had been gone at least an hour, but it was plain that I was gaining on him, so I pushed forward with the utmost enthusiasm into a rugged country of hills and small precipices, with a clumsy growth of birch and willow along the frozen stream-beds.

I was upon the brink of one of these declivities, which was piled and packed with a sheer and overhanging mass of huge snow-drifts, blown hard as a floor and offering a good walking-place. The trail led along the base of this hillside, and I was considering how to descend it, when a bright flash blazed out from a thicket fifty yards away. The woods echoed the sharp report, and half a dozen buckshot went whizzing past, while I heard another whack into a sapling close by.

Instinctively I dropped, and the shadows near the ground concealed me. So I lay motionless for some minutes, till I began to fear that I should be frozen, for the night was still and intensely cold. Presently, however, I saw a dark figure creep out from the blackness of the thicket whence the shot was fired, and advance slowly across the glistening surface toward me.

I could hear the creak and crunch of his snow-shoes, and did not need the moonlight to identify my treacherous guest.

I might easily have shot him as I lay, but I could not bring myself to draw trigger on him in cold blood. My plan was to halt him and make him surrender. He approached closer, looking hard at the point where I had stood, and holding his gun ready for action, till he stood almost directly beneath the little overhanging bluff.

Here he paused, evidently looking for a way to climb to the top, when suddenly an immense mass of snow, well-nigh as large as my little shanty, was detached and slid downward like an avalanche, carrying me with it.

Full upon the hapless redskin we fell, and he was buried instantly out of sight, while I myself was lightly covered with the snow; but I quickly scrambled free, and looked for any trace of my would-be murderer.

There was none; he had been completely engulfed, and I set myself to dig him out with a snow-shoe which I took off for the purpose. In about five minutes I encountered a wriggling hand, with arm attached. I grasped this and pulled vigorously, and my Indian was at length brought to light. He seemed half stunned and wholly bewildered, and stared wildly and uncomprehendingly at me.

I was somewhat at a loss to know what to do with him, for I had no right to execute the death sentence upon him, and if I turned him loose, he would in all probability repay me with another load of buckshot.

I tied him hand and foot, and went to look for the toboggan-load of my possessions. It was in the thicket where he had ambushed himself, and I lighted a fire, made tea and considered.

Finally it occurred to me that the winter was growing on, that I should have returned to the city long ago, that all my moveables of value were now snugly packed away on the toboggan, and that by going to the settlements I could hand over my prisoner to the authorities. So we camped there that night, and with the morrow's dawn we set out southward, the Indian drawing the toboggan and beating a road for me as I walked behind him, with my loaded gun in my hand, ready for instant use.

In the course of a week we arrived at a little village called Ramsay, upon the Canadian Pacific Railway, where I lodged my captive in the lockup, and swore out a warrant for burglary and attempted murder. I myself took the next train for Toronto.

I was never called upon to give evidence against my late guest, for he soon managed to escape, and was not recaptured. My visits to the Abittibi country will in the future have a certain element of excitement and peril which they have not hitherto possessed.—Frank L. Pollock, in Youth's Companion.

HAWAIIAN BURIALS.

Precautions to Preserve the Bones of Chiefs After Death

Some students of Hawaiian customs declare that the people of the islands never were cannibals. The popular idea that these new Americans have been nourished on their friends and relatives arose probably in a misapprehension of what happened to Captain Cook after he was killed at Kealakekua.

The honorable sepulchre reserved for chiefs and men of note may have caused the first voyagers about the islands to think that they had found proof of the practice, which really the Hawaiians are said to have viewed with as much horror as more civilized races. When a chief died it became the duty of his trusty kahus, confidential advisers in life and sworn to the performance of the last rites, to remove the body and bury it decently. That which the Hawaiians honored in burial was the permanent part of the body; the flesh was regarded as transitory and perishable, and therefore not worthy of sepulchre. The flesh of the corpse was cut off from the bones and burned; the bones themselves were carefully cleaned, soaked in oil, and burnished red with turmeric. Tied up together in a snug parcel, they were deposited in some secret cave where it would be impossible for an enemy to find them, and thus have the chance of bringing dishonor upon the dead.

Two centuries ago the great chief Kualii was the moi or King over the island of Oahu. In the ninety years of his life he fought with so many chiefs on his own and the other islands that he was sure that his enemies would make great efforts to get possession of his bones and on them wreak some of the revenge which they had not been able to take on him when alive. To make sure that nothing of this sort should happen, he laid strict commands on his most faithful kahu that he should carry his bones beyond the reach of any marauder who might seek to dishonor them.

As soon as the breath had left the body of the aged chieftain the kahu hurried his precious treasure away into a secret place in the Oahu Mountains to fulfil his solemn promise. Returning, he sent invitations to all the neighbors and tributary chiefs to attend a feast in honor of the dead. From all the lands of Oahu they gathered and from surrounding islands, from Molokai up the wind, and from Kauai down the wind. When the games had been performed with all the ceremonies with which the Polynesians turn the days of mourning into a season of rejoicing, the feast was spread for the chiefs and common people. After the last food had been eaten and the calabashes were empty the chiefs asked the kahu if he had carried out the dying wishes of his master; if the bones were buried where there was no chance that they might be desecrated in any hoomanhala, the Hawaiian vendetta which was waged against the dead as well as the living. With the grim assurance that his duty had been faithfully performed the kahu swept his hand in a comprehensive gesture about the circle of a hundred chiefs and said:

"There are the graves of Kualii; no one can disturb his bones while they rest."

He had not only cleaned the bones of his master, but he had beaten and rubbed them into a fine meal. The night before the feast he had secretly visited the house in which were stored the great calabashes of poi provided for the refreshment of the chiefs. Into this poi he stirred the meal to which the aged king had been reduced. The next morning the remains of Kualii found their resting place in the bodies of those who had gathered to do him honor, and were beyond the reach of hostility and vendetta. The chiefs praised the ingenuity of the kahu and honored his fidelity. His story has been handed down as the type of the devoted servant.—New York Sun.

Why He Went.

General Wheeler's daughter was trying to persuade him to stay at home, and let younger men do the fighting, urging that he had done fighting enough for one man. Finally she asked:

"Father, why do you want to go?"

He replied: "If a fish had been out of the water for thirty-three years and came in sight of a nice pond of water he would wiggle a little, at any rate."—Mexico (Mo.) Ledger.

A favorite mode of suicide among the African tribes who dwell near Lake Nyassa is for a native to wade into the lake and calmly wait for a crocodile to open its mouth and swallow him.

FINE ROYAL PALACES

SPANIARDS CLAIM THE TWO HANDSOMEST ON EARTH.

Description of the Royal Palace, of Madrid, and the Gorgeous Escurial—One Has 10,000 Rooms and Both Cost the Enormous Sum of $50,000,000.

The old proverb, "Rich king, poor people," has its illustration in the Spain of to-day, for, although the people of the nation are miserably poor and the state is bankrupt, the king is rich. The kings of Spain, with few exceptions, have all been rich; their private fortunes, abstracted, squeezed, or stolen outright from the people they governed, making them rank among the wealthiest capitalists on the globe. Queen Christina is enormously rich in her own right, and when the young king comes to the throne he will be one of the richest men on earth.

The wealth of its kings and the vanity of the Spanish people have prompted the building of many splendid royal residences, so that while the people were sometimes starving the king was spending millions on his palaces. In consequence of the desire to make a creditable appearance before outsiders Spain is, therefore, provided with royal palaces in abundance. Under the name of villas, country houses, or hunting lodges, they are to be found in almost every province, and, although for many years few of them have been occupied, and some are in decay, they still remain the property of the crown, monuments of Spanish pride.

THE ESCURIAL.

The two finest palaces in the world are in Spain, the royal palace in Madrid and the Escurial. The former is of granite and marble, a huge square structure, and of a size so vast as to occasion astonishment simply at the ground it covers. Four ordinary city blocks of 300 feet on each side are required for the site, and the arrangement of the windows and of the columns on the outside gives the impression of a size much greater. It was commenced early in the last century, when Spain was in her glory, when the viceroys and captains general of America were still sending home to the king, twice a year, fleets or galleons laden with the wealth of the provinces. The approaches to the palace are described by architectural authorities as the noblest stairs and terraces on the globe. The hill is climbed by one flight of marble steps after another, changing and turning in such a way as to convey to the eye of the observer an almost endless perspective, crowned by the great white palace at the summit. At no point on the long stairway is one out of sight of the noble building; to keep it constantly in view was the object of the builders, and so the tiers of steps, with their marble balustrades, serve no mean purpose in enhancing the impressions of the building.

ROYAL PALACE AT MADRID.

Within, the palace defies description. It is said that there are over 10,000 rooms and halls. It is a maze of passages; its various quarters are entirely distinct, one from another; though communication is easy all over the building, there are old attendants who have spent their lives under its roof and have not visited all its rooms. The apartments for the royal family form only a small portion of the monstrous palace. There are audience halls which rival in size the great public halls of other European capitals; there are theaters with thousands of seats; there are picture galleries; there are private chapels, which in size eclipse the city churches of America. There are throne rooms and council chambers; hundreds of rooms are given up to the attendants and guards, for Spanish royalty is proud, and though the reality of power has departed, still clings to its shadow.

The other great royal palace, the Escurial, is so called from the name of the village in which it is located, twenty miles from Madrid. The Escurial was originally a monastery, and had its foundation in a vow of Philip II, who, on August 10, 1557, when his army was drawn up in array to fight the battle of St. Quentin, promised St. Lawrence, whose feast it was, that, if victory perched upon the Spanish banner, he would build in honor of the saint the noblest monastery in the world. St. Lawrence was gracious, the Spaniards carried the day, and Philip immediately proceeded to fulfill his vow.

The emblem of St. Lawrence is the gridiron on which he suffered martyrdom, and the ground plan of the building represents this domestic instrument, seventeen ranges of buildings forming the frame and crossbars, while a wing 400 feet long is the handle. The edifice is gigantic in its proportions; 740 feet from north to south do its walls extend, and 580 from east to west; the average height of the walls being about sixty feet, while the four towers at the corners are each 200 feet in height. It contains the royal palace and chapel, 200 monastic cells, three churches, two colleges, three libraries, besides halls, throne rooms, dormitories, hospitals, refectories and innumerable apartments for attendants. Some idea of its extent may be gained by the simple statement that it has eighty staircases, 1,110 outside windows overlooking its courts, fourteen gates and eighty-six fountains. The great church of the monastery is equal in its dimensions to some of the largest in Christendom. It is a model of St. Peter's; 364 feet long, 230 wide, with seven aisles, forty chapels, a dome 330 feet high, an altar of costly marbles and alabaster rises ninety feet, and is fifty feet in width. Beneath the high altar, so placed in order that the kings should rest under the most hallowed spot in Spain, is the mausoleum of Spanish royalty, a building within the crypt, constructed on the plan of the Pantheon in Rome. Here in niches one above another are the caskets of all the kings of Spain since Charles V. It is said that only one niche remains vacant, and the Spaniards have a superstition that when that niche is filled there will be no more kings in Spain.

The Escurial and the royal residence in Madrid, while they are monuments of the former glory and wealth of Spain, are also records of its misgovernment. Over $20,000,000 was spent on the Madrid palace, nearly $30,000,000 on the Escurial, millions more were annually squandered in keeping up these two gorgeous and useless establishments, while the roads were neglected and public works of every kind were absolutely ignored. They are thoroughly in consonance with the Spanish character, only in a land where the beggars proudly wrap about them their tattered cloaks and call each other senor could such edifices be built, such collections of art, history and religion be made.

A RISING MUSICAL STAR.

Young Italian Priest Who May Become One of the World's Masters.

Lorenzo Perosi, the rising star in the Italian firmament of music, has already done sufficiently well to fix him in his seat of fame forever. Perosi is musical director of the famed Cathedral of St. Mark in Venice, and his compositions have made him the ideal of Italy, especially of the Venetian public. He has written a trilogy of oratorios called the Sacred Trilogy. They are The Passion of Christ, The Transfiguration of Jesus Christ and The Resurrection of Lazarus. Each oratorio is in two parts, so arranged that the parts may be sung separately. Recordi, the great musical publisher of Italy, has purchased these compositions and has commissioned the composer to write a fourth, to be entitled The Holy Sepulchre. Perosi's first teacher was his father, Guiseppe Perosi, a choirmaster in Tortona, Piedmont, where Lorenzo was born. He was afterward sent by the patronage of a wealthy Milanese to the conservatory at Milan. He also studied and traveled in Germany. He filled various posts as director in church until he received his commission at St. Mark's. Although he is but 27 years old, and did so much good work as a musician, he found time to study theology for the priesthood and was ordained in 1893. He has written, besides his grand compositions, no less than twelve masses. It is said his recent work has shown the influence of Bach strongly, but he does not follow any master.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

The Ambitious Man.—I believe that the Christian man is essentially an ambitious man.—Rev. F. C. Harding, Congregationalist, New York.

Religion.—Religion is not a thing of a future state. Religion is service to all men everywhere.—Rev. Dr. Abbott, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Be True.—All our life, if we are true—wherever we are—finds its secret and meaning and beauty in the ever-present God.—Rev. M. J. Savage, Unitarian, New York.

Ignorance.—No man need be ignorant to-day unless he pleads the bankruptcy act and frankly admits he is too stupid to learn.—Rev. S. P. Cadman, Congregationist, New York City.

Divine Intuitions.—We carry within us intuitions divine, and are illumined by the light which shines on neither land nor sea.—Rev. W. D. Williams, Episcopalian, New York City.

Victories.—Worldly storms, though seemingly harsh and grievous, may be turned into victories for the sufferer and the love of God.—Rev. A. J. Van Cleft, Methodist, Scranton, Pa.

Great Events.—Great events emanate from great intellects, usually when those great minds are in their deepest hour of darkness.—Rev. F. W. Gunsaulus, Presbyterian, Chicago, Ill.

Conscience.—What God would chiefly have us to do is a thought which conscience presses home at some point in the career of every one of us.—Rev. Lester Bradner, Jr., Episcopalian, New York.

Christ's Help.—The sun of righteousness can penetrate the darkest cloud. If men want help they can have it from the conquering Christ.—Rev. T. C. Beattie, Presbyterian, Albuquerque, N. M.

Man and God.—Man next to God—that is the meaning of man's triumphs in the universe, and that is the teaching of the Bible as to man's position.—Rev. J. F. Carson, Presbyterian, Brooklyn, N. Y.

War and Business.—There are some men who wanted war because they think it would stimulate business and they might make a few dollars out of it.—Rev. W. Gladden, Congregationalist, Columbus, Ohio.

The Old Gospel.—There is a vital relation between the Old Gospel and the new patriotism. They are alike in that both are the result of a divine inspiration.—Rev. R. S. MacArthur, Baptist, New York City.

Nature.—Nature teaches us its infinite care for the individual thing; every grain of sand is in the grip of nature. Human law is but the will of God.—Rev. George Hughes, Baptist, New York City.

Function of the Ministry.—The specific function of the ministry is the promulgation of the Gospel. It is a work in which God, rather than man, must be obeyed.—Rev. C. G. Spieker, Lutheran, Scranton, Pa.

Need of a Revival.—Too many are in the church who came not by the divinely appointed way of conviction of sin and repentance toward God through the Holy Ghost.—Rev. John L. Clark, Presbyterian, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible and Nations.—The Bible speaks much of nations, and we are bringing the principles of the Gospel to bear upon the government of man in every relation of life.—Rev. J. G. Butler, Lutheran, Washington, D. C.

The Manly Man.—The manly man is reverent. He reveres the name of the Almighty. Profanity is indecent, vulgar, blasphemous to God and insulting to all good men and women.—Rev. A. E. Myers, Collegiate, New York.

INVENTED SPAIN'S RIFLES.

Fertile Mind of Herr F. Mauser Produced a Deadly Weapon.

Since the surrender of the Spanish forces in and about Santiago the United States finds itself in possession of several thousand Mauser rifles, which will be held as spoils of war. The weapon is a magazine bolt-gun, the invention of a German, Herr F. Mauser, and was first used by the armies of his own country. Before the American and Spanish forces met our army authorities knew comparatively little of the damage done by the much-discussed gun, but it is now declared that the wound made it not nearly so much to be dreaded as was expected.

New Building Material.

A Swiss company has a new building material called "papyristite," made from purified paper pulp obtained from waste paper. It is intended to serve as a solid roof or floor. It is a nonconductor of heat, cold or sound, is as hard as stone, has a soft linoleum feel to the foot, will not warp, weighs much less than stone or cement, and is practically indestructible. It can be made as cheaply in this country as anywhere. It stands all climates, having been used with success in the construction of houses in Northern Russia and in Brazil. Floors made of this composition being jointless, accumulations of dust, vermin or fungi are impossible.

No one is jumped so quickly when he does wrong as the man who made himself a self-appointed guide for others.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....OCTOBER 6, 1898.

C. M. BROWN'S RECORD.

He Has Saved DeKalb County Ten Thousand Dollars

Every voter in DeKalb is interested in and would like to know the record of the men who represent them in the state legislature. It is the legislative body nearest the people. Yet probably but a small per cent know of the faithful and painstaking service given to their interests by Representative C. M. Brown. He was one of a hopeless minority in the house: but instead of opposing everything and initiating nothing he studied the wants of his constitutents and introduced many bills of great merit and labored earnestly to secure their passage. One of these became a law and in the language of the then republican county attorney "saved DeKalb County at least ten thousand dollars." During Jacob Hook's adminstration as surveyor nearly a third of the farmers of DeKalb county were affected by a new ditch allotment for cleaning and repairing. Later it was discovered that an error had been made in not giving personal notice to land owners and the whole expensive task had been for naught. The same condition of affairs existed in many other counties in the state. Representative Brown, alive to the interests of his constituents, drew a bill remedying this error, introduced it, and by tirelessly buttonholing his republican friends who were in the majority, succeeded in having it enacted into a law. At that time the republican county attorney wrote the words above quoted and they were repeatedly endorsed by commissioner Hague and others.

Among other bills introduced by Mr. Brown, was one to catch tax dodgers. It was an iron clad bill requiring the listing of all notes and mortgages for taxation and making the penalty sure enough and heavy enough to insure a compliance. When this bill was introduced all the tax sharks who could get to Indianapolis used their financial, moral and political influence to defeat it and they buried it in committee. The next legislature will be democratic and it is the duty of the voters to return Mr Brown where he can continue the good work so auspiciously begun.

WILL REFORM THINGS

We hear occasionally from the active canvass being made by Cyrus Jackman for the office of prosecutor. He is making a good impression wherever he goes, and especially when he makes a speech. He is a good speaker for a young man, and if elected will be able to conduct his own cases and not be obliged to have the county hire high priced attorneys to help him. Mr. Rhoads, his opponent, it would appear cannot make a speech. We know from personal observation, that he sat among hired attorneys all through the long McIntosh trial and said nothing, and as far as we could see, did nothing, And when the trial closed, we were told that his helpers, Best & Bratton got $250 fees from the county and the third helper, Judge McBride, also got $250. In other words DeKalb taxpayers chipped in $500 to pay attorneys for doing what the prosecutor is getting a salary for doing. Jackman shows up a list of $1,800 such fees paid by DeKalb county in the last two years, and promises to see this great abuse reformed. He says if he should get a case he could not manage alone, he would go to some attorney and make a bargain in advance, as to price, and he feels sure, a $100 man could be had for $50. Tax payers owe it to their interests to talk these matters over among themselves, and then vote for a change that will stop such a useless leak.

OBITUARY

Geo. W. Swank, was born October 25, 1843, in Pickaway Co., Ohio, and departed this life October 3, 1898, age 55 years, 11 month and 8 days. At the age 15 years he with his parents moved to Putman county Ohio, where he remained, until the age of 21, when he enlisted in the army, served 7 month and 20 days. At the age of 22, he was united in marriage to Minerva Woodring of Putman county, Ohio, where they lived two years. Then moved to the state of Indiana where he remained until death. To them were born eight children, one whom has preceded him to the better world. He leaves to mourn his loss a companion seven children, five daughters, Anna, Etta, Ella, Myrtle and Maude, and two sons Will and John, nine grandchildren, five brothers and three sisters and a host of other friends.

JUDGE ROBY'S CHARGE.

The Grand Jury Given Instructions as to Duty in the Work Before Them.

Judge Roby's charge to the grand jury is so much to the point and so fitting for the present time, that we have obtained permission to lay it before the people at large. We hope every one who can get the COURIER, will read it through. Omitting the merely formal and directory matter in the first part, we come to the following:

There have recently been held in the county, several gatherings known as street fairs or carnivals, the effect of which has been to bring large numbers of people together, for some length of time in the various towns where these gatherings have been held.

The occasion for them is found in the laudable desire of enterprising and public spirited citizens to advance the interests and enhance the prosperity of their different localities. With such gatherings and with the motives of their promoters no one can have any quarrel, and there should be and is no disposition to criticise them. It is no part of the arrangement, however, to in any way, detract from the respect due to the law.

The dangerous element in society is sure to congregate at such places and with adroitness it sometimes seeks to shelter itself behind the respectability and morality of those who alone make the enterprise possible, the progressive and up to date portion of the several communities. It has therefore unfortunately happened, at times that persons desiring only to assail crime, have in doing so seemed to be assailing the laudable and public spirited enterprise to which I have alluded, failing in their zeal to draw the line between that which was justly open to attack and that which in fact they approved, and in most cases had supported.

On the other hand, persons taking pride in their respective towns, and eager to advance the interests and add to the standing of such towns, have inadvertantly been put into the position of defending things, that they in fact were wholly opposed to. No one at all interested in his home town would dream of justifying immoral exhibitions, houses of prostitution and gambling, but by failing to discriminate some very good people have failed to express their real judgment as to such things.

I mention these matters so if you are called upon to investigate any alleged crimes supposed to have occurred during any of these gatherings, that you may not be misled, by any false issue. That you may freely exercise that wise forbearance and firm decision that has made the grand jury a bulwark of liberty and the terror of evil doers for so many years. When you consider only the question of guilt or innocence you need not fear but that you will deal justly with every person and with every interest.

I have been informed, principally through the public press, that during the Auburn Carnival, steps were taken looking toward the suppression of what was alleged to be public immorality, and that much ill feeling arose therefrom. It has been said there was more harm to the public in the disclosure of such immoralities than in the thing itself. Such a plea may be made to you. If so you will disregard it wholly. Such sophistry would result in the escape of all crimfnals. Crime is suppressed by being uncovered not by being hidden.

It has been stated that an attempt was made to burn the Eckhart factory on account of the frank position taken by its proprietor in regard to these matters. If by any means a clue to the instigators and perpetrators of such a deed should come to your knowledge, the public funds of DeKalk county will be freely used to develope it and to put them where they belong.

I have also heard some harsh words spoken of certain ladies who assumed the same position that the owner of the factory is said to have done. I am sure those who have thus spoken regret it. Upon reflection they will surely do so. I do not happen to have more than a very formal acquaintance with one or two of these women. but it has been my pleasure because of their efforts, to send one man home to his wife and child instead of to the states prison for a long term, and to have noted their wholesome influence many times. It was indeed not very long ago, when the times were hard and the work scarce, that some of these same women, were, as I then learned, energetically and noiselessly engaged in distributing bedding, and clothes, and food to the destitute, and I am sure that those who act thus are always entitled to respect.

Now gentlemen I have indicated, and say to you that no excuse for the violation of any law is found in the fact that a fair is being held when it is committed. That has nothing to do with the question. You do not indict the fair, you indict the criminal.

The policy of the law tends toward greater strictness when large numbers of persons congregate. It is unlawful for any one to sell liquor on the Fourth of July, or on election day, or when a primary convention is held. It is unlawful to sell liquor within one mile of an agricultural fair but as yet no provision has been made regarding a street fair.

You will hear the witnesses and return the truth. There is no room for favoritism, or malice. If any man receives punishment because of the truth, it will be his own fault, and you need have no scruples in applying that measure to all matters that come before you.

With these general observations I deem it not only proper but essential to the well being of the community to direct your attention to certain specific crimes some of which have been committed in this county during the last two years, notoriously and defiantly.

Your particular attention is called to the sale of intoxicating liquor. In the words of the Supreme Court of Indiana delivered less than one year ago:

"The legislative and judicial departments of the state government of Indiana have steadily recognized the business of selling intoxicating liquors by the drink, as a lawful business for half a century."

So long gentlemen, as those engaged in that traffic keep within the law, they should receive the same protection and be as carefully guarded in their property and rights as any person anywhere or in any business. "Yet" the Supreme Court says "during the same period such departments have recognized that it was a dangerous business—dangerous to the peace and good order of society, requiring strict regulation and restraint." and the supreme court further says in the case from which I quote, that it is "wholly unable to see anything more sacred about the business than about any other business fraught with danger to the peace, safety, good order, health, comfort or morals of the community."

So long as the person holding a liquor license keeps strictly within the limits of the law he is inviolate. Whenever he disregards any of the limitations put upon him by the license and the law, he should be apprehended and punished.

Among the conditions to which every man who holds a license agrees when he takes it out and the observance of which are necessary to enable him to be secure in the carrying on of the dangerous business in which he chooses to engage, are the following:

To sell only in a room separate from all other business; except that cigars and tobacco may be sold therein under certain conditions. That means "separate" not that a curtain shall swing between. No devices for amusement and no music are to be permitted in the room. The doors are to be securely locked on days when sales are prohibited That means the front doors and the back door also. It is unlawful for any person except the proprietor and his family to be within the room where liquors are sold when sales are prohibited. The room must be in open view from the street. Blinds or screens are prohibited at all times when it is not lawful to sell. No minor is allowed to loiter about a saloon. It is not necessary that sales be made to him in order to justify an indictment, it is sufficient that he is permitted to loiter around the room. It unlawful for any person at any time to sell to a minor. Selling to a drunken man is unlawful. Selling to habitual drunkards after notice is prohibited. Selling to an intoxicated person is unlawful. Sales upon Sunday are illegal. Sales on any legal holiday are unlawful. And not least, being found drunk in a public place is a crime that should never be ignored, no matter who it is that makes the exhibition of himself—for we must not forget that but for the buyers there would be no sellers. There are various other offenses connected with the traffic in intoxicating liquors but enough have been mentioned to indicate the firm hand that the law holds in its regulation.

The statute also contains numerous provisions against gambling. It is made unlawful in about all its forms. There are other sections relating to public indecencies and immoralities that will without doubt fully meet the exigencies of any case presented to you. The law is not deficient but its enforcement depends upon the moral standards of the different communities of the state.

It is said that there is an indisposition to prosecute crimes of the grade referred to, in some localities, particularly offences against the liquor law. There is no such indisposition among law abiding citizens and officers who are not corrupt.

The business of selling liquor as a beverage is one in which tenderness has no part. It flourishes on money that ought to buy food and clothes for dependent women and children and those who follow it must abide by the law. They will not be shielded from the result of its violation by any officer or juror who heeds his oath and does his duty.

If you have difficulty in securing correct answers from witnesses; if they say they do not remember, when they do; if they refuse to answer, report the the fact to the court in writing and such steps will be taken as the occasion requires. You need not accept any subterfuge. the truth in substance is what you have a right to demand from every witness and if it becomes necessary to indict some one for perjury before the grand jury the effect will not be wholly bad.

COURT.

Court is hard at work now on preliminary business, including estate settlements etc Charley Crew has his regular place as court room bailiff and makes a good one. Henry Wolf has charge of the grand jury, and will fill the place goodnaturedly and with equal justice to all.

Attorneys are generally present though but a few are from Butler. W. H. Leas, Gen. Blair and John Shuman are down from Waterloo, Sharpless, Myers and Mountz show up for Garrett'

Good Management.

There seems to be a disposition to hold Commissioner Gunsenhouser accountable for everything, good or bad, that the board has done. As the board has been taking great pains, we propose to give Mr. Gunsenhouser a good share of the credit, for as one of the oldest members he deserves it. Let us see what has been done. While paying heavy sums on the debt, and keeping up all improvements they have reduced collections of county tax so far, and by a reduction of the levy it will be greatly reduced next year, and within less than a year the county debt will probably be wiped out.

TAXES COLLECTED.

1890	$59,690.80
1891	63,191.60
1892	53,656 82
1893	65,804.13
1894	76,754 87
1895	75,304.21
1896	56 210 68
1897	64,501.01
1898 (May installment)	34,285.46

THE COUNTY CASES.

The energy with which these cases were pushed has resulted in a great saving to the people. Amounts recovered from the bondsmen are as follows:

Fair	$9,820.35
Sawvel	4.269.48
Borst	2,337.07
Borst, spurious orders checked	6,263.97
Moody	1,800.00
Coffinbery	7,000.00
Total,	$30,990.87

The cost in prosecuting these cases was almost altogether in those where republicans made a defense and were acquited. In the cases of Moody, Borst, Sawvel and Dills, there was but little cost. The total court costs were $5,807.07, and there is still an amount of $2,666 00 to be collected against Coffinberry's bondsmen and $455 of Moody's bondsmen.

COUNTY ORDERS.

In February, 1897, the orders outstanding were	$94,500.00
June 1, 1897	90,326.21
June 1, 1898	42,358.21
Decrease of orders in one year	47,968.00

Also in the same time there was paid in interest on orders $7,822.30.

NET COUNTY DEBT.

June 1, 1897	$45,041.48
June 1, 1898	23,302.71

This is the net debt of the county as sworn to by the auditor at the last settlement, June 1, 1898, and is correct. It is certain that with this careful management continued, this debt will be fully paid with the taxes of this fall and next spring. If any explanation further is needed, we might tell how the amount of net debt, June 1, is found.

Total orders outstanding	$42,358.21
To reduce this we have:
Cash on hand	$13,084.32
Due from township trustees, account of poor	2,850.08
Due from bondsmen, good	3,121.10
Total to apply on debt	$19,055.50

Deduct this from the total orders given above and we have the net debt as stated, $23,302.71.

And with all this reduction of debt they have built 10 bridges, four with stone abutments and the rest were leg bridges, and all were of steel. Improvements in roads, etc., were kept up, and the public building kept in good condition.

Who will say this is not a good showing? The county levy has already been reduced five cents. Mr. Gunsenhouser and Mr. Shultz are both agreed on the plan of paying off the debt and putting the levy down.

President's Day.

It has been the custom of the Ladies' Literary Club, for several years past, to call the first session of the club year President's Day. These "days" have proven to be very enjoyable, but none more so than the one held at the home of the new president, Mrs. M. B. Willis Sr. Mrs. Willis planned a very pleasant surprise on the members of the club by inviting the members of the Minerva Club, of Waterloo, to be present. The surprise was complete as none of the members were aware of the treat until they arrived and saw the visitors present, After a short time spent in cordial greetings and social chat, the members were called to order by the president and the business of the club was attended to, Mrs. Willis then made a very pretty little speech of welcome, after which she called on several members of both clubs to make impromptu talks. The previous drill that the members have had, has enabled them to respond quite ably on such occasions. Regrets were received from absent members, one from Dr. Lida Leasure, of Logansport, one from Mrs. Davenport and also from Mrs. Wilson, the latter sending in her place a beautiful boquet of roses, which were much appreciated. The members were pleased to have with them Mrs. Houser, of Indianapolis, an honorary member. A delicious lunch was served in courses and after a delightful visit with each other and the Minerva Club the L. L. C. adjourned to meet next week with Mrs. Mabel Hodge. Mrs. Hortense Robbins, who is the newly elected member, was unable to be present on account of the serious illness of her mother.

Shively At Auburn.

Don't forget the speech af Hon. B. F. Shively at Auburn, Friday evening Oct. 7, at 7:30. He was candidate for governor in 1896, and will be remembered as a very able speaker.

THE MURDERED EMPRESS

The whole civilized world was shaken by the murder, Sept. 10, of Empress Elizabeth of Austria by an anarchist who knew no harm of her, and cared only to get rid of one more crowned head. She was visiting Geneva, in Switzerland, as a private citizen and without display. She started to walk from her hotel to the little steamer to go on the lake, when the fiend who had been seen waiting around stepped from behind a tree and stabbed her to the heart. She went a few steps and fell, then arose and walked to the steamer, about 300 feet, fell again and died in a few minutes

EMPRESS ELIZABETH OF AUSTRIA

It it scarcely conceivable, says a writer in Harper's Weekly, that an Austrian or a Hungarian, even an anarchist, could have been found to raise his dagger against the beloved Elizabeth, who was beloved of all her people and whose person formed, it is not too much to say, one of the strongest bonds of the dual monarchy. Only a foreigner could do it, and it is not wonderful that Austrian mobs should have risen against Italian residents in Austria to avenge the crime of an Italian.

Catarrh is a local and constitutional disease. Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure (a tonic and blood purifier, price, 75 cents.) and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm (price 50 cts.) contains no mercury or cocaine, used in connection are constitutional and local remedies. The above amount is offered if they fail to cure.

Columbus, Ohio, March 24, 1898.

LINCOLN MEDICINE CO., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with Catarrh since 1880 and have expended over $100 for different remedies. I have taken offensive scabs from my nose an inch in length, and half the size of my finger. I have used one-half jar of Lincoln's Catarrh Balm and one bottle of Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure. I can now breathe naturally. The scabs in my nose have disappeared and I feel better than I have for years. I have received more benefit from Lincoln's Constitutional Catarrh Cure and Lincoln's Catarrh Balm than from all other remedies combined.

Mrs. Culbertson Dead

Mrs. Ann Culbertson passed peacefully away this morning at about 9:30. She had been lying at the point of death since Sunday, and the end had been looked for at any moment. She has been a sufferer for several months but has borne all with the patience and fortitude of a really Christian woman. She was a person of lovable character and qualifications and when in health was like a ray of sunshine wherever she came. Of course the bitterness of the loss falls most heavily on the members the family, the circle in which she was a center of love and gladness. But all who knew her and especially the ladies of Auburn feel her death as the loss of a personal friend. She died at the home of her daughter, that of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Robbins.

The funeral is from the residence Thursday at 2 p. m., and interment in Evergreen.

The Next Sheriff

John Hathaway, so say all his neighbors, is a man of pure moral and good character. He does not have two or three extra women in the various towns. He did not put in his time in a gambling room during the Butler fair. And we think, if he gets to be sheriff, files and revolvers will not be allowed in the cells, nor will the doors be left in a careless condition. He has already shown that he can catch a thief without waiting for someone else to tie him first. He will not o. k. a bill for a $13 record book that he never got, as did either Stroh or his Deputy Platter. In fact if the people want a sheriff who will improve the present rotten ways of that office, they have a chance to show it, at the ballot box.

Dr. Hines and the Treasureship.

Hundreds of DeKalb county voters who remembered and admired the sterling, rugged honesty of the late Treasurer, Henry Hines will not forget the son in the coming election. "Squire" Hines took the office of county treasurer in the most difficult and dangerous period in the history of the office. He absolutely refused to accept the office until the books were straight and his firm determination in this was the lever that sprung the expose of the "Boodling" gang. Overwork and extraordinary vigilance in the protecting and safe guarding of his trust sapped the strenght and vitality of this trusted officer and he died before he had enjoyed the fruits of his victory. Had he lived he would have been re elected with scarcely any opposition. The son is worthy of the father and enjoys the confidence and respect of those who know him. Members of all parties can vote for him with the knowledge that he is eminently qualified for the office and that he is courteous and honest in his dealings with all men.

Queer Oversight.

For several days the city daily papers have been giving sketches of the late Thomas F. Bayard, and in nearly every one we find the remark that he was the "last of his name." In the article now lying before us and on which we are commenting, we find this mistaken statement twice, and its contradiction twice, all in the same article. First is the heading of his picture, "Famous Bayard family now extinct," and a little below it says, "He was the last representative of a distinguished race." But in the body of the article it speaks of those who were present at his death bed. They were: "His wife and his two daughters, Mrs. Warren and Miss Florence Bayard and his son, Thomas F. Bayard, jr., saw him draw his last breath, and his third daughter, the Countess of Lauenhaupt, was on her way to see him." And at the close of the article it says, "Seven children are living, as follows: Mrs. Florence D. Warren, Miss Annie Bayard, Miss Florence Bayard, Countess Lauenhaupt (formerly Miss Nellie Bayard), James A. Bayard, Thomas F. Bayard, jr., and Phillip Francis Bayard." This looks like a pretty good showing for a man who "is the last of his race." These fellows who fill up the big dailies at so much a line don't care a great deal about what they say, only so they get their money.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of Frederick Rohm deceased to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 28th day of October 1898 and show cause, if any, why my Final settlement accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness, my name, this 4th day of Oct, 1898,
HENRY C. ROHM,
Ex. FREDERICK ROHM, Will.
W. H. Leas Attorney for Executor,

Musicale At Garrett

Garrett has a grand treat in music Thursday evening, when the famous Schumann Concert Company will be at the Opera House. There are seven of these people and all are soloists of a high order. We have no doubt many of the music-loving people of Auburn will drive over that evening to hear them.

Jackson Township Caucus.

The democrats and populists met at the center and nominated S. J. Brandon for justice and James McClellan for constable in the north bailiwick, and John M. Henderson for justice and Horace Squires for constable in the south. All are competent and clean men.

WALTER C HARTMAN.

—Mrs. Ann Culbertson took worse Saturday and all day yesterday was lying at the point of death. She is still unconcious and seems to be rapidly sinking.

—Mrs. Hendershott who was hurt in the runaway at the south end Friday, is still in a serious condition, She has been taken to her home, but it is feared she is injured internally.

—Mrs. John Treesh and her sister Mrs. Hiram Brand made the COURIER a call Saturday. Mrs. Brand sends the WEEKLY COURIER to her son, Henry, a pretty good gift for a boy to have.

—The Grain Drill for a farmer to buy is the Superior Single Disc Drill. It will work in trashy ground where Hoe Drills will not work. Call and see us before you buy. Culbertson & Boland.

—Baldwin E. Mott oldest son of the late E. B. Mott jr, of San Francisco, Cal., who was on his return from a trip to Boston, stopped over on Saturday for a few hours with his father's sister, Mrs. Hodge.

—Cory Baxter went out to husk corn today for John Sheffer. He has been working for the contractors for the water mains here, but as they are about done, he hunts a job elsewhere. That is a good plan.

—Quick Work Washing Powder is fast becoming a household necessity. M. E. Garrett says last week showed the biggest orders he has ever had. Today, a large amount of the boxes were piled out for shipment.

—Mrs. Perry Blodgett, has been seriously ill for a week or two caused as is believed from poison from a quantity of old sumach thrown out from the trenches dug through the ground there, which was formerly a swamp.

—You invite disappointment when you experiment, DeWitt's Little Early Risers are pleasant, easy, thorough little pills. They cure constipation and headache just as sure as you take them. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—We rise to report storks at the Junction. H. G. Young and wife send word by Dr. Baxter, that the big boy born Saturday is just the thing. Mr. Young is the B. & O. agent there, and feels good enough to sell tickets at half price.

—A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once. Fischler & Son and H. B. McCord.

—Jake Raut goes on the road as traveling salesman for a boot and shoe house. Jake is an experienced business man and a hustler, and is especially well posted in the line he is handling. We look to see him make a success of it.

—The main lines of trenches were all completed Friday when they dug under the railroad tracks near the Wabash station. All the work of that kind left to be done, is to push the line into the building there and connect with the wells.

—James Duncan, whose wife was Miss Jessie Mountz, the teacher, died Saturday in Toledo, and will be brought to his old home, Waterloo, today and be buried tomorrow. He had typhoid fever and his wife is seriously ill of os the same complaint.

—Geo. W. Swank died at his home in Jackson township, this morning. The funeral will be at Hopewell church tomorrow afternoon, leaving the house at 2 p. m. Interment at Woodlawn. He was an old soldier and for some time has had Bright's disease.

—After all, we believe the largest DeKalb peaches we have seen this year were brought in Saturday by Simon Rohm, of Richland. They were ten of them, part clings and part freestones, and were of the second crop on 4-year old trees. It proves that DeKalb can raise peaches and fine ones.

—Miss Velma Ohneck, who has been chosen queen of the Carnival at Fort Wayne has selected Miss Mayme Trentman to be her maid of honor for Auburn. It is a good selection, If Fort Wayne finds any difficulty to get enough handsome girls for maids of honor, we can still furnish others.

—Scott Showers got up quite an excitement Saturday evening by telling about his holdup at the Junction. He says he he was accosted by two strangers and ordered to throw up his hands. He thinks they chloroformed him, as he remembered nothing for a time, when he came to and found his ring gone, but he had no money. No clue so far.

—The contest between the young ladies who collected money for the benefit of the St. Michael's church in Smithfield, resulted in giving Miss Gfeller the gold watch, the first prize, and Miss Josie Schifili, of Auburn, got the second, it being a fine picture of the pastor, Rev. Father Juraschek. Miss Schifili desires to thank her Auburn friends who helped her in the contest.

—Rev. J. N. Wilson and wife have their children and grandchildren at their home today to celebrate their thirty-sixth wedding anniversary. They are a pretty young looking couple to be the fortunate posseesors of grandchildren, and he was also a soldier in the rebellion. But people can assist in keeping young by living a right life The COURIER congratulates them, and hopes they may keep young many years.

—Mrs. A. B. Richards awoke Saturday night by hearing the front door creak She looked out and saw that the door was wide open. She was frightened and called to her son, John who sleeps in another room. He is a sound sleeper and she had to call three times before he was aroused and by that time the intruder was gone. John and Mr. Everett searched the house but no trace of the would-be-burglar could be found. Had she not awakened he would probably have gone through the house.

He is much pleased with the new cemetery dedicated near Garrett. The attendance was very large, the crowd being estimated at 4,000.

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

WHO WAS SHE?

[Goshen Democrat]

A Butler girl described as possessing a beautifnl complexion with deep liquid eyes and a profusion of light brown hair turned Elkhart up-side-down so to speak for an hour night before last. The Hoosier lassie, who is about sixteen sweet summers old, attracted much attention to herself by entering a barber shop and parting with her hair. When questioned she confessed that she had run away from home and was out for a good time. She declared her parents would never recognize her with a cropped head. The police took the matter in hand and sent her back to her home in DeKalb county where pretty girls are too scarce to be sacrificed so lightly.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Shively at Auburn, Friday evening.

—Mrs. Jud. Davis returned to her home at Chicago yesterday.

—Hon. Hugh Dougherty was here today. He speaks at Waterloo Thursday evening.

—Mrs. Chas. F. Bartles is on the sick list, she has been very sick for two weeks.

—It is rumored that the republican campaign in this county is about to be conducted by mail from Canada.

—Dr. Nusbaum was called over to Kendallville today in a consultation case with Dr. Gilbert of that city.

—Dr. Miller, will again be at F. J. Yesbera's jewelry store, Tuesday, Oct. 12 eyes carefully examined for glasses.

—Schaab Brothers have a big new ad this week with big new bargains. Read it carefully, as that is the way to secure good bargains.

—Regular meeting of the Modern American Fraternal Order, Thursday night at 7:30 All members are requested to present.

—Read what we say about Hon. C M. Brown's record in the legislature He made a good record and should be given a chance to continue his good work.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McIntosh entertained two of the soldiers boys to supper last evening, they were A. Wheelock and Corporal George Wolfe. They report a fine time.

—A long train was the Fort Wayne special that went south at 9:18 today. Not many were on when it reached here, as the big crowd at Waterloo could not come, as no excursion tickets had arrived. Tickets sold for that train at Auburn, were 250.

—The Silver Dawn makes the charge that one of the leading republican candidates for office was seen engaged in public gambling at Butler. If this is the case he ought to join the other poker players at Michigan City instead of running for office.

—John Baxter went to Fort Wayne yesterday with his nephew, Ott Baxter of Butler, who was taken there for an operation for appendicitis. It was performed by Dr. Porter at the St. Joseph hospital and resulted in relieving him the contents of a large pus sack that had formed. He stood the operation well and this morning was resting well with the prospect of a rapid recovery.

—The republican county committee in addition to its other officers ought to add an official disinfector or deodorizer. The charges of gambling, licentiousness and general immorality which are freely made remain uncontradicted. It is a stench in the nostrils of decent people, and the voters will abate the nuisances in November by burying that ticket under a great big layer of votes.

EAST UNION.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Metcalf and daughter, Bertha, spent Sunday in the family of Ike Derrow near Mt. Hope. The latter went to visit her cousins Misses Lola and Della Derrow.

Mrs. George Deer after a short visit with relatives and friends, returned to her home in Fremont, Ohio, Saturday, October 1.

Grandma Altenberg, residing in Auburn, has been visiting for a few days with her daughter, Mrs. E. F. Metcalf, of this place.

Charley Kiner left last Tuesday for Illinois, where he expects to stay for some time as he has relatives there.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Metcalf entertained in honor of the latters sister, Mrs. George Deer, on Monday of last week a number of friends and relatives.

Henry Emme an enterprisng farmer of this vicinity, has purchased another horse, there is always something wanting on a farm.

BUTLER.

The weather continues extremely warm for October, doors and windows open wide and the people are found seated out of doors, until bed time in the evening. The foilage of the forest trees is green as in mid-summer, and wheat fields begin to look like meadows in May.

The canning factory is said to have lost about 80 tons of tomatoes during the fair, on account of their inability to obtain help to can them. This means a loss to the company of about $480, not $3,000 as the local press made it.

Our esteemed citizen M. V. Troutman, and his excellent family are moving to Virginia. We wish them success in their new home.

Mr. O. I. Campbell visited Butler friends last week, before going to her new home at Port Huron, Mich.

S. G. Stone's fine residence on Oak street had a close call from fire last week on the account of an overheated flue. The damage was small and insured.

Will Monghler, of Chicago, was calling on Butler friends last wrek.

Jacob Stout, of Newville, has opened a meat market on South Broadway. Butler surely has room for two meat markets.

Mrs. John H. Crouse, who is staying temporarily at Father John Crouse's, on East North street, is seriously ill ot present writing.

Livery men report business very good this year. The average young man has dropped the wheel and is again taking his best girl for a drive.

The Butler schools are again in session and the walks are crowded with pupils, morning, noon and evening.

ROUTE TO THE OCEAN

GREAT DEEP WATERWAY FROM CHICAGO TO THE SEA.

Plans and Purposes of the United States Deep Waterways Commission—Most Stupendous Work of Internal Improvement Ever Attempted.

Chicago is to become the headquarters for a great ocean-carrying trade. Vessels of the largest size are to be loaded there for foreign ports, and cargoes will be received direct from all parts of the world without breaking bulk at the seacoast. Ocean-going steamers will take on loads of grain from Chicago elevators and convey them to European cities without transhipment, and people who wish to cross the Atlantic on pleasure or business may sail from the Windy City instead of from New York, Boston or Philadelphia. It will be possible for vessels to make the trip from Liverpool to New Orleans via Chicago and St. Louis by using the great lakes, the drainage canal and the Mississippi river. To secure this result will necessitate the expenditure of probably $300,000,000.

This is not the idle dream of an enthusiast. It is the project of the United States deep waterways commission, indorsed by act of congress, fathered by engineers of international reputation, and surveys for which are now being made. It is a mammoth enterprise, one that involves years of hard labor and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars, the largest and most stupendous work of internal improvement ever attempted by any country in the world, but the men interested say it will be carried through to success within a reasonable length of time. The plan, in brief, is to unite the waters of the great lakes with those of the Atlantic ocean by means of canals deep enough to float the largest ocean-going vessels. It sounds easy, but when the physical obstacles to be overcome are understood the herculean character of the task becomes apparent.

So far back as February 8, 1895, Senator Vilas, of Wisconsin, introduced into the United States senate a joint resolution providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the practicability of connecting the lakes with the ocean, with the understanding that the Canadian government was to cooperate in the work. It had its origin in the brain of Lyman E. Cooley, of Chicago. Authority for the preliminary survey was given by congress March 2, 1895, and President Cleveland named Lyman E. Cooley, of Chicago, James B. Angell of Ann Arbor, Mich., and John E. Russell of Leicester, Mass., as the first American commissioners, they serving without pay. The Canadian authorities responded by the appointment of Oliver A. Howland of Toronto, Thomas C. Keefer of Ottawa and Thomas Monro of Coteau Landing. The joint commission held a meeting early in January, 1896, at which a plan of operation was agreed upon, it being decided that each body should make the surveys and select what appeared to be the most feasible routes within its own country. For a long time the work was necessarily of an office nature, such as the preparation of maps and compilation of statistics, and it was not until in the spring of 1898 that much was accomplished in the way of actual inspection of the proposed routes.

The report made by these gentlemen was so inviting that an International Deep Waterways Association was formed by prominent men in the United States and Canada, and congress made an appropriation of $325,000 for the maintenance of a permanent American commission. Mr. Cooley and his associates being unable to serve longer, owing to private interests, a new commission, consisting of Alfred Noble of Chicago, George Y. Wisner of Detroit and Colonel C. W. Raymond, United States engineer corps, was named by President McKinley, and it is under the direction of these gentlemen that the great work is now being pushed.

What the Benefit Will Be.

When the subject of cost of the big waterway via the lakes is broached, the gentlemen interested say: "This is not a matter to be measured on a basis of mere dollars and cents. It may cost $300,000,000 or $400,000,000, or more or less. We don't know and won't know until the surveyors' figures are all in. But the cost is not the question. Better ask what benefit such a waterway will be when completed, and then we can give facts and figures. The limit of reduction in railway freights seems to have reached; it remains to be determined if it not possible to extend lake navigation to the ocean by a practical ship canal. Records show that every improvement in the navigation of our lakes has been followed by a great increase in traffic and the commercial results in every instance have been such that even suggestion of further improvement upon a wider scale must at once secure favorable notice. The amount thus far expended by the United States upon lake navigation is about $12,000,000, and marine history contains no parallel to the rapid development that has been made possible by this assistance.

"Lake freights on grain from Chicago to Buffalo are about 1½ cents a bushel. Ocean freights are from 3 to 3¼ cents, making the rate for the deep-water carriage of 4,000 miles from 4½ to 4¾ cents a bushel. The whole cost of sending a bushel of grain from Chicago to Europe is nearly 10 cents, the difference being made up of elevator charges at Buffalo and the seaboard, freights on the Erie canal, commissions, etc. It costs twice as much to carry a bushel of grain from Chicago to New York as it does to send the same grain from New York of Europe, though the latter distance is more than twice as great as the former. If an ocean steamer could clear from Chicago or Duluth or any other upper lake port for Europe it would save the time and expense now required in breaking bulk at two intermediate points and the cost of carriage would be reduced by one-half. This same reduction would give the grain raisers and handlers of the west a better opportunity of competing with the cheap-grown grains of Russia and India and South America.

"The same argument holds good of iron and lumber, in both of which an immense business is done on the lakes and for which a larger foreign market might be found if carrying charges could be cut down. There is not a farmer, merchant, manufacturer or laborer in the west who would not be immediately benefited by the opening of such a waterway as that now being surveyed."

SKETCH OF THE TWO PRINCIPAL CANAL ROUTES.

EVANS AND EMPEROR FRITZ.

They Were More than Friends, but the Doctor Was a Trifle Jealous.

Dr. Evans was more than a friend of the late Emperor Frederick and his wife. But he was annoyed at the confidence they placed in Sir Morell Mackenzie about whose treatment he had strong views. Evans' opinion greatly influenced the opinion of the old Emperor and Empress, of Bismarck, and of the Berlin physicians, about the throat doctor from London. Evans was originally a Quaker. The theatrical and society tastes of Sir Morell Mackenzie were repugnant to him. His feeling about them made him scrutinize keenly the man and his treatment. But the crown princess had a strong bias, and followed it. Dr. Evans was given impressions of all photos taken of Frederick during his illness. The later ones, which were signed by him, were inexpressively sad. The signature was bold, free, characteristic, and written slantingly in gold ink across the lower part of the image. Above it were a few friendly words. In the photos taken at San Remo martyrdom was stamped on the face. The crown prince then could not speak. He generally wrote on a slate.

Dr. Evans asked him to write on black cards or tablets the size of the slate, when he had occasion to communicate with him. "Why?" asked the prince. "I want to have them as a precious relic for my wife." The request was complied with. Very seldom, indeed, did the handwriting betray weakness, but it became sharp and attenuated. It showed an habitual wish to give a noble air to what he wrote. There was something in the general character that reminded one of Queen Victoria's signature, but it was more emotional than hers. Dr. Evans, while speaking quite candidly of his human weakness, called him a lump of goodness.—London Truth.

A PLUCKY WOMAN.

She Walked 1,000 Miles Through the Snows and Ice of the Arctic.

Mrs. M. A. Humel reached the Klondike, but to do it the plucky little Swedish woman had to walk 1,000 miles in the dead of arctic winter over the frozen Alaskan wastes, from the mouth of Minook Creek to Dawson City. Mrs. Humel was one of 650 persons who left Seattle in August, 1897, on the steamer Humboldt. When they reaeched St. Michael's they found they could go no further in the vessel, but a boat was built by 300 of the passengers in which they started up the river. At Minook creek 1,000 miles from Dawson City, their progress was blocked by the ice. The party proposed to camp there all winter, but to some the delay was insupportable, and among these was Mrs. Humel, who owned a claim in the Klondike, secured by a deputy and upon which she was anxious to begin work. She made the journey on foot, enduring frightful cold, sleeping at night in a bag of skins. There were ten in the party that started to make the journey on foot, but five gave up and returned. After a journey of thirty-five days, with the thermometer 60 degrees below zero, the plucky five arrived at Dawson City.

Irish Mackerel Fishery.

The development of the Irish mackerel fishery has proved a boon to the fisher folk of Cork and Kerry. Forty thousand barrels were cured last year, almost all of which came to America. This industry puts $500,000 a year into circulation among the people of these two counties.

It's harder to save a penny than it is to earn it.

WOMAN AND HOME

NEEDS OF AVERAGE WOMEN.

WHAT does the average woman need? In the first place, a thorough manual training. She needs to know how to cook a wholesome meal properly, to put it on the table appetizingly, and to do this with the minimum expenditure of energy. The need of practical domestic training for girls has probably been sufficiently emphasized, but in the general readjustment of occupations and duties going on between men and women it is more and more apparent that boys as well as girls need a certain amount of elementary domestic training. There are many families in which family happiness, comfort and prosperity would be greatly promoted if the husband and father could, at least in an emergency, take a competent share in the routine work of the household. There are many generous and kindly husbands who would be glad to help, but who are incapable through lack of elementary training.—Science Monthly.

The New Caress.

Society now eschews kisses—that is, those of the good old-fashioned sort. Kisses are filled with microbes! So said the scientists, therefore society took fright and vowed that it would kiss no more. Two pretty girls meet. There is a faint murmur from both, a slight inclination of the body, two rosy cheeks are pressed against each other for an instant, and there you have the new kiss. There is much to commend in this latest fad. Kissing is certainly vulgar, but this little cheek caress has much of daintiness and tenderness in it. It is done so quickly, so gracefully, that it really seems a spontaneous caress of affection. Of course, it is not. For society never gives public demonstrations of affection, but the new kiss is a very good substitute.

SOCIETY'S LATEST CARESS.

Resting.

There are times when to think is a burden. Then one should sleep. No medicine does such good as restful slumber. Vacation is needed by all who do faithful work. Some people boast that they never take a vacation and reflect unfavorably upon those who do. This is unkind and unjust. Some people never do enough to know what it is to be actually tired. They can have no sympathy for those who are so worn with fatigue that life itself is a burden, much less can they give safe advice. Change of work, say some, is all you need. This is often the sheerest nonsense. It is disastrously false in some cases. When the body is tired, it must rest or break. If the brain is overtaxed, it is not enough to stop the mental strain and overwork the body. Rest!

Take time to just be and enjoy the exquisite sense of living. This is a beautiful world. Stop a bit and enjoy it and be glad with Him who makes and keeps it ever fresh and glorious.

To Remove Liver Spots.

This may be done by the application of any remedy which will destroy the vegetable parasite. It is, of course, desirable to make use of some agent that will not irritate the skin. The following prescription is recommended: Take six drachms hyposulphite soda, two ounces of glycerine, and four ounces of water; mix, and with a piece of flannel or a stiff brush, rub it thoroughly over the spots. This treatment should be continued for a week or ten days after the skin has regained its normal condition, since otherwise there may remain some seed of the plant, which will soon start again to vigorous growth.

A Great Queen.

Upon a beautiful obelisk in a temple at Karnak, Egypt, are inscribed the name and cartouche of Queen Hatshepsu, daughter of Thothmes I. (B. C. 1600), the woman who raised Egypt to the pinnacle of its highest greatness and made Thebes as a capital more glorious than Babylon or Nineveh. Her reign lasted twenty-one years and was memorable for the energy of her administration and the prosperity of her people.

Latest Coiffure.

Dress in Pink Garments.

Those wise little mothers who decry the American habit of over-dressing wee bits of babies will be interested to know that Princt Albert, the small mite of 4 years, who is in the direct line of succession to the throne of England, wears the plainest of frocks and bonnets.

The children of the royal family are always clothed simply. Their little arms are unhampered with frills and furbelows, and ribbons and bows are not continually getting into their precious mouths or tickling their soft, pretty necks. Little Prince Albert wears tucked skirts of pique and blousets of the same material, trimmed with braid of thin white or turkey red. The children of many of the well-to-do Americans are costumed in small garments every bit as costly.

Prince Albert's youngest brother, Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George of York, who is one year younger than the eldest baby of the Duke of York's interesting family, plays his baby games in ordinary frocks of nainsook, trimmed, perhaps, with a few dainty tucks or edgings of delicate hand embroidery. The little sister, Princess Victoria, who was 1 year old April 25 last, has for everyday wear plain, fine little slips, that have neither heavy lace-trimmed flounces to hamper her small legs nor elaborately made yokes to fret her infant mind.

Home.

Here is a greeting for those at home—the home which many of us possess, some of us have missed, but for which each of us longs. The wretch who makes the doorstep his bed does not desire it more than many a luxurious wanderer in foreign lands, whose very prosperity, it may be, has divorced him from the place he once called by that dear name. The child who strays from the familiar door weeps till he finds it again; the man who leaves it feels himself a suppliant to fate till he can once more speak the word "my home;" and to the woman it is a concomitant of life. Deprived of it, she misses her best happiness and her finest dignity. Even her beauty suffers, for it is true (is it not?) that part of a woman's loveliness lies in her environment, and that in her chosen and fit surroundings she has a charm which is lacking when she is otherwhere. Home is, moreover, her field of achievement, her jousting ground, the place where she properly tests her strength and her abilities, as men test themselves in business or in battle. However brilliantly she may succeed elsewhere and in other things, if she does not succeed at home, she is, in a sense, a failure, nor will her heart let her deny this fact, however passionately she may protest against it.—Self-culture.

She Went to the Front.

Elsie Reasoner is the only American girl who was at the front during the Spanish war. She is a bright and pretty miss of 20 years. She was born in Kansas, the daughter of Judge Calvin Reasoner, formerly a Chicago newspaper man. She wanted to see what war was like, got an assignment from a magazine and followed Gen. Shafter to Santiago. She was present at the charge of San Juan hill.

MISS ELSIE REASONER.

When "Mothers" Mean Everything.

"The first thing one of these young soldiers thinks of on the battlefield when he is struck is his mother," says a steward of the First United States Cavalry. "While we were going up the hill at San Juan a shell struck a boy beside me in the back of the head. He dropped and kept up a constant groaning of 'Mother! mother! mother!' I felt that it was inhuman not to carry him to the rear, yet I know that my country needed me badly right there. I could stand the bullets and shells, but that perpetual 'Mother! mother!' became unbearable, so I moved to another position and continued the fighting. The boy died muttering the word that meant everything to him at that moment."

The Feminine Observer.

Wear easy shoes when you go house hunting.

Many a woman hides a very greasy face behind a chiffon veil.

Men seem to have an idea that every real womanly woman is a walking pincushion.

It is rare that a woman finds out that she is pretty because another woman tells her so.

Why, oh, why does the stout lady always cling to a sash as her joy of toilet accessories.

The happiest disposition in the world is the one that adapts itself to every change gracefully.

A trite but somewhat worn saying is that there is but one way to live, and that is to keep house.

It frequently happens that the woman who is most talked about is the one who least deserves it.

It is a noticeable fact that we put up with many things that we once declared we couldn't endure.

It is said that too much iced tea is decidedly injurious, but who of us ever thought we drink too much?

RIGHTFUL HEIR OF A KING.

Lieutenant Ord a Lineal Descendant of Royalty.

When Lieutenant Jules G. Ord, of Company H, First Infantry, fell before Santiago fighting with the American army, there died the rightful heir of a king of England. It is from England that the proofs are coming, which now indisputably that the man who met a hero's death in Cuba might have been the king of Great Britain, and Ireland and emperor of India.

The Ord family has been known in America for a century. The first to come here was James Ord, a naval constructor of great ability, who was accompanied by a young man whom he called his nephew, but who was really the son of George IV., king of England. This boy, who took the name of James Ord, founded the house of the name in this country. It was Henry Labouchere, the famous English editor, who opened the discussion which has resulted in the proof that a son was born to George IV. and Mrs. Fitzherbert and that the man who fell at Santiago was a lineal descendant of royalty.

LIEUTENANT JULES G. ORD.

There is no scandal in the story. It was William IV. who obtained the proofs of the first marriage of his brother, the certificate of which is dated December 21, 1785. There was no more beautiful woman in Europe than Mrs. Fitzherbert, and she was good withal. The Prince of Wales fell desperately in love with her, and there is no doubt that the marrige took place and was performed with all the rites and solemnities of the church. The subsequent marriage of the prince to the Princess Charlotte, it was said, was forced upon him as a condition to the payment of his debts, and as history records, was an unhappy one. It was known that Mrs. Fitzherbert had a son born to her, and there were grave questions about the succession to the throne. She had no great ambition for rank and position, either for herself or for her son. There were questions as to his right to succeed to the throne, for she was not of royal blood. On the other hand, there was the great English non-conformist conscience to deal with. Wherefore it was looked upon as the part of wisdom that the secret of the boy's birth should not be known.

He was placed under the care of James Ord, a man of family and distinction, who had won high place in naval construction, who had been engaged by Spain to design warships. The place was secured for him by the Duke of York, brother of the Prince of Wales. A few years later James Ord came to America, still accompanied by the young lad, whom he called his nephew. The youth entered Georgetown College and was an excellent student. If he knew the secret of his birth he never made capital of it. After he graduated at Georgetown he settled in Washington and there married.

Jules Ord, the hero of Santiago, was democratic in his views, and he believed worth makes the man. He arose to his rank in the army through sheer pluck and hard work. The great-grandson of King George was a private soldier, working for $13 a month and living the hard life of a common soldier. He went to Cuba as an aid on the staff of General Hawkins. Surely his kingly grandfather had no such eulogy as was given to Lieutenant Jules Ord by his commanding officer, General Hawkins, wrote of him: "He was the bravest man I ever knew, and his judgment was most excellent."

HERO OF THE REVOLUTION.

Design of Fountain to Be Erected on the Lexington Battlefield.

A beautiful granite fountain is to be erected at Lexington, Mass., on the site of the old battlefield and opposite the memorial tree planted by Gen. Grant in 1875. The design as just accepted by the town of Lexington is that of a revolutionary hero standing on a rough granite pile, awaiting the approach of the British. The fountain is the gift of the late Francis B. Hayes of Lexington, who left $10,000 to pay for the work.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Two Persons Hurt in a Freight Collision—Use Fists at a Funeral—Railway Accident Near Huntertown—Caught in Fast Running Machinery.

In a collision on the Lake Erie and Western Railroad at Cammack station, two persons were seriously injured and another was killed. The east-bound local freight train was at the station unloading goods when an east-bound through freight crashed into the rear end, completely demolishing the caboose, and the engine was stripped. Della Mount of Oakville was thrown on one side of the track under the rubbish and J. A. Noble of Independence, Kan., was found on the other side. He has a bad cut in his forehead, both legs are bruised and internal injuries are feared. The woman was nearly scalped, both arms were cut and bruised and she was injured internally.

Fight at a Funeral.

As the body of Mrs. Jerry Roberts was being carried from the United Brethren Church in Hartford City her husband and his brother-in-law became involved in a fight. Roberts and his wife separated about two weeks before her death, she taking the children with her. Before the funeral Roberts asserted he would take charge of the youngest child hereafter and that was the cause of the altercation. Both were arrested.

Train Broke in Two.

A north-bound freight on the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad was wrecked one and a half miles east of Huntertown. Eight cars were ditched. Several boys were stealing a ride on the train to Rome City. The train broke in two midway while running at full speed.

Engineer Cut to Pieces.

John Leach engineer at the Evansville electric light plant, fell into the running machinery and was killed. His body was caught by the flywheel and torn literally to pieces, the arms, legs and head being severed from the body.

Within Our Borders.

An electric light plant is one of Worthington's recognized needs.

Spurious silver dollars are much in evidence in northern Indiana towns.

Thornton is considering the establishment of an electric light plant and water works.

Hogs are dying of cholera by hundreds near Valparaiso. It is estimated that farmers of that section will lose from $15,000 to $20,000.

William Chambers, formerly superintendent of the big steel mill at Montpelier, is at the head of a project to establish a co-operative iron and steel works in the gas belt.

Neal Gerrety, aged 18, employed at the Terre Haute car works, left home Sept. 19. His father has notified the Indianapolis police, as he is believed to have gone there to enlist.

Washington officials have decided that the State National Bank of Logansport, which went into voluntary liquidation a year ago, is insolvent, and a receiver has been appointed.

George W. Tinsley, a prominent business man of Columbus, was horsewhipped in front of his place of business by Mrs. Leonard Lay. Mrs. Lay states that he used language to her unfit for a woman to hear and insulted her.

A freight engine on the Wabash exploded near Shadeland. Engineer Johnson, married and living at Lafayette, and Edward Reagan, fireman, single, were caught beneath the wreck. Johnson died as the train reached Lafayette. Reagan's recovery is doubtful.

Harry Andrews, a flint-glass worker in the Kauffield chimney factory of Pendleton, struck at a street lamp in front of Mingle's saloon, thinking it was a man with whom he had had an altercation. The glass was smashed and it cut two arteries in Andrews' wrist. Loss of blood nearly caused his death before doctors could control the flow.

At Kokomo, two 7-year-old boys, sons of George Kohlmer and George Michael, were playing with powder and a small cannon. One of them took some of the powder out of the sack and threw it on a fire, when the sack ignited. The children were horribly burned about the face and hands. Both were blinded by the explosion and it is feared they may lose their sight permanently.

At Seymour, Henry Fisher, aged 22, committed suicide by shooting himself below the heart. He has been having chills and fever lately and had some trouble with a fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway, whom he had threatened to kill. Young Fisher became of age last December and received $700 in money and some real estate, and in a few days spent all of his money.

Fred Howard, a young man residing at Newburg, was the victim of a band of angry White Cappers the other night. It is claimed that Howard has been guilty of insulting women, and he has been frequently requested to leave the town. Fifty or more citizens, armed with a rope led Howard by a noose to an apple tree. He begged for mercy and was finally told that if he would leave town at once his life would be spared. He agreed to do so and was released.

The Great Wall of China.

The great wall of China was recently measured by Mr. Unthank, an American engineer. His measurements gave the height as eighteen feet. Every few hundred yards there is a tower twenty-five feet high. For 130 miles the wall goes over plains and mountains, every foot of the foundation being of solid granite, and the rest of the structure solid masonry.

No Stone Unturned.

The origin of the command, "Don't leave a stone unturned," is said to be this: After one of the battles of antiquity, the defeated general hid a vast amount of treasure in a field. A Theban who was aware of the fact bought the field and searched long for the hidden wealth, but could not find it. At last he sought the oracle of Delphi for advice, and was told that if he would turn over every stone in the field he would discover what he desired. He did so, and found the treasure.

A Son of the Sod.

The rising generation of Irish boys seem to be fairly informed as to their country's indebtedness to England. An Irish school inspector the other day was examining a class in geography. He had put a question regarding longitude, and on receiving a correct answer continued: "And now what is latitude?" There was a silence for a little. Then an Oliver Twist-like youth, with a broad grin on his honest face, gave the reply: "Please, sir, we have no latitudes in Ireland; the British government won't allow us any."

A SOLDIER'S ESCAPE.

From the Democrat-Message, Mt. Sterling, Ill.

When Richmond had fallen and the great commanders had met beneath the historic apple tree at Appomatox, the 83d Pennsylvania Volunteers, prematurely aged, clad in tatters and rags, broken in body but of dauntless spirit, swung into line for the last "grand review" and then quietly marched away to begin life's fray anew amid the hills and valleys of the Keystone State. Among the number Asa Robinson came back to the old home in Mt. Sterling, Ill., back to the fireside that he had left at the call to arms four years previous. He went away a happy, healthy farmer boy in the first flush of vigorous manhood; he came back a ghost of the self that answered to President Lincoln's call for "300,000 more."

The Soldier's Return.

To-day he is an alert, active man and tells the story of his recovery as follows:

"I was a great sufferer from sciatic rheumatism almost from the time of my discharge from the army. Most of the time I was unfitted for manual labor of any kind, and my sufferings were at all times intense. At times I was bent almost double, and got around only with the greatest difficulty. Nothing seemed to give me permanent relief until three years ago, when my attention was called to some of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had not taken more than half a box when I noticed an improvement in my condition, and I kept on improving steadily. I took three boxes of the pills, and at the end of that time was in better condition than at any time since the close of my army service. Since then I have never been bothered with rheumatism. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is the only remedy that ever did me any good, and to them I owe my restoration to comparative health. They are a grand remedy."

Meals in Persia.

When the Persian host thinks that the entertainment has lasted long enough, he gives the signal for supper, which is served either in the same or another room. A cloth is laid on the floor, around which are arranged the long, flat cakes of "pibble bread," which do double duty as food and plates. The meats, consisting for the most part of "pilaus" and "chilaws" of different sorts, are placed in the center, together with bowls of sherbet, each of which is supplied with a delicately carved wooden spoon, with deep, boat-shaped bowl, whereof the sides slope down to form a sort of keel at the bottom.

The guests squat down on their knees and heels round the cloth, the host placing him whom he desires most to honor on his right side at the upper end of the room (that is, opposite the door). At the lower end the musicians and minstrels take their places, and all, without further delay, commence an attack on the viands.

The consumption of food progresses rapidly, with but little conversation, for it is not usual in Persia to linger over meals, or to prolong them by talk, which is better conducted while the mouth is not otherwise employed.

If the host wishes to pay special honor to the guest, he picks out and places in his mouth some particularly delicate morsel. In about a quarter of an hour from the commencement of the banquet most of the guests have finished and washed their hands by pouring water over them from a metal ewer into a plate of the same material, brought round by the servants for that purpose.

They then rinse out their mouth, roll down their sleeves again, partake of a final pipe, and, unless they mean to stay for the night, depart homeward, either on foot or on horseback, preceded by a servant bearing a lantern.

Walking Exercise.

While people residing in the country can always obtain ample exercise by indulging in pleasant pastimes, it is different for the numerous dwellers "in busy city pent" to get away, and, says a medical contemporary, they consequently suffer oftentimes from dyspepsia and indigestion, and the girl from pale and blotched skins and general languor.

They neglect the one form of exercise open to them, without either expense or trouble—a good sharp walk. Not a slow, aimless ambling, looking into shop windows, but a real determined three or four mile walk, in which every muscle of the body is brought into play—limbs, chest, neck and chin.

Let the pale, languid, anaemic girl who feels too inert to perform the simplest daily task with pleasure or interest, begin to try it. She will find herself transformed into a healthy girl, able to sleep soundly, to rise early, and to perform tasks she would never have dreamed before of undertaking. In fact, walking is such a simple remedy for so many of the ills that flesh is heir to, and a cure so certain to be crowned with success, that the habit of daily exercise, once established, will become a delight and a necessity.

Condors Are Dethroned.

The South American condor is no longer the king of the flying birds. The rare California vulture, which is now only to be found in the Cocopah mountains, holds the honor. It stands about four feet high, though it is neither as weighty nor as strong as many birds of smaller size. It has much the same appearance as the turkey buzzard, with black feathers, broken with white under the wings, and a ruffle around the neck where the feathers begin. There is also an orange-colored patch on the head. Years ago the California vulture was quite plentiful, but poisoned meat intended for unwanted animals led to their extinction. It is for this reason that the eggs of this bird are now more valuable than those of the great auk. There are fifteen perfect specimens of the latter known, while only two eggs of the California vulture are preserved.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Stamped Bicycle Frames.

Bicycle frames stamped out in two halves by one operation from a steel plate are a recent Birmingham novelty. The halves are clamped together, and though the frame is not so elegant as one made by another process it is perfectly rigid and can be made at a cost of $2 instead of $12.50.

MRS. LUCY GOODWIN

Suffered four years with female troubles. She now writes to Mrs. Pinkham of her complete recovery. Read her letter:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish you to publish what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills have done for me.

I suffered for four years with womb trouble. My doctor said I had falling of the womb. I also suffered with nervous prostration, faint, all-gone feelings, palpitation of the heart, bearing-down sensation and painful menstruation. I could not stand but a few minutes at a time.

When I commenced taking your medicine I could not sit up half a day, but before I had used half a bottle I was up and helped about my work.

I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used one package of Sanative Wash, and am cured of all my troubles. I feel like a new woman. I can do all kinds of housework and feel stronger than I ever did in my life. I now weigh 131½ pounds. Before using your medicine I weighed only 108 pounds.

Surely it is the grandest medicine for weak woman that ever was, and my advice to all who are suffering from any female trouble is to try it at once and be well. Your medicine has proven a blessing to me, and I cannot praise it enough.—MRS. LUCY GOODWIN, Holly, W. Va.

CRIPPLED BIRDS.

Varied and Ingenious Ways in Which They Secure Food.

Birds deprived of the use of limbs do not always "go to the wall." A writer in a contemporary has seen a finch with a wounded wing sustaining life by robbing spiders' webs strung across the brambles and low bushes of the flies entangled therein. This enterprising songster did not show a lean body, either, and at the end of three weeks was able to fly away to its old haunts.

A lame crow lived for the greater part of a summer by eating the bait from a cluster of rat-traps, the dexterity it employed in avoiding the spring and teeth revealing it to be cunning and observant. Hunger compelled it to attack an imprisoned rodent on one occasion, the struggles of the latter eventually dragging the bird into the snare, the two found by a stableman later in the afternoon. But for barefaced impudence a pied wagtail comes first. This bird had suffered an injury to its pinions, and ran about a kitchen garden for some time before it was discovered. Even then it evaded capture, and its nimble legs served it in good stead, not even the cat having a chance in the race. The master of the house had a pet owl which was fed regularly on milk-sops, the bowl being carried into an outhouse where the blinking bird fed at leisure. One day the wagtail was observed to run into the barn, and, with gaping mouth and wings fiercely flapping, attack the owl so persistently that it hobbled off, leaving the milk and bread to the mercy of the ravenous little assailant. This happened so frequently that the owl was in danger of pining, and its meals were served in a more secure quarter.

A wood-pigeon with broken wing robbed the barn-door fowls of their grain, and grew so bold that it actually scared away the hens by strutting and puffing out its breast, pecking at them when they ventured too near him, and cooing discordantly loud to further frighten them.

Making Clothespins.

"There are probably very few people outside the trade who know anything concerning the vast number to supply the millions of housekeepers throughout the United States," said a wholesale dealer in such goods in New York to the writer. "It is estimated that as many as 50,000,000 dozen, or 600,000,000 single pins, are manufactured in eastern and western factories every year. The product is superior in workmanship and finish to anything of its kind turned out anywhere in the world, and is shipped largely to all parts of Europe, where it can be sold cheaper than the rough and poorly home-made article.

"Clothespins are made in this country principally out of beach and maple. Blocks of this wood are fed to a very ingenious and exceedingly rapid-running machine, which has three separate compartments. One of these cuts a block of wood up into a dozen or more pieces, each of which is suitable for forming a pin. It next seizes and cuts the 'crutel,' or place that is to grip the wash on the clothespin, and the final operation turns the neck and head of the pins and smoothes and finishes them off by the bushel, ready for use. The pins are then packed into boxes, each containing 720, and the boxes are then nailed up by another labor-saving machine, ready for the market.

"There are two grades of clothespins, firsts and seconds. The best quality are worth 35 cents and the inferior ones sell for 25 cents a box wholesale."—Washington Star.

Two Ways of Looking at It.

Milbar—Hogins has a face that will make his fortune one of these days. At the restaurant the other day he handed the cashier a dollar bill. When he received his change he said very coolly: "That was a five I gave you." And it you'll believe it, the cashier handed him out four dollar bills.

Stilson—But that was downright stealing.

Milbar—Not at all. All that Hogins was after was to make the chappies standing around think he had as much as $5.

Stilson—But he made $4 out of the eating-house by it.

Milbar—Yes; but that was merely incidental, don't you know, merely incidental.—Boston Transcript.

HUMOR OF THE WEEK

STORIES TOLD BY FUNNY MEN OF THE PRESS.

Odd, Curious and Laughable Phases of Human Nature Graphically Portrayed by Eminent Word Artists of Our Own Day—A Budget of Fun.

Giving It Away.

Little Eddie—Your nose looks just the same as it always did.

Mr. Sparkleigh—Of course. Why shouldn't it?

Little Eddie—I heard mamma say when Mr. Willikins came to see Sister May, night before last, that your nose was out of joint.

Disturbed.

First Cat—Why so sad to-night, Thomas?

Second Cat—I feel so lonely and neglected! I've been weeping and wailing for an hour, and nobody has thrown anything at me!

Judgment.

"There ain't much patriotism about that fellow who just passed us.

"Why, did he refuse to go to war?"

"I dunno whether he went to war or not, but he ain't got a solitary one of them little flags pasted on his wheel."

Then They Glared.

Ethel—Ah, no; I shall never marry.

Maude—Oh, don't say that. Why, you must have at least half your life before you yet.

A Reasonable Deduction.

"Yes," she exclaimed; "I don't believe any lady could listen to him for five minutes without being fascinated."

"What a simpleton the fellow must be," he growled.—Chicago News.

His Nine Lives.

The Dog—How did you feel when that empty bottle passed you?

The Cat—Five of my precious lives flashed before me in an instant.—New York News.

Her Only Ailment.

Parson Black—How's yo' mammy dis mawnin', Ephraim?

Ephraim—She's well, 'cep'n she's got company.—New York Evening Journal.

According to Rumor.

"What a beautiful figure that Miss McClellan has."

"Yes. Four hundred thousand in her own name, I believe."

Luck.

"It's fortunate," exclaimed the genial optimist, pensively, "very fortunate."

"To what do you allude?"

"The fact that there are only twelve clubs in the baseball league. If there were one more we'd probably be in thirteenth place a great deal of the time. And that would be very unlucky."—Washington Star.

Information Wanted.

"Bobby, go immediately and wash your face."

"Who's comin', ma? Or are you goin' to take me somewhere?"

In the School of War.

"Strange what good fighters society men turn out to be."

"Not at all; wearing a high collar makes a man ferocious."

Why He Was Troubled.

Jack—Come, old man, cheer up. What if she did break the engagement; she's not the only fish in the swim.

Tom—Oh, I don't care anything about her breaking the engagement, but you see I've got to go right on paying installments on the ring for the next six months. That's where the icy breeze comes in.—Chicago News.

He Wanted Excitement.

She—Did papa give his consent to your marrying me?

He—Yes, but he made me join his poker club.

She—What for?

He—He said I'd get his money anyway, and that he might as well have some excitement in parting with it.—New York Press.

The Tables Turned.

Mr. Oldchap—Are you interested in fossils, Miss Gushley?

Miss Gushley—Oh—er this is so sudden!—New York World.

A Necessary Adjunct.

"Why is it you always will drag me out to these stupid garden parties?"

"Well, Harry, you don't want me to have to scramble for my own ice cream, do you?"

How He Got a Rest.

"How well you look, Dibbs! When did you get back?"

"Get back? It was my wife who went away."

Feminine Enthusiasm.

Wallace—How does it happen that you have no flag flying from your house?

Ferry—My wife insists that we shall wait until the neighbors have all bought theirs and then get a bigger one.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Then 'Twas Bedtime.

"Pa!"

"Oh, be quiet!"

"Pa!"

"Well, what is it?"

"What did the Dead Sea die of?"—London Sporting Times.

Outdone.

Hogarth Highton—Me sister is ter be presented at court nex' season.

Cecil May Tutuff—That's nawthin; me brudder wuz before de court yisterday an' his case wuz continered till nex' week, w'en he'll be there agin.

A Rank Outsider.

"Why wouldn't they admit Scribely to membership in the New York War Correspondents' Club?"

"They said he wasn't eligible. It appears that he simply described what was done by the fighters instead of telling the government how to run things."

One in a Thousand.

"Wonderful man, that Billings."

"How so?"

"You know he is always playing practical jokes on people."

"Yes."

"Well, when we were out swimming the other night somebody tied his shirt full of knots, and he didn't threaten to 'lick the smart Aleck' if he ever found out who it was."

A Growing List.

"Well, I see that one Chicago girl is the wife of the Governor of the Philippines and another is to share the vice-regal throne of India."

"Yes; and I know still another Chicago girl who is at the head of affairs.

"Who is she?"

"My wife."

Not His Fault.

"Fweddy, why don't you let your mustache grow?"

"Why don't I let it? Good heavens, deah boy, I do, but it won't!"—Boston Traveler.

The Remains.

"Did you save anything out of that wheat venture?"

"Oh, yes, a check stub."—Philadelphia North American.

At the Bottom of the Sea.

"Who commands the Spanish armamada?" asked the teacher in history.

"McGinty," answered the boy who was never known to study his lesson.—Detroit Free Press.

Their Criticism.

Sykes—Say, Bill, dat Charlotte Cordeen is a great play. A young gal rushes in an' stabs de villain in a bath tub.

Bill—Well, dat's wot he got fer bathin'.—Denver News.

All in Her Mind.

"Henry! Henry!" she said, in a frightened whisper.

"What's the matter?" he sleepily asked.

"Get up and light the gas, quick. I'm sure there's somebody under this bed."

"Nonsense," he replied. "You imagine it. Go to sleep again. We haven't any members of the Peace union in this family."

Luck.

"Did you find things as they were advertised at that summer resort?"

"Yes; exactly the same. You see, the proprietor of the place never had any experience in the business before this season."

Capacious.

He—Miss Luckione was certainly born with a silver spoon in her mouth.

She—Well, it must have been a tablespoon or no one would have noticed it.—New York World.

Henry George and the Porter.

Henry George was traveling once on a sleeping car. The porter came to brush the dust off him and "work" him for the customary quarter. There were but few passengers. George reflected on the fact that Pullman paid his poor black hireling little or naught, and relied on his ability to brush and gouge the public instead, and he determined to give him all the change he found in his pocket. He thought there might be about 60 cents, but there actually was $3 in quarters, halves and dimes. He gave it all to the darky, who dropped his broom and stared at the tip and then at George. "This all fo' me, boss?" he grasped. "It's all for you," replied George. The darky looked at the little, rusty, modest man and again at his handful of silver. "Wow!" he ejaculated; "it's true as de Good Book puts it, you nevah cain tell how fah a toad kin jump twell you sees him hop."

His Kind.

"I suppose you're looking for a chainless wheel?"

"No, I am not. I'm looking for a harmless one."

THE EARTH IS A PIGMY.

Almost Incredible Dimensions of Sun as Compared with This Sphere.

A dime held at arm's length from the eye will much more than cover the entire disc of the sun. If it were placed at the exact point of coincidence and its diameter and distance from the eye accurately measured, it might be used as a means of determining the sun's diameter, his distance being known. The foremost philosophers of long ago would have been appalled at the true statements of both the sun's distance and its size.

The sun's diameter is about 866,000 miles. Perhaps a faint conception of the enormous bulk indicated by these figures may be had from the reflection that umbra of a single huge sun spot, observed in January, 1897, was extensive enough to entertain sixteen earths grouped in a solid square. It is bewildering to be assured that it would take 1,300,000 earths to equal the sun in volume. If the interior of that truly gigantic globe were hollow, and the earth were placed at its center with the moon revolving about it at its usual mean distance of nearly 240,000 miles, there would still exist a vacuity between the moon and the enclosing shell of the sun of nearly 200,000 miles. This is perhaps the most graphic and impressive illustration possible of the sun's colossal bulk. We must note, however, that the density of the sun is only about one-quarter that of the earth, so that it would "weigh" only as much as 330,000 earths. In very "round" numbers the sun's weight may be stated at two octillions of tons, which, if expressed in figures, would require almost as many ciphers as a newspaper line can accommodate.

A very comprehensive illustration of the pygmean dimensions of the earth as compared with the sun is to represent the latter by a globe two feet in diameter and the earth by a dainty pea. And yet the little pea weighs more than six quintillion tons. As to the solar surface, it is some 12,000 times that of our planet. Yet the sun, when compared with its true peers, the stars, is not only of extraordinary size, but in all probabily is only to be ranked among the medium self-luminous bodies which sparkle in "heaven's ebon vault." And because of its spottedness it has a place (although a humble one) among the "variable" stars.

The "shining shell," as Miss Clarke terms it, seen through a piece of well smoked glass, is termed the "photosphere." We thus perceive its actual diameter, although it seems much smaller than our conception of it, because the fierce glare has been negatived by the shade glass. If we concede that the sun is gaseous, the photosphere may be regarded as a sort of skin, or crust, of incandescent clouds, through which are constantly breaking the geyser-like uprushes of metallic vapors, which expend their energies as far above the sun, sometimes, as the moon is distant from the earth. Environing the photosphere, as the atmosphere surrounds the earth, but vastly deeper, is the "chromosphere." Seen in the spectroscope it resembles a delicate but brilliant rim about the solar globe; and the same instrument reveals the "prominences," whose varied forms are so fascinating.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Cost of Freeing Cuba.

The United States are entitled to retain possession of the Philippine Islands if the peace commissioners so decide, for the cost of the war runs far into the millions. To free the stomach, liver and bowels from disease, however, is not an expensive undertaking. A few dollars invested in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will accomplish the task.

Girls Living in Country Towns.

In the October Ladies' Home Journal Edward Bok devotes much of his editorial page to showing country girls and women the way to make their lives mean more—how they can partake more fully of the true enjoyments of life. He has prescribed a method of country living which can readily and profitably be pursued, and which will go far toward the emancipation of the country woman from much of the drudgery, and lighten the isolation of farm life.

HAPPY MOTHERS AND HEALTHY CHILDREN.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Goes Straight to the Cause of All Female Troubles and Assures a Healthy Maternity.

Mrs. M. SINGER, 104 Hudson Ave., Rochester, N. Y., writes to Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

"When I applied to you for advice I had been suffering some years from debility, nervousness, etc. I had had several miscarriages and was pregnant when I wrote to you.

"I am grateful to say that after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was considerably better, and after using three more it brought me where I am to-day. I am well, and the mother of a three-months' old baby.

"Doctors had failed to help me. I have no one to thank but Mrs. Pinkham and her wonderful remedy."

Mrs. ELLA DUNGAN, Reeder's Mills, Iowa, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I thank you for what your medicine and advice have done for me.

"I have a baby two months old. When he was born I was sick only fifteen minutes, whereas with my other children I was sick for two or three days, and also suffered with my left leg, and could get nothing to relieve the pain but morphine. My leg did not trouble me at all this time. I had no after pains and was not as weak as I had been before.

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly. May God bless you in your noble work."

Mrs. J. W. PRUETT, Medford, Oregon, says:

"My health, also the baby's, we owe to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. JOHN W. LONG, Wyoming, Iowa, writes:

"I had shooting pains all over my body, was very weak and nervous. I could not straighten up. I wished to become a mother but was afraid I never could. Seventeen months ago I got some of your Vegetable Compound, and after taking half a bottle was much relieved. I took four bottles and was cured. Now I have a big baby boy which I feel I owe to your Compound. Many thanks for your kind advice."

A Million Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine

She Was Like Her Brother.

One of our village young gentlemen took his little sister with him while calling the other evening at a home where he is a regular visitor. The little girl made herself quite at home and showed great fondness for one of the young ladies, hugging her heartily. "How very affection she is," said the lady of the house. "Yes, so like her brother," responded the young lady unthinkingly. Paterfamilias looked sternly over the top of his spectacles, the young gentleman blushed and the rest were silent.—Shortsville, N. Y., Enterprise.

Midnight Battle With Highwaymen on a Lonely Road.

Special to the Courier.

ST. JOE, IND., Sept. 28, 1898.

An attempt to rob W. G. Erick, of Hamilton, Ind., just north of the Wm. Saylor farm, two and one-half miles north of St. Joe, last night, was averted by the prompt action of Mr. Erick, the particulars of which are as near as one can learn about as follows:

Mr. Erick, a former resident of Spencerville, but now in business at Hamilton, having some business at the store in Spencerville, thought he would drive through after business had closed up for the evening.

In coming south when near what is known as the Sayler & Jackson swamp, between eleven and twelve o'clock, two strange men appeared, one of which told Mr. Erick to halt and throw up his hands. Mr. Erick, not dreaming of anything serious, was about to urge his horse forward, when he was again told to halt and throw up his hands, this time the demand was accompanied by a pistol shot which struck the end of the buggy seat going through into the cushion. Erick by this time had become convinced that he was in for it, and in a second had his pistol out and was trying to bring the robber in. In all three or four shots were fired by the robbers and three by Mr. Erick.

Billy says he is sure that one of his shots took effect as the robber who was doing the shooting called out to his comrade that he was shot, at the same time Erick says he saw the pistol fall out of his grasp and the arm to fall. Erick carries the evidence of the encounter in his overcoat sleeve, one ball having gone up the sleeve and coming out near the elbow. Mr. Erick says he had very queer feelings in that one arm about the time the shooting was in progress—wonder if he did not have queer feeling all over? We are left to guess.

SAGINAW'S TURN.

Bert. Ellis, the Best Known Traveling Man in the Valley, Talks on a

SUBJECT OF PUBLIC INTEREST.

SAGINAW MICH.—Mr. A. G. Ellis, of this city, is probably the best known traveling man in Michigan. Nearly every one in Saginaw Valley knows "Bert" Ellis. For twenty years he has carried his samples and good nature to his many merchant friends, who are always glad to see him. But Mr. Ellis had trouble the same as other people. Twenty years of traveling, hardly two meals in the same place, or twice in the same bed, called at all hours of the night to make the next town, smoking probably to excess, are conditions which injured Mr. Ellis's health. He became nervous, his sleep broken, and restless; his stomach troublesome; his heart's action irregular, and his entire system debilitated. In speaking recently with your correspondent, Mr. Ellis said: "As the troubles I mentioned became more aggravating I decided to use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. The improvement in my condition was remarkable. I was able to secure restful sleep, my nervousness was overcome, stomach trouble corrected; heart's action became regular; in fact I became as well as ever, even in the face of the fact that I still smoke and continued to travel."

Mr. Ellis's experience is similar to thousands of traveling men and others who smoke to excess and are irregular and indiscreet in diet and sleep. There can only be one result—debilitated nerves. It is equally true that there is only one successful method of correcting such conditions.—Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer.

WILL BE MUSTERED OUT

The 157th Will Be Called to Camp Mount For That Purpose

The DAILY COURIER and Sentinel yesterda had the first announcement of the certain muster out of our boys of the 157th. For the benefit of the few Auburn people and many country people who do not get these two dailies we reproduce the article:

The companies of the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh will be called into camp again Oct. 10. They will assemble at Camp Mount and will there be mustered out of service. The members of the regiment are to be fed by contract a part of the time they are at Camp Mount rather than given army rations. The contractor who was the successful bidder for supplying the meals to the regiment is Lee Burnett, who bid 48 cents for each man. This is 16 cents a meal for each soldier.

Remarkable Rescue.
